The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) is projecting the country's export receipts to hit $33.4 billion by the end of the year.

This shows that the trade and economic policies of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's administration are working despite some unfortunate global economic developments.

Trade Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II said the projected exports would be at least four percent more than the $32.1 billion generated last year.

Roxas said electronics, which make up 68 percent of exports, continued to fuel the growth for two reasons, "increase in consumption and inventory hedging."

He said digital signal processors, the Philippines' main semiconductor product, have been in demand.

The processors are universal components of electronic products like cellular phones that have low cash outlay and limited life spans and thus have steady replacement markets.

Roxas said companies have been stacking up their inventories to hedge against inflationary pressures spawned by a number of factors, among them the widening rift between the United States and Iraq and fears of oil price increases.

"The 6.9-percent growth in exports during the first seven months is very encouraging. We expect our August figures to maintain such pace," he said.

"But we have to temper our forecasts with the realization that the factors that are fueling our current growth still do not appear to be sustainable," he added.

Statistics showed that export sales from January to July rose to $19.895 billion from $18.582 billion year on year.

Sales of microcircuits and semiconductors posted 20.13-percent and 19.18-percent growth, respectively.

However, sales of input/output peripherals used in making desktop computers declined by 9.9 percent.

Exports of machinery and transport grew by 10.6 percent while garments and textiles were down by 3.9 percent.

Electronics, machinery and transport, and garments and textiles account for over 80 percent of the country's exports.

"The Philippine economy is subject to the vagaries of the world economy," Roxas noted.

He said the US economy, which accounted for 40 percent of the world's gross domestic product, has yet to fully recover.

"If it suffers a relapse, then the global economy will be at risk again. This would mean a slowing in the expansion of trade and capital flows that have underpinned global integration," he added.

The trade secretary also took note of gains in the export of motor parts and the food industry.

The continued growth in motor parts was due to strong car sales in the US brought about by interest-free loans given to consumers and the improving economies of Asia, among them Malaysia and Thailand, which import Philippine-made motor parts.

While export sales of furniture and fixtures registered a 4.17-percent growth, strong competition faced by the wearable (to include footwear and jewelry) sector went down by 31 percent and gift ware and holiday decors slowed by 19 percent.

“We have proven that we have been competitive, particularly in furniture and fixtures. But these industries will have to continue investing on new technologies and improve their efficiencies so they can compete in price and quality,” Roxas said.

He urged small and medium entrepreneurs to avail themselves of the wide range of help – like financial packages and market matching — the DTI had been offering.

“Our exports to China grew by 90.57 percent,” he said, adding that Asia remained a firm market for Philippine export products.

“Our exports to China grew by 90.57 percent,” he added, noting that exports to Asian countries continued to grow while traditional markets like the US and Japan posted single-digit declines.

Trading with the Netherlands, said to be the country’s biggest market, has started to pick up as it marked a 13.79-percent growth.

Other Asian markets that showcased remarkable growth were Malaysia and South Korea at 18.85 percent and 45.93 percent, respectively.

GMA notes P850-M ICTSI investment in MICT, lauds high export volumes landed in port

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the increased export volumes that passed through the Manila International Container Terminal (MICT) in the last five months, significantly exceeding what was achieved in the last seven years.

The President, in a visit to the country’s premier international gateway for cargo managed by the International Container Terminal Services, Inc. (ICTSI), also cited the company for expanding its operations by putting in some P850-million in additional investments.

“This is a leading indicator for accelerated economic growth,” the President said, as she lauded ICTSI chairman Enrique K. Razon, Jr. for ICTSI’s contribution to the country’s economic prosperity.

The President said that the expansion program of ICTSI would be reflected in government statistics on production and this will be a prelude to increased employment in three to four months.

In a briefing, MICT Manager Felipe Pacheco said MICT handled the highest volume for exports at 50,307 TEUs (twenty-foot equivalent unit) in August compared to 40,522 TEUs for the same period last year.

On import volume, Pacheco informed the President that the highest was registered at 46,453 TEUs compared to 38,678 TEUs year on year.

“Again, in the last five months, you have seen import volumes higher than you’ve seen in 1995, and these are mostly raw materials for production,” the President said.

“So, again it’s a leading indicator that production is taking place and employment figures will be reflected as going on,” she added.

Pacheco said the overall volume handling of MICT for this year ending August had grown to 96,967 TEUs from 79,200 TEUs in the same period last year, a rise of 11 percent.

MICT's productivity – the movement of container per hour per quay crane – was 30 percent higher than Singapore's worth.

Pacheco said MICT posted a low of 28.43 moves per hour per crane in February and a high of 38.62 moves per hour per crane in July.

ICTSI infused new investments worth P150 million for the construction of the empty container depot, in anticipation of increasing MICT volume.

The depot, which is 500 meters from MICT, is a new service for shipping lines. Freed of empty containers, the main terminal becomes more flexible and maneuverable.

Early this year, ICTSI also infused P700 million in investments for two additional quay cranes that would be operational next month.

Total investments for this year totaled P850 million, resulting in improved operations and customer service at MICT.

“Thank you Ricky (Razon) for your P850-million investments for the year 2002, and more to come I hope,” the President told Razon. “It's very good news.”

At the MICT, the President toured the ICTSI freight station No. 1 and the container yard.

After her visit to MICT, the President motored to the Divisoria wet market and made a surprise inspection of stalls to see for herself the prevailing prices of basic commodities, particularly the price of rice.

Riding in an open window four-wheel drive vehicle, the President waved to pedestrians en route to the wet market.

In Divisoria, the President was greeted by the market vendors and consumers alike.

She shook hands with them as she inspected the prices of the basic goods. She stayed at the wet market for about 25 minutes.

Privatization of transmission lines to mean more efficient power distribution – Palace

Malacañang today said that the privatization of the transmission facilities of the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR) would mean more efficient power distribution in the country.

In his regular press briefing, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that it would be to everybody's interest to have the transmission lines privatized “as soon as possible.”

“If these line are privatized, there will be additional inflow of investments. And the operations will be a lot more efficient if the lines are privatized,” Bunye said.

Bunye was commenting on the franchise of the National Transmission Corp. (Transco) that has already been approved by the House of Representatives but is still being debated in the Senate.

He said that he agreed with the observation of some sectors that there will be a problem if the Transco franchise bill will not be passed.

Bunye said that in theory there would be a more efficient operation if the transmission facilities would be handled by the private group.

“The private group will not be saddled with obligations that are now being carried by the NAPOCOR. So, the cost of transmitting their operations would not be as expensive,” Bunye said.

Energy officials have said that the passage of the Transco franchise bill would help reduce the purchased power adjustment (PPA), or the cost of excess electricity generated by independent power producers (IPPs).

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has repeatedly said that the Transco bill and the special purpose assets vehicle (SPAV) bill are vital to her administration’s economic program.

'Taipans' laud gov't-private sector partnership in housing for state workers

Several top Chinese-Filipino businessmen or the so-called "taipans" have lauded the efforts of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to initiate a government-private sector partnership that would provide affordable housing units to government employees.

In a luncheon meeting with the President last week, the taipans, composed of business tycoons such as John Gokongwei, Henry Sy, Andrew Gotianun and representatives of George Ty and Alfonso Yuchengco have agreed to develop government properties, particularly those idle properties within the various military camps in the country, and convert it into socialized housing units.

Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said the contribution of the private sector in the proposed project will be their vast financial resources, their capitals, their management skills, and their access to technology on real estate development and housing.

"Through this mechanism, we hope we would be able to deliver housing units at affordable prices through the combination of different inputs from different parties from government and the private sector," Camacho said.

Aside from the taipans and Camacho, also present in the luncheon meeting with the President were Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) Chairman Michael Defensor, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes and Ambassador Tomas Alcantara.

In a press briefing that followed the luncheon with the Chief Executive, the businessmen also expressed their confidence that the government under the leadership of Mrs. Arroyo would be able to get rid the country of the crime syndicates, particularly the kidnap-for-ransom gangs.

"I always have confidence in the President," said Gokongwei, owner of the Robinson's shopping mall chain.

Gotianun, for his part, said that while everybody is concerned about the recent incidents of kidnappings, "at least the government is taking steps."

"They have eliminated seven of the (KFR) gangs. If they continue, we should be able to get rid of them in the next six months," said Gotianun, owner of real estate developer Filinvest.

SM holdings owner Henry Sy said the business community is looking at the series of kidnapping incidents as "temporary."

"We look at this crisis as temporary and the country has a lot of potentials. The crisis could be addressed sooner or later," Sy said.

Gov't sets new policy guidelines on customs bonded warehouses

A new policy decision on customs bonded trading warehouses was reached after President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo met today with various industry leaders and officials of the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) and the Bureau of Customs (BOC).

In a briefing after the meeting in Malacañang, Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo said that the President has directed the BOC to conduct a very strict monitoring and audit of all bonded warehouses.

“Where violations are clearly established, we will impose the proper sanctions, including closure,” Bernardo said.

An order providing for a negative list was also issued by the BOC so that other commodities, which should not go through the bonded warehouses, are stopped, Bernardo said.

The policy is moving towards the direction of going into industry based support facility warehouses, Bernardo said.

Bernardo cited as an example the garments and semi-conductor and electronic industries where there are already existing bonded warehouses for them.

Other industries that would apply and meet the criteria and qualifications to be set up by the regulatory authorities will be welcomed to open their own bonded warehouses, Bernardo said.

Bernardo explained that the basic concept of customs bonded trading warehouses was to establish sources of imported inputs required by small and medium exporters to be able to compete globally in view of high tariffs, and high interest costs.

“But recently we have noticed that a lot of commodities go through these bonded warehouses, including finished products, so it has clearly deviated from the original concept of bonded trading warehouses,” Bernardo pointed out.

The findings of the Federation of Pilipino Industries (FPI), headed by Meneleo Carlos, on the operation of the customs bonded trading warehouses showed the following:

- tariffs have been reduced significantly;
- tax credit processing time has been tremendously reduced;
- customs value range information figures indicate questionable values;
- some customs bonded trading warehouses are importing finished products which they are not supposed to import; and
- diversion of imported items to the domestic market, as in proliferation of products in Divisoria.

People happy with GMA handling of gov't campaign against poverty, crime, terrorism, corruption

People are happy with the way President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is handling the government's campaign against poverty, corruption, crime and terrorism.

This was revealed in a survey conducted by the prestigious poll group Social Weather Stations from August 24 to September 8.

The survey, released Monday, said most of the “1,200 statistically representative adult respondent” considered the President as a “serious” state manager who has committed government men and resources to public service.

Topping the President's work cited in the survey was her total war against terrorism that led to the weakening of the notorious Abu Sayyaf Group which the United States recently branded as global terrorists linked to Osama bin Laden.

At least 68 percent of the respondents said the wiping out of terrorists was one area the President had been seriously focusing on.

The survey respondents also highly noted the government's thrust against crushing criminality.

The survey said 61 percent of the respondents saw the President as serious in fighting illegal drugs and in fighting kidnapping.

Recent reports showed government gains in neutralizing at least five kidnap-for-ransom gangs and crushing a number of syndicates involved in illegal drugs.

The survey also showed that 52 percent say she is serious in fighting corruption in government.

On the social side, the most of the survey respondents, at least 59 percent, believed the President was serious in helping the poor.

The favorable notion might have been brought about by the President's hands-on policy in delivering social services to the people, particularly in depressed urban and rural communities.

The President, as she vowed during her two State of the Nation Addresses, had pushed for the speedy delivery of public food stability, health and shelter programs, among other things.

Some 53 percent of the nationwide survey respondents further noted the President's desire to develop Mindanao, considered to be the poorest among the country's geographical territories, socially and economically.

Recent reports showed that the region had been provided the necessary support infrastructures and services to bring it on a par with Luzon and the Visayas in terms of gross domestic product and per capita income.

Another area that the respondents noted as seriously being worked on by the President was the government's move to eradicate graft and corruption in the bureaucracy.

The third quarter SWS survey gave the President a moderate satisfaction rating level of +18.

It explained that the net satisfaction rating was below the fairly good net +28 in the SWS special post-SONA survey of August 6 to 9, but above the rather low net +4 in the second quarter SWS survey of March 17 to June 3.

"The new satisfaction rating is close to the President's previous net +18 in March 2001, +15 in September 2001, and +16 in March 2002; though not as high as her net +27 of November 2001 and +29 of early August 2002," the SWS noted.

BOC steps up efforts in gathering evidence against big time smugglers

Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo today said that in compliance with the instructions of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to go after smuggling syndicates, the Bureau of Customs (BOC) has stepped up its efforts in gathering evidence against suspected big-time smugglers.

In a press briefing after a meeting with the President in Malacañang, Bernardo said right now, the Bureau is preparing charges against suspected big-time smugglers. “We will soon be filing cases against those who have violated Customs laws,” he said.

Bernardo said that the BOC is still on the lookout for evidence against those who have been on its watch list for sometime as he explained the difficulty of amassing evidence in smuggling activities.

“It is difficult to gather evidence because you are not able to establish immediately a direct linkage between the name on the list and the actual incidence of smuggling,” Bernardo said.

First of all, Bernardo said, the names of those in the watch list do not appear in the documents and they are also not on board the ships that bring in the smuggled goods.

“But we are on the lookout, and we are coordinating with other government agencies, the intelligence units of other government agencies in gathering evidence,” Bernardo said.

Bernardo also clarified that First Gentleman Jose Miguel T. Arroyo never interceded on behalf of anybody in facilitating shipments at the Bureau as alleged by his detractors.

In fact, Bernardo said, the First Gentleman even sent him a letter warning him that some people might be using his name but asking him not to accommodate them.

The First Gentleman even told him to immediately arrest and prosecute those who would be using his name in their transactions at the BOC.

“So, two things. First, the First Gentleman never called me about Customs activities. Second, nobody has ever approached me using the First Gentleman’s name,” Bernardo said.

Bureau of Customs hoping for P99-B plus collection for 2002

Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo today said that the Bureau of Customs (BOC) is hoping that its collections at the end of the year would be around P99 billion.

In a press briefing in Malacañang after a meeting with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Bernardo admitted that it would be difficult to meet the whole year target of P115.1 billion.

“At this point from where we stand, it would be very, very difficult to meet the P115.1 billion at the end of the year,” Bernardo candidly said.

Bernardo explained that there are bound to be some changes in the target projections for the whole year since these targets are set sometime July or August of the previous year.

“So, there were certain assumptions made, which at the time we made the projections seemed realistic but apparently, turned out they did not hold,” Bernardo said.

Bernardo said that for their projections for this year, for example, their assumptions were that in imports, there would be a ratio of 48 percent non-dutiable to dutiable but the actual figures that the BOC got right now is that the ratio of non-dutiable has already been about 59 percent.

Non-dutiable are import items that do not have levies or tariffs.

Bernardo, however, pointed out that starting with the first quarter, the collections at the BOC have significantly risen.

He said that for the first quarter, or from January to March, of this year, the BOC's monthly collections averaged P6.9 billion and this rose to a monthly average of P7.9 billion for the second semester, or from April to June.

So, for the second semester, we have seen an increase of P1 billion from the first quarter average, Bernardo said.

In July, Bernardo said, the BOC collected some P7.8 billion, and in August, the Bureau collected P9.2 billion, showing a steady increase.

"So, we are hoping the emerging scenario by the end of the year would be something like P99 billion plus," Bernardo said.

He said that before he was assigned to the BOC, he was a member of the group at the Department of Finance, where he was an undersecretary, that participated in the setting of collection targets for the BOC and the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

GMA names Cimatu head of Mideast Preparedness Team

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has instructed former Armed Forces chief of staff Roy Cimatu to head the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT), a group of government agencies that would monitor the evolving situation in the trouble-ridden region, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said today.

Bunye, in his regular press briefing this afternoon, also said the National Security Council and the Cabinet would meet on Tuesday to come up with recommendations to the President "on a full range of social, political and economic measures to prepare the nation for any eventuality."

Bunye said that after the meeting, the President would issue directives to the MEPT based on these recommendations.

The MEPT would be composed of representatives from the Department of Energy, Department of Labor and Employment, the Department of National Defense and the National Security Council.

Bunye said Cimatu would focus on energy security and the safety of overseas Filipino workers.

"He will (also) conduct regular press briefings to keep the public posted on the evolving situation," Bunye said.

The President earlier appointed Cimatu to lead the Philippine crisis team responsible for evacuating Filipinos in Iraq.

Cimatu, along with top diplomatic officials, have met with ambassadors of Middle Eastern countries and assessed the situation that could affect some 1.3-million Filipinos deployed in different countries in the region.

SWS survey still shows satisfaction over GMA performance, Palace says

Malacañang is pleased with the results of the latest Social Weather Stations survey as it still shows the moderate satisfaction of the public for the performance of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said today.

Bunye, in his regular press briefing, said that the latest SWS survey should be taken in its context.

“Because during the period in question, several circumstances took place such as the deportation of our Filipino workers from Sabah, the resignation of Secretary Raul Roco and Revenue Commissioner Rene Banez and also the renewed activities of the Abu Sayyaf group,” Bunye said.

“We would note that during the post State of the Nation Address survey, the President had a very high acceptance rating principally because of the killing of Abu Sabaya and the lowering of our purchased power adjustment rates. These circumstances, of course, are not present during the latest survey,” Bunye said.

Bunye added that “we (should) take note of the fact that the plus 18 percent net satisfaction rating is still the highest if we compare the results of the quarter by quarter basis.”

“So this is (still) higher than the second or higher than the first quarter results,” Bunye said.

In a radio interview, Bunye said the second half of the survey still showed that the people are very satisfied with her.

He noted that when the respondents were asked how serious the President is in fighting terrorism, 68 percent stated that the President is very serious in the fight.

This is also the same in the fight against crime with 61 percent net satisfaction rating for the President.

“On questions on the President’s pro-poor efforts, 59 percent was posted for the President while efforts to help Mindanao yielded a 53 percent net satisfaction rating for the Chief Executive,” Bunye said.

Palace brushes aside talks of 2004, says GMA focused on her job

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would rather do her job than delve on the 2004 presidential elections, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said today.

In his regular press briefing, Bunye noted that the political opposition keeps harping on the 2004 elections.

“But our stand has always been consistent: that we don’t want to talk about 2004 at this time,” Bunye said.

“We’d rather not delve on 2004 at this time because there are other things that have to be attended to by the President, that require her full attention,” Bunye added.

An opposition lawmaker has claimed that any candidate can beat the President in 2004.

In an earlier radio interview, Bunye said it was not surprising for the political opposition to say such a thing.

- GMA expresses desire for PEA directors to go on leave while road project is probed
- Cimatu says gov't ready for eventualities in Middle East
- GMA formally launches 'One Town, One Product, One Million Pesos' project
- Abad goes to PITC: Yap to NFA
- PAGC to start formal inquiry into alleged overpricing of PEA's Boulevard project

GMA expresses desire for PEA directors to go on leave while road project is probed

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed her desire that the entire board of the Public Estates Authority (PEA) should go on leave for the duration of the investigation of a complaint of alleged overpricing in the construction of the Central Boulevard and Bay Boulevard projects.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that in accordance Executive Order No. 12 dated April 16, 2001, the office of the Chief Presidential Legal Counsel has referred the complaint to the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) for appropriate action.

EO 12 is an order outlining the process of the investigations being conducted by the PAGC.

PAGC is the body tasked to investigate cases filed against the appointees of the President.

Bunye said the President earlier approved the request of PEA director Sulpicio Tagud, Jr. to go on indefinite leave.

"This does not preclude any investigation that will be conducted by the House and the Senate on the same matter," Bunye said.

The Press Secretary said that concerned PEA officials will just be allowed to go on leave in order to have an impartial investigation.

Bunye said Malacañang has just received the official explanation of the PEA board of directors, adding that those documents, together with the complaint, will in turn be endorsed to the PAGC.

"This matter is very serious and very urgent and it goes without saying that the PAGC should investigate this with dispatch," Bunye said.

Bunye noted that after the allegation of Tagud was publicized, the President immediately ordered the PEA to submit its explanation.

"The formal explanation has been received so this is now being referred to the PAGC," he said.

Bunye also pointed out that the allegations against PEA and the Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) could be treated separately and the appropriate referral could also be done individually.

Cimatu says gov't ready for eventualities in Middle East

The government will ensure the safety of Filipinos in the Middle East once a possible armed conflict would erupt in the region.

Retired Gen. Roy Cimatu, designated by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to lead the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT), said contingency plans are being discussed, even in the worst case scenario of Iraqi missile attacks on its enemies.

In a radio interview this morning, Cimatu said there might be no need to bring back home some 1.3-million overseas Filipino workers (OFW) in a worst case scenario.

He said this exercise could turn out to be an unnecessary “logistic and evacuation nightmare.”

The government has been ascertaining if Iraq would launch its Scud missiles, the effective range of the missiles, possible interceptions by American Patriot missiles, and other factors, he added.

Cimatu said it was likely that Filipino expatriates in at least nine countries around Iraq would be transferred to places beyond the reach of a full-blown war, at the most, in the Middle East.

He hinted that there would be indicators that would show if the Middle East situation would escalate into a missile war and the MEPT would know.

He said the MEPT has continued assessing the situation, “expecting the worst and hoping for the best.”

The former Armed Forces chief of Staff said he had been in constant touch with Ambassador Bahnarin Guinomla in Riyadh, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia.

He said the MEPT would visit all nine countries that might be affected by a war in the Middle East to look into the welfare and safety of OFWs there and gather inputs for a comprehensive plan of action for them.

GMA formally launches ‘One Town, One Product, One Million Pesos’ project

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo officially launched yesterday in Malacañang the “One Town, One Product, One Million Pesos,” project during a special luncheon meeting with 27 municipal mayors of the province of Laguna.

The President told the mayors that the project is aimed at generating employment within the towns involved in the project, alleviating poverty and thus, reinvigorating the domestic economy.

The President said she has directed the officials of government financial institutions (GFIs), the Small Business Guarantee Fund of the Department of Trade and Industry, the Department of Science and Technology, and the Land Bank of the Philippines (LBP), among others, to cooperate with the different local governments units in providing loanable funds as well as techno-managerial assistance to small and medium enterprises (SMEs).

The GFIs, the President pointed out, will provide seed financing for the SMEs in each town through the local government units (LGUs).

One town is assigned to develop a single indigenous product from the P1 million loan that will be released through to the LDB, the President said.

The President made a soft launching of the project early this month in a visit to Lakewood, Zamboanga del Sur.

Lakewood would get the P1-million loan with a four-year payback term for fruit production. Nine other Zamboanga del Sur towns would get the P1-million loan for the production of hybrid rice seeds.

“The PSF (Presidential Social Fund) has money in the Landbank for lending out,” the President said.

Later, the President picked Cabuyao, Laguna to receive the P1-million loan for SMEs involved in the recycling of soft packs of Nestle Philippines into construction materials.

She said the money would come from the Small Business Guarantee Fund with counterparts from Nestle and Laguna Rep. Joaquin Chipeco, Jr.

Still in Laguna, the President ordered DTI regional officials to identify SMEs involved in auto parts supply in Sta. Rosa, where multinational car-making plants are located, to get the loan.

She also hinted at the grant of a similar loan to an electronics SME in Sta. Rosa, Laguna to help raise the local value added of Amkor Technology Philippines, a semi-conductor producer, “which suffered last year because of the decline in the market for computers and chips.”

The President had also given P1-million each to the town of Monkayo in Compostela Valley for a SME into gold jewelry production and to Mayor Pedro Acharon, Jr. of General Santos City for a SME into tuna production.

Abad goes to PITC: Yap to NFA

Malacañang today announced that former National Food Authority (NFA) Administrator Anthony Abad has accepted his designation as president of the Philippine International Trading Corporation (PITC), a government-owned trading firm under the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI).

In a press briefing, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye also announced that PITC president Arthur Yap has been named as the new NFA administrator.

Bunye said both appointments will take effect immediately.

Abad was a student of President Arroyo in the economics honors class at the Ateneo.

After graduation, Abad decided to take up law, then joined an influential law firm during the Ramos administration.

With the law firm’s backing, he joined the government, building up an expertise on taxation and tariff law at the Tariff Commission.

Yap, who graduated with degrees in economics and management and earned a doctorate of laws at the Ateneo de Manila University, was appointed president of PITC in August 2001.

Aside from engaging in law practice in some of the country’s most prestigious law firms, Yap also served as national president of the Philippine Association of Paint Manufacturers from 1997 to 1999.

He is a member of the Integrated Bar of the Philippines (IBP), the American Society of International Law (ASIL), Ateneo de Manila University Alumni Association (College of Arts and Sciences, and School of Law) and the Philippine Constitutional Association (Philconsa).

The PITC is engaged in the export and import of commodities, industrial products and consumer goods.

It is an active participant in the implementation of government-to-government trading transactions, in alternative marketing and financial mechanisms like counter-trade, and in bulk importation programs which seek to stabilize prices and supply in the domestic market.

To support the market development efforts of its clients worldwide, the company also provides access to a competitively-priced trade services and facilities.

Created through Presidential Decree No. 4 dated September 26, 1972, the NFA is tasked to promote the integrated growth and development of the grains industry covering rice, corn, feed grains and other grains like sorghum, mungo, and peanut.

In January 14, 1981 Presidential Decree (PD) No. 1770 was issued which reconstituted the NGA into what is now the National Food Authority (NFA).

This decree widened its commodity coverage to include, in addition to grains, other food items like raw or fresh, manufactured, processed, or packaged food products, collectively referred to as non-grains commodities.

Today, the National Food Authority is vested with regulatory powers over the grains industry and is likewise tasked with implementing the government's food security program.

PAGC to start formal inquiry into alleged overpricing of PEA's Boulevard project

The Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) today said that it will now formally start the investigation into the alleged anomalies relating to the Central Boulevard and Bay Boulevard projects of the Public Estates Authority (PEA).

PAGC Chairman Dario Rama said that his office received this afternoon the pertinent documents to the case from Chief Presidential Legal Counsel Avelino Cruz, Jr.

"We are immediately endorsing the matter to our Investigation Division so that the necessary evaluation of the case may be commenced immediately preparatory to the issuance of an order directing the parties to file their response and/or counter-affidavit (s) in the event the existence of a probable cause is determined by the Commission," Rama said in his letter to Cruz acknowledging receipt of the documents.

The documents, according to Rama, are related to the case involving the PEA and the JD Legaspi Construction.

Earlier, in his press briefing, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said the investigation to be conducted by the PAGC is governed by Executive Order No. 12.

Bunye said that E.O. No. 12 outlines the procedure that will be followed by the PAGC in its investigation of cases involving presidential appointees.

Meanwhile, PEA chairman Ernest Villareal and three of his directors have filed for an indefinite leave of absence from the board "in order to have a free and impartial investigation on the issues raised on the President Diosdado Macapagal Boulevard,"

The other three PEA directors who filed for an indefinite leave of absence, along with Villareal, were Rodolfo Tuazon, Benjamin Cariño, and Angelito Villanueva.

Joemari D. Gerochi, another board member, has tendered his resignation instead of just filing for a leave of absence.

"I am doing this Madam President in the higher interest of good governance, transparency and principled leadership. I have every hope that this will pave the way for the impartial investigation into the facts and circumstances regarding the PDM Boulevard project of the PEA," Gerochi said in his letter of resignation.

Roxas pushes for expanded exports to Asian market

The Philippines should start focusing more on the Asian market as a key export destination.

This Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II pushed to help ease the impact of declining exports to the United States and Japan, which continued to experience economic slowdown.

The US and Japan are two of the country's top export markets.

Roxas said the growing exports to China, Malaysia, South Korea, Hong Kong, Taiwan, and Singapore had resulted in a 32.3-percent increase in aggregate market share in the first half of 2002, compared to last year's 26 percent.

He said the expanding Asian market led to the recovery of Philippine exports, which posted a 4.3-percent growth in the same period.

Exports to China grew by 82.2 percent; Malaysia, 55.7 percent; South Korea, 51.1 percent; Hong Kong, 28.3 percent; Taiwan, 25.3 percent; and Singapore, 1.5 percent.

In contrast, total exports to the US and Japan declined by 6.6 percent and 5 percent, respectively.

"Expanding Asian markets led by China and the continued rebuilding of inventory for semiconductors and electronic products provided the much-needed push for the country's exports," Roxas noted.

He called on businessmen to take advantage of China's own liberalization, deregulation and reform measures.

"There is a wide range of products that could potentially enjoy greater demand from the Chinese market due to lower prices brought about by lower tariffs in China and the expected benefits to accrue from the expected higher income from Chinese consumers," he added.

The top five exports to China include semiconductor devices, petroleum oil, copper cathodes, automatic data processing machine parts and accessories.

Four OIC envoys vow assistance to ensure safety of OFWs in their countries

Diplomats of four member countries of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC) have assured the Philippine government of assistance to ensure the safety of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in their respective countries.

The diplomats met this morning at the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) with Acting Foreign Affairs Secretary Lauro Baja, Jr. and retired Gen. Roy Cimatu, who was recently designated by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as head of the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT).

The President has instructed the MEPT to draw up a comprehensive contingency plan to ensure the safety of OFWs in case war erupts in the Middle East, particularly in Iraq.

During the meeting, Baja and Cimatu briefed the diplomats on the functions of the MEPT.

The DFA asked the diplomats for their views and advice on how to ensure the safety of the OFWs who are working in their respective countries in case there is a need to repatriate them to the Philippines.

Specifically, the DFA asked for assistance from the four countries in arranging for meetings between the MEPT and the appropriate officials in their respective countries.

The diplomats assured the DFA that they would assist Cimatu and members of his team in securing clearances and other documents that the team would need before its departure and during its visit to their countries.

Earlier, Cimatu said that as instructed by the President, the MEPT would visit all the nine countries in the Middle East that might be affected by the conflict to gather inputs for a comprehensive plan of action for their safety and welfare.

Present during the meeting at the DFA were Ambassador Tanju Sumer of Turkey, Ambassador Mohammed Ebrahim al Jowaid of the United Arab Emirates, Deputy Chief of Mission Mohsen Al-Ajmi of the Kuwait embassy, and Second Secretary Rafat Ahmed Mirza Al Sayed of the Saudi Arabian embassy.

Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo on the release of four MSU teachers

At 11:00 last night, September 25, 2002, the four teachers abducted in Lanao del Sur last Sept. 13, 2002 were released without ransom through the joint efforts of DSWD, the provincial government of Lanao del Sur, local government of Marawi City, the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police (PNP)

The four (4) Mindanao State University teachers, Edith Bontilao, Emma Karaan, Salvacion Mikin, and Luzvilla Serate, are back safe in the arms of their families. To our teachers, welcome back. Your courage and faith have been rewarded by your safe release. We heard your plea and responded by working double time to bring you home.

I congratulate our team who worked non-stop and with singular determination to bring our teachers home after twelve days in captivity.

The successful operations were made possible by the concerted effort of DSWD Undersecretary Omera Lucman, Assemblyman Anzaruni Adiong, Akira Alonto, both representing the provincial government of Lanao del Sur under Governor Mamintal Adiong, Maj. Gen. Al Dagudag of the 4th Infantry Division, Col. Ernesto Boac of the 401st Infantry Brigade, Philippine Army, and Chief Superintendent Acmad Omar, regional director of PRO-ARMM.

The competent and dedicated role of the Provincial Crisis Management Committee must also be mentioned as a concrete example of how proper planning and united action work for our citizens and our country. The provincial government adheres to the government's no-ransom policy, and no ransom was paid in the release of the hostages.

The release of our four teachers is the result of the tried and proven formula of the PNP against kidnapping and other crimes: Community cooperation with the united effort of local government officials and concerned citizens to convince the abductors to release the victims, professional police action with the pressure exerted by the personnel of PNP PRO-ARMM and the 401st Infantry Brigade of the Philippine Army and responsible media coverage which has encouraged concerned citizens to provide information and support.

We will not be held hostage by bandits and criminals. We will apply not only the full force of police and military resources but also the greater weight of a united front against crime and every threat to our strong Republic. We will not stop, we will not fail.

GMA assures public gov't readying measures in case of Iraq-U.S. war

GEN. LUNA, Surigao del Norte – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the public that the national government is preparing some drastic measures to counter the possible problems that the country will face if the conflict between the United States and Iraq escalates.

The President said the Cabinet Oversight Committee and the National Security Council will be meeting on Tuesday next week to tackle the immediate actions the government would take once war erupts between the two countries.

The President said the purpose of the meeting is to establish a road map on what the government’s immediate action would be to counter the problems that may arise in the event of an Iraq war.

Among the major components included in the road map is the evacuation of the Overseas Filipino Workers in Iraq and the energy concerns of the country.

The President also said she will be going to Palawan tomorrow to visit the Malampaya platform and see to it that our natural gas supply can accommodate the country’s fuel needs.

She also said that former Armed Forces of Chief of Staff retired Gen. Roy Cimatu, who now heads the crisis committee on Iraq, will conduct a daily briefing about the preparations of the government.

GMA grateful for safe release of four MSU teachers

ILIGAN CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she was grateful for the safe recovery of the four Mindanao State University (MSU) teachers who were released without paying any ransom.

In a statement she read before the Second Mindanao Shippers’ Conference at the Maria Cristina Hotel here, the President said the release of the four teachers was the result of the “tried and proven formula” of the Philippine National Police (PNP) against kidnapping and other crimes.

“I congratulate our team — our team who worked non-stop and with singular determination to bring our teachers home after 12 days in captivity,” the Chief Executive said in her statement.

The four MSU teachers who were abducted last Sept. 11 in Lanao del Sur were identified as Edith Bontilao, Emma Karaan, Salvacion Mikin, and Luzvilla Serate.

They were released at around 11 p.m. on Wednesday through the joint efforts of the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), the provincial government of Lanao del Sur, the local government of Marawi City, the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP).

The President said the release of the kidnap victims was mainly due to community cooperation, professional police action, and responsible media coverage which encouraged citizens to provide information and support.

“To our teachers, welcome back. Your courage and faith have been rewarded by your safe release. We heard your plea and responded by working double time to bring you home,” she said.

Upon her arrival at the National Steel Corporation (NSC) landing zone here, the President met with three of the four released MSU teachers and gave them words of comfort.

In her speech, the President specifically cited the role played by Social Welfare Undersecretary Omera Lucman, Assemblyman Anzaruni Adiong, Akira Alonto, both representing the provincial government of Lanao del Sur, Maj. Gen. Al Dagudag of the 4th Infantry Division, Col. Ernesto Boac of the 401st Infantry Brigade, and Chief Supt. Acmad Omar, regional director of the PNP.

GMA says lower transport, cargo handling costs between key ports to boost national economy

ILIGAN CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed her desire to lower transport and cargo handling costs between Mindanao and other areas of the country to perk up national economic growth.

In a speech before the Second Mindanao Shipper’s Conference at the Maria Cristina Hotel’s Ballroom Hall here, the President said this measure would speed up Mindanao’s development.

She noted Mindanao’s sustained economic growth hinged on exports, disclosing that she looked forward to improved regional exports with the completion of the Mindanao International Container Port Terminal by April 2004 and the Laguindingan airport in Misamis Oriental.

At the same time, she also disclosed that the Development Bank of the Philippines is leading a program to develop roll-on, roll-off facilities between key port destinations.

But doing business in Mindanao should be favorable and more competitive, she said.

She reiterated the government’s three-point program to reduce transport and cargo handling costs in Mindanao ports, to include:

- The adoption, starting this month, by the Philippine Ports Authority of a universal rate in collecting government shares from the revenues of cargo handlers.

The rate would be pegged at 10 percent for domestic ports and 20 percent for international ports. She said this was her initial move to mitigate the cost of cargo handling, especially in Davao and Zamboanga,

- The freezing of the 35-percent rise in port and wharfage fees for the next five years. The previous administration ordered the fees raised.

She said the non-implementation of the 35-percent increase in port and wharfage fees being charged by the PPA, would mean a loss of P200 million a year in public revenues. But she explained she was ready to take the gamble to set the stage for Mindanao’s growth.

- The freezing of arrastre and stevedoring fees for 24 months.

Besides the three-point program, the President also pushed for aggressive investments in modernizing port handling facilities.

She earlier directed the Maritime Industry Authority to work closely with the PPA and the private sector to help unbundle all the charges related to cargo handling in the freight charges.

GMA pushes for construction of int'l airport in Bohol

GENERAL LUNA, Surigao del Norte – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Wednesday said the construction of an international airport in Bohol would boost eco-tourism and beach tourism in the country.

In a luncheon meeting with members of the media at the Pansukian Resort here, the President said the plan to build a big airport in Bohol was contained in her administration's short and medium-term tourism strategy.

The airport's economic windfall would benefit the people and the world-rated tourism industries in Boracay, Palawan, Siargao Island in Surigao del Norte and Surigao del Sur.

Surigao is very near Bohol. With an airport at hand, Siargao Island, known as the country's surfing capital, and other tourist destinations in the Surigao provinces will socially and economically grow.

The President said she told Senator Robert Barbers, Surigao del Norte Governor Robert Lyndon Barbers and Rep. Robert Ace Barbers to facilitate tourism tie-ups between and among Cebu, Bohol and Surigao.

She said the construction of the Bohol international airport would bring tourists nearer to the famous Chocolate Hills and the Siargao surfing area.

As much as Bohol benefited from the Cebu air transport facilities, so would Siargao benefit from a Bohol airport, she averred.

She added that the government has strived to bring tourists to Siargao. "This is one of those areas that we want to develop," she said.

She also expressed optimism that the tourism industry would improve with the government's "Visit the Philippines Year" program in 2003.

"For the longer term, we hope that we can double the number of tourists by the year 2010," she said.

"This year, we want to win the battle against poverty with our short term and a medium term tourism strategy," she stressed.

The President noted that the pristine white beaches nationwide continued to lure most visitors to the country.

In a recent voting conducted by the beach owners association in China, the Philippines was selected as having the best beaches in Asia, she said.

Gov't to pay for repair of presidential plane as soon as cost is ascertained, says Palace

Malacañang today said it is willing to pay the cost of repair of the presidential twin-engine Fokker jet as soon as an independent appraiser establishes the correct amount.

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, in his regular press briefing, said that this was the recommendation made by the chief Presidential Legal Counsel Avelino Cruz, Jr.

Bunye further said that the matter is now the subject of a suit involving the government as plaintiff and the Fokker Services Asia PTE Ltd. and Seal Aircraft Industries Inc. as defendants.

Bunye said the government's case, filed before the Regional Trial Court of Paranaque, arose from a dispute on the extent and cost of repairs.

"What the government wants is the appointment of an independent expert to appraise the cost of repairs," Bunye said.

The aircraft is now in Singapore but the aircraft's two engines are now in Dallas, Texas, where repair and maintenance work are being done.

Datumanong named O.I.C. of P.E.A.

Malacañang today announced that Department of Public Works and Highways Secretary Simeon Datumanong would take over immediately as Officer-In-Charge of both the Office of the Chairman and the Office of the General Manager of the Public Estates Authority.

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, who made the announcement during his regular press briefing in Malacañang, stressed that Datumanong "has to secure all the pertinent documents."

"He (Datumanong) has to make sure that all the documents are accounted for, no documents are missing and because any missing documents will definitely hamper investigation," Bunye said.

Meanwhile, Bunye said the Government Service Insurance System – PEA loan agreement is separate and distinct from the construction agreement between PEA and JD Legaspi Construction.

He said the approval process for the alleged variation orders under the new PEA Board is separate and distinct from the GSIS-PEA Loan Agreement.

"The alleged variation orders have not been referred to the Office of the President," Bunye said.

The Press Secretary noted that the P1-billion loan was to be used primarily "for the construction and completion of horizontal development of the Manila Bay reclamation project, including PEA properties in Central Business Park 1-A."

Bunye noted that this is "not only the construction of the Central Boulevard which currently is the subject of the controversy."

Bunye noted that the GSIS-PEA Loan Agreement, a government to government transaction underwent the established procedure for review such as the favorable recommendation of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), Department of Finance and the Office of the Deputy Executive Secretary for Legal Affairs.

DOE says oil price hikes have no effect on power rates

The Department of Energy (DOE) today assured that recent adjustments in oil prices have minimal effect on electricity rates.

Energy Secretary Vincent Perez, Jr. said that the Philippines, despite being a direct oil importer, has veered away from complete dependence on oil for power generation.

The assurance came in the heels of increased tension in the Middle East that could affect world oil prices, and consequently impact on local oil prices, a DOE report reaching Malacañang said.

Perez said the country has diversified energy sources to fuel its power plants. Most of these energy sources are indigenous, such as hydro and geothermal power and natural gas.

This would shield the country from any unstable supply and any rise in the price of oil brought about by external factors.

“The country through the National Power Corp. (NAPOCOR) has been veering away from the use of oil in our power generation mix. Our data from NAPOCOR show that dependence on oil as fuel for power plants has significantly been reduced to only 11.75 percent as of July this year,” Perez said.

Coal, considered one of the cheapest fuels, accounted for 40.02 percent in the power generation mix; followed by geothermal power at 27.23 percent as of July.

Dependence on hydro power as a fuel source was at 16.25 percent. NAPOCOR’s Ilijan power plant, which came on stream this June, has also contributed about 4.72 percent in the fuel mix.

In 1995, oil contributed more than half or 56.85 percent in the power generation mix. But this slowly dropped over the years. In end-2000, the use of oil in the power generation mix has declined to only 20.28 percent.

Last year, the country’s energy self-sufficiency stood at 45.5 percent.

NAPOCOR initial studies showed that a 10-percent rise in the price of bunker fuel per liter would translate to only one-centavo per kilowatt hour (kWh) increase in the fuel cost adjustment component of NAPOCOR’s electricity rates in the Luzon grid, Perez said.

Even a 50-percent increase in diesel fuel would only translate to one-centavo per kWh increase, he said.

Meanwhile, NAPOCOR has retired aging oil-based power plants with a combined capacity of 1,020 megawatts (MW) as of 2000.

In Luzon, another three oil-fired power plants with a total capacity of 860-MW will be decommissioned by 2009 and 2010.

In the Visayas, five oil-fired power plants with a combined capacity of 285.4-MW are also in the pipeline for decommissioning between 2004 and 2011.

These include the 36.5-MW Panay diesel (2004), 22-MW Bohol diesel power barge (2005), 55-MW Cebu land-based gas turbine (2011), 43.9-MW Cebu diesel (2011) and Power Barge 101-104 with a total capacity of 128-MW (2005).

The retirement of the Bohol diesel power barge, however, is contingent on the upgrading of the Leyte-Bohol transmission line.

“Our goal is to have a stable and secure energy supply by increasing the share of indigenous energy sources. We are working hard to develop our indigenous energy sources to increase our energy self-sufficiency level,” Perez said.

He also echoed the call of Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye to consumers to conserve gas in the light of the Middle East situation.

“We fully support the call of Secretary Toting Bunye urging the consumers to conserve oil. We have seen that prices of oil have gone up in the last few months. We believe it will be best for all of us to be more prudent on oil consumption including use of LPG for cooking,” Perez said.

GMA reaffirms gov't commitment to pursue rehabilitation of Nat'l Steel Corp.

ILIGAN CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today reiterated the government's commitment to pursue the rehabilitation of the defunct National Steel Corporation (NSC).

In her speech during the Second Mindanao Shippers' Conference at the Maria Cristina Hotel here, the President said the Philippine government and the Danaharta, Malaysia's Asset Privatization Trust (APT), has already developed a "meeting of the minds" to develop and rehabilitate the NSC.

She recalled that last August 22, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II met with the creditors of Danaharta where the outstanding issues were fully discussed and negotiated.

"At that meeting they developed a meeting of minds regarding future steps toward the rehabilitation of National Steel," the President said.

She added that both the creditors and the Danaharta confirmed that the game plan is still to operate the national business.

According to her, the Danaharta stressed that the sale of the assets need not require 85 percent majority consent, provided that the sale is at least 80 percent of the appraised value.

"It clarified that the 85 percent shareholder consent requirement is intended as an anti-volition provision to protect its 60 percent equity in case there is a change of ownership," she said.

The President said the Danaharta underscored that the appointment of the chief executive officer and the chief operating officer shall be made upon the recommendation of the creditor banks.

"It only wants to share the decision making in the screening process," Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo said.

These, she said, are great strides regarding the contentious issues of the National Steel.

Since then, she said the Philippine National Bank (PNB), which represented the bank at the meeting, has presented the agreement to all the creditor banks where each member creditor bank has secured their respective board's approval.

When the clearance of the banks came, the President said the agreements were converted into a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA).

The MOA, she said, was already transmitted to the Danaharta for comment last Sept. 20.

According to her, the Danaharta board is reviewing the MOA, even as she expressed hope that the Malaysian group would sign it.

The President also took the opportunity to thank Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad for making it possible for the Philippines and the Malaysian Danaharta to sit down and discuss major issues involving the rehabilitation of the NSC.

As the start of her speech, President Macapagal-Arroyo donated P1 million to Iligan City Mayor Franklin Quijano for the "One Town, One Product, One Million Pesos" program to benefit displaced NSC workers.

Among those who graced the shippers' conference were Transportation Secretary Leandro Mendoza, Presidential Adviser on One-Million Jobs Cito Lorenzo, Presidential Adviser for Mindanao Jesus Dureza and Iligan City Mayor Franklin Quijano.

GMA offers P1 million loan for SME of displaced steel workers

ILIGAN CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today offered to release a P1-million loan to displaced workers of the mothballed National Steel Corporation so that they can engage in a small and medium enterprise (SME).

In her speech at the Second Mindanao Shippers Conference held here, the President said the amount would be loaned through the Land Bank of the Philippines (LBP) under her "One Town, One Project, One Million Pesos" project.

The President formally launched the project in Malacañang last Tuesday during a luncheon meeting with the 27 municipal mayors of Laguna.

In her speech, the President said that the American economy is still weak and the government is now relying on the domestic market to expand the economy.

"Because Iligan is a steel town, I will be giving a P1 million loan, to be advanced by my President's Social Fund, but to be reimbursed by the Land Bank, for a small and medium enterprise of the displaced steel workers," the President said.

The President also said that since the government does not have the money, she wants the private sector to lead in strengthening the local economy.

She also lauded the City of Iligan for its initiative in developing, along with the private sector, at least 5,000 hectares of land for abaca, banana, pineapple and coffee production.

"This will translate not only to at least 10,000 jobs but also to an increase of at least 25,000 tons of cargo," the President said.

The President also commended Iligan City for diversifying its employment base and not just depending on one single industry.

According to the President, the thrust of the region is to develop the seaweed industry from Pangil Bay in Misamis Occidental and Lanao del Norte to Yanga Bay in Surigao del Sur.

The seaweed industry, the President said, will generate an additional hundred thousand jobs within the next 12 months besides the 25,000 families that have already benefited from it.

Despite September 11 and kidnapping incidents, tourism in RP is growing, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has said that despite the negative impact of September 11 terrorist attacks on the United States last year and the series of kidnappings perpetrated by criminal groups, the country's tourism industry is still growing.

Speaking before the ceremonial opening of the 7th International Surfing Cup and the 1st Human Body Boarding Challenge held Thursday at Cloud Nine Beach Resort at Siargao Island, the President said that despite the negative growth in some countries in the world brought by September 11, tourism in the Philippines is still a thriving industry.

"Tourism is one of the primary sectors in the world where there has been negative growth rate after September 11 but tourism in the Philippines is still growing at double digit," the President said.

In her impromptu speech, the President also congratulated Surigao del Norte Governor Robert Lyndon Barbers, his brother, Rep. Robert Ace Barbers, and the provincial and local officials of Surigao as well as the Department of Tourism for hosting the surfing and body boarding competition at Cloud 9 Beach Resort in Siargao Island.

The President wished the participants of the four-day surfing competition all the luck. The surfing event started Thursday and will end Sunday while the human body boarding challenge is set for October 1 to 13.

The President also said that in order to help accommodate local and foreign surfers, she has launched the "One Town, One Product, One Million Pesos" loan program for small and medium enterprises (SMEs) in the island.

She issued a P1 million check as loan to one of the beach resorts of the island. The President handed the check to Gov. Barbers after her speech.

Siargao island, which is composed of nine municipalities, has the best surfing terminals in Region 13. General Luna town alone has 14 beach resorts and during the tournament there was an overflow of patrons resulting in the lack of rooms for visitors.

The President said she is very hopeful that the "One Town, One Product, One Million Pesos" loan for SMEs will help a lot to further develop the tourism industry in Siargao.

GMA says Siargao surfing tilt negates bad notions on Mindanao's peace and order situation

The holding of an international surfing competition in Mindanao negates notions that the region is beset by peace and order problems.

This was stressed by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Thursday in a speech before officials, competitors and guests at the 7th International Surfing Cup and the 1st Human Body Boarding Challenge at the Cloud Nine Beach Resort in Siargao Island, Surigao del Norte.

“The world thinks of Mindanao as a place that is not secure. Siargao makes that claim false,” the President said.

She also took note of the very stable peace and order condition in Surigao del Norte.

The President said the international gauge for good peace and order is pegged at eight crimes per 100,000 population, adding that Surigao del Norte has a crime rate of only two per 100,000 population.

According to the President, many areas in Mindanao have also achieved great gains, thanks to stepped-up drive by local officials and the people against criminal and terrorist elements.

She recalled that during her most recent visit to General Santos City, she was informed that the local police have killed the area’s number one drug pusher.

In an earlier visit to the same city, she said she was greeted by the news that the head of the Abu Sofia, a kidnap-for-ransom group linked to the terrorist Abu Sayyaf, was also killed.

She said she came back to Mindanao with every piece of good news about government achievements in its peace and order campaign.

On Thursday, in Iligan City, the President received the four teachers of Mindanao State University who were rescued Wednesday from their abductors.

GMA inspects Malampaya platform, stresses role of project in gov’t energy self-sufficiency program

MALAMPAYA PLATFORM, Palawan—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today inspected the offshore platform of the Malampaya Deep Water Gas to Power Project to stress the importance that her administration is giving to projects aimed at making the country self-sufficient in its energy requirements.

The President arrived here this morning from El Nido by Heli-Canadian Air, the Malampaya chopper.

Among those who accompanied the President in her brief inspection of the platform were Energy Secretary Vicente Perez, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, and former AFP chief, retired Gen Roy Cimatu, now chairman of the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT).

Cimatu’s inclusion in the inspection visit was part of the preparations for his visit, starting tomorrow, to the nine Middle East countries where he will draw up a comprehensive contingency plan for overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in case war erupts in the region.

Before proceeding to El Nido on board the presidential yacht, Ang Pangulo, the President on Thursday opened the international surfing competition in Siargao Island, Surigao del Norte and keynoted the 2nd Mindanao Shippers Conference in Iligan City.

The President and her party stayed for only about 30 minutes at the platform, after which they returned to El Nido where she briefed the media about the importance of the Malampaya project.

During the briefing, the President cited the importance of the Malampaya project, especially with the threat of war in the Middle East where the Philippines gets the bulk of its oil requirements.

The President also said that the Malampaya project is well secured.

She also said that her “One town, One Project, One Mission Pesos” program will be implemented in Palawan where small and medium enterprises (SMEs) can apply for loans for their livelihood projects.

The Malampaya project, whose operation will span decades, is an example of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration’s long-term view of the country’s prospects and capabilities.

Earlier, the President said that because of the project, the country’s need for foreign oil and gas and petroleum products would be lessened, adding that the Philippines would have more protection, especially with the impending new round of increase in the price of crude oil brought about by the threat of war in the Middle East.

The $5-billion Malampaya Deep Water Gas to Power project, which the President inaugurated on Oct. 16, 2001, is the largest and most important investment of its kind in the history of the Philippines.

During the inauguration of the facility in Tabangao, Batangas City, the President said the project marks the beginning of a whole new industry that will provide clean and environment-friendly fuel to Philippine industries.

The President said that with an expected $700 million in yearly savings as a result of the natural gas project, the country is expected to earn at least $13 million in royalties within its 20-year period of operation.

The year-round production of oil and gas from the Malampaya project in Palawan is one of the factors that would help sustain the country’s economic growth in 2002, according to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

In her yearend report to the nation, the President said that with gas production in Malampaya that started in the middle of October, 2001 and oil production that kicked off in December of the same year, the Philippines is now 52 percent self-sufficient in its energy requirements.

The inauguration of the project, held three and a half years after the declaration of the commercial quantity of gas in Malampaya in May 1998, marked the birth of the Philippines’ natural gas industry.

Prior to the launching of the Malampaya project, the country was consuming up to $3 billion worth of imported fuel every year.

The President said that the impact of the natural gas project would be long and widely felt far beyond the power and energy sector itself in the daily lives of millions of Filipinos.

“Many of those Filipinos may have never heard of Malampaya and maybe never will, because they are far in the hinterlands. But they will be reached and touched by the benefits of natural gas,” she said.

The President said that in order to achieve the goal of enhancing natural gas utilization, it shall be the policy of her administration to promote activities in the downstream sector by offering access for all land-based gas pipeline networks to ensure the inflow of investments in this area.

Several Japanese, Filipino, European and Malaysian companies have already signified their interest in investing in a land-based gas pipeline network from Batangas to Manila and eventually to Bataan.

Faster cargo handling, transport in Mindanao by 2004

By the year 2004, shippers and stakeholders in the cargo industry would benefit from the faster handling and transport of goods between Mindanao and other top domestic ports.

But most importantly, they would gain from more reasonable cargo handling and transport costs.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, in a speech before a gathering of shippers and cargo operators in Iligan City Thursday, said container port modernization would finally be implemented in Mindanao.

She said she looked forward to the completion by 2004 of the P2-billion Mindanao Container Port Terminal (MCPT) in Tagoloan, Misamis Oriental.

The President hinted that the construction of the huge terminal would generate jobs by itself. When it operates, more employment opportunities would be generated, she said.

The completion of the terminal would go side by side with the construction of the nearby Laguindingan airport.

The two support infrastructure projects are in line with the President's commitment, as expounded in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA), to improve services that would rev up Mindanao's economy.

The Interagency Investment Coordination Committee (ICC) of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) had approved last May the implementation of the second stage of the MCPT.

The NEDA-ICC, in approving the project, noted that the MCPT would meet the increasing demand for cargo movement to and from Cagayan de Oro and Iligan City.

The MCTP Phase II bulk and food terminal covers the extension of an existing 300-meter berth by 200 meters, the provision of a wharf bulk loader and unloader for easier cargo handling, and the expansion of support facilities and office.

The MCTP Phase II will be located on the shoreline of Macajalar Bay at Tagoloan, some 17 kilometers northeast by road from Cagayan de Oro City.

The site of the MCTP Phase II is within the vicinity of industries at the the PHIVIDEC Industrial Estate-Misamis Oriental (PIE-MO) adjacent to the MCTP Phase I.

Of the total cost of $40.9 million (P2.043 billion), around 60 percent will be funded under Japan's Special Yen Loan Package (SYLP) while the remaining 40 percent will be shouldered by local counterpart funds.

The SYLP carries an interest rate of one percent, with a 40-year repayment period, inclusive of a 10-year grace period.

The NEDA-ICC said port access would be through the national coastal highway, without using or passing through congested city roads.

The MCTP Phase II will cater to bulk cargos like fertilizer, animal feeds, grains, rice and palay, and sugar.

The project is also expected to ease conditions at the already heavily congested Cagayan De Oro City port.

The MCTP Phase II has been designed to handle 2.3 million tons of dry and breakbulk cargoes and accommodate the berthing of one 20,000-DWT vessel to two 150-DWT vessels in a 200-meter berth length.

Support facilities include terminal operation building, transit shed, maintenance shop, generator house and canteen and port workers room.

Wharf crane loaders and unloader, and belt conveyor system are the main equipment to be procured for the project.

Palace announces arrest of Dipolog City swindler who posed as DBM facilitator

Malacañang today announced the arrest of a swindler who claimed before Misamis Occidental Governor Loreto Leo Ocampos that he facilitated the release of the province's Local Government Service Equalization Funds (LGSEF).

Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin, in a press briefing in Malacañang, led a video presentation showing elements of the Misamis Occidental Police Provincial Office arresting Nestor Dapar, a businessman and a resident of Dipolog City, in an entrapment operation.

The arrest took place last September 24 inside the Office of Governor Ocampos and was witnessed by representatives of the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) and the Presidential Anti-Organized Crime Commission (PAOCC).

According to Boncodin, Dapar was immediately arrested after receiving marked money from Gov. Ocampos. The marked money was supposed to represent the 15-percent commission of the group in connection with the "facilitation" for the release of LGSEF to the provincial government.

A case of swindling was filed against Dapar before the City Prosecutors Office in Oroquieta City on the same day of the arrest.

The group of Dapar, Boncodin said, claimed responsibility for the release of the funds allegedly using their connections inside the Office of the President and the DBM.

DBM Assistant Secretary Edgardo Opida, who was present during the arrest, has debunked Dapar's claim.

Last month, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the DBM presented architect Manuel Tolentino who was arrested in a similar entrapment operation in Manila.

Barely two months after the DBM sought the assistance of PAOCC, government investigators have already unraveled a significant part of the group's intricate network and inner workings.

The DBM said it believes that a group, which operates nationwide, has already victimized several government officials and private businessmen during a certain period of time.

Boncodin enjoined all government officials to follow Gov. Ocampos' example by volunteering information to government investigators about the group's activities.

GMA not offended by spoofs on her infomercials — Palace

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is neither offended nor insulted by impersonations on her in government infomercials, wherein she explains government efforts in lowering the cost of rice, electricity and medicines, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said today.

"Ang ating Pangulo naman ay (Our President is) game. She's sport. She takes everything in stride," Bunye said in his regular press briefing.

Responding to queries if the President is slighted by imitations of her infomercials, Bunye noted that it is usually the heads of state that are subjected to impersonation.

"The more important you are, the more you become targets of caricatures or spoofs. These are normal in a democratic setup," he added.

Bunye noted that it is the government's duty to inform the people on the available government programs.

"It would be worst if you keep the people in the dark," he said.

Palace reassures state workers that they will get their yearend bonus

Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin today reassured government workers that they would be getting their regular Christmas bonus by the yearend.

"We will all get our usual yearend bonuses from the budget as prescribed by law," Boncodin said in a press briefing in Malacañang.

The budget secretary noted, however, that the additional cash incentives are still being worked out, if there will be any.

"As you know, we have just completed our third quarter performance review and it (cash incentives) will depend on what the finances will look like by the end of the year," Boncodin said.

Boncodin noted, however, that the government could not afford the P3,000-salary increase, which is being asked by some government employees.

She said the government is looking at options to provide non-monetary benefits to state workers in lieu of salary increase.

According to Boncodin, the DBM is now meeting with the Civil Service Commission on this issue.

She added that DBM has discussed with the Public Sector Labor Management Council the possibility of providing benefits that are non-wage to public employees.

"Essentially, in terms of work conditions, better flexibility in working hours or those that will not entail additional money for the government. There are some agencies that are already contemplating a four-day work week," Boncodin said.

Gov't has identified countries where OFWs can be relocated in case of another gulf war

EL NIDO, Palawan—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the nation that the government has already identified countries where Filipinos could be relocated in case of an outbreak of another war in the Middle East.

In her opening statement at a media briefing here after her inspection visit to the Malampaya project, the President said that the identification of these relocation sites is part of the functions of the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT) headed by former AFP chief, retired Gen. Roy Cimatu.

The President said although the relocation countries have already been identified, diplomatic prudence requires that these countries should not be publicly named.

"Rest assured, however, that specific relocations plans are being worked out by our crisis manager," the President said, referring to Cimatu.

The President said that Cimatu met Thursday with the ambassadors of countries sharing borders with Iraq, namely Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, United Arab Emirates and Turkey.

According to the President, the ambassadors of the four countries assured the Philippines of their support for any relocation activities that would be undertaken for our Filipino nationals in their territories.

Cimatu has estimated that only 5 percent of the overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in the Middle East would be affected if the United States pushes through with its threat to attack Iraq.

The President said that the government does not foresee an evacuation of OFWs back to the Philippines but only temporary relocation within a country or, in a worse case scenario, to an adjacent third country.

GMA cites gov't steps to meet energy contingencies

EL NIDO, Palawan—The Philippines is prepared for any energy contingency that may arise in the Middle East because of Iraq's refusal to comply with the resolutions of the United Nations Security Council.

In her opening statement during a media briefing here, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed this as she cited the country's less dependence on oil, bulk of which it imports from the Middle East.

The President said the Philippines is now only 21 percent dependent on oil for its power needs, compared to more than 60 percent in the last Gulf War in the early 90s.

"This is because we have been able to diversify our power sources," the President said.

She noted that the country has developed its energy sources and has tapped "geothermal, coal, hydro and most recently, natural gas with the coming onstream operations of Malampaya."

The President earlier made a brief inspection of the offshore platform of the Malampaya Deep Water Gas to Power project in Palawan.

She said the Philippines was fortunate to have gained the approval of at least "four new exploration companies from Britain, Japan and the United States prospecting around Northern Palawan."

"We have been actively promoting our country's potentials in oil and gas exploration," she said.

The country is in a better situation today than during the previous Middle East crisis, the President said.

But there is a need to plan ahead because "we are still dependent on imported oil for our transportation needs," she said.

The government's contingency plans include the increase in the country's oil inventory and the facilitation of arrangements for a special contingency bilateral supply with traditional and new oil supplying countries.

Citing "diplomatic prudence" for not naming the oil suppliers, the President said there were talks with a Middle East nation for a "formal solid assurance on oil supply that will be finalized within the next few weeks."

A commercial arrangement between the Philippine National Oil Company and its counterpart in a neighboring country is also being concluded, she added.

She said she would send a high-level mission to initiate the second arrangement that would give the Philippines "an alternative source of oil with a non-traditional country source."

The President said the Philippines, in response to the call of Japan to set up a regional oil stockpile during the recent ASEAN + 3 Energy Ministers meeting, has offered Subic Bay "as a location for the regional stockpile."

The issue would be taken up in the November ASEAN Summit.

Further, the President ordered Energy Secretary Vincent Perez, Jr. to prepare an executive order “requiring all oil companies to maintain a certain minimum oil inventory within the country.”

“There will be no need to hoard. There will only be a need to conserve,” the President said.

On energy conservation, the President said the Department of Energy “will actively advocate with the motoring public fuel conservation measures that will be announced on Monday.”

Roxas urges RP food exporters to tap Korean market

Philippine food exporters should explore and take advantage of huge market opportunities in South Korea.

Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II noted an economic upsurge in Korea, spawning an increased demand for food products among middle class Korean consumers.

“We are urging our food exporters to take a closer look at the Korean market. Korea, which generally imports the bulk of its food requirements in neighboring countries, has been sustaining its economic momentum for the rest of the year with consumer spending in an upward trend,” Roxas said.

“Our food products definitely have a competitive edge over other country competitors,” he said.

“Aside from the presence of an agro-climatological environment – which allows the country to produce a wide range of superior fresh and processed food products through the use of modern agricultural technologies, the Philippines’ relative proximity to Korea is also an advantage,” he explained.

Roxas cited a report from Seoul-based Philippine Trade and Investment Center (PTIC) Commercial Attache Nicanor Bautista who said some $3.067 million in negotiated sales was generated during a one-day business matching conference arranged for a mission of local food exporters.

Bautista said the huge sales indicated the rising enthusiasm of Korean consumers for food products, particularly those produced in the Philippines.

The mission comprised major Philippine food companies Divert Corp., Seachamp International Export Corp., Mabuhay 2000 Enterprises Inc., 7-D Food International Inc., Celebes Agricultural Corp., See’s International Food Manufacturing Corp., and Shemberg Marketing Corp.

It was organized by the Center for International Trade Expositions and Missions (CITEM) in collaboration with the Korea Importers’ Association (KOIMA), which has an established importers’ group handling 83 percent of Korea’s import volume.

In the same meeting, the Filipino food firms negotiated fruitful deals with some of Korea’s major food importers, to include Samsung Corp.; Cheil Jedang Corp., the biggest food conglomerate in Korea; and the Shinsegae Department Store which owned a chain of over 25 department stores.

The Divert Corp., for one, received orders for fresh abalone and fresh baby clams worth $600,000.

Seachamp also closed a deal for tilapia fillets, lobster, abalone and black tiger prawns valued at $1.068 million.

The Korea Airlines’ food purchasing division tapped Seachamp for “de-veined” fresh-chilled prawns. Korea Airlines prepares over 30,000 set meals a day.

Other best selling Philippine food products were coconut juice (buko juice) in can, a novel product for Korean buyers, and Philippine mangoes.

Mabuhay closed deals worth $570,168 for its canned coconut juice and 7-D, for dried mangoes and mango nectar valued at $396,000.

CITEM officials said many Korean companies have offered exclusive distributorship of Philippine mango products in Korea.

Roxas said the food selling mission to South Korea carried out the memorandum of understanding signed during the May visit to the Philippines of a South Korean buying mission led by KOIMA chairman Chul-pyung Chin.

Representatives from the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry, the Philippine Exporters Confederation and KOIMA signed the agreement.

The food-selling mission to South Korea is one of the promotional strategies being done by the trade department's brand development team for food products.

A business plan prepared by team seeks to corner some $1.25 billion in exports sales for food products in 2004, by implementing export strategies such as complying with international food standards and pursuing tariff reduction negotiations with major food markets China, Korea, Japan and Saudi Arabia.

GMA says RP in talks with other nations for bilateral oil supply arrangements

The Philippines is in talks with oil-supplying nations for "special contingency bilateral supply arrangements" to ensure that the country has enough oil for its transportation sector in the event that war breaks out in the Middle East.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo disclosed this Friday during a media briefing in El Nido, Palawan, as she said the outbreak of conflict in the Middle East might impact on the production, supply and price of world crude.

The President said the country, though becoming less dependent on oil for its power requirements, still needed imported oil to fill up the demands of its transportation sector.

She said the bilateral supply arrangements were being discussed with traditional and new oil suppliers.

Citing "diplomatic prudence" for not naming the oil suppliers, the President confirmed ongoing talks with a Middle East nation for a "formal solid assurance on oil supply.

"That will be finalized within the next few weeks," she said.

A commercial arrangement between the Philippine National Oil Company and its counterpart in a neighboring country is also being concluded, she added.

She said she would send a high-level mission to initiate the second arrangement that would give the Philippines "an alternative source of oil with a non-traditional country source."

The President said the bilateral oil supply arrangements were part of a comprehensive energy contingency plan the government had drawn to shield the country from the rippling effects of a possible Middle East conflict.

The contingency plans include an increase in the country's oil inventory.

Another is the government's response to Japan's call to set up a regional oil stockpile. The call was made during the recent ASEAN + 3 Energy Ministers meeting.

The President had offered Subic Bay "as a location for the regional stockpile." The issue would be taken up in the November ASEAN Summit.

Further, the President ordered Energy Secretary Vincent Perez, Jr. to prepare an executive order "requiring all oil companies to maintain a certain minimum oil inventory within the country."

"There will be no need to hoard. There will only be a need to conserve," the President said.

On energy conservation, the President said the Department of Energy "will actively advocate with the motoring public fuel conservation measures that will be announced on Monday."

GMA hopes for RP-China partnership against terrorism, transnational crime

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed hopes the Philippines and the People's Republic of China could have a defense partnership aimed at fighting terrorism and transnational crimes in the future.

"We can fight terrorism together and we can fight transnational crimes together," the President said.

The President noted that the Philippines has a long standing military partnership with the United States, but none with "the neighbor across the South China Sea."

The President noted that the visit of the highest defense official of China enhances the security and peace in the region.

She also expressed the country's readiness to explore various areas of cooperation with China in the South China Sea.

Chi, on the other hand, said that bringing stability in the region is "our joint aspiration."

Chi further noted discussions he had with Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes on possible cooperation in the future.

Chi expressed to the President how "overwhelmed" he was for the warm hospitality shown by the Filipino people during his delegation's visit.

Chi also said he was "moved" by the attendance of Secretary Reyes' 92-year old mother during a dinner tendered in his honor.

Chi, who was accompanied by his wife Jiang Qingping, also conveyed to the President the regards sent by Chinese Premier Zhu Rongji and Chinese President Jiang Zemin.

His deputy Liang Guanglie, Chinese Ambassador Wang Chungui, Lt. Gen. Zhao Keming, Col. Geng Yangsheng, Senior Col. Coz Zhang Ywhe and Lt. Gen. Ziu Zhenmui accompanied Minister Chi, among others.

During the talks, the President also noted the healthy and excellent state of the two countries bilateral relations.

She also reiterated that the Philippines viewed China, along with the United States and Japan, as important factors in the security and development of the region, as well as of the Philippines.

Meanwhile, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye, in a statement, noted that the South China Sea is the sea that unites rather than divides the Philippines and China.

“We are ready to explore with China various areas of cooperation in the South China Sea particularly the working groups on confidence-building measures, fisheries cooperation and marine environmental protection,” Bunye said.

Also in attendance from the Philippine side were Reyes and Armed Forces Chief of Staff Benjamin Defensor.

Palace condemns NPA attack on Lopez town, vows no let-up in war against terrorists

The government today condemned the treacherous attack perpetrated Friday by communist terrorists in Lopez, Quezon, while sympathizing with the families of policemen either killed or taken later by the rebels.

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye, in a statement, said Malacañang condoled “with the widows and families of the brave policemen who fell while defending the duly-constituted government and democratic system.”

Bunye also called on the people “to get involved in the fight against the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army (CPP-NPA).”

The United States government has lately branded the CPP-NPA as a terrorist organization.

“We exhort the citizenry, especially the human rights groups and communist organizations who are not engaged in violence, to join us in condemning this latest act of terrorism,” he said.

Reports said the Lopez policemen fought back during the rebel attack, leading to the death of Lopez Police Chief Superintendent Cesar Santander.

The reports added that three others, including a civilian, were wounded in the firefight. The rebels sustained fatalities too, reports said.

“This terrorist act will not go unpunished,” Bunye said.

He disclosed that police and military operations against the rebels were launched immediately after the attack.

“Police and military operations will continue. There is no ceasefire between the CPP-NPA and the government,” he added.

But Bunye said “the government will maintain open lines of communications in the hope of ending the employment of violence and terrorism as a means to attain political ends.”

GMA projects 6-M jobs from tourism by 2010

The administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo expects to generate at least six million jobs in the tourism industry by the year 2010.

Speaking before the townsfolk in Linapacan, Palawan where she gave a P1-million check to the provincial government for the “One Product, One Town, One Million” program, the President noted that in year 2000, there were at least three million jobs generated by the country’s tourism industry.

The President said that in the year 2000, there were at least 3 million local and foreign visitors who traveled the many tourist spots in the country.

She said that by year 2010, the government has projected the volume of tourists to reach five million.

She added that in year 2000, at least $ 7 billion was earned by the tourism industry. By the year 2010, the government projects a $17 billion income from tourism.

In year 2000, she said domestic tourists spent at least $800 million. By year 2010, the government expects domestic tourists to spend at least $2.5 billion in their travels.

The President stressed that tourism brings awareness to one's culture and responsibility for the environment.

“Kaya dito sa bansa nating Pilipinas, ang ating panaginip ay lumawak ang turismo at makatulong sa pagsugpo ng kahirapan sa loob ng dekada (It is our aspiration to expand tourism and eradicate poverty within the decade),” she said.

She noted that tourism is the primary stimulus of development.

Like Information Technology, tourism is considered by her administration as one of the sectors that would spur dramatic growth, she said.

She further noted that 90 percent of the money spent by tourists in the country stays in the local economy. “Kaya napakalaki ang kanyang epekto sa local economy (Tourism has a big effect on the local economy),” the President said.

This, the President said, is in contrast with the electronics sectors, in which only 30 centavos in each dollar stays in the local economy.

“But in tourism, in each dollar, 90 centavos goes to the local economy,” she said.

The President cited that a typical foreign tourist spends at least $1,000 in the Philippines.

GMA urges development of tourism markets

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is pushing for the immediate development of markets for tourism in the country, as she looked forward to attracting more visitors from the North Asian region.

In a speech Saturday during the celebration of the feast day of Linapacan, Palawan, the President said the government's strategy was to get both foreign and domestic tourists to relax in the country's pristine beaches, enjoy the sights of national landmarks and tourist spots and go shopping about for Philippine-made handicrafts and products.

She said 70 percent of the tourism department's promotion budget would go to beach, domestic, sightseeing and shopping tourism. "We will offer this to the Japanese, Koreans and the Chinese."

She added that the potentials of recreation tourism, ecological tourism, Balikbayan tourism and backpack tourism would also be considered, inasmuch as visitors under the categories stay longer in a place than the beach lovers, sightseers and shoppers.

Selling the Philippines to these specialized markets would be "custom-made" and at least 20 percent of the promotions fund would go to the effort, she said.

The President said the promotion blitz would target the North Asian area, saying that the Japanese continued to comprise most of the tourists that have visited the country.

However, Korean visitors are fast catching up in number while visitors from China have the potential to top the tourism market, she said.

The world is opening up and the Chinese are taking advantage of this by traveling, she added.

The Chief Executive noted Cebu, Bohol, Manila and its environs and Palawan as favorite tourist destinations.

She cited Palawan because of the people's "caring capacity" and the big number of resorts in the area.

She urged the people of Linapacan to help the government develop the tourist industry in the area by improving its facilities.

"Kaya gusto kong gamitin ng mga taga-Linapacan, mga taga-northern Palawan ang pagkakataong ito, dahil puwede nating ayusin agad ang mga nakatindig nang facilities (I want the people of Linapacan and northern Palawan to use this opportunity to improve existing facilities)," she said.

GMA says Palawan International Airport in the works

The tourism industry in Palawan will get a big boost with the planned construction of an international airport in the country's premier destination of foreign and domestic visitors.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, in a speech Saturday in Linapacan, Palawan, said putting up an international airport in northern Palawan was part of the medium-term national tourism strategy.

The President said she had assigned Energy Secretary Vicente Perez to help package the funding for the airport.

She also disclosed plans to adopt a “liberalized airline policy” from Japan and Korea going to Cebu and Palawan.

She said this would be part of expected talks between officials of the two countries and the Philippines when she visits Japan and Korea in December.

But she said that even without an international airport, the popularity of Palawan as a tourism spot in itself served as an attraction for those who would like to enjoy its beach resorts and hospitality.

“Ayaw kong mawalan ng pag-asa (I do not want to lose hope),” she said, referring to the slump in tourist arrivals following the infamous kidnapping perpetrated by the terrorist Abu Sayyaf in the area several years ago.

She cited how Egypt, Spain, Indonesia and other countries also beset by threats from terrorist groups have successfully overcome security problems and revived their tourism industries.

The President said there were plenty of ways to promote the image of Palawan as a tourist site, and this would all depend on good marketing.

She lauded Palawan officials for putting up a tourism fair in Puerto Princesa City from October 12 to 16.

She said that the government is pushing its “Visit the Philippines Year” in 2003.

Palawan is included in this promotional activity of the Department of Tourism, she added.

The President also hoped that Palawan, on its own, would soon set up tourism enterprise zones. She cited a company that would like to locate in El Nido.

GMA cites father’s work to build strong RP

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today paid tribute to her father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, who she cited as the frontrunner of the various pro-poor public programs her administration is implementing.

In a radio message aired nationwide, the President made the tribute in commemoration of her father’s 92nd birth anniversary last Saturday (September 28).

She said that her father, a tenant farmer’s son who worked his way up to become the country’s ninth Chief Executive, spearheaded, during his administration, the “unfinished and peaceful revolution” of the masses.

She added that her ongoing programs on free enterprise, concrete social and economic development of the nation with a bias for the poor, land reform leading to agricultural and industrial growth, and good governance bereft of graft and corruption drew inspiration from her father’s philosophy of government.

“Karangalan ko at kabasbasan ko na puwedeng magsimula kung saan siya tumigil at ituloy ang kanyang pakikibaka (It is my honor to continue the programs started by my father in his time),” the President said.

On the occasion of the late Macapagal’s birth anniversary, the President called on the nation and the people who love and respect her father to join her in solidifying a “national consensus” for a more “socially-responsive” society.

She raised the hope that with a united stand, the Filipino people would overcome the pangs of poverty within the decade.

In her radio message, the President also urged the people to help her achieve her desire to build a strong republic, another milestone laid by her late father.

She cited two vital characteristics of a strong republic: that which is free from “class and sectoral interests” and that which has strong institutions and a bureaucracy capable of implementing good policies and delivering better services.

She said this could be achieved if the nation has an effective government, from the national government down to the local governments.

This would include the bureaucracy, the professionals and those who care for the civil service.

A strong republic is also characterized with the presence of a vibrant free enterprise where the Filipino talent and skills are used.

“Ang pamahalaan ay dapat siguraduhin na ang mga puwersa at bagay na bumabangga sa free marketay matanggal (The state should ensure that the forces that oppose the free market system are eliminated),” she said.

Another facet of a strong republic is the presence of democracy hinged on the philosophy of new politics, devoid of “bossism” and the influences of “guns, gold and goons.”

She stressed on accountability and transparency to uphold good governance.

She added that a strong republic should also have an active civil society where the family, the community, non-government organizations, the media, the church and government help each other “forge its swords into hammers” to thwart poverty and threats to national development and security.

“Huwag tayo maging maliit na bato na nawawala sa parang, o batong hinahagis sa gusaling itinatayo natin. Maging bahagi tayo sa panaginip ng bansa na magtatayo ng malakas na demokratikong Republika ng Pilipinas (Let us not be meaningless and useless pebbles. Let us be part of our collective dream to build a strong democratic Philippine Republic),” she exhorted.

GMA confers Chino Roces freedom award on Doronila, F.L.A.G., Fr. Intengan, businessman Luz

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today conferred the 2002 Chino Roces Freedom Award on journalist Amando Doronila, the Free Legal Assistance Group (FLAG), Fr. Romeo Intengan, S.J. and businessman Guillermo Luz.

Government officials, members of the civil society as well as relatives, friends and associates of the late publisher and street parliamentarian attended the ceremonies held at the Manila Polo Club.

The occasion coincided with the 14th death anniversary of Joaquin P. Roces, whom everybody called Chino or Tatay.

In presenting the award to Doronila, the Joaquin "Chino" P. Roces Foundation cited the editor-columnist for the high professional integrity and keen sense of perspective he brings to the discussion of public issues.

Doronila, who began his career in journalism in 1953, rising from reporter to columnist to editor, was detained during martial law for his strongly independent-minded writings.

He has also published several papers and books, including the current bestseller, "The Fall of Joseph Estrada."

FLAG was cited for championing the legal cause of the poor and the oppressed with revolutionary zeal and courage.

Founded by the late Senator Jose W. Diokno, FLAG "has been a quiet yet purposeful, vigorous and ceaseless revolution, one committed to the empowerment of the poor and the oppressed so that they may participate more meaningfully in the decisions and policies that affect their lives."

Atty. Pablito Sanidad received the award in behalf of FLAG.

Fr. Romeo Intengan was cited for dedicating his life to the fight for freedom, human rights and social justice.

Fr. Intengan, who is a surgeon, teacher, and democracy activist, was cited for living a mission of life, faith and social reform.

The priest faced his most dangerous challenge as a leader of the underground Philippine Democratic Socialist Party (PDSP) during the dictatorship of Ferdinand Marcos.

He is now the Philippine Provincial Superior of the Society of Jesus. He is also a member of the Constitutional Transition Committee, organized originally to see to the smooth transfer of the presidency from Joseph Estrada to President Macapagal-Arroyo.

For his part, Guillermo Luz was cited for enlisting the business community in the cause of socio-political reform.

For over 15 year now, Luz has been speaking for the business community as executive director of the Makati Business Club and has taken his espousal further by undertaking a lead role as secretary general of the National Citizens' Movement for Free Elections (NAMFREL).

The board of trustees of the Roces Foundation is composed of Chairman Jorge Sarmiento, Vice Chairman Fernando Peña, and members Luz Lopez, Jose Ricarfort, Salvador Rivera, Chit Roces, Edgardo Roces, Regina R. Paterno, Simon R. Paterno, Firmo Tripon and Jose Velez.

The foundation's Freedom Award honors extraordinary achievements in freedom and active citizenship, two causes for which Roces fought with courage and commitment.

Ermita urges stronger village intelligence network

Malacañang today stressed the importance of a strong and effective Barangay Intelligence Network in maintaining law and order and ensuring security, particularly in far-flung villages susceptible to terrorist attacks.

Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita said there was a need for the people to bond together, pool their resources and fully support the government's bid to crush terrorists and criminals.

In a radio interview, Ermita said the people's cooperation — especially in relaying reliable information on the movements of terrorist, criminal and rebel groups to the military and the police — was a must to ensure local and national security.

He said Congress had allotted funds to firm up the Barangay Intelligence Network for counter-insurgency operations.

Ermita was reacting to last Saturday's attack on a police station in Lopez, Quezon by elements of the communist New People's Army, which was classified by the United States as a global terrorist organization.

He said the peace talks with the National Democratic Front (NDF), political arm of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), remained suspended.

But the government panel, he said, completed a draft of the final peace agreement that would be presented to the NDF panel at the possible resumption of the talks.

The draft had twice passed the Cabinet Oversight Committee. Hopefully, it would pass the muster of the committee that would review the draft again this week, Ermita added.

He hinted that the recent attacks of the NPA, the armed component of the CPP, could be a strategy to strengthen their position when the peace talks continue.

He, however, hoped that the government and the NDF would finally agree to implementing a peace process.

"Ang mahalaga ay magkaroon tayo ng kasunduan upang sa ganoon ay matigil na ang pamiminsala sa mga kabarangay natin (We hope for the resolution of this issue so that terrorism in the villages would stop)," he said.

GMA seeks PAGC report on Tagud's raps within 60 days

The Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) is expected to submit not later than 60 days its report on the claims of Public Estates Authority (PEA) Director Sulficio Tagud, Jr. that the construction of the Central Boulevard in the reclamation area in Pasay City was overpriced.

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye today said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo had directed PAGC Chairman Dario Rama “to expedite the investigation of Director Tagud’s allegations and to submit his recommendations not later than 60 days.”

In his regular media briefing, Bunye also shrugged off side issues being raised on the concern, saying what was vital was to determine if the cost of building the road was more than what was required.

He further said that there was little need to check on the lifestyle of PEA officials as all government workers, from top to bottom, are expected to live within their means.

Earlier, he noted that the P1-billion loan the Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) granted to PEA involved the “construction and completion of horizontal development of the Manila Bay reclamation project, including PEA properties in Central Business Park 1-A.”

He said Tagud’s allegation covered only a part of this development effort, stressing that the GSIS-PEA loan agreement was “separate and distinct from the construction arrangements between PEA and contractor JD Legaspi Construction.”

He added that the GSIS-PEA loan agreement went through established procedures and were favorably endorsed by the National Economic and Development Authority, Department of Finance and the Office of the Deputy Executive Secretary for Legal Affairs.

PEA general manager Benjamin Cariño also denied Tagud’s claims, saying that there had been no overprice and no corrupt transactions related to the road construction.

“Our arithmetic and ethics are clear and above board,” Cariño said.

Meanwhile, Bunye said that Public Works and Highways Secretary Simeon A. Datumanong, lately named as Officer-in-Charge of PEA, had “exhorted PEA employees to extend their full cooperation to the PAGC.”

That is if “they are asked to testify before the probe body” looking into the Tagud allegations, he said.

Save on gas, energy dep’t urges motorists

The Department of Energy (DOE) today urged consumers, particularly motorists, to start conserving fuel in the face of a looming crisis in the Middle East that could affect the world’s price and supply of oil.

In a press briefing in Malacañang this afternoon, Energy Secretary Vicente S. Perez appealed to consumers to adopt prudent measures to conserve fuel.

During the press briefing, Perez spelled out the features of the DOE’s fuel conservation campaign dubbed as “Sa Bawat Patak na Matitipid Mo, Kalusugan, Kapaligiran, Kaunlaran Katumbas Nito.”

Perez said consumers are the “best gas saving device” because their driving technique is the most important single element in determining the fuel economy of any motor vehicle.

He said that studies made by the department showed that a careful driver can get a least 30 percent more mileage than the average driver, and 50 percent more than a wasteful driver.

The government has put in place the necessary measures to address the possible impact of the US-Iraq conflict. “It is only proper for the public to also do their share including simple acts of conserving gas,” Perez said.

According to Perez, the country's dependence on oil as fuel has been significantly reduced over the years.

In particular, he said, imported oil's contribution to the power generation mix has substantially dropped to only 11.75 percent as of July this year.

"But oil is still an important energy source especially in the transportation sector. Thus, there is a need for the public to be more prudent and judicious in oil consumption," Perez said.

Perez said that the government needs the cooperation of everyone in the judicious use of energy. "Saving for the worst of times is one the best values Filipinos have," he said.

Perez said the government and the public should prepare for any eventuality in case a full-blown crisis erupts between the US and Iraq.

During her inspection visit to the Malampaya offshore platform in Palawan over the weekend, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said that the Philippines is prepared for any contingency that may arise in the case of a Middle East crisis brought about by the refusal of Iraq to comply with UN Security Council resolutions,

The President said we are in a better situation than during the previous Middle East crisis but nonetheless, we must still plan ahead because we are still dependent on imported oil for transportation needs.

The DOE's gas saving tips for motorists are as follows:

- Fill your fuel tank in the morning when it is cool. Never fill your tank to the brim to allow for fuel expansion.
- Avoid fuel spillage. Keep the fuel cap tightened to prevent fuel loss through evaporation or spillage.
- Minimize vehicle loads. Transporting unnecessary weight in your car will cause it to add 10 percent to fuel consumption.
- Follow a regular preventive maintenance program to prevent major breakdowns. A poorly maintained car can use up to 25 percent more fuel.
- Drive off immediately after starting but at a low speed. The engine will warm up faster and lubricate better.
- Do not let the motor idle for unnecessarily long periods. Turn off the engine whenever possible. It takes less gasoline to restart the car than to let it idle for prolonged periods. Generally, there is no need to press the accelerator down to restart a warm engine.
- The most efficient speed is between 75 and 90 kilometers per hour (kph). On a highway, maintain a steady speed. Tests conducted have indicated a 25 percent improvement in fuel economy when speeds are reduced from 120 to 80 kph.

Perez also urged motorists to plan their trips or driving in order to save on gas.

Perez also said motorists should avoid "jack-rabbit" starts, adding that gradual acceleration in driving can save as much as one kilometer per liter compared to rapid acceleration.

Bunye reiterates Malacañang commitment to press freedom

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye today denounced the reported confiscation of tabloid newspapers, saying the government did not authorize this.

"Malacañang is committed to press freedom and will neither allow nor tolerate any attack on such freedom," Bunye said in his regular press briefing.

Bunye stressed the reported seizure "is not an authorized action."

“If the alleged victims want to press charges against those responsible, by all means, they should do so,” Bunye added.

Reports said still unidentified individuals have seized numerous issues of the daily tabloid Banat.

Meanwhile, Bunye stressed anew that there is no Executive Order purportedly signed by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordering the abolition of the National Printing Office (NPO).

“What surprises us is that despite several clarifications, the reports persist that there is an executive order decreeing the abolition, when in fact, there is no such executive order,” Bunye said.

“In other words, somebody is spreading a false information that this is now a fait accompli, an executive order has been signed decreeing abolition of such office,” Bunye added.

Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin earlier said that the Presidential Commission on Effective Governance, which she chairs, is undertaking a review on the viability and operations of the NPO.

Boncodin also said that she has discussed with Bunye ways on how to make the operations of the NPO more efficient.

GMA to preside over joint NSC-Cabinet meet Tuesday

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will preside over the first Joint National Security Council (NSC)-Cabinet meeting on Tuesday (October 1) to discuss the implications to the country of a possible outbreak of conflict in the Middle East.

National Security Adviser Roilo Golez said the meeting would also likely take up the positive measures the government has drawn and would implement in such a crisis situation.

The President assured the people last Thursday (Sept. 26) in General Luna town, Surigao del Norte that the government had been preparing measures to counter problems the country might face once the United States carries out its threat to attack Iraq which continued to shrug off resolutions of the United Nations.

Golez said the joint NSC-Cabinet meeting at Malacañang would be attended by other members of the NSC, to include former Presidents Fidel Ramos and Corazon Aquino, House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Senate President Franklin Drilon and chairmen of the congressional committees on foreign relations, defense and security and public order.

He said the NSC would present a security overview of the Iraqi situation.

Other discussions would revolve on the country’s foreign policy and the contingency plans being laid out for overseas Filipino workers (OFW) in at least nine countries in and around Iraq by the Department of Foreign Affairs; the situation’s economic impact, by the National Economic and Development Authority; and the oil supply/price contingency plans, by the Department of Energy.

“We are preparing for a possible Iraqi war,” the President said in a luncheon meeting with the media in Surigao del Norte.

As this developed, Middle East Preparedness Team leader retired Gen. Roy Cimatu had been regularly in touch with the President, briefing her on recent developments on the Iraqi crisis.

Among the plans for OFWs is their evacuation to safer grounds in countries around Iraq, Cimatu earlier said.

This afternoon, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez briefed Malacañang reporters on the country's oil inventory that has increased to 62 days.

The National Security Council membership includes Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr., Senate President Drilon, Speaker de Venecia, the Senate President Pro-Tempore, three Deputy Speakers, Senate Majority Leader, House Majority Leader, Senate Minority Leader, House Minority Leader;

Executive Secretary Alberto G. Romulo, National Security Director General Roilo Golez, Secretary of National Defense Angelo T. Reyes, Secretary of Justice Hernando B. Perez, Secretary of Interior and Local Government Jose D. Lina, Jr., and Secretary of Labor and Employment Patricia A. Sto. Tomas.

Others who will advise and assist in the deliberations are the NICA Director General, AFP Chief of Staff, Philippine National Police (PNP) chief, National Bureau of Investigation director and Governor of Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas.

Let's uphold the law in Jimenez case, says Palace

Malacañang today called on all sectors to uphold the law in the case involving Manila Congressman Mark Jimenez who is facing extradition proceedings in connection with his alleged crimes in the United States.

"It would be to everybody's interest if we were simply to uphold the rule of law. No more, no less," Press Secretary and Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said in his regular press briefing this afternoon.

In reacting to reports that the House of Representatives has taken steps to thwart the execution of the decision of the Supreme Court on the case, Bunye said that the law should "apply uniformly to everyone, regardless of his station in life."

Earlier, Bunye said that Congressman Jimenez could seek a reconsideration of the high court's en banc ruling revoking the bail granted to him by a Manila Regional Trial Court.

Jimenez was given 15 days to file a motion for reconsideration of the SC's decision.

Bunye said that the extradition treaty between the US and the Philippines has the force and effect of law. "This must be upheld," he said.

Gov't has taken concrete steps to promote good governance, says NEDA

The Macapagal-Arroyo administration has taken concrete steps to promote good governance so that the Philippines can catch up with its neighbors in economic growth, according to the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA).

In a report to Malacañang, NEDA Acting Director General Raphael P.M. Lotilla said the government has taken full cognizance of the damaging effects of corruption on economic growth and public perception of the government's will and capacity to serve the people, particularly the poor.

"It is precisely for this reason that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration made good governance one of the banner programs under its Medium-Term Philippine Development Plan (MTPDP) and even highlighted anew its importance in the recent State of the Nation Address (SONA)," Lotilla said.

Lotilla was reacting to an analysis by Peter Wallace of the Economist Intelligence Unit, which described the Philippines as having lagged behind most countries in the region in economic development during the past 25 years.

According to Wallace, the Philippines posted only an average of 3.1 percent gross domestic product (GDP) growth yearly, which is half or less the rates achieved by other Asian nations.

Lotilla said that progress has been made in eradicating graft in public offices but at a pace that is in accordance with the government's absorptive capacity for change.

"The government is now gearing to take a more aggressive stance in implementing the more difficult but necessary reforms," Lotilla said.

He said this was, in fact, the central message conveyed by Wallace in his article although Wallace stated it in a less optimistic manner. Lotilla added that in his article, Wallace focused more on the problems at hand and missed out the more important reforms that have already been put into operation.

The NEDA official said that key oversight agencies are now involved in planning, programming, budgeting and auditing to enhance the quality of governance at the national and local levels.

Lotilla said that through the development of the electronic procurement system (EPS), there had been substantial gains in expenditure management in key government agencies.

"The program is actually an offshoot of the recognition by government of the pervading dysfunctions in the procurement of goods and services such as graft and corruption and unnecessary high transaction costs for the government and the private sector," Lotilla said.

Lotilla said that in order to simplify complex government accounting system, the Commission on Audit (COA) has already pilot-tested the new government accounting system to ensure correctness, completeness and timeliness in record-keeping of government financial transactions.

He said that the COA has also started enforcing a simpler auditing code in preparation for the full computerization of the national audit system.

Another institutional reform cited by Lotilla was the creation of the Presidential Commission of Effective Governance (PCEG) whose task is to streamline the operations of offices under the Office of the President.

But more importantly, Lotilla said, the administration has encouraged the civil society and the private sector to take an active role in carrying out oversight functions to further improve governance policies and processes.

“Such constructive partnership plays a pivotal role in enhancing transparency in the conduct of government activities and in improving public awareness,” Lotilla said.

Message from President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo

We reviewed today with members of the National Security Council a whole range of contingency measures designed to ensure the safety of our compatriots in the Middle East and to ensure that we have a steady supply of oil in the event war erupts.

Based on an evaluation of various scenarios, we believe there is no cause for undue alarm.

The Cimatu Team is now in the Middle East and preliminary reports indicate that a possible relocation to safer grounds, not a massive evacuation, would be sufficient. Nonetheless, we will be prepared to process our countrymen who would wish to return home.

We are exploring ways and means to increase our in-country inventory of fuel, including the activation and utilization of additional storage facilities. Also, we are looking at non-traditional supplemental sources of oil to augment our supply. Likewise, we are seeking the cooperation of the transport sector in controlling fare rates.

We reiterate our call for adoption of energy saving measures. It is always best to conserve our precious fuel, crisis or no crisis.

Death Penalty

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo confirmed the announcement yesterday of Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople that the execution of death convicts would be suspended to allow Congress to finish its review of pending resolutions asking for the abolition of death penalty.

GMA, NSC, Cabinet discuss most-likely scenarios in Mideast crisis, plot contingency measures

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presided over a joint meeting of the National Security Council (NSC) and the Cabinet to discuss the most-likely scenarios of a Middle East crisis and a whole range of contingency measures the government has set in motion and will implement in the event of a United States-Iraq flare-up.

National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez, in a press briefing after the joint NSC-Cabinet meeting, said the consensus is “that it is very unlikely that there is going to be an actual conflict in the months of October and November.”

“If the conflict arises, it is expected that the war is going to be very swift because of the use of high technology and because of the expected use of overwhelming force by the United States,” Golez said.

Aside from the Cabinet members, among those present during the joint meeting NSC-Cabinet were Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr., Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Senators Robert Barbers, Ramon Magsaysay, Jr., Manuel Villar and Loren Legarda-Leviste; Congressmen Florencio Abad, Raul Gonzales, Gerry Salapuddin, Francis Escudero, Agapito Aquino, Apolinario Lozada; Philippine National Police chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. and former President Corazon C. Aquino.

As far as Filipino overseas workers are concerned, Golez said the situation is not as serious as in 1991 because there are only about 180 Filipinos living in and around Baghdad, the Iraqi capital.

“We are not talking of a massive evacuation like what happened in 1991 and it is very unlikely that the conflict will spread to neighboring countries like Saudi Arabia where we have close to a million Filipinos,” Golez said.

Earlier during the joint NSC-Cabinet meeting, the President said that if families in the Philippines insist that their loved ones come home and if the workers agree, “then they will be brought back here.”

Golez said the government is not contemplating a general evacuation of Filipinos in the Middle East but only of “relocation” as contained in the contingency plans detailed by the Department of Foreign Affairs in cooperation with the other concerned departments.

Golez also said that the government is asking private oil companies to increase their individual in-country reserves to 40 days instead of the usual 12 days.

The President said the government is also looking at non-traditional supplemental sources of oil to augment the oil supply. “Likewise, we are seeking the cooperation of the transport sector in controlling fare rates.”

The President also reiterated the government’s call for adoption of energy-saving measures. “It is always best to conserve our previous fuel, crisis or no crisis,” she said.

The National Security Council was established principally to address national security concerns, resolve national security issues, formulate policies, and oversee the maintenance of national security.

The NSC Proper is the principal advisory body to the President on the proper coordination and integration of plans and policies affecting national security.

The NSC is chaired by the President, with the following as members: Vice President; Senate President; House Speaker; Senate President Pro Tempore; Deputy Speakers for Luzon, Visayas and Mindanao; the Senate and House Majority Leaders; the Senate and House Minority Leaders; the chairpersons of the Senate and House committees on foreign relations; the chairperson of the Senate committee on national defense and security; the chairperson of the Senate committee on public order and illegal drugs; the chairperson of the House committee on national defense; the chairperson of the House committee on public order and security; the Executive Secretary; the Secretaries of Foreign Affairs, Justice, National Defense, Interior and Local Government, and Labor and Employment; the National Security Adviser; the Chief Presidential Legal Adviser; Presidential Spokesperson; the head of the Presidential Legislative Liaison Office; past presidents of the Republic; and other government officials and private citizens whom the President may designate from time to time.

ARAMCO assures Philippines of oil supply – Cimat

The Saudi Arabian Oil Company (ARAMCO), the world’s No. 1 oil producer, has assured the Philippines of continued oil supply in the event hostilities break out between the United States and Iraq.

This was disclosed today by retired Gen. Roy A. Cimat, head of the Middle East Crisis Preparedness Team (MEPT), who is now in Saudi Arabia on orders of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to make sure that Filipino workers in Arab countries are safe, and oil supply continues to flow to the country.

In a telephone interview, Cimatu said he was assured by ARAMCO officials during their talks Monday that they would provide the Philippines with oil even if war breaks out between Iraq and the United States.

Cimatu said he went Monday to the eastern sector of Saudi Arabia, the most affected because it is near the border of Iraq, where there are thousands of Filipino workers.

He said he was briefed on the contingency plans now in place in case war breaks out.

“The contingency plan is okay,” Cimatu said.

There are many Filipinos working with ARAMCO and the oil firm has prepared a contingency plan, he said.

“There is no need for evacuation at the moment, but we will relocate our countrymen in the event of war,” said Cimatu, a retired four-star general.

ARAMCO supplies 11% of the world’s oil demand. The firm controls proven oil reserves of about 264.3 billion barrels or more than 25% of the world’s total and 12 times that of the US reserves.

It extracts eight million barrels a day and sells them around the world.

The Philippines has been building up its oil buffer stocks as tension in the Middle East grows by the day.

Energy Secretary Vicente Perez has required local oil firms to maintain a higher inventory in the country.

The Philippines gets 32 percent of its oil requirements from Saudi Arabia.

Other countries supplying oil to the Philippines are Iran (26 percent), United Arab Emirates (20 percent), Oman (9 percent), Qatar (7 percent), and the rest from Indonesia, Malaysia and Australia.

Over the years, the Philippines has gradually cut down its dependence on oil for its power needs.

From a high of 60 percent ten years ago, it is now 11.75 percent today.

But the country remains heavily dependent on oil for transportation and cooking needs.

With the opening of the Malampaya in Palawan recently, the country has further cut down the importation of gas.

Cimatu said he will go to Kuwait Wednesday to visit Filipino workers in the oil-rich country.

Asked if he was proceeding to Iraq, Cimatu said he would if he could get a visa in Jordan.

Attacks show NPA is indeed a terrorist group, says Golez

National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez today said the attacks of the New People’s Army (NPA) at police detachments last week in Lopez, Quezon and now, in Bulacan only show that the NPA is indeed a terrorist group.

In a press briefing in Malacañang after the National Security Council meeting convened by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Golez said that police stations attacked by the NPA are civilian targets.

“Let me stress that a police station is a civilian target; therefore, under the international definition of terrorism, an attack on the police station may be considered a terrorist attack,” Golez said.

Golez said that the successive attacks of the NPA against police outposts are a reaction to their being classified as terrorists.

He noted that the NPA has been dealt a very serious psychological and moral blow when the United States declared it a foreign terrorist organization.

“All of a sudden, they lost their so-called moral ascendancy and this is backed by terrorist attacks,” Golez said, enumerating the liquidation of some officials that included a congressman, local executives and barangay officials.

Golez also said the attacks are NPA’s response to the fact that they have been losing militarily after the President declared an intensive campaign in terms of military and socio-economic sanctions against them early this year.

“They lost a lot of ground. They lost some barangays where they used to have their presence felt,” he said.

In terms of manpower, the NPA lost a total of 539 members by apprehension and surrender this year, a considerable increase from 420 members in 2001, Golez said.

Golez also said NPA members are being killed by as much as 30 percent more compared to the combined casualties of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, the Philippine National Police and the Civilian Armed Forces Geographical Unit (CAFGU).

He further noted that the AFP is ahead three to one in terms of firearms ratio with the NPA.

“These are the very clear scores and now, what the CPP-NPA is doing is trying to reverse the actual situation by portraying that they’re very active,” Golez said.

“But they’re not going to be able to sustain this. They cannot move around in forces of 50, for example, and repeat what they did in broad daylight in Lopez, Quezon,” Golez added.

Earlier, the NPA Apolonia Mendoza Command raided the police station in Lopez, resulting in the death of the police chief and a junior officer.

The recent attack came amid efforts to resume peace talks between the rebels and the government that have been stalled for a year.

Golez said the while the NPA is engaging in terrorist acts, the government policy is still “to keep the doors open” for peace negotiations with the rebel group.

GMA orders creation of ACCs in Rizal towns

ANTIPOLO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the provincial government of Rizal and the Philippine National Police (PNP) to organize an Area Coordinating Center (ACC) in all the towns of the province to strengthen the government’s campaign against crime and terrorism.

In her impromptu speech, the President directed Rizal Governor Rebecca “Nini” Ynares and Rizal Police Provincial Office (RPPO) Director Senior Superintendent Carlito Dimaano to immediately organize the ACCs in the province.

The President explained that the ACC is similar to the Peace and Order Council (POC) which conducts a meeting regularly but the difference is that the ACC operates for 24 hours and is ready to respond to any problem arising in a particular area.

The President said that officers and members of ACCs should be local government executives in the different barangays and municipalities in Rizal.

According to President, the ACC has been very successful in Mindanao, particularly in Zamboanga City and Maguindanao.

The President motored here before proceeding to Clark Air Base in Pampanga for a two-day Cabinet workshop. She personally presented to media the two kidnapers of German national Fritz Walter Lange.

The President lauded the Teresa, Rizal Police Force for the arrest of the two abductors of Lange.

“Congratulations and keep up the good work,” the President told Teresa Police Chief Senior Inspector Jesus Fetalino.

The President identified the suspects as Reynaldo Ablay, leader of the Ablay kidnap-for-ransom gang, and Ronaldo Enteroso, both residents of Antipolo City.

The President also said that she was very saddened about the death of Chief of Police of Lopez, Quezon–Superintendent Cesar Santander, who was killed during the New People’s Army (NPA) attack on the municipal police station.

She also announced that she already asked her husband, First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo, to finance the education of the five children of Superintendent Santander.

Among those present in the presentation of the kidnap suspects were Governor Ynares, PNP Chief, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane Jr., Police Regional Office CALABARZON (Cavite, Laguna, Batangas, Rizal and Quezon) Regional Director Chief Superintendent Enrique Galang Jr., and Senior Superintendent Dimaano.

Palace sees no massive evacuation of Filipinos from the Middle East if war breaks out in Iraq

Malacañang today said that the government is prepared for any contingency in the Middle East although it believes that the war, if ever, would be limited to Iraq and, therefore, there will be no massive evacuation of Filipino workers from the region.

In an interview this morning, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez said that in its meeting Tuesday, the National Security Council (NSC) agreed that the impending conflict in the Middle East would not be as grave as the Gulf War in 1991.

“Ang tingin namin ay ito ay magiging mabilis at concentrated lamang sa may Iraq area. Kaya hindi masyadong maapektuhan iyong mga kababayan natin doon sa ibat-ibang lugar sa Middle East (What we foresee is a short war which would be concentrated in the Iraq area. That is why we don't believe that our countrymen in the surrounding countries in the Middle East would be affected so much),” Golez said.

Golez recalled that in the 1991 Gulf War, there were some 27,000 Filipino workers who have to be evacuated from Iraq and Kuwait. Now, there are only about a hundred Filipinos in Iraq that would be moved out in case of war, he added.

He also said that based on their assessment of the situation, it would be unlikely for the United States to attack Iraq this month or in November.

“But after November, we really don't know what will happen,” Golez added.

When asked what will be the stand of the Philippines in the event that the US would attack Iraq unilaterally or without the go-signal from the United Nations, Golez said that the NSC would meet again to discuss such development before coming up with the proper response.

Golez said that the NSC has affirmed the policy enunciated by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that the Philippines would continue to extend security, humanitarian and political support to the US in the fight against global terrorism “provided these will uphold the country's national interest.”

Book on Culture and Terrorism launched in Malacañang

A book entitled, “Culture and Terrorism,” was launched yesterday in simple ceremonies at the New Executive Building in Malacañang.

Sponsored by Presidential Adviser on Culture Leticia Ramos Shahani, “Culture and Terrorism” is a compilation of lectures and papers delivered during a two-day round table discussion on the relationship between culture and terrorism.

The round table was attended by some of the country's leading scholars and intellectuals that included Education Secretary Edilberto de Jesus, Dr. Prospero Covar, Congressman Nereus Acosta, Dr. Elena Mirano, Dr. Melba Maggay, Dr. Bienvenido Lumbea, Dr. Patricia Licuanan, Dr. Emily Marahombsar, Datu Michael Mastura, Col. Victor Corpuz and Ms. Narda Camacho.

In her remarks, Shahani underscored the importance of the book, saying that Filipinos must train their minds and hearts to prefer peace over violence.

She also expressed the view that in certain situations force will have to be met with force because in the long run the military and police solutions to solve crime and terrorism are inadequate.

During the roundtable, the panelists recognized the importance of culture – that is, beliefs, values and institutions of society — in determining the prevalence of violence, conflict and terrorism in a community.

They also noted that indigenous pre-colonial Filipino culture was generally peaceful and non-violent because there was a balance between the basic needs and access to adequate resources during the early period of the country's history.

The group recommended that all Filipinos should learn to respect the rights of other ethnic Filipinos and return to the original Filipino values of peace, non-violence and tolerance while at the same time adjusting to the modern world.

Shahani said the panelists also recommended that Filipino textbooks should be thoroughly examined to ensure that there are no misrepresentations in them of the many ethno-linguistic groups in the country.

Gov't ready to resume talks with the CPP-NPA if they stop terrorist attacks — Golez

National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez today said that the government is still willing to resume negotiations with the communists if they would stop their terroristic attacks against civilian targets.

In a radio interview, Golez said that formal talks with the foreign-based leaders of the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People's Army (CPP-NPA) were called off last year after NPA cadres executed innocent civilians that included two congressmen and two mayors in the different parts of the country,

“Kaya yon ang dahilan kung bakit naudlot yong usapin. Ngayon ito na naman, mga civilian targets na naman and sinasalanta nila (That's the reason why we have to scrap the talks. Now, they are at it again, targeting civilians),” Golez said.

Golez was referring to the NPA attack last Friday of the police station in Lopez, Quezon killing the police chief and another policeman.

On Monday, another band of NPA guerrillas attacked the outpost of the Philippine National Police (PNP) in barangay Sampaloc, San Rafael, Bulacan but this time they were repulsed by the police.

According to Golez, the CPP-NPA is now engaged in a series of attacks to show that it still has some strength and, secondly, this could be their bargaining chip before going back to the negotiating table with the government.

He said that the CPP-NPA has suffered serious losses as a result of the massive military and socio-economic offensive embarked by the Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

Golez said that from January to September this year alone, the NPA lost a total of 593 of its armed elements, 121 of them captured and 472 surrendered.

Compared to the same period last year, the CPP-NPA only lost some 420 guerrillas, indicating that they suffered a serious blow this year, Golez said.

The classification by the United States and other Western countries of the NPA as a foreign terrorist organization (FTO) also dealt a serious psychological moral blow to the communists, Golez said.

More Filipino returnees have rejoined employers in Sabah, says DOLE

The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) said today that more and more Filipino returnees from Malaysia have rejoined their employers in Sabah after they were able to secure the necessary documents and working permits.

In a report, DOLE Regional Director Melencio Balanag, who is based in Zamboanga City, said that of the total deportees who arrived here during the past few days, about 14 percent have already been sent back to their employers in Sabah.

He said that today, another batch of 116 returnees left from Zamboanga City on board a commercial vessel to rejoin their former employers in Sabah. On Friday, another batch of returnees will leave for Sabah, Balanag said.

Balanag said that earlier, close to 700 returnees have been reunited with their employers in Malaysia.

“We are happy to be able to send back to Malaysia these people so that they can start earning their living again,” Regional Director Renegold Macarulay of the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) said.

Macarulay said the latest batch of 116 repatriates were issued their complete travel documents, including their working permits, through the One-Stop-Shop Crisis Management Office for Sabah Returnees set up in Zamboanga City.

Balanag said that the DOLE is also assisting displaced returnees who do not have employers in Malaysia find jobs in Zamboanga City.

“We made references to different factories in the city. Some of them are already working as construction workers while others are in the canning factories,” Balanag said.

But this is only temporary employment since the returnees have expressed their desire to go back to Malaysia pending the release of the necessary travel documents and working permits, Balanag said.

Gov’t has no intention of taking over operations of NAIA terminal 3 — Palace

Malacañang today said that the government has no intention of taking over the operations and management of the Terminal 3 of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) from the Philippine International Air Terminals Co (PIATCO).

In a phone patch interview this afternoon from Clark Special Economic Zone in Angeles City, Pampanga, Press Secretary Ignacio “Toting” Bunye said that what President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is interested in is to review certain onerous provisions of the flawed contract with PIATCO.

“Ngayon kung sa kanila nanggaling itong signals na ito, palagay ko mas mapapabilis ma-normalize ang operations. (Now, if all these signals come from the PIATCO management, I believe its normal operations will be fast-tracked),” Bunye said.

Bunye said that even pending the review or the termination of the review of the various contract provisions, PIATCO operations could have a soft opening by December this year.

Asked on the Palace reaction on the separate investigation being conducted by the civil society group on the President Diosdado Macapagal Boulevard project which could include some Malacañang officials, Bunye said the President's position on the issue has been very clear.

The President said the parties who are probably involved should be exposed, and if warranted, they should be prosecuted, Bunye said.

GMA bestows highest awards in gov't service to 22 state workers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today conferred the two highest awards in the civil service to 22 exceptional state workers in simple ceremonies held at the Ceremonial Hall of Malacañang.

In her remarks during the awarding ceremonies, the President congratulated the 22 awardees for "consistently rendering their duties with the highest integrity, morality and decency."

"And those of you who are here today have passed that test. May you continue to serve as models and trailblazers for the rest of the bureaucracy, for the rest of the government," the President said.

The President also called on civil servants to focus on issues rather than on personalities. "Let us focus on commonalities rather than on controversies. Let us focus on a broad front of service rather than on parochial interests," she said.

It is important for government workers to set a good example to the people that they are serving, the President said.

"I am glad that among the criteria used in the selection of the awardees is simple living or simple lifestyle, because we must have a dignified lifestyle," the President said.

Twelve government employees, including a barangay tanod and a barangay captain, received the Presidential Lingkod Bayan Award for outstanding work performance while 10 others, including a laborer, were conferred the Dangal ng Bayan Award for exemplary ethical behavior in public service.

Culminating the 102nd anniversary celebration of the Philippine Civil Service, the conferment of these prestigious awards formed part of the government-wide Honor Awards Program administered by the Civil Service Commission (CSC) primarily aimed at recognizing the "remarkable contributions and achievements of public servants."

The CSC conducts an annual nationwide search for outstanding public officials and employees.

Each of the awardees received P100,000 cash and will be automatically promoted to the next higher position. The CSC said if no position is readily available, the awardees will instead be given a salary increase equivalent to the next higher position.

The Lingkod Bayan awardees also received a gold gilded medallion and a plaque with the citation of the President.

Awardees of the Dangal ng Bayan Award, on the other hand, were given trophies designed by National Artist for Sculpture Napoleon Abueva.

This year's committee on Lingkod Bayan Awards was composed of CSC Commissioner J. Waldemar Valmores; Undersecretary and Acting Chief of Presidential Protocol Cecilia Rebong; Philippine Jaycees National Senior Executive Vice President Ismael Penado; Lawyer Katrina Legarda; and Ateneo School of Government Dean Henedina Abad.

The committee on Dangal ng Bayan Award had CSC Chairman Karina Constatino-David and Acting Ombudsman Margarito Gervacio, Jr. as co-chairmen, with Commission on Audit Chairman Guillermo Carague, Dr. Bella Villanueva of the University of the Philippines, and Amelia Anonuevo of the National Housing Authority, as members.

One of this year's recipients of the Lingkod Bayan Award is a Barangay Tanod Joaquin Morga of Barangay Telbang in Alaminos, Pangasinan. Morga was responsible from the conversion of the idle Bolo park into manmade fishponds which provided viable livelihood means to fisher folk in the barangay.

Chairman Aurelio Quilo of Barangay Guinicolalay in Dinas, Zamboanga del Sur was recognized for effectively sustaining peace and order, and causing the construction of several infrastructure projects in his barangay.

Three teachers graced this year's honor roll for Lingkod Bayan award: Cesar Acebedo, an elementary grade teacher from Aparri, Cagayan for his highly innovative teaching approaches; Evelyn Caja, a special education teacher from Ramon Magsaysay High School in Manila; and Carmen Salazar, a master teacher of the Bacolod City SPED Center.

Postman Romeo Pontipetra of Cagayan de Oro City was also honored for his exceptional integrity in handling more than P7 million worth of money order forms and stamps without a single centavo short.

A nurse of the Luis Hora Memorial Regional Hospital in Bauko, Mountain Province, Elena Tampican, was also cited for her unequaled dedication and zeal in rendering health services regardless of her patients' culture and social status, even giving priority to the poor, underprivileged and indigenous people of Mt. Province.

For his trailblazing researches on electricity that bore great national impact, Danilo Falgui also got Lingkod Bayan citation. Falgui, an assistant professor of Kalinga-Apayao State College, has the following notable projects: "Sito Electrification Program" that greatly helped in bringing light into the homes of hundreds of Filipino families especially the poor in remote communities.

For being the brains behind the Environment Management Research and Center for Agricultural Resources and Extension Services which showcases a comprehensive and integrated farming system Edgar Ricamonte also got a Lingkod Bayan award. As president of Quirino State College in Diffun, Quirino, Ricamonte unwaveringly pursued the improvement of the college's welfare and advanced the quality of education in the province.

Chancellor Alfredo Ramirez of the University of the Philippines-Manila is recognized for his dedication in alleviating the condition of public health care in the country. His remarkable contributions in this field included the establishment of the first Burn Unit at the Philippine General Hospital which significantly helped in the rehabilitation of burn patients and reduced mortality and morbidity rates.

From the judiciary, Judges Maria Cristina Cornejo and Clifton Ganay also received the Lingkod Bayan awards. Judge Cornejo presides over Regional Trial Court Branch 147 in Makati City and is cited for exemplifying the art of detaching natural bias in resolving cases by holding her judgment in abeyance until she was weighed the arguments raised by the parties.

Judge Ganay is an executive judge of Regional Trial Court Branch 31 in Agoo, La Union and was conferred the Lingkod Bayan award for his judicious resolution of cases, setting a national record of having only six pending cases at the end of 2001.

This year's Dangal ng Bayan awardees include:

Antonio Fabre, who despite his physical handicap has effectively enforced the Coconut Preservation Act of 1995 in the entire province of Bohol. A lowly laborer from the Philippine Coconut Authority in Tagbilaran City, Fabre was also instrumental in the mass production of a certain kind of fungus that resulted in higher coconut productivity.

Jose Benedicto Bautista, a postmaster of San Jose City, Nueva Ecija, for accommodating more mailers during lunch breaks and delivering mail for himself in place of absent letter carriers to prevent delay in postal services.

Niday Baybay of the Department of Labor and Employment in CARAGA who is recognized for her motivated efforts in pursuing illegal recruiters, resulting in the arrest and prosecution of 21 of them and saving some 200 would-be victims.

Ninie del Rosario, a master teacher in Sta. Ana Central Elementary School in Davao City, for developing science and technology instructional method which greatly eased student's learning of vague concepts, providing her co-teachers as well with knowledge and training on improving science teaching methods.

Estelita Nario from the Bureau of Customs in Parañaque, Metro Manila for apprehending numerous individuals, both local and foreign residents, for all kinds of illegal acts including the smuggling of jewelry, Korean medicine and shabu.

Basilio Saking, a senior jail officer of the Bureau of Jail Management and Penology (BJMP) in Baguio City, for his genuine concern to transform the Baguio City jail into an educational and reformatory institution.

Fely Tabieros, midwife of Sanchez Mira, Cagayan, for being an exemplary civil servant traveling through farmlands and hiking mountains just to attend to patients in distress.

Baguio City State Auditor Nadelline Orallo for her vigilance and diligence that led to significant audit findings and substantial audit disallowances amounting to million of pesos.

Linda Fadriquelan, a secondary school principal of the Mabini National High School in Corcuera, Romblon, for being instrumental in the zero drop-out of students for the past 10 school years.

Emy Fler Esponilla, a district supervisor of the Division of City Schools, Pobcaran District, Caloocan City, for establishing school cooperatives long before the idea became popular. Such scheme provided financial assistance to teachers, and financed the scholarship of poor but deserving students.

Suspension of lethal injections to allow Congress to decide on death penalty law — Palace

Malacañang said today that the decision of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to suspend the execution of some death convicts by lethal injection is to give Congress a chance to decide once and for all on what to do with the death penalty law.

In a phone patch interview from the Clark Special Economic Zone in Angeles City, Pampanga, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that there are resolutions filed in both houses of Congress asking for the abolition of the death penalty.

“The President has made the judgment call and let us just wait. I think that is also a signal for the members of Congress to really finalize whatever action they would like to make on this issue,” Bunye said.

Bunye was reacting to comments attributed to Sen. Robert Barbers that the President suspended the implementation of the death penalty as a concession to the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines (CBCP).

Manila Archbishop Jaime Cardinal Sin and the CBCP have strongly urged the government to scrap the death penalty.

Bunye said that if the members of Congress would approve the abolition of the death penalty law, then all questions “would be moot and academic.”

“So the President is just giving them time to really push through or not with their proposed legislation,” Bunye said.

GMA to gov't workers; be role models to the people you serve

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has called on government workers to be role models to the people they serve as she stressed that an efficient and effective bureaucracy is an essential element in building a strong Republic.

In her speech during the conferment of the Lingkod Bayan and Dangal ng Bayan Awards in Malacañang Wednesday, the President said that a strong and dedicated civil service could contribute to good governance, which is an essential institution in a strong Republic.

The conferment of the awards to 22 public servants was the culmination of the 102nd anniversary celebration of the Philippine civil service.

The President said that the strong Republic that she envisioned in her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) last July has two basic characteristics.

The first, the President said, is that it should represent the people's interest and not just the interest of the dominant class or the powerful minority.

And second, the republic must have a capacity, represented through strong institutions and a strong bureaucracy, to implement its policies and deliver basic services to the people.

It is important, the President said, for government workers to safeguard the integrity and the good image of the agencies where they work.

"Tayo ay kinakailangan na maging mabuting halimbawa sa ating mga pinaglilingkuran (We should set a good example to the people we are serving)," the President said.

The President said that as shown by the achievements of the awardees, there is an abundance of good men and women in the public service as she commended them for rendering their duties with the highest integrity, morality and decency.

"May you continue to serve as models and trailblazers for the rest of the bureaucracy, the rest of the government, including us, public officials," the President said.

The President also said that the anniversary of the Philippine civil service should serve as an opportunity for government workers to rededicate themselves and reaffirm their oaths of office.

"Let us strengthen our commitment to uphold our responsibility of rendering efficient, effective and quality service to our people," the President said.

Awardees for the Lingkod Bayan Awards were Cesar Acebedo, a grade school teacher of West District, Aparri, Cagayan; Evelyn Caja, a special education teacher of Ramon Magsaysay High school in España, Manila; Maria

Cristina Cornejo, presiding judge of the Regional Trial Court Branch 147, Makati City; Danilo Falgui, assistant professor, Kalinga-Apayao State College, Tabuk, Kalinga; Clifton Ganay, executive judge, Regional Trial Court, Branch 31, Agoo, La Union;

Joaquin Morga, barangay tanod of Barangay Telbang, Alaminos, Pangasinan; Romeo Pontipetra, postman, Cagayan de Oro City; Aurelio Quilo, barangay chairman of Barangay Guinicolalay, Dinas, Zamboanga del Sur; Alfredo Ramirez, chancellor, University of the Philippines, Ermita, Manila; Edgar Ricamonte, president of Quirino State College, Diffun, Quirino; Carmen Salazar, master teacher, Bacolod City; and Elene Tampican, nurse of Luis Hora Memorial Regional Hospital in Abatan, Bauko, Mountain Province.

Awardees for the Dangal ng Bayan Awards were Jose Benedicto Bautista, postmaster of San Jose City, Nueva Ecija; Nida Baybay, stenographer of the Department of Labor and Employment of CARAGA Region; Ninie del Rosario, master teacher, Sta. Ana Central Elementary School, Davao City; Emy Fler Esponilla, district supervisor, Calocan City; Antonio Fabre, laborer of the Philippine Coconut Authority, Dampas District, Tagbilaran City;

Linda Fabriquelan, principal, Mabini National High School, Mabini, Corcuera, Romblon; Estelita Nario, customs officer, Bureau of Customs, Parañaque, Metro Manila; Nadeline Orallo, state auditor, GSIS, Baguio City; Basilo Saking, senior jail officer, Baguio City; and Fely Tabieros, midwife, municipality of Sanchez Mira, Cagayan.

Gov't to push efforts in collecting share from GOCCs to reduce budget deficit

The Department of Finance said it will push efforts in collecting its share on the income of government-owned and controlled corporations (GOCC) to shore up government finances and reduce the budget deficit.

The DOF said that under Republic Act 7656, all GOCCs are required to share a substantial amount of their net earnings to the national government in the form of dividends.

As of August 2002, the GOCCs have remitted a total dividend of P3.4 billion to the national government, as against the revised target of P4.3 billion for the whole year.

The DOF said that guarantee fees, which were collected by the DOF from the GOCCs for their borrowings, reached P5.4 billion as against the revised target of P5.8 billion for 2002.

Meanwhile, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho has said that the budget deficit has narrowed to an average of P10 billion in the last three months.

Camacho said that the budget deficit from June to August have improved, compared to the first five months of the year.

The budget deficit swelled to P107.7 billion in January to May, increasing further to P144 billion by August. The budget deficit in March was P25.3 billion, the highest during the five-month period.

Camacho said that in August 2002, the budget deficit was only P10.9 billion, the lowest so far.

He also said that the government hopes to report revenue surpluses by December as the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) beefs up tax collection.

Camacho said that he is hoping that there will be a month or two during the last four months when the government will experience a surplus.

Gov't extending all help to OFWs in Italy

The Philippine government is closely coordinating with Italian authorities in helping undocumented overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) avail themselves of Italy's latest regularization program or amnesty and to ensure the best possible treatment for them.

In a report to Malacañang, the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) and Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) said they have been conducting a massive information campaign to enjoin "irregular" Filipino workers to take advantage of Italy's offer to regularize their stay.

DOLE Secretary Patricia A. Sto. Tomas has been apprised by DFA Assistant Secretary Jaime J. Yambao about developments and actions taken to assist Filipinos in Italy as disclosed by the Philippine Ambassador to Rome Philippe J. Lhuillier.

The Philippine Embassy in Italy and the Philippine Overseas Labor Offices (POLOs) in Rome and Milan have conducted regularization information campaigns for OFWs that included announcements in radio programs, publications, flyers, and letters distributed to Filipino community groups.

In addition, the embassy's consular section has extended its office hours, remaining open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays, the "usual days-off" of Filipino workers in Italy.

Sto. Tomas said undocumented Filipino workers in Italy are expected to respond more positively to the current Italian regularization program compared to the amnesty offered in previous years.

Figures from the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) showed that Italy has remained the top destination of OFWs in the European mainland after it absorbed 12,000 documented OFWs in the first six months of 2002.

Earlier, Ambassador Lhuillier expressed full confidence in Italy's capacity "to humanely treat migrant workers attracted to its economy" as he affirmed that Filipino workers in Rome enjoy "a very good reputation and a high level of respect."

"Perhaps they are the most appreciated among the foreign communities in Italy for being hardworking, trustworthy, reliable and honest," Lhuillier said.

He said, however, that the 130,000 estimate of undocumented Filipino workers in Italy is an inaccurate and unrealistic figure. This figure even exceeded the real number of Filipinos, either documented or undocumented, in the entire Italian peninsula.

He cited official records of the Italian Ministry of Interior that there are 64,215 Filipinos in Italy with legal documents, while those without "proper papers" may total 30,000 to 40,000.

Lhuillier said employers of undocumented workers were given from September 10 to November 10, 2002 within which to apply for their workers' regularization, with reports indicating that this has been extended by 15 days, or up to November 25.

"Under the regularization measure, foreigners working as domestic helpers or caregivers who have been working for at least three months (beginning June 2002) may avail themselves of this opportunity to regularize their stay," Lhuillier said.

Employers, and not workers, will make the application for regularization. Employers must be ready to pay the equivalent of three months' social security contribution in favor of their workers, and must provide them with suitable housing, Lhuillier said.

AFP, PNP undertaking measures to prevent repetition of NPA attacks on police outposts

The Philippine National Police (PNP) and the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) are undertaking measures that would prevent the occurrence of attacks by members of the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People's Army (NPA) on police outposts in the country.

In a press briefing after a joint command conference in Malacañang this afternoon, Interior and Local Government Jose Lina, Jr. said the measures would include closer coordination between the PNP and the AFP and other agencies.

"Measures are now being undertaken to further improve the preparedness of the police station in repelling possible future attacks," Lina said.

Lina, however, begged off from disclosing the specific measures discussed during the command conference, saying this will be counterproductive.

"But I would like to emphasize that the objective of the government is to prevent the occurrence of similar incidence in the future," Lina said.

Lina was referring to the attack on the police station of Lopez, Quezon where the police chief and another policeman were killed and the attack on the municipal hall and police station of Maco, Compostela Valley.

According to Lina, he presented measures during the command conference that would be undertaken by the PNP to protect municipal or police stations all over the country, particularly in those areas considered vulnerable to CPP-NPA attacks.

As secretary of the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG), Lina has direct supervision over the PNP.

Lina also revealed that the DILG has filed robbery-in-band case against the mayor of Maco, Compostela Valley for his alleged involvement in the raid by the NPA of the police station in the town.

The DILG chief also described the recent attacks made by the NPA as "desperate moves" on the part of the CPP-NPA to project that they are still in the fight.

He said that figures earlier released by National Security Adviser Roilo Golez showed that last year and this year, there had been consistent efforts on the part of the government, particularly the AFP, to defeat the CPP-NPA.

Lina also cited the four-pronged holistic approach adopted by the Macapagal-Arroyo administration in fighting the insurgency that includes first, the security component undertaken by the AFP and the PNP, and second, the socio-economic component undertaken by the Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan or KALAHIL.

The third component is the political initiative that is aimed at informing the people of the evils of terrorism and communism, while the fourth is the information dissemination program whose objective is to inform the people what the government is doing for them.

Malacañang condemns Zamboanga bombing

Malacañang today condemned the bomb attack Wednesday outside Camp Enrile, Malagutay, Zamboanga that killed a United States serviceman, a Filipino soldier and a civilian and wounded 23 others.

In a press briefing in Malacanang, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez said an investigation is now being undertaken by the police force, assisted on all fronts by civilian authorities led by Zamboanga City Mayor Ma. Clara Lobregat and the Southern Command forces.

Golez noted the treachery adopted by the perpetrators against the US serviceman, who was only here only for civic projects.

“We condemn this senseless act of violence and extend our heartfelt condolences to the family of the US serviceman,” Golez said.

Golez noted that it is tragedy to die but it is an even greater misfortune to die in a strange place — thousands of miles away from home.

“This is indeed very tragic, a very treacherous act on the part of the perpetrator because...you have to remember that this US serviceman is here to conduct activities that are connected with civic work,” Golez said.

The National Security Adviser said Philippine authorities immediately informed the US authorities about the bombing.

“Right now, the only thing that we can say is that an investigation is being conducted. The police force, the mayor of Zamboanga and the forces of Southcom are working together in order to find a quick solution to this problem and go after the perpetrator or perpetrators,” he said.

Another American soldier wounded in the attack is reportedly in serious but stable condition.

The American soldiers were part of a 260-man Special Operations support team doing humanitarian work after joint anti-terror operations ended in July against the Abu Sayyaf kidnap-for-ransom group, officials said.

The team is based in the southern city of Zamboanga and Basilan Island.

Palace to CPP-NPA: stop attacks so peace process can move on

Malacañang today called on the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People's Army (CPP-NPA) to stop its attacks, especially against civilian targets, so that the peace process can move on.

In an interview, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is sincere in pushing for the peace process and in pursuing programs that would improve the people's lives.

He said the government panel to the suspended peace negotiations with the foreign-based leaders of the CPP-NPA has prepared a draft agreement that has already been presented to the Cabinet oversight committee.

As soon as the President approves the draft, then it will be submitted to the CPP-NPA and hopefully, the formal peace talks could be resumed, Ermita said.

According to Ermita, the NPA has staged a series of attacks during the past few days to show that it is still capable of doing some harm. He added, however, that the insurgents' threat to sow more violence and attack non-combatant targets and facilities would only exacerbate the problem and could further derail the peace negotiations.

"Kapag ginawa nila iyan ay lalo nilang patutunayan na sila ay mga terorista. Talaga namang baka hindi matuloy ang ating usapan, dahil nga sa gumagawa sila ng mga bagay na nagpapatunay na sila ay mga terorista (If they do that, this will only prove that they are really terrorists. This could stop the resumption of the talks since what they are doing only confirms that they are terrorists)," Ermita said.

Ermita said that the killing of innocent civilians, destruction of utilities and resorting to extortion activities would only add to the misery of the people, especially those in the provinces.

"Harinawa ay mapigil na itong pakikibaka sa isa't-isa at magkaroon tayo ng puspusang katahimikan (I hope we can put an end to this struggle so that we can enjoy lasting peace)," Ermita said.

GMA visit to Albay to boost Pantao development

LEGAZPI CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's scheduled visit to Albay on Saturday to attend the Pantao Summit in Pantao, Libon, Albay augurs well for the fast tracking of the Pantao Port Development Project.

The Pantao Summit, through the initiative of Congressman Jose Salceda (Albay, Third District), seeks to fast-track the implementation of the Pantao Port Development Project which would develop a regional port in the region that would improve market and transport linkages for Bicol to the Visayas and Mindanao regions.

The Pantao Port Development Project was proposed in 1995 and was approved by the Regional Development Council (RDC) as one of the priority projects in the region.

The project would cost P350 million for implementation from 2002 to 2005 which will cover the following scope of work: construction of port facilities required for the five base ports, one terminal port and one new port. Also included in the project is the construction of the Libon-Pantao access road.

For 2002, the Philippine Ports Authority allocated an initial amount of P50 million, with subsequent allocations amounting to P150 million each programmed for 2003 and 2004.

The RDC found the initial allocation of P50 million as inadequate and requested the President to increase it to P300 million during the 7th Regional Cabinet Meeting held in Naga City last June 3.

GMA 7 Network execs thank President for safe release of crew

The GMA 7 Network today thanked President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP) for the safe release of their kidnapped reporter Carlo Lorenzo and cameraman Gilbert Ordiales.

Lorenzo and Ordiales, accompanied by their bosses and family, paid the President a courtesy call in Malacañang and thanked the Chief Executive for their freedom.

Also present during the meeting were Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Benjamin Defensor and PNP Chief for Operations Edgardo Aglipay.

Lorenzo said he feels so lucky to get out from such a horrible experience. He also said that while in captivity, he and Ordiales sensed the fear felt by their captors because of the pressure from the military forces.

The two were kidnapped while trying to interview a former Muslim separatist guerilla leader near Indanan, Sulu.

GMA 7 President and Chief Executive Officer Felipe Gozon, who accompanied the freed hostages, thanked the President and her “hardworking” generals.

The President told Lorenzo and Ordiales that they now belonged to the group of journalists who were kidnapped.

Veteran journalist Jessica Soho, who was also present at the meeting, informed the President that “we’ve never paid a single centavo.”

Soho also thanked the President for the news blackout that was implemented during the period of the captivity.

The President replied that indeed, a news blackout in kidnap cases makes “a big difference.”

After meeting in Malacañang, the two journalists were brought to the St. Luke’s Hospital for medical tests.

Palace releases M.O. 77 restoring PNP control and supervision to Metro Manila mayors

Malacañang today released Memorandum Order No. 77 formalizing an earlier directive of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to return to Metro Manila mayors the operational supervision and control over all units of the Philippine National Police (PNP) in their areas of jurisdiction.

Under MO No. 77, however, operational supervision and control over the PNP could not be exercised by the Metro Manila mayors 30 days before and 30 days after any national, local and barangay elections.

The MO, which was signed by the President last October 1, directed the National Police Commission (NAPOLCOM) to empower the mayors of the cities and municipalities of the National Capital Region (NCR) “to effectively carry out their responsibility of maintaining peace and order in their respective territorial jurisdictions.”

This directive is based on Section 14 of Republic Act No. 6975, also known as the Interior and Local Government Act of 1990, that gives the NAPOLCOM administrative control and operational supervision over the PNP.

The MO is issued in pursuance to Section 16 of the Local Government Code of 1991, also known as Republic Act No. 7160, as amended, that provides that local government units shall ensure and support the maintenance of peace and order within their respective territorial jurisdictions.

In issuing the MO, the President said that the NCR, which is composed of 13 cities and four municipalities and home to some 10 million people “is uniquely situated in terms of law enforcement.”

“There is a need to institute mechanisms which will ensure and support the performance by the mayors of the cities and municipalities in the NCR of their functions relative to the maintenance of peace and order and to the exercise of operational supervision and control over the units of the PNP within their respective territorial jurisdictions,” the President said.

The NCR or Metro Manila is made up of the cities of Manila, Quezon, Pasay, Pasig, Makati, Caloocan, Malabon, Mandaluyong, Marikina, Valenzuela, Las Piñas, Muntinlupa, and Parañaque, and the municipalities of San Juan, Navotas, Pateros and Taguig.

The MO said that pursuant to RA No. 6975, as amended, the mayors of the NCR shall choose the chiefs of police, station commanders or district directors, respectively from the lists of qualified and eligible officers recommended by the district director of the NCR Police Office (NCRPO) director, preferably from the same city or municipality.

“The mayors may recommend to the district director or the NCRPO director, respectively, an eligible, who may be included in the list of eligibles,” the MO said.

The MO also said that the mayors of the cities and municipalities in the NCR shall be given prior notice of the transfer, recall, reassignment or detail of PNP members under their operational supervision and control.

The President announced her approval of the proposal of Metro Manila mayors to restore to them the operation control and supervision over the police during a joint meeting of the Regional Development Council and the Regional Peace and Order Council of Metro Manila held at the Manila Hotel last July 16.

During the joint RDC-RPOC meeting, Manila Mayor Lito Atienza thanked the President for the decision and assured a better crime rate the next time the council meets again.

“As mayors in the National Capital Region, Mrs. President, we would like to be fully responsible in the maintenance of peace and order conditions in each city and municipality,” Atienza said.

He added that having better control of each and every policeman on the beat, “then we should be able to present to you in the next meeting of the RPOC a much controlled and definitely a better picture.”

GMA vows to step up police and military operations against the NPA, other criminal groups

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today vowed to step up police and military operations against the New People's Army (NPA) and other criminal groups and terrorists in the country.

In her weekly radio address aired nationwide this morning, the President described as "acts of desperation" the recent NPA attacks against police stations in Maco, Compostela Valley and Lopez, Quezon, and the burning of heavy equipment in Angat, Bulacan.

The President said these attacks are not surprising, saying that these are in retaliation for the losses that the NPA had suffered during the past nine months after intensive military and police operations against them.

She said this was compounded by the recent declaration by the United States that the CPP-NPA is a foreign terrorist organization and the withdrawal of support by the government of the Netherlands to its leaders who are now living in exile in that country.

"Kayo ay nakakatiyak na tuloy-tuloy ang police at military operations laban sa kanila (Rest assured that police and military operations against them would continue)," the President said.

The President also called on the citizenry to continue giving their support to the military and the police so that the government can wipe out all forms of criminality and terrorism in the country.

She cited the indignation rally at the funeral of the chief of police of Lopez, Quezon, who was killed during the NPA attack, as an example of a strong public support to the anti-insurgency drive of the government.

GMA welcomes Bush pledge to help AFP in fight vs local terrorists

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today welcomed the recent announcement by United States President George W. Bush that the US will continue to support the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) in the fight against local terrorist groups.

In her weekly radio address aired nationwide this morning, the President said the pledge of assistance by Bush, which was made in his letter to the US Congress, is part of America's global war against terror.

Also part of this global war on terror, the President said, is the US threat to attack Iraq.

"Sinusuportahan natin ang kaso laban sa Iraq na idinulog ng Estados Unidos sa UN Security Council, lalo na sa layunin nitong buwagin ang mga weapons of mass destruction, which are a threat to humanity (We support the case presented by the US against Iraq in the UN Security Council, especially in its desire to destroy all weapons of mass destruction, which are a threat to humanity)," the President said.

In her address, the President also expressed her condolences to the family of Sgt. Mark Jackson, an American serviceman who was killed during a bomb attack in Zamboanga City last Wednesday.

The President said that Jackson's death should be used as a symbol to further strengthen the bonds of cooperation between the US and the Philippines in the fight against terrorism.

She vowed that the government would not rest until the perpetrators of the crime would be apprehended and brought to justice.

In a related incident, the President also thanked Sulu Gov. Yusuf Jikiri and the provincial crisis management committee of Sulu for the safe release of TV reporter Carlo Lorenzo and cameraman Gilbert Ordiales from their kidnapers in Indanan, Sulu.

The President also lauded the media industry for its cooperation by not reporting about the incident that, she said, contributed to the early release of the two hostages.

“Ang hangarin ng ating pamahalaan ay siguruhin ang kaligtasan ng ating mga inosenteng mamamayan mula sa terorista na gustong maghasik ng karahasan sa ating bansa (The objective of our government is to ensure the safety of our innocent citizens from the terrorists who want to sow terror and violence in our country),” the President said.

GMA releases P1M for SMEs, other amounts for livelihood projects in Pantao, Albay

PANTAO, LIBON, ALBAY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today personally released the amount of P1 million for the “One Town, One Product, One Million Pesos” program for small and medium enterprises in the town of Libon.

The President has been distributing P1 million to towns nationwide for the development of SMEs as part of her efforts to boost domestic market.

A patrol boat costing P850,000 was also turned over by the President to the municipality. The boat is to be used by the local authorities in enforcing the rules and regulations of the Bureau of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources (BFAR).

The awarding ceremonies were undertaken at the elementary school, where the Pantao summit that seeks to fast track the implementation of the Pantao Port Development Project was also held.

The project represents the energization of the remaining 129 barangays in Albay.

A groundbreaking for the National Housing Authority Libon Resettlement Project was also held as part of the ceremonies.

The P20 million project is classified under the Resettlement Assistance Program for the local government units to benefit affected families, which would be displaced by the establishment of the Pantao Regional Port.

Later on, the President proceeded to the Fernandez Compound for a brunch with local officials and members of the local media.

The Pantao Port Development Project was proposed in 1995 and was approved by the Regional Development Council (RDC) as one of the priority projects in the region.

The project, which would cost P350 million and for implementation from 2002 to 2005, will cover the following scope of work: construction of port facilities required for the five base ports, one terminal port and one new port. Also included in the project is the construction of the Libon-Pantao access road.

For 2002, the Philippine Ports Authority has allocated for the port project an initial amount of P50 million, with subsequent allocations amounting to P150 million each, programmed for 2003 and 2004.

PRO Calabarzon Regional Director Enrique Galang presented Reyes to the President at the Villamor Airbase upon her arrival from a short trip to Pantao, Albay.

Galang told the President that the arrest of Reyes last October 3 at Barangay Luksuhin, in Alfonso, Cavite, was a result of several months of intelligence build-up from information provided by concerned citizens.

He said Reyes is facing charges of kidnap-for-ransom, murder, frustrated murder and robbery, and has several warrants of arrest.

Reyes is wanted for the kidnapping of Adelaida San Luis last April 14, 1996 in Sta. Cruz, Laguna and the murder of Special Police Officer 2 Teodoro Mamasig and Police Officer 3 Gerardo Alvarez on May 28, 1996.

Export earnings grow for fifth consecutive month

For the fifth consecutive month, Philippine exports grew in August, with the United States emerging as the No. 1 market and other Asian countries accounting for a significant part of the growth.

The Department of Trade and Industry and the National Statistics Office, in reports to Malacañang, said major markets for Philippine exports entered the buying season, with Christmas just weeks away, sending export earnings up by 14.1 percent to $2.99 billion in August this year compared to $2.62 billion during the same month last year.

The United States market shifted into higher consumption levels with the onset of autumn, accounting for more than one-fourth of the Philippines' export receipts in August.

Exports to the US totaled $767.86 million, up 5.4 percent from last year's $728.79 million.

Japan was the second biggest export market, with export revenues totaling $412.42 million, up 12.3 percent from $367.23 million a year ago.

Hong Kong posted the highest growth of 59.5 percent to $220.44 million from only $138.20 million last year.

"Hong Kong, the gateway to China, together with Taiwan, Singapore, Malaysia, Korea and Thailand had a combined 32 percent market share that is growing at an average rate of 26 percent, making this group the largest growth factor to our business," said Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II.

"Improved economies and compatibility of our product offerings with consumer aspirations are the major factors to our good export performance in these markets," Roxas added.

Other top markets for August were the Netherlands ($248.88 million), Taiwan ($206.67 million); Singapore ($195.02 million); Malaysia ($134.85 million); Republic of Korea ($116.22 million); Thailand ($111.48 million); and Germany ($106.58 million)

Income from agro-based products combined for $127.1 million or 4.2 percent of the total export revenue. Compared to last year, aggregate revenue for this commodity group dropped by 7.7 percent from $137.76 million.

Receipts from electronic components, accounting for 51.6 percent of the aggregate export revenue for the month, picked up by 17.7 percent to $1.544 billion from $1.312 billion last year.

Articles of apparel and clothing accessories remained as the country's second top earner with a combined share of 7.2 percent and an aggregate receipt of $216.63 million or 2.2 percent higher than $211.87 million a year earlier.

Roxas said garments registered positive growth rates for three consecutive months as the US market shifted into higher consumption levels normally associated with the fall and winter seasons.

Woodcrafts and furniture ranked third with total revenue of $38.14 million, reflecting a 6.7 percent increase from $35.75 million last year.

Ignition wiring set and other wiring sets used in vehicles, aircraft and ships ranked fourth with sales amounting to $38.07 million, a year-on-year decline of 29.1 percent from $53.70 million.

Giftware and holiday decors grew by 4 percent as retail orders came in preparation for the Christmas holidays while construction materials continued to grow at 4 percent due to home improvements, also for the holiday season.

Home improvements in the US and Europe continued to sustain business for exporters of home furnishings which registered a year-to-year growth of 8 percent, the DTI said.

M.O. 77 based on existing laws, says Palace

Memorandum Order No. 77, which confers to mayors of the National Capital Region operational supervision and control of the Philippine National Police (PNP) units within their respective jurisdictions, is based on existing laws, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said today.

Bunye, in his regular press briefing, said the law in this case are the Local Government Code of 1991 and the Interior and Local Government Act of 1990, as amended by the PNP Reform and Reorganization Act of 1998.

"As far as we know, the M.O. 77 is based on the provisions of the Local Government Code and the PNP Reform and Reorganization Act," Bunye said.

"If it pursuant to these two existing laws, we don't see any reason why it should contravene the basic law," Bunye said.

Bunye noted that MO 77 was a result of the clamor of the Metro Manila mayors to have more control of the police in their area so that they would be more effective in fighting crime.

He said the Metro Manila mayors conveyed this desire during the joint Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) meeting held last July at the Manila Hotel.

The MO, which was signed by the President last October 1, directed the NAPOLCOM to empower the mayors of the cities and municipalities of the NCR "to effectively carry out their responsibility of maintaining peace and order in their respective territorial jurisdictions."

This directive is based on Section 14 of Republic Act No. 6975, also known as the Interior and Local Government Act of 1990, that gives the NAPOLCOM administrative control and operational supervision over the PNP.

The MO is issued in pursuance to Section 16 of the Local Government Code of 1991, also known as Republic Act No. 7160, as amended, that provides that local government units shall ensure and support the maintenance of peace and order within their respective territorial jurisdictions.

In issuing the MO, the President said that the National Capital Region (NCR), which is composed of 13 cities and four municipalities and home to some 10 million people, "is uniquely situated in terms of law enforcement."

"There is a need to institute mechanisms which will ensure and support the performance by the mayors of the cities and municipalities in the NCR of their functions relative to the maintenance of peace and order and to the exercise of operational supervision and control over the units of the PNP within their respective territorial jurisdictions," the President said.

The NCR or Metro Manila is made up of the cities of Manila, Quezon, Pasay, Pasig, Makati, Caloocan, Malabon, Mandaluyong, Marikina, Valenzuela, Las Piñas, Muntinlupa, and Parañaque, and the municipalities of San Juan, Navotas, Pateros and Taguig.

The MO said that pursuant to RA No. 6975, as amended, the mayors of the NCR shall choose the chiefs of police, station commanders or district directors, respectively from the lists of qualified and eligible officers recommended by the district director of the NCR Police Office (NCRPO) director, preferably from the same city or municipality.

“The mayors may recommend to the district director or the NCRPO director, respectively, an eligible, who may be included in the list of eligibles,” the MO said.

The MO also said that the mayors of the cities and municipalities in the NCR should be given prior notice of the transfer, recall, reassignment or detail of PNP members under their operational supervision and control.

GMA signs EO setting up Gabay sa Mamamayan Action Centers in all barangays nationwide

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has signed Executive Order No. 130, establishing in all barangays nationwide the Gabay sa Mamamayan Aksyon Centers to serve as the institutional link between the government and the people.

The centers would ensure the adequacy and accessibility of quality information about national government programs and services to the residents of the community.

Under the EO, the Aksyon Centers shall be an integral part of the Information and Reading Center, a basic unit that a barangay is expected to set up.

The Aksyon Centers would be headed by the Punong Barangays, who may appoint as Information Action Officers, the other members of the Sangguniang Barangay, Barangay Treasurer, Barangay Secretary, chairman of the Sangguniang Kabataan, members of the Lupong Tagapamayapa and representatives of the Parents-Teachers Association, Association of Senior Citizens, people’s organizations, non-government organizations and other community-based civic groups.

The EO also enjoins the city and municipal government to provide administrative, technical and financial assistance to the Aksyon Centers.

The national government, on the other hand, would provide the Aksyon Centers technical assistance through the conduct of training, ensure the supply of agency brochures and other reference materials responsive to the information needs of community residents.

The national government should also promote the Aksyon Centers as convergence mechanism for government services at the barangay level.

Parents-Teachers Associations, Associations of Senior Citizens, people’s organizations, non-government organizations and other community-based civic groups, which are committed to the spirit of volunteerism, are also encouraged to provide technical assistance to the Aksyon Centers.

In issuing the EO, the President said “access to information about government programs and services, particularly among the disadvantaged sectors of society, is critical in community empowerment as well as in addressing poverty.”

GMA thanks Chinese-Filipino Business Club, youth for donation to Sabah returnees

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today thanked and commended the Chinese Filipino Business Club (CFBC) and the Chinese-Filipino youth for their generosity and civic consciousness in donating two truckloads of relief goods to alleviate the plight of thousands of Filipino returnees from Sabah.

“Gusto kong magpasalamat sa mga kabataang Tsinoys dahil sa napakagandang pagtutulong ninyo sa ating mga kapatid na bumalik mula sa Sabah (I wish to thank the youth from the Chinese-Filipino community for the help you are extending to the returnees from Sabah),” the President said in accepting the donation.

The President said the donation from the Chinese-Filipino community is truly a big contribution to the government’s program to help returning Filipinos from Sabah.

“Kapag iniisip natin mga non-government organizations, mga civil society, iniisip natin iyong nagpapataksik ng pamahalaan na masama. Pero hindi lamang iyon ang trabaho ng civil society. Ang mas trabaho ng civil society... ay matulungan ang mga kapus-palad ng ating bansa (When we think of non-government organizations, of civil society, what comes to mind is the ouster of corrupt governments. The greater task of civil society, however, is to help the needy and underprivileged),” the President said.

The handover of the donation was held at Malacañang’s Ceremonial Hall after the President had a luncheon meeting with senior citizens at the Heroes Hall in celebration of the Month of the Elderly.

CFBC president Aw Peng Lam, along with the teachers and student representatives from 22 Chinese schools, turned over the relief goods.

The donation from CFBC is part of the socio-civic organization’s initiative to support the civic projects of the President.

According to lawyer Daniel Y. Loagan, executive vice president of CFBC, the donation is part of “Operation Brotherhood,” a civic project through which the club has sponsored free cataract operations for underprivileged patients, given financial assistance to wounded men in uniform, and distributed relief goods and housing units to fire victims in Albay and Baseco in Manila.

Loagan said Operation Brotherhood “has always been at the forefront when there is a calamity,” and has also donated school buildings, computers and books to public schools under the Paaralang Pambarangay program.

During the ceremony, Aleli Jillian Sia, a student of the Chang Kai Shek College, expressed the youth’s concern for the welfare of Filipinos who have suffered since being cast out of Malaysia.

Sia also personally conveyed to the President her happiness at being of service to her marginalized brethren.

Among the schools represented during the ceremony were Ay Shin Academy, Chang Kai Shek College, Grace Christian High School, Hope Christian High School, Jubilee Christian Academy, Makati Hope Christian School, Manila Patriotic School, Paco Citizen Academy Foundation, Philadelphia School, Philippine Academy of Sakya, Philippine Buddhacare Academy, Philippine Cultural High School, Philippine Institute of Quezon City, Philippine Jin Nan Institute, Philippine Pasay Chung Hua Academy, Philippine San Bin School, Philippine Su Kuang Institute, St. Peter the Apostle School, St. Stephens High School, Samantabhadra Institute, Tiong Se Academy and Uno High School.

Japanese pledge of loan assistance to speed up infrastructure development in Mindanao – DPWH

The Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) said the pledge of more financial assistance by the Japanese government would speed up infrastructure development in Mindanao, including those in the former conflict-affected areas.

In a report, DPWH Secretary Simeon Datumanong said that in his recent meeting with Japanese Ambassador to the Philippines Kojiro Takano, the Japanese government expressed its interest in providing loan assistance for infrastructure projects in Level 3 areas in Mindanao.

Level 3 areas are areas in Mindanao with unstable peace and order situation.

Datumanong said the Japanese government had already sent a study mission for a proposed road project in Cotabato.

He said the Japanese loan assistance and other investments for infrastructure projects in Mindanao would spur the development of the resource-rich island and would benefit its residents.

Roads and bridges and other support infrastructure contribute to the success of the Philippines' long-term national strategy to sustain and promote economic growth, maintain peace and order and contribute to the overall welfare of its people, Datumanong said.

"We cannot win the fight against insurgency that has compounded poverty in Mindanao unless we develop the area," Datumanong said.

Among the Philippines' foreign partners, the Government of Japan has remained as the largest source of official development assistance (ODA), provided through the Japan Bank for International Cooperation (JBIC), Datumanong said.

Among the major ongoing infrastructure projects in Mindanao funded by JBIC and implemented by the DPWH are the Philippine-Japan Friendship Highway Mindanao Section Rehabilitation Project, the Rural Road Network Development Project-Phase 2 in Compostela Valley and Misamis Oriental Provinces, and the Lower Agusan Development Project Stage 1-Phase 2.

New WB loan to help more poor communities

The Philippine government and the World Bank signed today a loan agreement for the US$100 million loan for the KALAHI Comprehensive and Integrated Delivery of Social Services (KALAHI-CIDSS) Project.

The project, approved last month by the World Bank's Board of Executive Directors, was signed by Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho and the World Bank's Country Director, Robert Vance Pulley.

The project will strengthen local communities' capacity to design, implement, and manage development activities. Such activities may include basic infrastructure like new or rehabilitated roads and bridges, barangay (village) schools and clinics, and water supply and sanitation facilities.

Communities will prioritize their development needs, design activities, seek technical expertise and make informed choices on how resources are used for sustainable poverty reduction.

More than 5,300 poor barangays in 193 municipalities in 40 of the poorest provinces nationwide are expected to benefit from this project. These will be mostly in rural areas, where most poor Filipinos live.

In addition to the immediate benefits to the communities, the investments are also expected to have a longer term impact as the local communities are given the opportunities to participate in the development process.

Specifically, the project will:

- Empower communities to access better services from local governments.
- Improve local governance by strengthening formal and informal institutions to become more inclusive, accountable, and effective.
- Provide resources for community investment programs, which will be designed, implemented and managed by local communities.

The loan will be at the Bank's standard interest rate for fixed-spread loans, currently about 2%, with a maturity of 20 years, including an eight-year grace period. Implementation is expected to be over a period of six and a half years, closing in June 2009.

M.O. 77 could help stamp out jueteng, says Palace

Malacañang today said that Memorandum Order No. 77 that restored operational control and supervision over the police to city and municipal mayors, initially in Metro Manila, could help the government stamp out gambling, particularly the numbers game popularly called jueteng.

In an interview, Press Secretary and Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said that under the MO, it would be easy to pinpoint responsibility in the drive against illegal gambling in a certain locality unlike now when there is buck-passing as to who is really responsible in going after jueteng operators.

“Tingnan natin, we hope na itong ganitong sistema ay makatulong sa pagsawata ng jueteng (We will look into this, we hope this new system would help stop jueteng),” Bunye said.

In reply to criticisms from some sectors that MO 77 could be unconstitutional or illegal, Bunye appealed to them to give the new system a chance to work.

“Seguro ay bigyan na muna natin ng pagkakataon na mag-work iyong system bago natin i-question iyong legality (Perhaps we should give this system a chance before we question its legality),” Bunye said.

Earlier, Bunye said that MO 77 is based on the provisions of the Local Government Code of 1991, also known as Republic Act No. 6975, and the Interior and Local Government Code of 1990, as amended by the PNP Reform and Reorganization Act of 1998.

“If it is pursuant to these two existing laws, we don't see any reason why it should contravene the basic law,” Bunye said.

Bunye said that MO 77 was a result of the clamor of the Metro Manila mayors to have more control of the police in their areas so that they would be more effective in fighting crime, including illegal gambling.

He said the Metro Manila mayors conveyed this desire during the joint Regional Development Council-Regional Peace and Order Council (RDC-RPOC) meeting held last July at the Manila Hotel.

The MO, which was signed by the President last October 1, directed the Napolcom to empower the mayors of the cities and municipalities of the NCR “to effectively carry out their responsibility of maintaining peace and order in their respective territorial jurisdictions.”

The NCR or Metro Manila is made up of the cities of Manila, Quezon, Pasay, Pasig, Makati, Caloocan, Malabon, Mandaluyong, Marikina, Valenzuela, Las Piñas, Muntinlupa, and Parañaque, and the municipalities of San Juan, Navotas, Pateros and Taguig.

Palace cites importance of setting up Aksyon Centers in all barangays

Malacañang today cited the importance of the setting up of Gabay sa Mamamayan Aksyon (GMA) Centers in all barangays, saying that this will make the members of the community well-informed of what their government is doing for them.

In an interview, Press Secretary and Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that the GMA Centers are basically information and reading centers where people could go and read periodicals and other informative materials that would enrich their lives.

The setting up of these centers, as envisioned by Executive Order No. 130, is based on the principle that “an informed citizenry is an effective citizenry,” Bunye said.

Bunye brushed off criticisms from the opposition that the setting up of these reading centers could be the start of the campaign for the presidential polls in 2004.

“Seguro ay hindi dapat bigyan ng malisya iyan dahil ito ay isang basic na gawain ng pamahalaan, to inform the citizenry (Perhaps, we should not inject some malice here since it is the basic function of the government to inform the citizenry),” Bunye said.

Bunye said that the Aksyon Centers would serve as the institutional link between the government and the people.

He said that under the EO, the Aksyon Centers would be a collaborative effort on the part of the national and local government and the private sector that would include people’s organizations (POs), non-government organizations (NGOs) and community-based civil groups.

In issuing the EO, the President said that “access to information about government programs and services, particularly among the disadvantaged sectors of society, is critical in community empowerment as well as addressing poverty.”

Top communist leader arrested, presented to media

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presented to the media a top-ranking official of the Marxist-Leninist Party of the Philippines-Rebolusyunaryong Hukbo ng Bayan (MLLP-RHB) who was captured last Saturday by combined elements of the Intelligence Service of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (ISAFP) and Philippine National Police (PNP).

The President motored to Camp Aguinaldo this afternoon to personally congratulate Armed Forces Chief of Staff General Benjamin Defensor and the PNP chief, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. for their integrated efforts and swift action that led to arrest of Miel Gracilla Laurenaria.

Defensor told the President that Laurenaria was arrested at the periphery of Maypajo Market in Dagat-Dagatan, Caloocan City last Saturday afternoon on the basis of arrest order for kidnapping with serious illegal detention under Criminal Case Numbers 2258 and 90-293 filed in the Candelaria (Quezon) Municipal Trial Court and Lucena City Regional Trial Court, respectively.

Defensor informed the President that Laurenaria, 49, is a former executioner of Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) founder Jose Maria Sison when she was a regular central committee member of the CPP.

He said that the successful operation leading to the arrest of Laurenaria was an offshoot of the new Operations Plan “Gordian Knot,” a coordinated effort of the AFP and the PNP, with the involvement of a vigilant citizenry, in pursuing members of the CPP-NPA.

Defensor said that during her stint as the Southern Tagalog Regional Party Committee (STRPC) Secretary, Laurenaria was ordered by Sison to implement the Operation Missing Link (OPML) which resulted in the torture and slaughter of hundreds of New People's Army (NPA) regulars, sympathizers and ordinary citizens who were suspected by the CPP of being deep penetration agents of the government in the Southern Tagalog area.

The capture of Laurenaria is definitely a "big blow" to the CPP-NPA, which has recently been tagged as a foreign terrorist organization by the United States, Defensor said.

After the CPP split in 1993 because of the disillusionment of several old cadres over the leadership of Sison, Laurenaria remained with Sison. However, she felt betrayed that in spite of her dedication to the organization under Sison and having spent the best part of her life fighting for the CPP-NPA-NDF, she was continuously maligned by the party.

On February 1998, Laurenaria became executive committee member of MLPP-RHB, a breakaway group organized by Frank Pascual.

Defensor also added that until her arrest, Laurenaria was actively engaged in party building activities of the anti-Sison group by forming new mass bases and persuading pro-Sison groups to join the MLPP.

GMA calls for politics of reform, consultation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called for a shift from a politics of personality and patronage to a politics of reform and institutionalized consultation with the people.

In inducting the national officers of the Liberal Party (LP) at the Rajah Sulayman Park in Malate, called on the members of the LP, whom she called political pioneers, to carry on the ideas of the party's founding fathers, whether in government or in the promotion of the new politics.

"Let us continue to create together. Let us never fight. Let us win the future together for the people," said the President, who is honorary chairperson of the LP, which is aligned with the ruling coalition.

The country can never with the war against poverty unless the character of Philippine politics is changed, the President said.

The Chief Executive said that as a member of ruling coalition, she was calling on the members of the LP and other allied parties to lead the way towards a more productive 21st century.

"We have to find a way of ending the decades-old adversarial but also often horse-trading relationship between Congress and the Presidency," she added.

The President also said that the first decade of the 21st century should see the final demise of bossism, and the guns, goons and gold that characterized state politics of the last century.

"True democratic representation means rationality in the electoral process. Citizens must be given the tools for rationale choices and their votes must be precisely counted," she said.

She said electoral leaders must be more and more put to task whether they are truly representing the people or only their own or their friends' interests.

The Liberal Party's National Executive Council conferred the LP Honorary Chairmanship on the President during its meeting at the Club Filipino last July 24.

Rep. Florencio Abad of Batanes, who was inducted as LP president, said the LP named the President as honorary chairman in recognition of her ties with the party. Her father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, served as LP president and was elected under the LP banner.

The other LP officers the President inducted included Manila Mayor Jose Atienza, Jr. as Executive Vice President; Rep. Benigno Aquino III as vice president for Luzon; Rep. Antonio Eduardo Nachura, vice president for Visayas; Rep. JR Nereus Acosta, vice president for Mindanao; Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council Chairman Michael Defensor, vice president for the National Capitol Region; Rep. Danton Buesser, vice president for sectors; Rep. Rodolfo Bacani as secretary general; Rep. Junie Cua as deputy general secretary; Rep. Rafael Nantes as treasurer; Rep. Joey Hizon as deputy treasurer; Eleazar Quinto as director general; Senator Francisco Pangilinan as chairperson of the parliamentary caucus and Samar Gov. Raul Daza as chairperson of the caucus of local chief executives.

Former Senate President Jovito Salonga is the party's chairman emeritus.

GMA praises 2 Filipino students for winning top spots in ASEAN Quiz

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today praised the two Filipina champions of the ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) Quiz, saying she hopes the two will be among the future experts of the region.

During the ASEAN Quiz finals in Bangkok, Thailand last October 3, 2002, Retchell Suratos Catambay, a fourth year student of St. Albert the Great School in Dagupan City, won first place in the individual competitions of the ASEAN Quiz Regional Finals while Glorian Saavedra Concepcion, who is in her senior year at the Zamboanga National High School, placed second in the individual competition.

Catambay was awarded $500 as champion while Concepcion got $400 as second placer. Concepcion also got part of the $1,500 as member of the Blue Team that bagged the first prize in the group competition.

The two bested all (Individual Level) participants from ASEAN, with two contestants from each country.

"This is a great day for the Philippines," the President told the two during their meeting.

She also encouraged the two to enter the Philippine Foreign Service in the future.

"So, you're now our ASEAN experts," the President added.

The President asked the two on the categories used in the contest. Among the fields adopted in the regional test which the two answered were ASEAN treaties and declarations, ASEAN Free Trade Area (AFTA), ASEAN Regional Forum (ARF), Brunei-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines-East ASEAN Growth Area (BIMP-EAGA) and the ASEAN Summit Meetings.

The two were accompanied to Malacañang by their academic adviser, Vic Agbayani, and Catambay's parents, Julian and Mary Catambay.

The ASEAN Quiz is a project of the ASEAN Committee on Culture and Information and is implemented in cooperation with the 10 ASEAN member-countries.

It is a competition on knowledge of ASEAN among fourth year students of both public and private high schools. Its aim is to elicit the spirit of healthy competition among ASEAN youth in a friendly quiz game that exposes them to ASEAN cultural, political, economic and social information.

Through ASEAN Quiz, it is envisioned that the ASEAN youth will be more aware of the organization and its member-countries.

The Philippine leg of the ASEAN Quiz was held at the NBN Studio in Quezon City last August 5 and 6 and was televised nationwide on August 7, ASEAN Day.

The National Finals, which were organized by the Office of the Press Secretary in coordination with the Department of Education and the Department of Foreign Affairs, brought together 28 contestants representing different regions in the Philippines.

GMA restates RP commitment to support U.S.-led war against global terrorism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today restated the Philippines' commitment to support the United States-led war against global terrorism even as she called on the United Nations Security Council to consider the US case against Iraq for the sake of humanity.

In her policy speech delivered this morning before the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (FOCAP) at the Mandarin Hotel in Makati City, the President said the alliance between the Philippines and the US has become more important "in our righteous fight against terrorism and poverty."

The President said that today the war against terrorism has reached another defining moment as the issue of Iraq sharpens in focus.

"It is a moment for the Philippines to calibrate, recalibrate its foreign policy so that we can continue to achieve our goals of peace, prosperity and stability in the context of the realities lying today in the international and regional environment," the President said.

According to the President, the current Philippine-US alliance is a moral partnership that is governed by the common belief in strong democratic institutions that will create peace and freedom for peoples everywhere.

"We are determined to fight terrorism to the end. We have offered political, security and humanitarian assistance to the US in the pursuit of her most vital interests against terrorism which coincide with our own," the President said.

As part of the commitment to fight global terrorism, the Philippines also supports the case brought by the US against Iraq in the UN Security Council, the President said.

"The UN Security Council must give these charges the most urgent and serious consideration for the sake of the whole world," the President said.

When pressed in the open forum on what the Philippines would do in case the US attacks Iraq, the President said "tactically, we have to cross the bridge when we come to it."

She said that the main concern of the government right now is preparedness for Filipinos in the Middle East and energy security of the country in the event that the US attacks Iraq.

In rejecting criticisms that the Philippines is "being slavish" to the US by siding with Washington in the issue of Iraq, the President said: "Our motivation is not about pleasing America on this issue. Our motivation is working with the world to save mankind against the perpetuation of terror."

The President said that the “strategic partnership” between the Philippines and the US has reached a high point during the RP-US military training exercise, called Balikatan 02-1, held in Mindanao.

“The tenacity of our soldiers coupled with the superior technological assistance of the US ripened into the correct strategy that has severely decimated the Abu Sayyaf and kept them on the running,” the President said.

GMA cites two main concerns of gov’t in case a new Gulf war erupts

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited two main concerns of the government in the event that the United States pushes through with its threat to attack Iraq.

In her policy speech this morning before the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (FOCAP) at the Mandarin Hotel in Makati City, the President said the first concern of the government is on how to ensure the safety of Filipino workers in the Middle East.

The second concern, the President said, is energy security for the Philippines in the event that another Gulf war breaks out.

On the first concern, the President said, she supports the stand of former AFP Chief, retired Gen. Roy Cimatu, now special envoy to the Middle East, that a relocation, rather than evacuation back to the Philippines, is the more appropriate measure to take.

The President, however, said that for workers who would like to be repatriated to the Philippines in case of war, the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) would provide them with assistance.

On energy security, the President said, the stockpile of oil firms today is good for 62 days even if the government has only asked them for a 40-day stockpile.

According to the President, in the past, the oil firms’ stockpile included those that are still in transit but today’s stockpile pertains to what is in the country.

In addition to that, the President said, she has also asked Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. to help look for possible new sources of oil, like Russia.

“This will be a new fresh source of oil for the Philippines,” the President said.

GMA lauds U.S. for development assistance to Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the United States, particularly the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), for its assistance in the development of Mindanao.

In her policy speech this morning before the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (FOCAP) at the Mandarin Hotel in Makati City, the President said for the fiscal year 2002, the USAID extended some P4 billion in assistance to the Philippines and more than half of this went to economic and social projects in Mindanao.

“This assistance to Mindanao is more than double what the USAID has provided for the island last year,” the President said.

She said that the USAID’s growth with equity program in Mindanao has helped strengthen the competitiveness of Mindanao’s fishery, fruit and vegetable industries.

The President said that the agency's livelihood enhancement and peace program, or LEAPP, has also helped former combatants of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) in reintegrating into the local economy. This program has already benefited some 13,000 former MNLF fighters, she added.

Aside from helping MNLF returnees in their livelihood projects, the USAID is also engaged in improving the quality of family planning and rural health services in the rural areas in Mindanao.

"Efforts are also being exerted to help local governments in combating illegal fishing and logging," the President said.

She said the Bayanihan assistance program of the US, which runs from August 1 to December this year is aimed at improving the socio-economic conditions of Basilan and Zamboanga.

The US is earmarking $2 million for the construction of hospitals, medical clinics, school buildings, water wells and water treatment facilities in Basilan and Zamboanga, the President said.

GMA still mum on 2004 plans, reveals 8-point work program for next 6 months

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today refused to categorically reveal her plans for 2004, stressing that she would rather concentrate on solving the country's problems and focusing her energies on effective governance.

"You know, I don't spend my time introspecting about 2004. I spend my time looking at the problems, trying to see them in a strategic framework, working out the strategic directions to address them," the President said at the open forum of the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (FOCAP) held this morning at the Mandarin Hotel in Makati City.

The President said she is focusing on an eight-point work program of her administration for the next six months.

She enumerated only five of the eight-point agenda for action which, she said, would be the topic of another policy speech she will deliver this coming Friday.

In reply to a persistent query on whether she would run in the presidential polls in 2004, the President said that as a politician, she is a fatalist. "I think that the presidency is made in heaven, and that's up to God," she said.

When pressed on when she would announce her plans for 2004, the President replied: "I don't know. The Lord's timing is always perfect. So, I'll leave that up to Him," she said.

The President then enumerated her agenda for action.

First in the work program, the President said, is to push for small and medium enterprises (SMEs) to strengthen the domestic market and to wean the country from too much dependence on the export market.

The second, the President said, is to further boost the housing industry because of its multiplier effect and getting the private sector to go invest more in housing by removing bottlenecks.

The third is how to reduce cargo rates from Mindanao to Luzon, with the Development Bank of the Philippines putting together a P30-billion master plan for this purpose, the President said.

She said that the fourth item in the work program is to develop Makati City into an urban tourism destination for tourists, especially working Japanese single women who like to go shopping.

The fifth is to decongest Metro Manila traffic by getting off the ground such projects as the North Rail Project in Central Luzon as well as the rail system in going to CALABARZON (Calamba, Laguna, Batangas, Rizal and Quezon) growth area and to the Port of Batangas.

Although she kept mum on her 2004 plans, the President, however, thanked politicians endorsing her for 2004, referring to statement of support aired Tuesday by leaders of the Liberal Party.

“But on my part, as President of the Philippines, my primary focus is on governance and that is why I’ve given myself an eight-point work program for the next six months,” the Presidents said.

GMA determined to bring RP-U.S. ties to new era of stronger, more equitable partnership

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today restated the administration’s eight-point foreign policy, emphasizing her determination to push Philippine-US relationships forward to a new era of a stronger and more equitable partnership.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting with the officers and members of the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines at the Mandarin Hotel in Makati, the President said the drive to bring Philippine-American relationships to a higher level derives “its main promise in greater security and stability for our nation, for the region and the world.”

“We are living in trying times,” the President said. “Close partnership and alliances and imperative for peace, security and democracy. This is the strategy of survival.”

“This strategy,” she added, “stands on the determination to shape our relations with America in consonance with existing treaties, with our shared goals but, most of all, with our Filipino interests.”

The President said the current Philippine-US alliance is a moral partnership which is governed by the common belief in strong democratic institutions that will create peace and freedom for people everywhere.

She said the administration’s efforts at modern democratic governance have been undermined by a climate of incessant conflict and the determination to bring progress to the nation has been tested by fanatical armed groups who find every ideological excuse to block development.

“These (fanatical groups) include the terrorists in the radical left who have lost all moral force to lead any revolution for the poor,” she added.

“The truth and reality is that we are at war,” the President said. “We are at war with an enemy that is as tenacious and incorrigible as ever in its evil designs.”

The President, in redefining Philippine foreign policy, said that one reality is that more and more policy decisions have really been made in the context of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

“Thus, soon after (the) September 11 (terrorist attacks in the US) last year, we initiated a trilateral agreement with Indonesia and Malaysia to check terrorist incursion in our common seas. Thailand has agreed to join this agreement,” the President said.

The second reality, the President added, is that the international Islamic community will continue to be important for the Philippines. “We continue to pursue broad interfaith dialogues to promote Christian and Muslim solidarity,” the President said.

Third, the coming years will see the growing importance of multilateral and inter-regional organizations to promote common interests such as the strengthening of the United Nations.

“Thus, the Philippines supports the case brought by the United States against Iraq before the UN Security Council,” the President said.

Fourth, the President said that the defense of the nation’s sovereignty and the protection of its environment and natural resources can be carried out only to the extent it asserts its right over maritime territory and gets others to respect those rights.

Saying this is unrelated to the war against terrorism, the President expressed gladness that the case against the Chinese fishermen has come to a satisfactory conclusion.

Fifth, the President said, the country’s economic growth will continue to heavily involve direct foreign investments, giving a strategic importance to the country’s relations with Europe which is now a major investor.

Sixth, the President said that a country like the Philippines can benefit most quickly from international tourism. “Thus, we deplore that our bid to attract investments and tourism have been sabotaged by those who relish the notoriety brought about by barbaric acts such as hostage taking, political assassination, destruction of property and senseless murder,” she said.

Seventh, the President emphasized, overseas Filipinos will continue to play a critical role in the country’s economic and social stability.

“Thus, even in the shadow of conflict in Iraq, it is our duty to all Filipinos in the Middle East to prepare for any contingency and be able to move them to safer ground at a moment’s notice,” the President said.

And the last but of utmost importance, the President said China, Japan and the United States and their relationships will be the determining influence in the security situation and economic evolution of East Asia.

The President said the Philippines’ moral partnership with America extends beyond military cooperation. “It is a partnership that sustains the most important battles in our own land – the battles against poverty, ignorance, disease and social injustice,” the President said.

GMA cites importance of Islamic countries in Philippine foreign policy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the importance of the Islamic countries to the Philippines, saying it is included among the eight realities that she must deal with in formulating the nation’s foreign policy.

Answering questions from members of the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (FOCAP) during a luncheon meeting at the Mandarin Hotel in Makati, the President said the Islamic world is a very important host to Filipino workers.

She said the Islamic world is not only an important source of energy, but more than anything, it has been very helpful to the Philippines in its peace process in the South.

“That’s why even as we seek to find our place in the global alliance against terrorism, part of the 14 things I enumerated in the FOCAP last year in the fight against terrorism, is to broaden our interfaith dialogue,” the President said.

Instead of a religious war which is the aim of the terrorists, the President said the opportunity must be used to deepen religious understanding.

“So we have continued our dialogue with the Islamic countries, and I am very gratified that they continue to be very supportive of our efforts in Southern Philippines, as well as in being a good host to our Filipino workers,” the President said.

The President, in her eight point foreign policy, said that the international Islamic community will continue to be important for the Philippines.

“Thus, we continue to pursue broad interfaith dialogues to promote Christian and Muslim solidarity,” she said.

This is also among the programs of the Christian Democratic International of which Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. is a vice president, the President said.

GMA cites EPPI for expansion, providing jobs to people

LIPA CITY, Batangas – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today thanked the investors of Epson Precision Philippines Inc. (EPPI) for their continued expansion of operations in the country and for providing stable jobs to almost 5,000 workers.

In her brief remarks during a tour of the EPPI plant at the Lima Technology Center in Lipa, Batangas, the President cited the computer printer manufacturing firm for its contribution to the Philippine economy and the administration’s efforts to provide jobs for Filipinos.

“Thank you for bringing continuous employment in our country and we are looking forward to the possible expansion of your company in the Philippines,” the President told EPPI executives led by Motoharu Komatsu, president of Epson Philippines, and Hideaki Yasukawa, chairman of Seiko Epson.

Despite heavy rains, the President motored to the EPPI plant here from her luncheon meeting with the Foreign Correspondent Association of the Philippines in Makati City.

Upon her arrival here, the President received a warm welcome from the officials and employees of EPPI.

The President, accompanied by Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II and Lipa City Mayor Vilma Santos, then made an inspection tour of the plant.

During the tour, the President was given an update by Komatsu on EPPI’s expansion since the company started producing mini-printers in its first plant in Cabuyao, Laguna on September 1995.

Komatsu informed the President that the EPPI plant in Lipa is the largest in Asia.

He also told the President that EPPI in Lipa is the main provider and producer of terminal printers and other printer parts that are exported to the United States, East Asia and other countries.

Among the local officials who welcomed the President here were Mayor Santos, Rep. Oscar Gozos of the Fourth District of Batangas, Chairperson Lilia B. de Lima of the Philippine Economic Zone Authority, and Chief Superintendent Enrique Galang, regional director of the Philippine National Police in Southern Tagalog.

EPPI was incorporated in December 1994 as a subsidiary company which is 100 percent owned by Seiko Epson Corporation of Japan.

In September 1995, EPPI set up a plant in Cabuyao for the manufacture of mini-printers.

In September 1998, the Lipa plant was established in Batangas.

International Board of Advisors hails GMA's efforts in tackling economic issues

The International Board of Advisors to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, composed of global business and political leaders, has recognized that the Macapagal-Arroyo is working diligently to tackle some "very significant" challenges to the Philippine economy amidst serious developments in the global economic arena.

In a statement issued after a two-day series of off-the-record meetings with the President, members of her Cabinet, and selected private sector representatives, the Advisors counseled the President "to do whatever is possible to work with Congress to speed up the process of reform."

During the meeting, the Board also recognized the progress that the government has made in promoting economic growth but said it was critical for the reform program to be pursued with vigor if the Philippines is to meet its important economic targets.

"The Advisors believe that volatility in the global economy will continue to present challenges to developing economy such as the Philippines and that the government must continue its program of reform and liberalization as well as taking responsible steps towards promoting Philippine integration into the global economic system," the statement said.

The Advisors said that they believe the Macapagal-Arroyo administration has made some significant accomplishments, such as creating a policy environment that is generating real economic growth.

The Advisors participated in a series of discussions on the state of the Philippine economy, its prospects and the government's ongoing efforts to promote economic development, generate increased level of foreign investment, and enhance the international competitiveness of Philippine goods and services.

Commenting on the meetings, the President said: "The Advisors, with their extensive experience leading major international corporations, organizations, and governments and related agencies, offer important perspectives to those of us charged with developing and implementing economic policies and programs to generate increased levels of trade and investments and to strengthen our country's financial position. They are also very influential messengers of goodwill for us in the global business community aside from major investors themselves in the country."

The meeting was preceded by an Experts Group Roundtable on the challenges and opportunities presented by China's accession to the World Trade Organization and its emergence as a global economic power.

The roundtable, organized by the Carlos P. Romulo Foundation, was participated in by leading academics from China, Taiwan, Australia, Indonesia, Brunei and the Philippines.

The experts concluded that the positive and adverse impact of China's opening up on the economies in ASEAN would depend on how individual economies structure themselves to be competitive. The emerging trend seems to be a regional production network with China as the hub and ASEAN economies occupying niches in this production value chain.

The Board of Advisors was also briefed on the conclusion of the roundtable, on the Philippines' economic performance and progress in implementing its development plan.

Private sector presentations on the information and technology (IT) sector, port operations and the Subic-Clark Alliance Development (SCAD) were also given to show areas where the Philippines has achieved global competitiveness.

Representing the government in these discussions were Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II, Presidential Adviser on Job Creation Luis Lorenzo and Tourism Secretary Richard J. Gordon.

Private sector participants included Rizalino S. ### GMA orders Health Dep't to check sale of iodized salt in markets

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, expressing concern for the health of the Filipinos, today instructed the Department of Health (DOH) to go to market starting Monday next week to make sure that retailers sell only iodized salt as part of its "Patak sa Asin" nationwide campaign.

The President also urged the health department to coordinate with local government units to ensure the success of this campaign.

Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit and Marikina Mayor Marides Fernando will lead the local government officials in making the rounds of markets in Marikina next week and post stickers of approval on the stalls of retailers who sell iodized salt and issue warning notices to those who vend non-iodized salt.

Health department and local officials will seize non-iodized salt being sold in stores and stalls and replace these with iodine-treated merchandise.

"We should be vigilant if we want to see results," Dayrit said.

Dayrit said the health department is bent on making all vendors sell only iodized salt.

The Asin Law, or Republic Act 8172 passed in 1995, directs all salt manufacturers, including producers, importers, traders and retailers, to iodize salt both for human and animal consumption and for food processors and food establishments to use only iodized salt.

Health authorities said that vendors all over the country caught selling non-iodized salt will be given warning notices on the first and second offenses. For a third offense, they will be fined not less than P1,000.

According to health officials, the department will be conducting weekly market inspections to monitor the sale of iodized salt.

Health and local officials will be checking on some 2,225 public, private and satellite (talipapa) markets nationwide starting Monday, armed with 41,077 salt test kits.

The health chief stressed that the lack of iodine can affect the intelligence quotient (IQ) of an individual. A person loses 10 to 15 IQ points if he/she lacks iodine in his/her system.

“Iodine works like the telecommunication system inside the brain. The system is more effective the more cell sites there are. In the same manner, having enough iodine can be compared to having many cell sites in the country so that getting your message across is very easy even if we are separated by islands. The iodine makes our brain function efficiently by interconnecting the different parts of our nervous system. That’s why we have children who are quick and fast learners. On the other hand, the lack of it may explain why there are children who are slow learners,” Dayrit explained.

Experts said that the latest National Nutrition Survey of the Food and Nutrition Research Institute revealed that 35.8 percent of 6-12 years old children suffer from moderate to severe iodine deficiency disorder.

Health officials said that “although there is a high awareness of iodized salt (87%), the utilization rate is still low (23.8%).” They attributed this development to the fact that non-iodized salt is widely available in markets and iodized salt is slightly more costly.

GMA lauds law enforcement agencies for burning of seized illegal drugs

CALAMBA, Laguna — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the country’s law enforcement agencies, particularly the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA), for institutionalizing the destruction of seized and surrendered illegal drugs.

True to her vow to step up the campaign against drug trade, the President led here the public burning of seized methamphetamine hydrochloride, more popularly known as shabu, and marijuana.

In her second State of the Nation Address (SONA) delivered last July, the President elevated the drug menace in the country to the level of a national security problem.

“In this war with the drug trade, there will be no compromise, no quarter, nor fear or favor,” the President said in her SONA.

The event, held at the compound of the Integrated Waste Management in Barangay Puting Lupa, was attended by members of the Dangerous Drugs Board, Congressional Oversight Committee on Dangerous Drugs co-chairmen Sen. Robert Barbers and Cebu City Rep. Antonio Cuenco, Bukidnon Rep. Juan Miguel Zubiri, Chief State Prosecutor Jovencito Zuno, and other local officials.

Destroyed under the supervision of the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency (PDEA) were 198.60 kilograms of shabu and 111 kilograms of marijuana.

The drugs were under the custody of the Philippine National Police Crime Laboratory and the National Bureau of Investigation. The courts have given permission for the destruction of the dangerous drugs.

According to the PDEA, the ceremony is the first-ever burning of seized, confiscated or surrendered dangerous drugs under the new law, Republic Act 9165, otherwise known as the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act of 2002.

Of the shabu burned, 191.94 kilograms came from the PNP Crime Laboratory, while 6.65 kilograms originated from the NBI while 101 kilograms of the marijuana destroyed came from the PNP Crime Laboratory and 10.14 kilograms came from NBI.

In a statement, the PDEA said the seized drugs covered a total of 251 cases filed in court involving shabu, 94 from the PNP and 157 from the NBI, while a total of 16 cases involving marijuana, 7 from the PNP and 9 from the NBI.

According to the Comprehensive Dangerous Drugs Act, the PDEA shall take charge and have custody of all dangerous drugs, plant sources of dangerous drugs, controlled precursors and essential chemicals, as well as instruments/paraphernalia and laboratory equipment confiscated, seized or surrendered for proper disposition.

GMA names SolGen Marcelo as new Ombudsman

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today appointed Solicitor General Simeon V. Marcelo as the new Ombudsman, replacing Ombudsman Aniano Desierto, who retired from office.

Marcelo's appointment was announced by Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye in his regular press conference this afternoon in Malacañang.

Marcelo, 49, was appointed by President Macapagal-Arroyo as Solicitor General in February 2001.

Marcelo, who earned his Bachelor of Laws degree from the University of the Philippines, has been a consistent scholar and a dean's lister during his student days. He placed fifth in the 1979 bar examinations.

Marcelo was a partner in the Carpio, Villaraza and Cruz Law Offices from 1982 to January 2001. He was also an associate of the ACCRA Law Offices from 1980 to 1982. In 1974, Marcelo was a professorial lecturer at the Nueva Ecija Doctors Colleges.

Other positions he held included the following: chairman of the National Committee on Legal Aid of the Integrated Bar of the Philippines, from 1997 to 1999; director for Legal Aid Planning of the Integrated Bar of the Philippines from 1999 to 2001; corporate secretary of the International Chamber of Commerce-Philippines, Inc., from 1999 to January 2001; and director and chairman of the committee on constitution and by-laws of the Philippine Bar Association, from 1998 to January 2001.

GMA orders Roxas to be more vigilant in monitoring prices of basic items

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered Secretary Manuel Roxas II of the Department of Trade and Industry to be more vigilant in the monitoring of prices of basic commodities so that the traders will not take advantage of the current situation.

Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said the President is really concerned with the prices of basic goods and that is the reason why she directed Roxas not to concentrate on the price ceiling but to tightly watch the basic commodities.

“Maybe not price ceiling but what the President wants is close monitoring of prices. That’s why the directive or the instruction for Secretary Roxas is to be more visible and more active in the actual price monitoring,” Bunye said in his regular news briefing this afternoon.

Bunye said the purpose of the President’s instruction to Roxas is to keep traders from taking advantage of the increase in the price of oil products.

Malacañang was reacting to reports that the price of pan de sal would increase by 50 percent, to P1.50 per 30 grams from the current P1, according to the Philippine Federation of Bakers (PFB).

PFB vice president for Luzon Luisito Chavez earlier reported that the continued rise in the price of wheat in the world market due to the shortfall in United States, Canada and Australia, will force bakers to raise the prices of various bread products, including pan de sal.

But Roxas has assured the public that the price of pan de sal and other bread products will not increase after getting an assurance from the Philippine Flour Millers Association (PFMA) that importers are still able to buy flour at lower prices.

Meanwhile, the National Price Coordinating Council (NPCC) explained that while the prices of noodles and flour have gone up, the prices of other basic goods and commodities such as canned sardines, coffee and detergent bars have remained stable despite the recent fuel price increases.

The NPCC assured consumers that the government would closely monitor price movements and supplies of agricultural products, manufactured food items, medicines and petroleum-based products.

Toyota informs GMA of plans to expand operations in RP

STA. ROSA, Laguna – Toyota Motor Corporation (TMC) executives informed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today of its plans to further expand operations in the Philippines.

The President thanked the Toyota executives for their continued confidence in the administration and their trust in the skills of the Filipino workers who are benefiting from the planned expansion.

“Maraming salamat sa magagaling na Pilipinong manggagawa dito sa Toyota (I am grateful to all of the very hardworking Filipino workers here in Toyota),” the President said amid cheers and applause from the workers at the Toyota plant here.

The TMC executives later handed over to the Office of the President its newest automobile which runs on a “hybrid system,” an environment-friendly technology developed by the motor company.

TMC president Fujio Cho, in turning over to the President the key to a (light aqua metallic opal) Toyota Prius, explained that the sedan runs on both electric and gasoline power.

Aside from Cho, among those who welcomed the President here were Toyota Philippines Chairman George Ty, Toyota Japan Managing Director Akio Toyoda and Auto Parts Philippines president Nobuharu Tabata.

The car, valued at $20,000 (inclusive of taxes), is at present available only in the Japan, United States, and some parts of Europe.

According to Cho, TMC have been donating “hybrid system” cars to heads of states in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and other regions to show Toyota’s dedication to make the industry more environment-friendly.

Under the arrangement, the OP will utilize the donated Toyota Prius.

The Toyota Hybrid system uses a battery to store energy that is ordinarily wasted while driving or stopping and then applies the stored energy to supplement engine power for starting and accelerating.

As result, the battery recharging cycle is entirely self-contained so you don't have to plug anything in.

According to TMC, some Prius users report they can drive for long periods without the gasoline engine turning on. TMC also said the "hybrid system" technology works best in urban stop-and-go driving situations.

The Toyota Prius utilizes an average of 29 kilometers per liter of gasoline.

GMA urges Sectoral Representative Council to campaign among people who are now tired of peace talks with reds

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the Sectoral Representatives Council (SRC), who presented her this afternoon with a resolution in support of peace negotiations, to go out and campaign among the 95 percent of the citizenry who are now tired of formal peace talks with the communist rebels.

In an en banc meeting with the members of the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) in Malacañang, the President said: "You have to build up a peace constituency because there is only five percent peace constituency right now."

The President, at the same time, stressed that "we want peace talks, we want the NPA (New People's Army) to lay down their arms" but raised doubts about the motive of the communists in holding negotiations.

"Now they want peace talks but I doubt if they are ready to lay down their arms," the President said. "They want to use it for propaganda," she added.

During her luncheon meeting yesterday with the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines, the President said the government panel has been conducting peace talks through back channels in the absence of formal negotiations, which were suspended in June last year.

The President, however, said that recent developments such as the NPA raids on government installations and private facilities have changed the policy on the insurgents.

The policy is that we are not at the negotiating table right now, she said.

The NAPC sectoral resolution called on the government and the Communist Party of the Philippines, as well as the Moro Islamic Liberation Front, to return to formal peace talks and pursue them, building on the gains already achieved in previous peace talks and agreements.

"We urge all parties to integrate the social reform agenda of the basic sectors into the peace agreement and thus address the concerns long raised in the National Unification Commission processes," the resolution said.

GMA lauds Philippine team for admirable performance at ASEAN Skills Competition

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today extolled the Philippine team that went to the recently concluded fourth ASEAN Skills Competition in Jakarta, Indonesia for bagging three gold medals, three bronze medals and nine diplomas of excellence in 10 trade areas of competition.

The President personally congratulated the members along with Technical Education and Skills Development Authority Director General Dante V. Liban at the EDSA Shangri-La Hotel, where the President delivered a speech before the 28th Annual Conference of the Financial Executives Institute of the Philippines (FINEX).

The President also conferred cash gifts to the participants in the ASEAN Skills Competition for their admirable performance.

With technical guidance from four officials and 12 experts, the 24 young Filipino competitors engaged in skills encounters with counterparts from Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, Brunei and Vietnam. The Philippines' best vied in 12 trade areas opened for competition.

Jerrick Raul, Jeffrey Sulit and Edilbert Mendez bagged gold medals in the Computer-Aided Design Drafting, Information Technology and Cabinet-Making events respectively. Raul garnered a score of 550 points, earning him the Best in Country award.

Bronze medals were won by Ramil Tagaytayan (Plumbing), Elgie Paz (Cabinet Making), and Anabelle Flores (Ladies' Dressmaking).

Those who finished with Diplomas of Excellence in various trade areas were Troadio Paman, Richard Bestre, Lito Desacula, Michael Malazarte, Alfie Abanes, Lito Auro, Eugene de la Cruz, Arman Dabbay and Janice Exim.

In brief remarks, the President enjoined TESDA to likewise conduct training for call centers and care-giving as the two fields are among the most suitable areas of concentration of Filipino workers.

The President noted that the technology of call centers is getting very modern, as video will soon be attached to the audio calls in the near future.

The President also noted that Filipino workers could serve as care-givers to the aging population of some countries.

The President noted that technical skills are an advantage as she said that Toyota Motor Corp. plans to expand further its transmission plant in the country. She noted that 95 percent of the plant caters to exports and that it will soon export transmissions to Japan.

According to Liban, the Philippines fared well in the competition, especially in information technology, an area in which the President has continuously showed concern.

“This good showing is an indication of the responsiveness of technical education and skills development to the priorities identified by the administration,” Liban said.

The Philippine participation in the ASEAN Skills Competition was made possible through the concerted effort of the TESDA, private institutions, regional and provincial skills competition bodies and the local government units with support from the Office of the President and the Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corporation.

GMA names Vistan special assistant for private sector housing

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she has asked banker Deogracias Vistan to be her special assistant for private sector housing.

The President made the announcement during her remarks at the 28th Annual Conference of the Financial Executives Institute of the Philippines (FINEX) at the EDSA Shangri-La Hotel in Mandaluyong.

“I have asked Sonny Vistan to be special assistant for private sector housing,” the President said.

She said the primary objective of Vistan is to put up a package whereby he will make available the inventory of government-owned land, which shall serve as the government’s equity for housing for government employees.

The President said these lands would be made available to the private developers.

“With government land being the equity, that should make housing truly affordable,” the President said.

The appointment of Vistan follows the announcement of the President that she will jumpstart the housing sector as part of her eight-point economic agenda for the next six months.

The former president of Equitable-PCI Bank, Vistan holds an MBA degree from the Wharton Graduate School of Business in Philadelphia.

Keeping fares down, stimulating SMEs, jumpstarting housing top GMA’s 8-point work agenda for 6 months

To keep transportation fares down, reduce transport costs from Mindanao to Luzon, stimulate small and medium enterprises, jumpstart housing, stimulate private investments in agriculture, continue building infrastructure to decongest Metro Manila, make the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) contribute to the fiscal resources, and make Makati City a specific tourist destination.

These make up the eight-point work program of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for the next six months.

In her speech before the 28th Annual Conference of the Financial Executives Institute of the Philippines (FINEX) at the EDSA Shangri-La Hotel in Mandaluyong, the President said a key point of focus of her work agenda is the upward trend in oil prices.

“I am determined to undertake all reasonable means to keep transport costs down,” the President said.

The President said she has instructed Transportation Secretary Leandro Mendoza to explore ways and means to stem the upward pressure on fares.

She said that on her orders, Metro Rail Transit (MRT) 3 and Light Rail Transit (LRT) 1 and the Philippine National Railways are not going to increase ticket charges.

She said that while imported crude oil now accounts for a mere 11.75 percent of the power generation requirements, the country's transportation sector continues to be heavily dependent on oil imports.

Thus, the social impact of transport costs cannot be overstated, she said.

She said Mendoza is in constant dialogue with various groups in the transport sector to explore other forms of reasonable relief from rising costs other than just raising transport fares.

The President also assured that the supply of oil and oil products are more than sufficient and adequate. "We have a highly diversified source of oil and its products. Thus, any possibility of a supply shortage is negligible," she said.

She noted that upon her instructions, Energy Secretary Vicente S. Perez is monitoring even more closely the inventory levels of oil and petroleum products in the country.

"Our country inventory remains within the normal range, within 50 to 65 days' supply which in itself is sufficient to see the country through any of the foreseeable scenarios in the case of a war against Iraq," the President said.

On efforts to reduce cargo rates in the country, she said the government is promoting competition at the ports, addressing reported overcharging in cargo handling tariff, reducing the government share of port fees from 40 percent to 10 percent and rationalizing the bidding terms of reference for cargo handling services.

The President said she has instructed Development Bank of the Philippines president Vitaliano Nañagas to go full blast and concentrate on the development of progressive, long-haul shipping to constitute the country's national backbone in the transport of bulk products and the development of the roll-on, roll-off ferry and road network to link Mindanao to the growth centers of the country.

The DBP has put in place a P30-billion credit facility to fund measures to bring down cargo rates.

On moves to jumpstart housing, the President said her administration is giving banks policy signal incentives to fund developers on their own and get bureaucracy out of their way.

The President revealed that she has asked Deogracias Vistan, former president of Equitable-PCI Bank, to be a special assistant for private sector housing, whose primary job is to make available the inventory of land owned by the government institutions, which shall serve as the government's equity for housing for government employees.

For infrastructure to unclog the streets of Metro Manila, the President said her efforts will focus on beginning construction on the commuter links between Metro Manila, the Northrail system and the toll road all the way to Batangas port in the south.

Within Metro Manila, she said she is monitoring the smooth start of the final linkage of MRT with LRT.

She said has also ordered Metro Manila Development Authority Chairman Bayani Fernando to sit down with Public Works and Highways Secretary Simeon Datumanong and Philippine Amusement and Gaming Corp. president Ephraim Genuino to review the DPWH's infrastructure program for Metro Manila. "The mission is to ensure that the program makes sense and will produce visible results quickly," she said.

The President said she has also instructed Presidential Legal Counsel Avelino Cruz to work with PCGG Chair Haydee Yorac to expedite the release of the $600-million Marcos' deposits with the Philippine National Bank and liquefy the coconut levy's remaining 27 percent of the San Miguel Corp., which is sold through bidding, to generate substantial dollars and funding for our system.

On making Makati City a primary tourist destination, the President cited a recent study by a Hawaii-based expert who discovered that Makati offers more than what Honolulu does.

“Makati, with its compact, easy to secure location, world-class malls, entertainment facilities and cheap shopping, can be promoted as an attractive destination perhaps with a side trip to Boracay or similar resorts as part of the package,” the President said.

The President also ordered Presidential Adviser on Agricultural Modernization Angelito Sarmiento and Presidential Advisee on Jobs Creation Luis Lorenzo to work with the Departments of Agriculture and Agrarian Reform to remove the biggest obstacle to the free flow of private sector investments into agriculture, which is the rigidity of second round land transfer under the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program.

During a visit to the General Milling Corp. (GMC) plant in Pasig, the President met with members of the flour milling industry and got their assurance of a steady supply of flour and wheat in the country.

The President said the Philippine Association of Flour Millers and the Chamber of Flour Millers Association also assured her that they would not raise the prices of the commodity.

She also said the Philippine Federation of Bakers Association, which has some 10,000 members nationwide, also made their pledge to keep the price and size of pan de sal unchanged as part of their commitment to the consumer. October, incidentally, is consumer Welfare Month.

The President also said the Philippine Flour Miller Merchants Association assured her that they do not foresee a shortage of flour and wheat in the market.

"Sabi kasi sa media, P1.50 na ang pan de sal. Hindi ito totoo, piso pa rin ang pan de sal sa karaniwang sukat (According to the media, pan de sal now costs P1.50 each. This is not true, It remains at P1 each at its regular size)," the President said after the meeting.

The President said that although the price of flour in the domestic market slightly increased last July and the price of wheat increased following last year's dry spell in North America and floods in Europe, this year is a new beginning for the industry.

She said the price of wheat is expected go down following the good harvest this year.

The President noted that if raising prices becomes inevitable, the groups promised her that they would first confer with the government.

With the President during the GMC plant visit were Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Trade Undersecretary Adrian Cristobal, Leonardo Figueroa and Luisito Chavez of the Philippine Federation of Bakers Association, Alfonso Uy, Carmelo Sison and Amado Guranggo of the Chamber of Philippine Flour Millers, GMC Executive Director Romeo Sangalang, GMC Corporate Affairs Director Ric Pinca and GMC Director Jojo Dumlaog.

The Philippines has 12 flour milling companies, which import 2 million metric tons of wheat a year.

GMA congratulates police for arrest of red vigilante kidnap-slay gangman, woman, man in another kidnap-slay

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the police for the arrest of a member of the notorious Red Vigilante Gang of kidnapers, killers and robbers, and two other suspects in a kidnapping with murder case.

The President dropped by the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group office in Camp Crame, headquarters of the Philippine National Police, to personally congratulate the officers and men responsible for the latest successful strikes against notorious groups and individuals.

Presented to the President during her brief visit to the office of the CIDG head, Chief Superintendent Eduardo Matillano, were

Lorenzo Hidalgo, a member of the Red Vigilante Group believed involved in kidnapping, murder and robbery cases for the past three years;

Josephine Beredo and Sotero Gamab alias "Turing" who were linked to the kidnapping and murder of Ronaldo Taming, whose body was recovered two days after he went missing.

According to the police, Hidalgo was arrested through the strength of two warrants of arrest for kidnapping with murder issued by Judge Teodulo Ronquillo of the Municipal Trial Court of San Miguel, Bulacan. No bail was set for Hidalgo.

According to Deputy Director Police Supt. Charlemagne Alejandrino, the Red Vigilante Group has been linked to the kidnapping for ransom of father and son Julio and Julius Alejo of Bongabon, Nueva Ecija in October last year; the murder of Talavera ex-barangay captain Romy Ferrer and the kidnapping and murder of Michael Nuera, Florentino Pablo, Ferardo Pablo, Geronimo Andres, Dindo Fernando and Manolo Santos of Gapan, Nueva Ecija whose bodies were found dumped in San Miguel, Bulacan.

The group was also responsible for the kidnapping of a Pangasinan businessman and the abduction and murder of two Muñoz, Nueva Ecija residents.

In the case of the two other suspects, the police said Taming's brother Rogelio sought police assistance last October 8 after Beredo came to his Makati City residence asking for P20, 000 in exchange for the safe return of his brother.

Police Supt. Paterno Orduna, who worked on the case, immediately tasked operatives to follow up the lead and coordinate their movement with the Police Anti-Crime Emergency Response (PACER) and the Batangas Provincial Police Office.

Orduna said Ronaldo, who drives a Starex van was reportedly hired by a certain "Abet (later known as Albert Oliman) last October 7 for a trip to Batangas City. Since then, nothing was heard of him until Beredo went to the Taming residence in Makati demanding the amount.

In her statement, Beredo said Abet and Ronald were to meet Turing in Batangas City. She claimed that Abet is a drug courier who purposely took the trip to Batangas to deliver P20,000 worth of shabu to Turing.

Beredo further said that during the delivery by Abet and Ronald, Turing was not satisfied with the quality of the stuff delivered. Turing then demanded that they return his money right away.

Abet who is now the object of a CIDG manhunt, asked that he be allowed to go back to Makati to produce the amount to be reimbursed, leaving behind Ronald, but Turing fumingly said that he'd better go fast "or else Ronald would not be seen alive again.

Beredo's account led operatives and the Batangas police to the El Grande Hotel in Lipa City where Gamab was arrested October 9. That same day, the body of Ronald was found inside his Starex in Barangay Tinga in Batangas City.

GMA reiterates call for energy conservation as Middle East tension grows

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the nation to conserve energy as tension in the Middle East continued to grow.

In her remarks during a visit to a flour mill in Pasig City, the President said that the people should use oil and oil products wisely.

"Magtipid sa paggamit sa mga produkto ng gasoline (Let us use oil products wisely). Let us try to plan our trips and go for car pools," the President said.

Besides, the President said, carpooling "decongest our streets and reduce air pollution."

The President said one of her important priorities is to prevent a rise in transport fare prices.

She said she continues to confer with members of the transport industry to thwart fare increases.

The President assured that the Metro Rail Transit, the Light Rail Transit and the Philippine National Railways would not raise their transportation fees.

The Chief Executive also assured that she has asked local government executives to put off any planned increases for terminal and parking fees because these are normally passed on to the passengers.

She also said that dialogues continue among the Department of Trade and Industry, the National Price Coordinating Council and manufacturers of prime commodities to ensure a steady supply of products as well as minimize increases in prices.

"Habang pinapanatili nating matatag ang mga presyo, gagawin din nating lahat ang nararapat upang pigilan ang sinuman nagsasamantala sa mga pangamba ng ating kababayan (while we are ensuring steady prices, we will also do all to prevent those who might take advantage of the fears of our countrymen)," she said.

"Nauunawaan ko ang pagkabahala ng publiko at hindi dapat palalain ng hoarding or profiteering (We understand the worries of the public and we should not allow hoarding or profiteering)," she added.

GMA stresses need for strong republic to reduce poverty nationwide

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night stressed the need for a strong republic to reduce the poverty incidence not only in Quezon City but the whole of the Philippines.

Speaking at the first-ever Gawad Parangal sponsored by the city government of Quezon City at the Celebrity Sports Complex, the President said a strong republic needs strong institutions that have an effective governance, from the local government to the bureaucracy.

The President also expressed the belief that the relationship between the Presidency and Congress should not be adversarial and that horse trading should not be used to pass the needed laws of the present administrations.

The President led in presenting medals and special citations to a former President, a national scientist, a former education minister, a chess grandmaster and a former chief of staff-turned defense secretary who were among those chosen as Quezon City's outstanding citizens. The presentation of awards was the culminating activity for the celebration of Quezon City's 63rd foundation anniversary Friday night.

Leading the list of awardees was former President Corazon Aquino, who was unfortunately not around to accept her award. The former President was cited for her contribution in the area of government service.

Mrs. Aquino, who is residing at 55 Times Street, was cited by President Macapagal-Arroyo as having done a lot for the country up to the present.

The President said Mrs. Aquino is still giving her advice, specially on how to take care of the overseas Filipino workers in the Middle East, in case war breaks out

The President, assisted by Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte, Jr. and Vice Mayor Herbert Bautista, presented the Gawad Parangal to nine other awardees namely: Rosa Rosal for social work, Gina Lopez, community service; Justice Milagros German, judiciary; Dr. Fe del Mundo, medicine; Dr. Onofre Corpuz, education; Eugene Torre, sports; Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, military service; Mel Tiangco, mass media; and Dr. Reynaldo Punongbayan, science and technology.

The awardees, all Quezon City residents, were cited for their invaluable contribution in the task of enhancing not only the city's growth and development but in propelling the nation to progress,

The President also presented a special citation to business tycoon Henry Sy, who has been named as Quezon City's biggest employer and taxpayer, in recognition of his contribution to the economic growth of the city.

The search for QC's outstanding citizens was conducted by the committee on foundation day celebration chaired by City Treasurer Victor Endriga. Dr. Ligaya Perez, a noted writer, was named chairman of the awards committee.

Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo

Our position on this issue has already been made clear. While we are hoping for a peaceful resolution, we are preparing for any contingency affecting our nationals in the Middle East."

I just had a dialogue with bakers, flour millers and dealers of wheat this morning. I am anxious about the rising price of pan de sal. They assured me the problem is not as bad as it seems.

Flour prices have actually gone up in the local market since July this year, when the supply of wheat in the world market started to go down in the face of increasing world demand for the commodity.

But the Philippine Association of Flour Millers and the Chamber of Flour Millers Association have just assured the government that the supply of flour is more than adequate to meet demand. They further committed that they will not increase the price of flour until the end of October. The Philippine Federation of Baker Association, with its 10,000 members, have also expressed their solidarity with consumers and the government.

The flour millers and the bakers will be in close coordination with the DTI and assess the situation after October.

The dealers of flour represented by the Philippine Flour Merchants Association see no change at all in the cost of their services due to the adequate supply in the market.

We commend these different sectors for rising above their interests for the benefit of consumers.

Also this week the price of LPG went up. I know the house wives are burdened by this development. We are doing all we can to mitigate its impact on the public.

As tension rise in the Middle East, the prices of oil is also rising. My priority is to hold the line on transport prices. We will also have to work hard to keep down the costs of prime commodities and other critical public services.

We are conducting dialogues with representatives of the transport sector, to stave off, as much as possible, the rise in fares. The LRT, MRT and the Philippine National Railways are not going to increase fares. We are also asking the local governments not to increase terminal or parking fees because these costs are passed on to the riding public.

I think it is high time for everybody to get into energy conservation mode. Let us control our use of gasoline products. Let us try to plan our trips and form car pools. This would also decongest our streets and reduce air pollution. We can save more and it's better for our health.

The DTI National Price Coordinating Council is in continuing dialogue with manufacturers of prime commodities, to keep the supply and price stable. I would like to thank our manufacturers for their social conscience and their solidarity with the government and the public.

As we try to stabilize prices, we shall undertake all means to stop those who will exploit the situation to the detriment of the public interest. I can very well understand the worries of our people, which should not be aggravated by hoarding or profiteering.

Nevertheless, I would like to assure everybody that we have more than enough crude oil for our needs. We buy our oil from 15 different countries. The Energy Department is in constant coordination with local oil companies to ensure a steady and stable supply under any adverse circumstance. We will keep a stable inventory of oil products at all times. We will keep alternative sources of oil ready for any contingency.

At the same time, we will not relent in pursuing our most vital development projects. I have set out my priorities for the next six months. Among these are the soft opening of the new NAIA Terminal, the North rail from Metro Manila to Clark that will also run South to Batangas Port, more low cost housing projects, and the promotion of Makati and Roxas Boulevard as prime tourist spots.

I am also focusing on strengthening the domestic economy through the Isang Bayan, Isang Produkto, Isang Milyong Piso program that will shore up our small and medium industries. We are also looking forward to the P30 billion Sustainable Logistics Development program based mainly on Ro-Ro ferry network, to support the agricultural sector and small industries in the countryside. This will also reduce transport costs from Mindanao to Manila and further stabilize food and commodity prices.

Together, we can overcome the problems we are facing. We just have to trust each other and focus on the most important things to do.

GMA to pursue development projects

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today the administration will continue to pursue its development projects, particularly those meant to benefit the poor, even as its gears up contingency measures in the event of a flareup of the Middle East situation.

The President said during her weekly radio address to the nation that there will be no letup in development efforts as she detailed anew her priority concerns and work agenda for the next six months.

“We will remain focused on the growth and expansion of the economy through the ‘Isang Bayan, Isang Produkto, Isang Milyong Piso’ program that will benefit small and medium enterprises,” the President said.

In pushing for SMEs, the President aims to strengthen the domestic market and wean the country away from too much dependence on the export market.

The President also said her priority programs for the next six months include the startup of the North Rail project from Metro Manila to the Clark Economic Zone; the upgrading of the transportation system from the metropolis to the Southern Tagalog growth area and the Batangas port; and the transformation of Makati and Roxas Boulevard into primary tourist destinations.

The President expects to decongest Metro Manila through the rail and road projects and cause the expansion of economic activities in the towns and cities along the routes of these transport systems.

“This will also make housing projects outside Metro Manila, where land is cheaper and the lifestyle more conducive to family, viable,” the President said earlier at the conference of the Financial Executives Institute of the Philippines.

Another priority in her program of action for the next six months is the reduction of the cost of moving cargo from Mindanao to Luzon, the President said.

She said she is banking on the support that will be given by the Development Bank of the Philippines which has made a P30-billion credit facility available for a sustainable logistics development program for a Ro-Ro (roll-on-roll-off) ferry and road network that would link Mindanao to the growth centers of the country.

“This will further stabilize food and commodity prices,” the President said.

Her work agenda also covers moves to keep down transportation costs, jumpstart housing, stimulate private investments in agriculture, and make the Presidential Commission on Good Government contribute to the fiscal resources.

The President, at the same time, reiterated her call on the people to help conserve the nation's energy resources.

She urged the people to plan their trips and form car pools, which would decongest the streets and reduce air pollution.

In the case of basic commodities, the President said the Department of Trade and Industry is holding continuing dialogues with the National Price Coordinating Council and manufacturers to ensure the stability of prices and supply of prime goods.

She thanked the producers and dealers for their social conscience and cooperation with the government and the public in maintaining the level of prices and supply of goods.

At the same time, the President warned hoarders and profiteers that the government will not hesitate to take action against anyone who takes advantage of the current situation brought about by the tension in the Middle East.

GMA convenes security council tomorrow; Bunye, Ople denounce Indon bombings

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo presides tomorrow over a meeting of the National Security Council in Malacañang in the wake of the rising tension in the Middle East, a bomb explosion outside the Philippine Consulate-General in the northern Indonesian city of Manado and two bombing incidents in Bali, also in Indonesia, where more than 400 people were killed and injured.

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye and Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople immediately denounced the Indonesian bombing incidents.

“We denounce these unprovoked attacks on our Consulate in Manado and those two others in Bali that followed and which killed or injured dozens of innocent people, many of them tourists,” Ople said.

The Department of Foreign Affairs, at the same time, informed Malacañang that it has instructed all of its posts overseas, particularly the Philippine Embassy in the Indonesian capital of Jakarta, to take extra precautions against possible terrorist attacks in light of the recent bombing of the Philippine Consulate General in Manado, North Sulawesi province, and the bombing incidents in Kuta and Denpasar, Bali.

Bunye said the Indonesian incidents, the United States Congress’ authorization for President George W. Bush to use military force on Iraq and a review of the contingency measures in case of a Middle East flareup top the National Security Council agenda.

While the Philippines remains committed to the US-led global war on terrorism, the administration remains hopeful of a peaceful and diplomatic solution to the Middle East conflict.

Meanwhile, Ople ordered the Philippine Embassy in Jakarta to closely monitor the developments in Bali and immediately report if any Filipino was injured in the bombing.

Philippine Ambassador to Indonesia Rafael Seguis said no Filipino casualties have so far been reported in Bali, adding that the embassy is still closely monitoring the situation.

On the Manado incident, initial reports from the Philippine Embassy in Jakarta revealed that an unidentified person or persons threw a bomb at 6:45 last night, which landed just outside the gate of the Philippine Consulate General.

Except for some broken windows, there was no major damage and no one was injured.

Manado is a mainly Christian city located in the northeast of the world’s most populous Muslim nation. The city is a jumping-off point for the southern Philippines.

A few hours later, two other bombs went off in Bali. One bomb destroyed Sari, a popular nightclub located at the tourist-oriented Kuta Beach and a second, less powerful one exploded 100 meters away from the premises of the United States Consulate.

Indonesian officials said it was not immediately clear if the attack on the Philippine consulate was related to the blasts in Bali.

The attack was the second on Philippine property in Indonesia in recent years. A car bomb exploded two years ago in front of the Philippine ambassador's residence in Jakarta, killing two people and injuring dozens, including Filipino Ambassador Leonides Caday.

NSC reaffirms gov't support to U.S.-led war on terrorism

The National Security Council (NSC), the highest policy-making body of the government on issues concerning national security, today reaffirmed the administration's support to the United States-led war against global terrorism.

In a press briefing in Malacañang after the NSC meeting, the second held within the month, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez said the NSC also responded positively to the resolution of the US Congress authorizing US President George W. Bush to use force, if necessary, against Iraq.

"The response of the Philippine government is that we feel that this is in accordance with the expected timetable and, therefore, we are maintaining our current policy and its framework as already enunciated on September 17 by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and reiterated and supported and adopted by NSC in its meeting last October 1," Golez said.

The President also convened the NSC last October 1 to primarily discuss contingency measures in the event of an attack by the US on Iraq.

Golez said that the national government "is basically prepared in supporting the fight against terrorism and honoring the process in the UN and is prepared to extend security, humanitarian and political support to the US."

The NSC head, however, refused to answer how the Philippine government would react in case the US unilaterally attacks Iraq, saying "this is highly hypothetical at the moment."

He said if this event happens, there will be another NSC meeting where the consequences of such a development and possible response by the Philippine government would be discussed.

According to Golez, today's meeting of the NSC provided an overview of the security situation in Iraq and an assessment by the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) of the UN Security Council action in light of the US congressional authority for the US to use force in Iraq.

Ambassador Roy Cimatu, head of the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT), briefed the NSC on the situation of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in the Middle East.

Cimatu, who just returned from a visit to several countries in the Middle East, presented which countries are considered to be relatively risky and countries less risky where OFWs could stay put in case the US attacks Iraq.

Energy Secretary Vincent Perez also made a presentation on the conservation and stockpiling of oil in the event that the situation in the Middle East worsens.

In the NSC meeting, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, chief of the Philippine National Police (PNP), reported about the measures undertaken by the PNP to secure vital installations and other possible targets of international terrorism.

Among those who attended the NSC meeting were former President Fidel Ramos, former President Corazon Aquino, Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr.; Senators Ramon Magsaysay, Jr., Loren Legarda, Manuel Villar, Juan Flavio and Tito Sotto; and Congressmen Neptali Gonzales, Jr., Raul Gonzales, Agapito “Butz” Aquino, Gerry Salapuddin, Apolinario Lozada and Prospero Pichay.

From the Executive Department, aside from Golez, Cimatú and Perez, those who attended were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Lauro Baja, Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, Presidential Legislative Liaison Office head Gabriel Claudio, Presidential Management Staff Chief Silvestre Afable, Jr., Presidential Adviser on Regional Development Paul Dominguez, and National Bureau of Investigation Director Reynaldo Wycoco.

GMA orders medical team to help in Bali

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the Department of Health (DOH) to send a Filipino medical team to Bali, Indonesia as part of the Philippines’ humanitarian gesture to a friend-country now in grief and needing assistance.

The President made the announcement during the National Security Council (NSC) meeting this morning to assess the situation after the terrorist bombing attack in Bali on Saturday night and the overall security situation in the Middle East.

Press Secretary and Acting Presidential Spokesman Ignacio “Toting” Bunye said the assistance is being given by the Philippines “as our humanitarian gesture to a friend who is now in need.” Indonesia, like the Philippines, is a founding member of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, which groups them together with Malaysia, Thailand, Singapore, Brunei Darussalam, Vietnam, Cambodia, Myanmar and Laos.

“As to size of the medical team and when the medical team would be leaving (the country), we leave that to the DOH,” Bunye said.

The resort island of Bali was the scene of what Indonesian officials described as the worst act of terror in the country’s history, where more than 400 people were killed and wounded in a bombing attack.

With regards on the bomb explosion near the Philippine Consulate in Manado, on the Indonesian island of Sulawesi, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez said Philippine authorities they are still awaiting the results of the investigation being conducted by Indonesian authorities before making any comment.

“We cannot make any conclusions at the moment on who are the ones responsible or whether this (Manado explosion) is connected to the Bali incident,” Golez said.

NSC adopts ‘selective and voluntary’ relocation plan for OFWs in Middle East

The National Security Council today adopted the “selective and voluntary” relocation plan presented by former AFP Chief retired Gen. Roy Cimatú, head of the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT), to be the guiding principle in the government’s contingency plan in case of war in Iraq.

Cimatú recommended, however, that the Filipinos in Iraq, all 106 of them, should be evacuated in advance, meaning they will be moved out of Iraq before the start of the hostilities.

In a press briefing after the NSC meeting in Malacañang, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez said that Filipinos in other parts of the Middle East who wish to be relocated to safer grounds may do so voluntarily.

“In which case our concern will be to help in their travel requirements by way of assistance in the provision of exit visas, transportation and safety in transit,” Golez explained.

Overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) who will opt to stay will be advised of their situation, and, in cooperation with their employers and the host governments, they will be given all the necessary assistance to ensure their welfare, before, during and after the conflict, Golez added.

In the case of Kuwait, it will be basically “stay put” with some voluntary relocation in the areas that are very close to the Iraq border, Cimatú said.

The approved course of action for OFWs in other Middle East countries such as Israel, Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Turkey, United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Oman, Qatar, Egypt, Iran, Lebanon and Syria is for them to remain in their areas of employment.

According to Cimatú, majority of the 1.4-million Filipino workers in these countries would like to stay put.

Top-level team to get European nations to declare CPP-NPA as terrorists

Government representatives led by Foreign Secretary Blas Ople are visiting the capitals of the European Union to seek the declaration of the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army (CPP-NPA) and its front groups, as a terrorist organization and thereby undeserving of any political or material support or sanctuary.

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, in his regular briefing, said Ople will be joined by Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita, and Presidential Management Staff Head Silvestre Afable Jr. who is in charge of back-channel negotiations.

“It’s clear to them that they’re there to conduct diplomatic initiative to, of course, end the current hostilities and withdraw support from the CPP-NPA and, hopefully, force them to the negotiating table as early as possible,” Bunye said.

According to a Palace statement, the GRP (Government of the Republic of the Philippines) mission is based on the principle that terrorism is a universal threat that must be countered and contained by the collective action from all democratic and freedom-loving nations.

The statement added that such collective action is considered one of the effective means by which terrorist groups, if these have not yet reached the point of absolute incorrigibility, to embrace peaceful and democratic struggle to attain their political ends.

“There is no doubt that the CPP-NPA and its front groups comprise a terrorist organization. It operates clandestine cells engaged in planning and executing terrorist activities. It strives to achieve political power by force. Its actions are directed at fundamental political, constitutional, economic or social structures,” the statement said.

The statement said further: “Jose Ma. Sison has command and control of the CPP-NPA from within Europe. He issues orders in the conduct of terrorist actions under his true name and under the aliases Amado Guerrero and Armando Liwanag. Many of his pronouncements and interviews have been projected globally.”

The government has ample documentary and testimonial proof of terrorist acts perpetrated by the CPP-NPA and the NDF over the past 30 years, all designed to overthrow the duly-constituted government and the democratic system, the statement added.

“These include the assassination of local political leaders and representatives of Congress, the violation of electoral processes through intimidation of candidates and ballot box snatching and the mass killing of revolutionary cadres suspected of turning their backs on the underground movement,” the statement said.

It went on:

“The CPP-NPA and the NDF has also been involved in kidnapping, extortion, bank robbery, arson, the destruction of public transport facilities and attacks on commercial establishments.

“They have recruited minors for combat and planted land mines that have harmed civilians.

“The GRP is one with the international community in proscribing the use of violence and terrorism, whether to attain political or plain criminal ends, whether done by communists or other ideologically oriented groups. Europe is one of the centers of civilization where the communist movement has fully entered the mainstream of democratic discourse.

“The GRP maintains open, informal lines of communication with the CPP-NPA-NDF. This is not inconsistent with its position that the revolutionary movement is a terrorist organization. For even in the face of the most brazen acts perpetrated by the movement, the GRP cannot totally close its eyes to the search of a peaceful solution of an ideologically-based conflict involving the Filipino people themselves – in the hope of ending the employment of violence and terrorism as a means to attain political ends, and to achieve national unity and reconciliation under the Constitution.

“Even as the GRP conducts armed counterforce against the revolutionary left and extends the hands of peace to those in it who may wish to return to the fold of democracy, it must exhaust all diplomatic means to end the violence and terrorism perpetrated by the CPP-NPA, which adversely affects the economy, prejudices employment, aggravates poverty and deepens the suffering of our people.”

Benipayo appointed as Solicitor General

Malacañang today formally announced the appointment of former Commission on Elections Chairman Alfredo Benipayo as the new Solicitor General, replacing Simeon Marcelo who is the new Ombudsman.

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, in his regular press briefing, said Chief Presidential Legal Counsel Avelino Cruz has transmitted Benipayo’s appointment papers to Justice Secretary Hernando Perez.

The appointment papers, signed by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, were dated October 11, Bunye noted.

Bunye said the selection of Benipayo was based on the recommendations of a search committee.

Before he was Comelec chairman, Benipayo was Supreme Court administrator.

Benipayo was a regional trial court judge in Manila from 1983 to 1987 and later associate justice of the Court of Appeals for nine years.

He started serving in the judiciary in 1974 as district judge and vice executive judge of the Court of First Instance in Malolos, Bulacan.

In 1976, he became district judge of the CFI in Manila.

He was also an associate professor in the Faculty of Civil Law at the University of Santo Tomas.

He finished his law studies in UST and graduated cum laude in 1962 and was accepted to the Philippine bar in 1963.

RP offers to host int'l meet on terrorism

The Philippines will soon be offering to host an international conference on anti-terrorism, recognizing the fact there may be some threats to the Southeast Asian region by international terrorist organizations.

In a press briefing in Malacañang after a meeting of the National Security Council, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez said the conference will be participated in not only by countries in Asia but also by the United States and possibly Australia.

Golez pointed out that one possible agenda for discussion during the conference will be on how to combine effort in the fight against terrorism.

The conference will recognize the fact that the fight against terrorism is not a fight by a single country but the collective effort of all the countries threatened by international terrorism, Golez said.

Former President Fidel V. Ramos, who is a member of the National Security Council, suggested the holding of the international conference on terrorism.

The conference will be favorable to Indonesia and the United States in light of the recent Bali bombing and the attack on the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001.

“We must offer our hosting as we did in 1996,” Ramos said, to which the members of the NSC consented.

NSC adopts contingency measures to fight terrorism in wake of Bali carnage

The National Security Council (NSC), in its meeting this morning presided over by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, has adopted contingency measures against terrorism in the wake of the terrorist bombing in Bali, Indonesia that killed almost 200 foreign tourists and local residents.

In a press briefing in Malacañang after the NSC meeting, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez said the three-pronged contingency plan was presented by Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, chief of the Philippine National Police (PNP).

Golez said that the first component of the contingency plan is intelligence gathering or the ability of government security agencies to predict any terrorist act.

He said that on the recommendation of Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., who was among those who attended the NSC meeting, there is a need to augment the intelligence budget of the PNP, the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency (NICA) so that they can effectively respond to terrorist threats.

The second component, according to Golez, is “target hardening,” which means providing physical security to particular targets, and this would involve not just personnel provided by the PNP and the AFP but also by in-house security of possible targets of terrorist attacks.

The third, Golez said, is incident management, which is going to be handled at the local government level with the support of national agencies in the event that there is an actual terrorist attack.

He said that the barangays would also be utilized in the actual handling of any terrorist attack.

“This has been the policy already of the government in the aspect of prediction of any terrorist threat as well as protection of some possible targets and, of course, even in incident management,” Golez said.

The NSC meeting was attended by former President Fidel Ramos and former President Corazon Aquino, members of the Senate and the House of Representatives led by Senate President Franklin Drilon and Speaker de Venecia, Jr. and top Cabinet members.

Today’s NSC meeting was the second held within this month. The NSC also met last October 1 to discuss contingency measures to ensure the safety of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in the Middle East in case of the outbreak of another Gulf war.

Supply of oil, oil products adequate, Perez assures Filipino people

Energy Secretary Vicente Perez today assured the Filipino people that the supply of oil and oil products in the Philippines is adequate and that the possibility of a shortage is “negligible.”

The assurance was given by Perez to the National Security Council (NSC) during its meeting this morning in Malacañang.

Later in a press briefing in Malacañang, Perez said the Department of Energy (DoE) has been closely monitoring the inventory levels of oil and refined products in the country in the wake of renewed threats to peace in the Middle East.

According to Perez, the supply level of oil and refined products this week is good for 62 days, which “is sufficient to see the country through any of the foreseeable scenario in the case of military conflict in Iraq.”

Perez also emphasized that during the last 30 years, there has not been any incidence of serious interruption to the world’s oil supply even during the Gulf War of 1991.

He explained that the Philippines imports its refined diesel and gasoline products from 15 different countries, and only three of these countries are in the Middle East. “The rest are mainly in the Asia-Pacific region,” Perez added.

Perez said that the major local downstream oil industry players have continuously assured the government that they have arrangements in place to ensure a steady and sufficient supply of oil in case of a military conflict in the Middle East.

He said that the DOE will continue to pursue arrangements with oil suppliers for alternative deliveries of products “that would provide us with uninterrupted supply in the unlikely event that these contingencies would be needed.”

On oil conservation efforts, Perez said that starting next week, the DOE will be disseminating gas-saving tips to motorists through the media and gasoline stations all over the country.

One of these is the “anti-idling” campaign where drivers would be discouraged to keep their engines running while waiting for passengers or their bosses or while parking, Perez said.

Need for national I.D. system imperative as anti-terrorism measure, says NSC

The National Security Council today said that there is a need a national identification (ID) system, with the Social Security System (SSS) as the basis, as part of the government’s precautionary measures against terrorism.

“One very important aspect in the fight against terrorism is identification, to be able to identify people so that they will not come up with multiple personalities or multiple identification, considering that many IDs are very easy to produce,” National Security Adviser Roilo Golez said in a briefing in Malacañang after the NSC meeting.

Golez said the ID system is a must “if we are to fight international terrorism in light of the recent bombings in Mindanao and the latest carnage in Bali, Indonesia.”

Also during the briefing, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said the proposal to adopt a national ID system came from Senator Ramon Magsaysay, Jr. and was endorsed unanimously by the National Security Council.

Bunye said that during the NSC meeting, Senate President Franklin Drilon gave valuable inputs on how to package the ID system so that it could be acceptable to the public.

Drilon said the information that would be needed for the ID system would be the same information contained in the SSS card. “This is public information anyway,” he said.

Golez also explained that the ID system idea would not be intrusive. “It would not invade people’s privacy,” he added.

The details of acquiring a national ID will be threshed out later, Golez said, emphasizing that one governing principle here is to make sure that human rights are not going to be violated.

GMA institutionalizes giving of awards to foreign employers of OFWs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has issued Proclamation No. 270, institutionalizing the International Employers Awards (IEA) to honor foreign employers, principals, and companies who have promoted the employment of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) and advanced their interest and welfare.

Under Proclamation No. 270, the President created the International Awards Committee to administer the conferment of the IEA on deserving employers.

The committee will be chaired by the secretary of the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE). Committee members would include the administrators of the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) and the Overseas Workers' Welfare Administration (OWWA), and a duly designated representative of land-based industry associations.

Earlier, DOLE Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas announced that the first awardees of the IEA would be accorded by the Philippine government to outstanding employers of OFWs at the opening of a two-day international gathering to be held at the Manila Peninsula on Nov. 21-22, 2002.

The President is expected to personally confer the presidential awards of distinction during the Grand Awards Night in ceremonies to be held in Malacañang Palace on Nov. 22.

According to the President, the OFWs' continued employment abroad would not have been possible without the indispensable cooperation of foreign companies, principals, employers, and overseas employment providers (OEPs) who continue to recognize the proficiency, competence and skills of the Filipino workers.

The President said that her administration has already recognized the vital role both being played by the OFWs and OEPs, including their contribution in uplifting the lives of OFW families and in boosting the country's economic development.

While the government has given official recognition to OEPs, it has yet to recognize foreign companies, employers, and principals who have provided employment to thousands of OFWs, the President said.

In pushing for the recognition of those entities abroad, the President ordered the awards committee to "immediately organize itself and prescribe the rules to the outstanding employers awards."

Transport groups agree to defer fare hike petition

The country's transport groups, particularly operators and drivers of passenger buses and jeepneys, have agreed to defer the filing of fare hike petitions until the price of diesel fuel reaches P15.50 per liter, from their current self-imposed ceiling of P15.00 per liter.

Communications and Transportation Secretary Leandro Mendoza and Chairman Dante Lantin of the Land Transportation, Franchising and Regulatory Board (LTFRB) today reported to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the Cabinet that members of the transport groups have agreed to defer their plan to seek a fare increase after Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) Chairman Michael Defensor offered them the “live now, pay later plan,” in the Montalban Housing project.

According to Secretary Mendoza, some 300 units are now available under the HUDCC program.

The DOTC said that they are also acting and referring to other agencies for action the other measures suggested by the transport groups as alternative options to fare hike. These are:

- Reduce by P1.00 the tax on oil products for public utility vehicles (PUVs); freeze road users tax; increase in supervision fees, registration fees, common carrier tax, etc. for PUVS only. According to the Department of Finance, these measures would require legislations;
- Freeze exorbitant fees charged by local government units on PUVs, like common terminal fees, parking fees, etc;
- Intensive drive against against colorum, out of line and illegal PUVs and illegal PUV operations, including FX;
- Identify provincial buses and other PUVs through markings, to prevent them from entering Metro Manila;
- Rationalize routes and operations of different modes of services so that they will complement and not compete with one another;
- Rationalize FX operations;
- Develop other sources of oil and use in research findings of Filipino scientists;
- Tax-free importation of spare parts;
- Suspend emission testing; and to Rollback of toll fees paid by PUVs in South Luzon Expressway to the December 31, 2001 rates.

GMA lauds PNP for rescue of kidnap victim, arrest of seven 7 kidnappers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the police for the rescue of a 26-year-old kidnap-for-ransom victim Jimmy Ting along the boundary of Ilocos Norte and Ilocos Sur as well as the arrest of seven suspects in the kidnapping.

Among the items recovered were P679,000 in various denominations representing part of the total P1,680,000-ransom money paid to the kidnappers.

Philippine National Police (PNP) Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. reported the results of the operation to the President.

The mother of the victim reported the case to Police Anti-Crime Emergency Response (PACER) immediately after the abduction last October 8 in Barangay Libtong, Meycauayan, Bulacan.

The rescue of Ting and the arrest of four suspects was made at the checkpoint in Badoc, Ilocos Norte, which had been set up to intercept the kidnappers who were riding a Mitsubishi Lancer GLXi with plate number UJH-480. Arrested with the victim were Fernando Gascon, Efren Gascon, Ricardo Salazar and Elmer Valenzuela.

Follow-up operations resulted in the arrest of the three other kidnap suspects on board a maroon Tamaraw FX with license plate TTE-334 at about 3 a.m. today at the Shell Station in Carmen, Rosales, Pangasinan.

The three suspects arrested in Pangasinan with the ransom money were Jay Gregorio, Rolando Estrella and Danilo Bergonia.

Police elements were able to track down the vehicle used during the pay-off.

The group of kidnapers arrested in Ilocos Norte was tasked as caretakers of the victim, while the three others negotiated and arranged for the ransom payment. Two of the suspects surnamed Gascon are brothers.

Aside from the ransom money, several high-powered firearms were also recovered from the suspects.

Appropriate charges against the suspects are being prepared. The suspects are currently being held at the Police Anti-Crime Emergency Response (PACER) Detention Center in Camp Crame.

In a statement released to the media, the President said the rescue of Ting and the arrest of his suspected kidnapers was the result of joint operations of PACER and the Ilocos Norte Police Provincial Office as they applied the three-tiered United Action Defense System, which has been used in the anti-kidnapping campaign since last year.

The President said this positive development is proof once more that the tried and proven formula (TTF) of community cooperation, professional police action and responsible media works well.

With the arrest of the seven suspects, the total number of arrested KFR suspects is now 104. The official figures show a clear downtrend in the number of KFR cases. As of today, there is a 32 percent decrease from the same period in 2001.

“We have taken aggressive steps against kidnapers and other criminals. We will not stop until we have them all behind bars,” Ebdane said.

GMA expresses sympathies to Megawati as RP sends medical team to Bali

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has expressed her sympathies to Indonesian President Megawati Sukarnoputri in the aftermath of the Sunday bombing in Bali that left about 180 people dead, most of them foreign tourists and local residents.

In a telephone conversation Monday night, the President also informed the Indonesian leader that the Philippines is sending a four-man medical mission to Bali to help in attending to the medical needs of those injured. Most of the victims suffered severe burns in the worst bombing incident in Indonesia.

In his regular press briefing this afternoon in Malacañang, Press Secretary and Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said the President has also instructed the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) to convey the Philippine government’s position supporting the United Nations resolution sponsored by Indonesia and Australia declaring the Jemaah Islamiyah as a terrorist group.

Although no group has yet claimed responsibility for the terrorist attack in Bali, Australia has identified the Jemaah Islamiyah, which has links with Usama bin Laden’s al-Qaeda terror group, as the prime suspect in the attack.

Bunye said that the medical team organized by the Department of Health would soon leave for Bali.

The medical team, Bunye said, will be flying to Denpasar international airport and will be met by Philippine Ambassador to Indonesia Rafael Seguis and the Indonesian minister of health.

Bunye said the medical team is composed of Dr. Hector Santos and Direck Demiar, consultant and nurse respectively of the burn unit of the East Avenue Medical Center; and Dr. Placido Calimag and Teresita Fernandez, plastic surgeon and nurse, respectively, of the Quirino Memorial Medical Center.

The Philippine medical team will be based in a government hospital in Denpasar and will attend to patients in about 12 surrounding hospitals, Bunye said.

In a related development, Bunye also announced that the President is sending Presidential Adviser Paul Dominguez, senior consultant for Mindanao, to Indonesia to negotiate for possible oil importation from that country.

GMA orders gov't agencies to study proposals from transport groups to prevent fare hikes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed several government agencies to act on the proposals of transport groups that they have forwarded in lieu of filing fare hike petitions.

In his regular press briefing this afternoon in Malacañang, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said the President has ordered Secretary Leandro Mendoza of the Department of Transportation and Communications (DOTC) to submit to the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) a list of spare parts requested by operators of public utility vehicles (PUVs) that may be granted reduced tariffs.

Bunye said that the President likewise directed Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. of the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) to use his "moral suasion" in convincing local government units to freeze exorbitant terminal and parking fees being charged by local government units (LGUs).

The President also directed the Land Transportation, Franchising and Regulatory Board (LTFRB) to study the proposal to stop the rerouting of PUVs, Bunye said.

"Also, the Department of Energy was asked to encourage different bus companies to coordinate with oil companies on the possibility of putting up gas stations and pumps within bus terminals to avail of savings," Bunye said.

During the Cabinet meeting, Mendoza also informed the President that the transport operators and drivers have agreed to defer the filing of fare increase petitions for as long as the price of diesel fuel remains below P15.50 per liter.

Earlier, the transport groups threatened to file fare hike petitions if the price of diesel fuel goes up to P15.00 per liter.

Teehankee named Gov't Corporate Counsel

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today designated Justice Undersecretary Manuel Antonio J. Teehankee as Acting Government Corporate Counsel in the Department of Justice vice Amado D. Valdez.

Press Secretary Ignacio "Toting" Bunye announced Teehankee's designation in a press briefing this afternoon at Malacañang.

A lawyer by profession, Teehankee joined the government service after 16 years of private practice.

He obtained his Bachelor of Laws degree from the Ateneo Law School in 1983. He finished his Bachelor of Arts in Economics also at the Ateneo de Manila in 1979.

After his graduate studies in Michigan and the London School of Economics, Teehankee spent 10 years in New York with the international litigation departments of Baker and McKenzie and LeBoeuf Lamb Greene and MacRae.

Teehankee also participated in major arbitrations before the Iran-United States Claims Tribunal in The Hague and before the International Court of Arbitration of the ICC in Paris.

Teehankee's Philippine law practice focused on international commercial matters. He is also a regular lecturer on private international law and GATT-WTO law at the Ateneo Law School.

German gov't expresses support for RP stand declaring CPP-NPA as terrorist group

The Philippine diplomatic mission to the European Union (EU) has reported to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that Germany will support efforts within the EU to include the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People's Army (CPP-NPA) in the list of foreign terrorist organizations (FTOs) maintained by the United Nations.

In his regular press briefing, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said the Philippine diplomatic mission headed by Foreign Secretary Blas F. Ople held talks in Berlin Monday with German State Minister for Foreign Affairs Christoph Zoepel and Fritz Rudolf Kopper of the German Ministry of the Interior.

"The German government has given the assurance to the Philippine mission that Berlin would assist the Philippines in persuading other EU countries to declare the CPP-NPA as a terrorist group," Bunye said.

In his report to the President, Ople said that Germany itself does not have an FTO list but submits the names of terrorist organizations, along with that of the EU, to the UN.

"What is significant is that Germany does, in fact, and by its action recognizes the CPP-NPA as a terrorist organization," Ople said.

Bunye said that from Berlin, the Philippine group would also be visiting Oslo, Norway and then Denmark and finally Brussels to meet with the foreign ministers of these countries and officials of the EU.

Aside from Ople, the Philippine mission is composed of Ermita, Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales, and Presidential Management Staff Head Silvestre Afable Jr. who is in charge of back-channel negotiations with the CPP-NPA and its political organization, the National Democratic Front (NDF).

According to a Palace statement, the Government of the Republic of the Philippines (GRP) mission is based on the principle that terrorism is a universal threat that must be countered and contained by the collective actions of all democratic and freedom-loving nations.

In his report to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, through Executive Secretary Alberto G. Romulo, Ople said the highlights of his discussions with the German officials are as follows:

"In response to my representations for Germany not to give asylum to CPP-NPA-NDF members, including Jose Luneta, Germany said that it is more than willing to expel or extradite terrorists as long as there is no death penalty in the country of destination. It appears that, in many cases, Germany would have wanted to expel or extradite terrorists but were unable to do so because their constitution prohibits the transfer of terrorists to countries with death penalties. I told them that I fully understand their situation and said that in the future, with regard to the Philippines, Germany may not have to face the same dilemma.

"Germany is very interested in any possible linkage between the CPP-NPA-NDF and Islamic extremists in the Philippines. I told them that there has been a tactical and battlefield alliance between the two, implying that they cooperate on an operational level in their terrorist activities.

"Germany is very interested in engaging in counter terrorism cooperation with the Philippines and would like to conclude a bilateral agreement to this effect. We agreed to begin informal talks on this matter."

Germany ready to enter into counter terror cooperation agreement with RP, Ople tells GMA

The German government recognizes the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People's Army (CPP-NPA) as a terrorist organization and is very interested in engaging in counter terrorism cooperation with the Philippines and would like to conclude a bilateral agreement to this effect.

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople, in a report to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo from Europe, said he held talks yesterday (Manila time) with German officials who assured him that their government will support any effort within the European Union to include the CPP-NPA in the list of terrorist organizations maintained by the United Nations under UN Security Council Resolution 1373.

Ople is currently at the head of a top-level Philippine mission to win support within the European Union for the inclusion of the CPP-NPA in the UN list of foreign terrorist organizations.

Aside from Ople, the Philippine mission is composed of Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita, Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales, and Presidential Management Staff Head Silvestre Afaible Jr. who is in charge of back-channel negotiations with the CPP-NPA and its political organization, the National Democratic Front (NDF).

Ople and the other members of the mission will be proceeding to Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Belgium and Spain to get these countries' support in the global fight against terrorism and the listing of the CPP-NPA as a terrorist organization.

Ople said that in his meeting with German State Minister for Foreign Affairs Christoph Zoepel and Parliamentary State Secretary Fritz Rudolph Koepper of the Ministry of the Interior, the German government assured that it would issue "a public statement supporting our request for the recognition of the CPP-NPA as a foreign terrorist organization."

The Foreign Affairs Secretary also informed the President of Germany's readiness and willingness to expel or extradite terrorists in that country.

Ople added, however, that Germany was unable to do so "because their constitution prohibits the transfer of terrorists to countries with death penalties."

"I told them that I fully understand their situation and said that in the future, with regard to the Philippines, Germany may not have to face the same dilemma," Ople said in his report to the President.

Ople added that Germany is "very interested in any possible linkage between the CPP-NPA-NDF and Islamic extremists in the country."

“I told them that there has been a tactical and battlefield alliance between the two, implying that they cooperate on an operational level in their terrorist activities,” Ople said.

GMA unveils natural gas vehicle program

To make public transportation less vulnerable to the volatility of world oil prices, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today unveiled the government’s natural gas vehicle program for the country’s public transportation.

The unveiling was undertaken during ceremonies at the Department of Energy Compound in Makati City on the occasion of the first anniversary celebration of the Malampaya Camago Deep Water Gas to Power project.

According to the President, it will be the policy of her administration to promote activities in the downstream industry, especially in the transport sector.

She said her administration has diversified fuel requirements for the power generation mix where natural gas now accounts for 18 percent as of the third quarter of this year.

“I want to pursue the same program for the transport sector by having alternative fuels, particularly CNG (Compressed Natural Gas),” she said.

She noted that widespread utilization of natural gas, which is a clean and environmentally friendly fuel, is a move towards the government’s policy of diversification of fuel sources at a time when there is a threat to energy security from the looming Iraq crisis.

The natural gas vehicle program for public transport outlines the government’s policies and strategies in developing the commercial use of natural gas in the transport sector.

The President said the Malampaya consortium has agreed to supply natural gas to be used as transport fuel at a 50 percent discount compared to prevailing diesel prices. The Malampaya Consortium is composed of Shell Philippines Exploration B.V. Chevron-Texaco and the Philippine National Oil Co. Energy Development Corp. (PNOC-EOC).

To lower the cost of converting existing vehicles into gas-fed vehicles and thus encourage the use of natural gas vehicles, the President announced that the Department of Trade and Industry will consider classifying natural gas conversion kits, which are imported materials needed to convert a diesel-fired engine into a gas-fuelled engine, as automotive spare parts.

“One percent lang ang taripa (The tariff is only one percent),” she said.

At the same time, the President urged the Department of Science and Technology (DOST) to promote and develop locally manufactured conversion kits that will be readily available in the market.

The President also said the Board of Investments is working to enhance the existing incentive package for investors who would be engaged in the supply and purchase of natural gas vehicles conversion kits, Original Engine Manufacturer and other related facilities.

Likewise, the President said the Department of Transportation and Communications, through the Land Transportation Office, is expected to grant exemptions to public utility vehicles running on natural gas from securing certificates of compliance with emission standards.

The DOTC, through the Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board (LTFRB), plans to privatize the granting of bus franchises for natural gas bus fleets. Two of these new franchises will be for the Batangas-Manila route and another one for the Batangas-Bicol route.

“There’s already a bus company that intends to undertake a pilot project involving up to 100 buses next year using compressed natural gas,” she said.

To accelerate the establishment of the necessary infrastructure and facilities related to the natural gas vehicle such as the refueling stations, the President ordered the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) to fast-track the issuance of Environment Compliance Certificates (ECC) for natural gas-related infrastructure facilities.

She said that the DOST will also promote and develop locally manufactured conversion kit.

The President added that Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA) Chairman Bayani Fernando would consider opening C-5 to buses that would use compressed natural gas.

Shell Philippines Exploration B.V. and First Gas Power Corp. are currently undertaking studies to establish refueling stations to meet the projected gas demand for natural gas vehicles.

The President also ordered the Department of Energy to spearhead all these efforts and coordinate these initiatives with all relevant government agencies, international institutions and the private sector.

GMA pays tribute to courage of marines

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today paid tribute to the courage and gallantry of the 11 Marines killed in a clash with the Abu Ssayaf rebels in Patikul, Sulu, saying the Filipino nation is proud of them.

The President went to Fort Bonifacio this morning to visit the remains of the eight Marine troops killed in action in Sulu, expressing her sympathies to the families of the soldiers and assuring them of government support for the heroism shown by their loved ones.

The President also conferred medals on the soldiers for their gallantry, saying “Ipinagmamalaki natin ang kagitingan nila, ang paglilingkod nila hanggang sa katapusan doon sa Mindanao sa Sulu (We are very proud of them, of the sacrifice they made until the end in Sulu).”

The eight Marine honored by the President were Privates First Class Reneo Herrera, Felix Baltazar and Alberto Cabrela; Corporals Joey Silva and Salvador Daniel; Technical Sergeant Oscar Mislang; and Staff Sergeants Rofilio Lequip and Aurelio Liberan.

The remains of three more soldiers are still in Zamboanga City. They are S/Sgt. Filbert Gadia, Cpl. Benedict Cabe and Pfc. Allan Tang.

After expressing her condolences and sympathies to the families of the soldiers, the President handed over P100,000 in financial assistance to each of them.

Aside from the monetary assistance, the President conferred posthumous promotions to the soldiers and assured the families that the benefits they would get would be commensurate with their higher rank.

The President at the same time announced an initial increase in the pay of soldiers effective this month as result of the administration measure to make the soldiers’ salary commensurate with the teachers’ pay.

“Sana iyan ay magbigay pa sa inyo ng high morale dahil maraming inaasahan ang ating mamamayan sa inyong magigiting na pagseserbisyo (I hope that this would give you high morale because the people expect much from you),” she said.

Main goal in attending APEC summit in Mexico is to help generate jobs for Filipinos — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said her main goal in attending the summit of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) scheduled in Mexico City on October 26 and 27 is to promote the Philippines as an investment destination and thereby help in creating jobs for the Filipino people.

In an informal luncheon with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said the bottom line in all her actions is to look for jobs.

“To me that’s the bottom line of every single act I make because that’s the number one part of my medium-term plan. To fight poverty, you must create jobs through investments, specially,” the President said.

The President also said leaders of the APEC member economies would be discussing ways to help one another’s economies’ survive and even move forward “during this difficult period of continuing terrorism.”

According to the President, she will be having bilateral meetings with heads of states who, she said, she may not have a chance to meet otherwise or talk on the phone.

For example, the President said, she has a scheduled one-on-one with Russian President Vladimir Putin.

“Because I would like to develop Russia as the new source of oil for the Philippines, I will be meeting with him,” the President said.

The President also said that while in Mexico City, she would be meeting with her counterparts in the US-ASEAN Business Council where they will be reviewing the investment promotion framework that had been worked out when she visited Washington, D. C. last year.

She said that it is also possible that she will be meeting with Australian Prime Minister John Howard to discuss trade issues.

The President said that although Australia is one of the country’s major sources of official development assistance (ODA), the government is “quite disappointed” that Australia is putting up non-tariff barriers on Philippine bananas and pineapple exports.

As a whole, however, relations between the Philippines and Australia are “very good,” the President said.

“We are one of the favorite beneficiaries of Australia for their ODA. And then we buy a lot of dairy products from Australia,” the President said.

GMA rejects collector Templo’s resignation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she is turning down the resignation of Customs District Collector Celso Templo of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) even as she admired the latter for resigning without being asked.

In an informal luncheon with some members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said that during a command conference in Malacañang attended by officials of the Bureau of Customs (BoC) and the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR), there were four district collectors from the BIR and two from the BoC.

The President said that the six district collectors were asked to explain their performance record and only Collector Templo had the delicadeza to resign even if he was not fired.

“So, for this reason, I am not accepting his resignation. When have you heard of a Customs man giving up his position without being sacked?” the President asked.

The President also acknowledged that Collector Templo's performance last year "was not so bad."

"It is only just now. So, maybe he's burned out and he needs a vacation," the President said, adding that she has instructed Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo to allow Templo go on "a short vacation and then come back refreshed."

The President explained that during the command conference in Malacañang, she did not ask a single official to resign. "I was hammering performance into them," she said.

CARAGA tribal folk to benefit from P15-M KALAHI project

Tribal folk from three municipalities in the CARAGA Region (Agusan del Sur, Agusan del Norte, Surigao del Sur, Surigao del Norte) will benefit from the P15 million worth of projects sponsored by the participating agencies of the Rural Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (Rural-KALAHI) project.

The Rural-KALAHI, an anti-poverty reduction program of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration, had its caravan recently in the municipalities of Loreto, Agusan del Sur; Las Nieves, Agusan del Norte; and Gigaquit, Surigao del Norte.

During the caravan, National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) Undersecretary Veronica Felix Villavicencio disclosed the projects to be funded by the social fund of President Gloria Macapagl-Arroyo.

These are dried fish processing; coffee, banana and abaca plantation and production; carabao dispersal; a floating day-care center; and a tribal house that will serve as the community center of the indigenous people.

Most awaited by the tribal folk was the distribution of land titles of their ancestral domain and the signing of a P12-million palm oil plantation in Loreto, Agusan del Sur.

The different line agencies also gave their commitments.

Participating agencies present during the caravan were the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD), Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH), Department of Agriculture (DA), Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR), Commission on Indigenous People, Department of Health (DOH) and the Commission on Higher Education (CHED).

The CHED provided scholarships to all deserving tribal members.

GMA to tap Osmeña in master plan to disperse gov't functions

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that she would ask former Cebu Governor Lito Osmeña to actively help her administration, specifically to work on a master plan to disperse government functions.

In an informal luncheon with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said that although Osmeña has been her adviser on economic affairs since January 20 last year, this time she would be asking the former governor to help her in her plan of dispersing the various activities of government.

For instance, the President said, agriculture or defense could be in Mindanao, and then tourism and trade in the Visayas while infrastructure could be somewhere in Luzon or Metro Manila.

"It is not like transferring the whole capital from Karachi to Islamabad, or Sydney to Canberra. It is rather dispersing the various agencies where their services are most relevant," the President explained.

The President said this would be the main function of Osmeña, adding that the master plan is funded by some P30 billion, with the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP) lending P20 billion.

She also disclosed that Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao, who is coming back October 23 from a study leave in Japan, would be assuming the post of chief of staff.

The President also said that she would be moving the “war room” from the Department of National Defense (DND) to Malacañang.

She said that the “war room,” which will have a secretariat to be headed by an official with a Cabinet rank, will keep track of all the various government programs and projects as well as issues like those involving internal security.

Aside from Tiglao, the President said, she will also tap Philippine Information Agency head Rene Velasco and her chief aide, Col. Charlie Holganza, in the operations of this “war room.”

GMA willing to submit a bill on proposed national I.D. system

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has said that she is willing to submit a draft legislation to Congress on the proposed national ID system if this could not be done through an executive order.

The President told Malacañang newsmen Wednesday that she has already ordered National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez to work on the details of the national ID system as a means of fighting terrorism in the country.

“So, I’m having Roy Golez to study. Either we will produce an executive order that doesn’t need a legislation or we will submit a draft bill for legislation,” the President said.

The President recalled that during the term of former President Fidel Ramos, he also tried to implement an ID system through an executive fiat but the Supreme Court ruled that this should be done through a legislation in Congress.

A survey conducted nationwide by the Philippine Information Agency (PIA) showed that majority of the people want a national ID card system. The PIA is an agency under the Office of the Press Secretary.

“So, people want a strong Republic. Our people are tired of the use of democratic space to promote anarchy and to promote destabilization and to promote the government downfall,” the President said.

Some sectors have expressed opposition to the proposal, saying that this could lead to possible violation of human rights.

Sen. Aquilino Pimentel, Jr., an opposition stalwart, has supported the administration proposal, saying that it is a basic requirement for peace and progress.

Pimentel has urged both houses of Congress to act with dispatch on Senate Bill 1989, which he authored, establishing a National Identification System or NIS.

According to Pimentel, an efficient NIS will enhance security measures against terrorists and help ordinary citizens in transacting business with both government and agencies.

Fight poverty the 'kapit-bisig' way, GMA exhorts people

SAN JOSE, LUPI, Camarines Sur—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today renewed her call for the people to unite and lock arms (kapit-bisig) in fighting poverty and improving their lives.

In her brief remarks at the National KALAHÍ (Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan) Day and the launching of the KALAHÍ program in this town, the President said that poverty, like terrorism, can be eradicated.

“Isipin natin na ang kahirapan, tulad ng karahasan, malulunasan kung tayo ay magtutulongan, malulunasan kung tayo ay kikilos bilang tunay na magkalahi, kapig-bisig (Let us think that poverty, like terrorism, can be remedied if we are united, if we act as one race with arms locked,” the President said.

The President acknowledged that the basic needs of the people, like food, shelter, education, and jobs, are still not being provided to people in some areas, like in the town of Lupi in Camarines Sur.

She said that it was providential that the KALAHI National Day or a National Day for Overcoming Extreme Poverty was celebrated in this town, which is also celebrating its foundation day.

The President said that she is the only chief executive that has visited the town, known as one of the poorest in the country.

According to the President, some of her advisers thought of launching the KALAHI National Day somewhere in the CALABARZON (Cavite, Laguna, Batangas, Rizal and Quezon) area but she objected, saying that CALABARZON is the most affluent region outside of Metro Manila.

She then asked the organizers to launch the program in the country’s poorest of the poor region so that these people “can see the face of government.”

As part of the KALAHI program, the President called on the local residents to take advantage of the jobs fair being organized in the town. She said that out of the 2,060 available jobs, only 405 were applied for, leaving an excess of some 1,655 jobs.

GMA congratulates SOLCOM, PNP for foiling NPA attack on Camarines town police station

LUPI, Camarines Sur – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the Southern Luzon Command (SOLCOM), led by Maj. Gen. Roy Kyamko, and the Philippine National Police for foiling an attack by communist terrorists on the police station of Siruma town in this province.

President cited in particular Col. Jacinto Cordero, Tactical Brigade commander of the Army’s 902nd Brigade, and his men who led the encounter against New People’s Army (NPA) rebels at Barangay San Roque in Tinambac last October 15.

She also congratulated Philippine National Police Region 5 Director Chief Superintendent Rodolfo Tor for the PNP’s assistance and cooperation with the military in repelling the NPA attack.

“Congratulations, General Kyamko, Colonel Cordero and General Tor. Keep up your good work and close coordination,” the President said.

During a ceremony held at the Alanao Elementary School here upon her arrival from Manila, Kyamko and Cordero presented to the President the documents, newsletters, Garand rifle, carbine and two M14 rifles seized from the rebels during the encounter.

The barangay residents played a key role in the repulsion of the NPA attack. It was learned that at 8:25 a.m. last October 15, the residents of Brgy. San Roque tipped off the elements of 42nd Infantry Battalion on the presence of armed NPA terrorists.

The military-police report said the 25 fully-armed communist terrorists were waiting in the barangay for their other comrades to regroup and launch an attack on the Siruma Municipal Station.

After she inspected the documents and firearms recovered from the terrorists, the President walked to the nearby Barangay Center for the launching of Kapit-Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHATI) project, her administration's priority program to address the problem of poverty.

CPP-NPA should renounce political assassinations for talks to resume — Ople

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople said the Philippine government would only resume talks with the National Democratic Front (NDF), the political umbrella of the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People's Army (CPP-NPA), if the communists renounce political assassinations.

In a report from Oslo, Norway, Ople was quoted today as saying that the government wanted the communist rebels to renounce violence and political assassinations "before we can renew the peace talks" earlier hosted by the government of Norway.

The Oslo talks between panels of the Philippine government and the leaders of the CPP-NPA-NDF now living in exile in the Netherlands, were suspended last year by the government after rebel death squads assassinated several local politicians.

Ople heads a top-level diplomatic mission to win support within the European Union for the inclusion of the CPP-NPA in the United Nations list of foreign terrorist organizations (FTOs).

Members of the Ople mission are Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita, Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales, and Presidential Management Staff head Silvestre Afable, Jr.

Earlier in Berlin, the German government assured the Philippine mission that it would assist the Philippines in persuading other EU countries in declaring the CPP-NPA as a terrorist group.

In his report to the President, Ople also said that Germany is interested in forging a counter-terrorism cooperation agreement with the Philippines, adding that the two sides have agreed to start informal talks on this matter.

Palace condemns Zambo bombings, asks citizens to help gov't in fight against terrorists

Malacañang today condemned the bombing this morning of two shopping centers in Zamboanga City that killed five people and injured more than 100 others.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Undersecretary Roberto Capco also appealed for the cooperation of the citizenry in the fight against all acts of terrorism.

"We need the cooperation of everyone, and every citizen should participate in this campaign against terrorists," Capco said.

In Zamboanga City, newly-installed Southern Command (Southcom) chief, Lt. Gen. Narciso Abaya also called on everybody "to counter this senseless act."

Abaya also said that it was just unfortunate that the incident happened on the day that he assumed the post of commanding general of the Southcom. "Terror strikes anywhere, anytime. It just happened in time for my assumption as Southcom chief," he said.

Capco said that citizens should report to police authorities suspicious looking persons or suspicious parcels or boxes placed near shopping malls or other populous areas so that incidents like what happened in Zamboanga and recently in Kidapawan, North Cotabato could be averted.

He also said the Zamboanga City bombing is being treated as a “local incident.

The first bomb exploded at around 11:30 a.m. in the Shop-o-Rama department store, and this was followed a half-hour after by another blast at the adjacent Shoppers Central shop.

Police said they found a third bomb in the area and were in the process of trying to defuse it.

GMA distributes livelihood assistance in Bicol

LUPI, Camarines Sur – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today visited the remote barangay of San Jose (formerly Alano) here to formally launch the Kapit-Bisig sa Kahirapan (KALAHI) in the Bicol region and witness the distribution of livelihood assistance to the people here.

The President’s presence here to provide assistance to the Bicolanos in uplifting their lives coincided with the nation’s commemoration of National Day for Overcoming Extreme Poverty (NDOEP) and the town’s 284th foundation anniversary.

In her speech, the President prodded the residents to participate in the Jobs Fair put up by Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) as she noted that only 405 applied for the 2,060 jobs made available during the fair.

After her speech, the President witnessed the distribution of a check for P150,000 check, representing the first tranche of P300,000, to Lupi Mayor Roberto Matamorosa and San Jose Barangay Captain Alipio Villalin by National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) lead convenor Secretary Teresita Quintos-Deles to jumpstart the water system in San Jose and nearby barangays.

Mayor Matamorosa also received another check for P300,000 from the Technology and Livelihood Resource Center (TLRC) for livelihood assistance to the people of Lupi.

He also received an additional check for P200,000 from the Department of Agriculture to complete the release of the P1 million for the upgrading, widening and concreting of the Colacling-Tible farm-to-market road.

The residents of the eight barangays of Lupi also received assorted garden tools and vegetable seedling.

Camarines Sur Gov. Luis Villafuerte got a separate check for P1 million to finance the “P1 Million, One Product, One Town” program of the President on behalf of the municipality of Lupi.

Under the program, Governor Villafuerte will choose one business establishment to expand investment in Lupi.

Among the Cabinet officials who joined the President in her visit here were Budget Secretary and Cabinet Officer for Regional Development Emilia Boncodin, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose D. Lina, Jr., NAPC lead convenor Quintos-Deles, Presidential Advisor on Jobs Creation Luis Lorenzo, TLRC Director General Federico Laxa and Rep. Rolando Andaya, Jr. of the First District of Camarines Sur.

The barangay captains of Ipil and Ibuga also received two checks for P150,000 each for the establishment of day-care centers in their barangays.

In 1992, the United Nations General Assembly declared October 17 as World Day for Overcoming Extreme Poverty and called for its observance by all countries. In response to the UN's call, former President Fidel V. Ramos in 1998 declared October 17 as National Day for Overcoming Extreme Poverty.

AFP overruns new MILF camp in Lanao Del Sur

The military today announced the capture of a newly-built camp of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) deep in the jungles of Lanao del Sur after a week of heavy fighting that left 46 guerillas killed and scores wounded.

Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Benjamin Defensor, Jr. said the MILF camp, occupying an area of about 15 to 20 hectares in the town of Sultan Gumander, is complete with 40 concrete fortified bunkers with running trenches and foxholes.

Troops from the Army's 4th Infantry Division commanded by Maj. Gen. Alfonso Dagudag engaged the combined rebel forces of the MILF and Abu Sayyaf terrorists group in seven days of fierce fighting.

Quoting a report from Dagudag, General Defensor said at least 46 MILF and Abu Sayyaf bandits were killed and many wounded in the fighting.

The capture of the new MILF camp confirmed intelligence reports that the MILF has been building up its forces two years after all their 46 camps, including Camp Abubakar, were captured by government troops two years ago.

Defensor said Philippine Air Force (PAF) OV-10 light bombers and 520 MG helicopter gunships pounded the newly-constructed MILF camp with bombs and air-to-ground rockets during the week of heavy firefight.

The camp was virtually a duplicate of Camp Abubakar which was captured by the military during the war in Central Mindanao in the summer of 2000, Dagudag said in his report.

The camp, the headquarters of the 304th Brigade of the MILF, could easily accommodate 400 fighters.

Government troops are now occupying the MILF camp, Dagudag said.

Oct. 31, Nov. 2 declared special non-working days

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today issued Proclamation No. 277, declaring October 31, which falls on Thursday, and November 2, a Saturday, as special non-working days throughout the country.

November 1 or All Saints Day, which is a nationwide special day, falls on Friday.

The President said she issued the proclamation "to give full opportunity to our people to properly observe the day with all its religious fervor, which invariably requires them to travel to and from different regions of the country."

The President also said that she gave the order following the recommendation of Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon that the two days may be declared as special days without detriment to the interest of the public.

The President signed the proclamation today.

Emulate unity of the Zamboanguenos in face of bomb attacks, GMA tells people

ZAMBOANGA CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the Filipino people to emulate the example shown by the residents of this city for being united in the aftermath of the two bombing incidents that killed seven people and injured more than a hundred.

The President arrived at the Edwin Andrews Air Base here at 10:00 a.m. to condole with the relatives of the victims and commiserate with the wounded who are still being treated in hospitals.

"Let us emulate the unity shown by the people of Zamboanga not just to address terroristic acts but also to prevent their occurrence not only in Zamboanga but all over the Philippines," the President said in her remarks after a closed-door briefing held at the base.

Immediately upon her arrival at the base, the President got a briefing on the bombing incidents from military and local officials led by Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, AFP Chief of Staff, Gen. Benjamin Defensor, newly-installed Southern Command chief, Lt. Gen. Narciso Abaya, Zamboanga City Mayor Maria Clara Lobregat and Zamboanga Congressman Celso Lobregat.

Also in the briefing were Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit and Presidential Assistant for Mindanao Jesus Dureza.

On the recommendation of Mayor Lobregat, the President also ordered the military and the police to implement stricter measures in all ports and airports in the country, especially in checking incoming and outgoing foreigners.

The President then visited the bombing sites, the Shop-O-Rama on Governor Lim Avenue and the nearby Shoppers Central on Nunez Brillantes street. From the bombing sites, the President visited the injured, which included children, in a hospital.

She then proceeded to the Merced Memorial Homes where the victims are now laid and expressed her condolences to the relatives.

The President said that yesterday's deadly bombing attacks "showed the dastardly manner by which criminal elements are truly destroying the lives of our people."

According to the President, the innocent victims of the latest bombing attacks in this city are both Muslims and Christians. Among the seven dead, three are Muslims and four Christians.

"This only shows that the terrorists are no longer singling out any group or organization but anybody who unfortunately happens to be at the area at the time of the attack," the President said.

The President said the terrorists want to send a message in carrying out their bombing attacks and that is to sow fear and anxiety among our people.

Before returning to Manila, the President also visited the nine wounded soldiers who are recuperating at the Camp Navarro Hospital at the Southcom headquarters.

The soldiers, who suffered injuries after a fierce gunbattle with Abu Sayyaf terrorists in Sulu last week, also received Gold Cross medals and financial assistance from the President.

GMA leaves Oct. 24 for APEC summit

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will leave on October 24 for the Tenth APEC (Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation) Leaders' Meeting in Los Cabos, Mexico.

Along the way there and back, the President will be stopping over in Honolulu, Hawaii and key cities in California such as Los Angeles, San Diego, San Jose and San Francisco to meet with key US officials and members of the local Filipino communities.

The President will be in Hawaii on October 24 and 25, where she will hold meetings with US Sen. Daniel Inouye and Admiral Thomas Fargo, Commander in Chief of the US Pacific Command.

Inouye is a good friend of the Philippines and a strong advocate of Philippines interests in the US legislature while Fargo's Pacific Command works very closely with the Armed Forces of the Philippines in activities under the Philippines-United States Mutual Defense Treaty.

The President will also meet with Filipino-American Gov. Benjamin Cayetano, who will show to the Chief Executive the new $15-million Filipino-American community center in Hawaii.

She will leave Hawaii on October 25 for Los Cabos.

In the summit meeting in Mexico, the President will push for the holding of a high-level meeting on maritime security in next year's conference.

This is in order to address poverty, which is the breeding ground for the recruitment of terrorism and as the Philippines' contribution to region-wide efforts to secure trade and as the lead shepherd in the APEC Transportation Working Group.

This Philippine initiative seeks to lay the groundwork for a burden-sharing scheme among the developed and developing economies in APEC from which the Philippines would benefit.

This initiative would include such items as port-to-port security, cargo handling, and customs procedures as well as consider sustainable development of marine resources.

Also, the President will take the opportunity to hold bilateral talks with her counterparts on the fringes of the APEC Leaders Meeting. Among these leaders would be Australian Prime Minister John Howard, Russian President Vladimir Putin and New Zealand Prime Minister Helen Clark.

The President will also be joining the ASEAN Leaders' Meeting with U.S. President George W. Bush.

Aside from the bilateral and multilateral talks, the President will address the summit and other meetings of the Chief Executive Officers (CEOs), APEC Business Advisory Council (ABAC), United States Chamber of Commerce and the United States-ASEAN Business Council.

On October 27, the President will proceed to San Diego, California for a brief visit and meet with the local Filipino community, Filipino war veterans and Filipino-American youth leaders.

The next day, the President will move on to San Jose for a roundtable discussion with the Chief Executive Officers of Semiconductor Industry Association member companies and of top Bay Area companies.

She will also have a one-on-one meeting with the CEOs of companies with incoming investment projects in the Philippines as well as with the Commonwealth Club Silicon Valley program.

She will also visit the Intel headquarters while in San Jose.

On October 29, the President will be in San Francisco where she will have meetings with the leaders of the National Federation of Filipino American Associations as well as the local Filipino community.

She will be back in Manila on Nov. 1.

Businessmen still optimistic economy to grow even in difficult times

Leaders of the local business community have remained optimistic that the economy could still grow as projected this year even in these difficult times.

This affirms the results of a survey conducted by the Business World-Roper ASW Business Confidence Index that business confidence level in the Philippines in early October recovered from the previous month's gloomy position.

Makati Business Club Executive Director Guillermo Luz said that business confidence has recovered as economic indicators have been moving in positive trend with inflation down, foreign exchange stable, exports up and higher gross domestic product (GDP).

Luz, however, noted that during the past five days, several things happened locally and internationally and these could affect business confidence level.

He said that the Middle East problem, that is resulting in the continued rise of world oil prices, is aggravating the situation.

But the fluidity of a situation is not actually all negative and that if it is managed very well, then business confidence can swing to a very high level, Luz said.

Employers Confederation of the Philippines (ECOP) president Donald Dee said business condition has become difficult because of these domestic and external factors.

“These problems may weigh down business confidence. But, not at all times, because there is someone on top who will manage the economy well even in this very difficult situation,” he said.

“During her first 18 months in office, there is no question on the performance of President Arroyo how well she managed the economy,” he added.

Dee said despite domestic problems and the Middle East situation, the economy is still expected to post robust growth this year.

“We are not worried as long as overseas contract workers’ remittances are there. Exports are also still doing well, though slowing down, because of uncertainty,” Dee said.

According to Dee, sincere efforts of the government to contain the widening budget deficit will also help boost the economy.

Sergio Ortiz-Luis, president of the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry (PCCI), said improved business confidence was a result of higher-than-expected economic growth in the second quarter.

GDP, the sum of the value added of agriculture, industry and services less net factor income from the rest of the world, grew 4.5 percent in the second quarter from 3.8 percent in the first quarter.

“This leads to a buoyant economic outlook for the Christmas season,” he said.

Ortiz-Luis, who is also the president of the Philippine Exporters Confederation, said one major factor driving up businessmen’s confidence is the improved exports figure.

Exports posted a 7.8 percent growth from January to August to $22.85 billion. It is estimated that a three percent increase in exports perks up GDP by one percent.

Fight terrorism as one, GMA tells Filipino people

ZAMBOANGA CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo flew today to this city, scene of two mall bombings that killed at least seven people and injured more than a hundred other innocent people, and called on all members of society to join hands with the law enforcement agencies and fight terrorism as one.

“Terrorism cannot survive for long in an unfriendly environment. Let us give terrorism that unfriendly environment. It is time to share in the action and passion,” the President said.

The President, who had then just come from a briefing by military and police commanders on the bombings, visited the dead, condoled with their relatives, and viewed the sufferings of the wounded, including some children, said the two bombs that exploded in the city “should be a challenge for us, the whole country, to show that we can be one.”

“The people of Zamboanga have shown us that they are one. If we are one, if we stay together, we will survive,” she said in her opening statement during a press conference here.

“I want all the communities in the entire country to follow their example,” the President said.

She said the bombings show that the people of Zamboanga care for the victims and are taking steps to prevent all terrorism.

The President then ordered law-enforcement agencies and the Armed Forces of the Philippines to be stricter with regards to those entering Zamboanga City.

She ordered the Maritime Command and the Coast Guard to mobilize and inspect all incoming passengers in the port of Zamboanga.

She also ordered the Avsecom to strengthen security at the airport.

The President, at the same time, commended city officials, the AFP, the Philippine National Police and other agencies for working together for the immediate solution of the terrorism problem in the city.

She also commended the Area Coordinating Center as one of the most successful, expressing the hope that it can be replicated in other parts of the country.

The President also noted that even after the bombing, business is going on as usual in the city.

“When I went to the mall where the first bomb exploded and I asked the owner whether he was open for business, he said he was just waiting for me to finish my inspection and then he will open for business,” the President said.

In carrying out their campaign to sow fear and anxiety among the people, the President said “the terrorists are no longer singling out any group or organization but anybody who will unfortunately be in the area that they want to destroy.”

“They are challenging not only the AFP and the PNP,” the President said. “They are threatening entire communities...They are testing the strength of our soul as a people.”

By doing so, the President added, the terrorists “have heightened the anger of local leaders, elite groups, and all peace-loving citizens who are now uniting and cooperating with our law-enforcement agencies in addressing this mere threat.”

GMA appoints Azcuna to high court

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has appointed Adolfo Azcuna as the new associate justice of the Supreme Court, Press Undersecretary Roberto Capco today announced.

Capco noted that on Wednesday, October 16, the Judicial and Bar Council submitted the names of five nominees for the vacancy in the Supreme Court following the retirement of Justice Santiago Kapunan last August 12.

Aside from Azcuna, the nominees were Court of Appeals Justices Cancio Garcia, Delilah Vidallon Magtolis, Ruben Reyes and Court Administrator Presbitero Velasco Jr.

Azcuna placed first in the number of votes in the Supreme Court with 10 out of 14 votes. Meanwhile, he placed second in the number of votes in the JBC with 6 out of 7 votes.

Under the Constitution, any vacancy in the Supreme Court must be filled within 90 days. The deadline created by the retirement of Justice Kapunan will expire on November 10, 2002.

A professor at the Ateneo Law School, Azcuna placed fourth in the 1962 bar examinations with a grade of 86.6 percent.

He was a partner at the Azcuna Arroyo Chua Caedo Law Office.

He held the positions of chairman in the Philippine National Bank in 1991 and as director at the Development Bank of the Philippines in 1990.

He used to be President Aquino's Chief Presidential Legal Counsel from 1987 to 1990 and was also a member of the Constitutional Commission from 1986 to 1987.

GMA to make a strong pitch for RP's I.C.T. industry in brief stopover in Silicon Valley

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will make a strong pitch for the country's information and communications technology (ICT) and electronic sectors during her brief stopover in California's Silicon Valley after her official visit to Mexico to attend the leaders' meeting of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC).

The President will leave October 24 to attend the 10th APEC Economic Leaders in Los Cabos, Mexico, which will be held from October 26-27. But on her way to Mexico and on her return trip, the President will be making stopovers in some cities in the United States as part of her economic diplomacy.

On her way back, the President will make a brief visit to San Jose City, California, known the world over as the "Silicon Valley," home to the world's biggest producers of ICT and electronic parts.

In San Jose City, the President will meet with officials of American firms that already have substantial investments in the ICT and electronic sectors in the Philippines and ask them to invest more.

The first activity of the President in San Jose City is a roundtable discussion with the members of the Semi-Conductor Association of America and the American Electronics Association.

Fifty six percent of the country's total exports consist of electronics, mostly semi-conductors and other electronic parts.

"Majority of these players come from Silicon Valley. So, the intention is for the President to thank them and to invite more parts makers to come to the Philippines," the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) said in a briefing material.

Among the officials the President would be meeting in San Jose City are those from the Sunpower Corporation, Solitron Global Services, ICT Group, Unical Corporation, and Chevron, whose local subsidiary is known as Texaco, or Caltex.

The Sunpower Corporation would be producing in the Philippines Silicon chips or wafers that are used in the manufacture of high-efficiency airplanes.

The Solitron Global Services, on the other hand, intends to put up more customer services, or ICT centers, in the Philippines.

The ICT Group would also set up additional customer relation centers in the Philippines and plans to hire between 1,000 to 2,000 new workers in the country.

The Unical Corporation, which is already here in the Philippines, under the Philippine Geothermal, Inc. is planning to expand their exploration operations in the country and officials of the firm would like to brief the President about their expansion program.

Texaco, or Caltex, on the other hand, would like to put up their worldwide business outsourcing of facilities in the Philippines to service their accounting requirements in the Asia Pacific region.

Next year's P84.9 billion budget support for Mindanao to help solve its peace and order problem

The Department of Budget and Management (DBM) has said that next year's budgetary support to Mindanao, amounting to P84.9 billion, is based on two considerations, one is to tap the enormous productive potential of the area, and second, to resolve the peace and order problem in the island

In a statement, the DBM said that poverty may not be the root of insurgency and terrorism, but where poverty thrives, terrorism could rear its ugly head.

The DBM said that Mindanao has benefited from a higher per capita budget allocation over the years compared to Luzon and Visayas.

"For 2003, we have identified at least P84.9 billion worth of programs and projects for Mindanao. This is imperative in the light of our efforts to counter the effects of insurgency and rebuild the area from the ravages of terrorism," the DBM said.

Among the major projects to be funded by the Macapagal-Arroyo government in Mindanao in 2003 are the following:

- Construction of airports in Pagadian, Butuan and Cotabato;
- Construction of circumferential roads in Basilan, Cotabato City, and Lake Lanao;
- Expansion and improvement of vital seaports like those in Davao, Zamboanga, General Santos, Dapitan and Polloc;
- Electrification of 82 percent of the barangays in Mindanao, up from 69 percent this year;
- Rehabilitation and construction of communal irrigation system, among them, the Saugod River Irrigation in Davao del Norte, Malitubog Libungan Transbasin in North Cotabato, and Maganoy No. 3 Dam in Sultan Kudarat; and
- Agricultural modernization projects supported by 37 percent of the Department of Agriculture budget.

The Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) alone will devote at least 31 percent of all its infrastructure projects next year to Mindanao, up from 27 percent this year, the DBM said.

"I have also instructed all concerned agencies to realign their regional budgets based on development programs for each area or region and not make their own regional programs separate from area-based development plans. I take this as an important budget policy for 2003 to benefit development areas in Mindanao," DBM Secretary Emilia Boncodin said.

Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo

Fellow citizens of the Republic,

A few troublemakers with limited capabilities are trying to bully 80 million Filipinos into living in fear and terror in their own homes and neighborhoods. They are being unwittingly aided by rumour mongers, and by the hysterical and those easily panicked from among us. Let us not allow ourselves to be cowed into submission by those who seek to terrorize us. Let our calm determination to pursue our normal lives overwhelm their malicious intent to disrupt. Let our alertness to suspicious activities thwart their evil ways. And let our trust and cooperation with the authorities be our shield to their attacks. Keep calm. Be alert. Trust and cooperate with the authorities.

Our uniformed protectors are in full alert. They have already prevented some attacks from occurring, but the vigilance of our whole society is needed to fully protect ourselves from these secretive and determined extremists. Justice will be meted out to perpetrators of those bomb attacks that have not been prevented.

Let us not allow terrorists to destroy our day. Let us live our lives normally under the protection of our authorities. Let this be our unified act of defiance against terrorism. Let us support the determined efforts of our law enforcers to root out this evil from among us.

GMA issues 10-point plan to counter terrorists threat

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today issued a ten point police-community anti-terrorism plan to address terrorist threats around the country.

The President issued the plan during the meeting of the Presidential Oversight Committee on Internal Security, this morning in Malacañang, which was attended by local executives of Metro Manila.

First and foremost, the plan calls for the immediate convening of all peace and order councils (POCs) in the provinces, cities, municipalities and also the convening of the barangay peace and order committees

This is to put in place and activate the local officials' respective anti-terrorism sub-committees to address the terrorist threats.

The plan also calls for the adoption of anti-terrorism public safety plan by the POCs of all provinces, cities and municipalities and by the barangay peace and order committees.

The public safety plan would provide law enforcement authorities reporting and feedback mechanisms necessary to ensure regular monitoring of unusual and suspicious movements of inhabitants in their respective localities.

Third, the President also called for the convening of the barangay assemblies all over the country for the purpose of educating their constituents on how to deal and cope with terrorist threats in their respective barangays.

Fourth, all barangay tanods in the country would conduct daily regular "rondas" and searches in public places within their respective area of jurisdiction in accordance with law.

Fifth, the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP) and other law enforcement agencies should intensify their intelligence work aimed at speeding up the identification of the terrorist groups.

Sixth, the AFP, PNP and other law enforcement agencies should conduct a speedy investigation, arrest and prosecution of the perpetrators responsible for the recent bombing incidents.

Seventh, the police and other law enforcement agencies should review and update their respective public safety and security plans in public and private installations and establishment such as shopping malls, markets, supermarkets, schools, public parks and plazas, theaters and amusements places, bus and jeepney terminals, parking spaces, bus and jeepney stops, factories and public buildings and the like.

Eight, the citizenry should be more vigilant and assist in the anti-terrorist campaign by immediately reporting to the authorities suspicious persons, unattended baggage and other materials.

Ninth, owners, proprietors and administrators of establishments should review and update their safety and security plan by including the conduct of thorough and regular searches of persons as well as baggage and personal belongings of customers in the entrances of their respective establishments.

Tenth, all non-governmental organizations, church groups, civic organizations and other sectoral organizations in the localities must help and assist their respective local government officials and their local peace and order councils and committees in the overall effort against terrorist threats by actively participating in the education campaign on how the citizenry can cope and deal with terrorist threats.

Gov't to employ 'Oplan Kapkap' and 'Police Marshal System' to address terrorist threats

As part of government efforts to address terrorist threats, the government will be enforcing "Oplan Kapkap," and the "Police Marshal" system, Press Undersecretary Roberto Capco said today.

In a briefing in Malacañang, Capco said the police under 'Oplan Kapkap' will undertake random check and searches on bus and jeepney passengers, even people in malls and other public places.

Capco said under the Police Marshal System, uniformed policemen will board public conveyances to check on passengers and the over-all situation.

"Our intention here is to increase police visibility. We want the public to see that the police force is doing their job protecting the people," Capco said.

Capco also said the Philippine National Police (PNP) will be giving additional police cars and motorcycles to cities and towns in Metro Manila.

There's also a plan to deploy in Metro Manila for the meantime some 1,700 police trainees currently training in the Philippine National Police Academy.

"This is to ensure that we can secure as many public places as possible," Capco said.

Capco also said that local executives will be the over-all in-charge in addressing terrorist threats and acts of terrorism in their localities.

"This is part of our incident management strategy whereby local executives take full charge," he said.

According to Capco, Metro Manila Development Authority chairman Bayani Fernando said that Metro Manila mayors have assured the President of preparedness in handling these contingencies.

"The mayors would be on top of such situations, the police being now under their full control," he said.

The President's Day: October 20, 2002

20 OCTOBER 2002

- GMA calls for grassroots vigilance, timely reporting system to combat terrorism

GMA calls for grassroots vigilance, timely reporting system to combat terrorism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo called today for grassroots vigilance backed up by a timely and efficient reporting system to the police and the military to combat terrorism.

In her expanded radio message to the people delivered over the weekend, the President called on everyone to do his or her share in the battle against trouble makers "trying to bully 80-million Filipinos into living in fear and terror in their own homes and neighborhood."

"It is the vigilance of the ordinary citizens in the streets that makes the difference in the war against terrorism," said the President.

"We must further strengthen our grassroots focus against terrorism," the President added. "Each and every citizen can help prevent harm to the community and the nation."

The President said the mayors of Metro Manila, in a meeting in Malacañang yesterday along with the National Security Council, agreed to take the lead in the war against terrorism and the protection of the citizenry against secretive and defiant extremists.

The President added that the mayors, who now have control over the police, will also take the lead in the gathering of intelligence information and the operations against the terrorists.

The mayors will also have the responsibility to supervise cases of terrorist incidents in their areas of responsibility, including the investigation and arrest of those behind such acts of violence against society, the President said.

"The police and the military shall assist the mayors in this responsibility as needed," the President said.

Among the sites and facilities the mayors must protect are those that may be targeted by the terrorists, the President added. These include places frequented by the people, communications facilities, fuel depots and other areas and facilities that would provide political and propaganda value to the terrorists.

GMA offers estero squatters safer homes, opportunities for better life

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the relocation of squatters from river banks and esteros to government resettlement sites offers them not only safer living facilities but also opportunities for a better life.

In her brief remarks during the transfer of 5,913 families to the resettlement area in Kasiglahan Village in Barangay San Jose in Rodriguez (formerly Montalban) Rizal, the President stressed the importance of relocating squatter families living dangerously along riverbanks, esteros, bridges and other hazardous sites.

“Kailangan talaga na magkaroon ng tahanan ang lahat at lalo na iyong masasabi nating ligtas, kasi 'yun mga tabi ng ilog, nakatabi sa estero, hindi iyon ligtas (Everyone must have a home, especially safe homes. Living along the rivers banks and esteros is not safe at all),” the President said.

Aside from being exposed to dangers, the President said squatter areas do not offer amenities and transportation facilities like the Kasiglahan Village resettlement area.

The government is therefore giving the squatters the chance for a better life and the opportunity to buy their own homes, the President said.

Whenever necessary, as in the case of the Kasiglahan Village, transportation facilities are provided to make livelihood opportunities available, the President also said.

Kasiglahan Village 1, popularly known as KV-1, is a resettlement project of the National Housing Authority (NHA) situated at Barangay San Jose. The project was primarily intended for the affected families of the Pasig River Rehabilitation Program.

In June 1999, the first batch of families residing along the banks of the Pasig River in Barangay San Agustin, Quiapo, Manila were relocated in Kasiglahan Village 1.

A total of 9,915 housing units are available in the Kasiglahan Village. As of last July, 5,623 units are already occupied. San Jose Plains has 4,845 occupants and Sub-Urban has 778 occupants. Exactly 2,176 families came from the Pasig River and 3,477 other families are non-Pasig River residents.

Existing community facilities on site are schools, market, health and day-care centers, recreational grounds and jeepney terminal.

GMA acts to regain people's trust in P.E.A., gov't

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today enumerated several measures designed to clean up the mess in the Public Estates Authority (PEA) in order to regain the people's trust in the agency and in the government itself.

In her speech at the 80th founding anniversary of the Philippine Nurses Association, Inc. at the Manila Hotel, the President said although the Senate blue ribbon committee has found that proper procedures were followed in the Manila Bay reclamation road project, still the overall cost has been quite excessive.

“Kaya, dahil doon, hindi pa rin ako kontento (That is why, because of this, I am still not contented),” the President said.

The President said she still want “to go to the bottom of the controversy, discern the truth, identify the wrong doers, if any, clear the innocent and possibly revamp the PEA for being embroiled in many scandals.”

She said that she has ordered state probers investigating the PEA anomaly to speed up the pace of work, unmask the guilty party, and submit a final report at the earliest possible time.

The President said that although she has ordered the PEA board to go on leave, she was willing to accept their resignations, without prejudice to their prosecution if recommended by the Department of Justice or the Senate blue ribbon committee.

According to the President, she has also directed the PEA interim board of directors as well as the agency’s top officials and employees to fully cooperate with the ongoing investigation and to conduct its own parallel inquiry on the reclamation road project.

She said that she has also ordered the PEA interim board to make its work fully transparent and above suspicion.

The President also suspended all pending and planned projects of the PEA, especially those requiring public bidding “until the investigation of the alleged overpricing of the project at the reclamation area shall have been completed.”

GMA announces signing of Nursing Act of 2002

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced today that she already signed into law the Nursing Act of 2002 which makes the nursing profession more responsive to the ever-changing health needs of the country and the whole world.

The President made the announcement during her speech at the annual convention of the Philippine Nurses Association, Inc. at the Manila Hotel which is also celebrating its 80th Foundation Day and Nurses Week.

The President lauded both houses of Congress for the passage of Nursing Act and thanked Senator Juan Flavier and Rep. Eladio Jala, principal sponsors of the bill in the Senate and the House of Representative.

President noted that the Nursing Act emphasizes the expansion of the nurse’s role to include comprehensive specialty programs. The new law establishes a minimum base pay for nurses working in the government and abroad and expands the Board of Nursing membership and enhances their functions.

The President said that by enhancing the functions of the Board of Nursing, the law enhances the professionalism of nurses in the country.

In her speech, the President paid tribute to the heroes and heroines in the nursing profession.

“We don’t have to talk about Florence Nightingale anymore,” the President said. “We have our own Ediborah Pamaran Yap.”

“Even in the darkest depths of adversity, Ediborah stuck to her professional oath. She is our model of devotion,” the President added. “She was a true nurse and heroine for all seasons.”

GMA renews call for people to unite in fight against terrorism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today renewed her appeal to the people to unite in fighting terrorism, saying that complacency would only embolden the terrorists to further spread their “ideology of mayhem” in the country.

In her speech at the 80th founding anniversary of the Philippine Nurses Association, Inc. at the Manila Hotel, the President said the bombing attacks in Bali, Indonesia and in Zamboanga City, show that terrorism knows no boundaries.

“We must work together to fight terrorism. We cannot sit back and wait. We must take this fight to the terrorists before they undermine our very way of living,” the President said.

The President said that recent events proved that terrorists are not guided by moral or religious conviction. “They are nothing more than murderers of innocent people driven by an ideology of mayhem,” she said.

According to the President, many of her opponents have criticized her decisions in making an unequivocal stand against terrorism.

“But I have to tell you I make no apologies to aggressively seeking to root out terrorism in the Philippines. And to putting considerable efforts in seeking regional consensus on fighting terrorism,” the President said.

The President also extolled the important role being played by the country’s nurses in coping with the effects of terrorism, citing the “modern day heroism” of Ediborah Yap who was executed by the terrorist Abu Sayyaf in Basilan.

“Even in the darkest depths of adversity, Deborah stuck to her professional oath. She is a model of devotion not just of her profession but of humankind,” the President said.

She said the heroism of Deborah has become a defining point of what it truly is to be of service to others. “It also defines terrorism as a universal fight and not the challenge of a single profession or a single nation or a single region,” the President said.

The story of Ediborah Yap, the President said, illustrates that greatness beckons every hour in the nursing profession.

She explained that this greatness is also present in the story of every Filipino nurse who leaves her family to work abroad to secure a home and a future for them.

City mayors vow to lead fight against terrorism, support national ID system

Local government executives today vowed to take the lead in the fight against terrorism as the League of Cities of the Philippines expressed support for the national ID system as well as the anti-terrorism bill.

The league, an organization of all city mayors in the country, led by its president, Tagaytay City Mayor Francis Tolentino, assured President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in their meeting this afternoon in Malacañang that they would file resolutions in support of the two proposals.

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, who attended the meeting, said the city mayors expressed their support for the national ID system and the anti-terrorism bill because they feel that there is an urgent need for everyone to take part in the fight against terrorism.

“The mayors have agreed to take the lead role,” Bunye said.

Bunye also said that during the meeting, it was concluded from Commission on Audit (COA) Chairman Guillermo Carague that local executives could now take advantage of the calamity fund in the event that terrorism strikes in their locality.

Meanwhile, the cities of Baguio and Cebu have agreed to undertake pilot implementation of the national ID system.

The local executives would also acquire more equipment that would be utilized against terrorist threats such as metal detectors and bomb-sniffing dogs.

Bunye added that the mayors agreed to hire police auxiliary personnel “as long as they do not carry guns.”

Aside from Mayor Tolentino, among the city mayors who attended the meeting in Malacañang were San Fernando City (La Union) Mayor Mary Jane Ortega, Iloilo City Mayor Jerry Trenas, Bacolod City Mayor Luzviminda Valdez and Gen. Santos City Mayor Pedro Acharon.

Top officers from the Philippine National Police and Armed Forces of the Philippines likewise attended the meeting.

Palace lauds local execs of Cebu City, Baguio for offering to pilot-test I.D. system

Malacañang today lauded the local governments of Cebu City and Baguio City for agreeing to pilot-test the national identification system (NIS) in their respective areas.

In an interview, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that if the NIS would be successfully carried out in the two cities, then it would be easy to implement the plan throughout the country.

During a meeting in Malacañang Monday, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo approved the offer of Cebu City Mayor Tomas Osmeña and Baguio City Vice Mayor Lourdes Tabanda to pilot-test the NIS in their cities pending the passage of a law on this plan.

According to Osmeña and Tabanda, the NIS could be implemented in the cities through city ordinances.

Bunye said that through the pilot-testing of the NIS, kinks could be ironed out before a bill is crafted and submitted to both houses of Congress.

Authorities agreed that one effective way of combating terrorism is to put in place a national ID mechanism, to be based initially on the Social Security System ID card.

Bunye also said that during the meeting last week in Brunei Darussalam of the ASEAN Ministers Responsible for Information, it was agreed that there is a need for a region-wide cooperation in the fight against global terrorism.

A resolution signed by the ministers after the meeting condemned the bombings in Bali, Indonesia and in Zamboanga City.

"The members of ASEAN are resolved to help each other in the fight against international terrorism," Bunye said.

No 'lavish' party for Ateneo cagers, says Palace

Malacañang today took exception to malicious reports that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was hosting "a lavish party" in the palace for the victorious basketball team of Ateneo de Manila University (ADMU) while Zamboanga City was rocked with its second bomb attack.

"Just to set the record straight. The party was anything but lavish or excessive as some reports portrayed the occasion," Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said in a statement.

Bunye said food served during the occasion was "pica-pica."

There was a lot of picture-taking and autograph signing. "But that was about it. The President just dropped in to congratulate the players but she did not stay long," Bunye said.

Bunye also said that the occasion was scheduled in advance.

"We just have to get on with our lives. Let us not allow the terrorists to dictate our tempo," Bunye said.

Over the weekend, the President also held a series of command conferences with top military and police officials, as well as with Metro Manila mayors, to discuss measures in the wake of bomb attacks in Zamboanga City and in Balintawak, Quezon City.

Bunye condoles with family of Nonoy Marcelo

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today extended her condolences to the family of well-known cartoonist Severino "Nonoy" Marcelo who died Tuesday at the Chinese General Hospital in Manila due to complications arising from diabetes.

The President said that with Marcelo's death, Philippine media has lost a pillar in illustrative journalism.

During his long career as a caricaturist and editorial cartoonist, Marcelo has been cited for his perceptive insights into everyday life and political developments of the country, the President said.

She said that as a social and political satirist, Marcelo has been known for his long-running "Tisoy" and "Ikabod" comic strips.

In 1985, Marcelo's "Ikabod" was honored by the prestigious Catholic Mass Media Award, one of the rare occasions where a comic strip was recognized as a serious journalistic commentary.

Marcelo carried "Ikabod" to the now-defunct Pinoy Times where he last served as the paper's art director.

Aside from his daily "Ikabod," Marcelo also illustrated the Pinoy Times' editorial cartoon and a front-page cartoon complimenting the banner story.

Marcelo started his career as a cartoonist in the early 1960s with "Plain Folks" for the Daily Mirror. He then moved over to the Manila Times in 1962, where he created the highly popular comic strip, "Tisoy." Two movies and a television series were later spun off from "Tisoy."

GMA arrives in Cebu City to turn over gov't projects

CEBU CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and her official party arrived at the Mactan Benito Ebuen Air Force Base here at 2:15 p.m. today

The President was met by top civilian and military officials here who have been waiting for her since 9:00 a.m. She was originally scheduled to arrive here at 9:25 a.m.

Immediately after disembarking from her plane, a Learjet, the President boarded a blue and white helicopter which took her to Colawin, Argao to attend a program at the Colawin National High School.

Argao, the hometown of Chief Justice Hilario Davide Jr., is situated some 66 kilometers southeast of this city.

During the program, the President distributed certificates of turnover for three projects, namely, the farmers trading post building, the research farm house and the Colawin multi-purpose irrigation system.

The President also turned over a P5-million check for the Cebu Vegetable Highway project.

From Argao, the President and her party proceeded to Danao City to attend the groundbreaking of a fish port project.

Tonight, the President is scheduled to attend a dinner at the Cebu Grand Convention Center to celebrate the recent selection of Cebu City Mayor Tomas Osmeña as one of two outstanding city mayors in the country.

On Wednesday morning, she is expected to attend the national conference of the United Catholic Student Councils at the University of San Carlos (USC) before returning to Manila.

Hawaii awaits GMA visits amid preparations for centennial of Filipinos in Aloha State

HONOLULU, Hawaii – Filipinos in Hawaii are now in the midst of feverish preparations for the first visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to the Aloha State on October 24.

While the visit is brief – the President will fly in from Manila on her way to attend the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) summit in Los Cabos, Mexico and is expected to stay only overnight – the Filipinos here are waiting for the Philippine leader with great anticipation, being perhaps only the third Filipino President to come to Hawaii after the late President Ferdinand E. Marcos and then President Fidel V. Ramos.

While in Hawaii, the President is scheduled to meet with United States Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, a supporter of Philippine interests in the US legislature in Washington, and Admiral Thomas Fargo, commander in chief of the US Pacific Command based here.

She is also scheduled to visit the Philippine Community Center on the islands and meet with the members of the large Filipino community here.

The President comes to Hawaii at a very auspicious and appropriate time. The highest state leader, Governor Benjamin Cayetano, is a lawyer who is originally from Urdaneta, Pangasinan, and the top leaders of the state Senate and state House of Representatives as well as the state Supreme Court are also of Filipino descent.

The state's Senate President is Robert Bunda (Democrat) who was born in Quezon City. In the state Supreme Court are Associate Justices Mario Ramil, who was born in Quezon City, and Simeon Acoba, Jr., although born in Hawaii, is also of Filipino descent.

The President's visit also comes at a time when the Filipinos are busy campaigning for a Filipino, State Senator Ron Menor, for Lieutenant Governor who could later be a strong candidate for governor.

More than that, the President's visit will also be a big boost to the preparations of the Filipinos here for the grand celebration of the arrival of the Filipinos 100 years ago.

While the grand centennial celebration of the arrival of the first Filipinos in Hawaii will not be until 2006, the Filipino community here is already in the heat of the campaign for the big event, thanks to Filipino leaders headed by Governor Cayetano, the first Filipino to be elected as state governor in Hawaii and in the entire United States, and Assemblyman Felipe Abinsay, Jr. of the State House of Representatives.

With the support of Cayetano and through the initiative of Assemblyman Abinsay and his fellow Filipino assemblymen in the state House of Representatives and the Filipino senators in the state Senate, the 21st State Legislature Regular Session of the State of Hawaii has approved a bill creating an organization that will oversee the arrangements for the commemoration of the centennial anniversary of the arrival of the first Filipinos in Hawaii.

Assemblyman Abinsay said the organization is called the Filipino Centennial Celebration Commission under House Bill No. 1942 which both chambers of the State Legislature approved unanimously last April. The bill was subsequently signed into law on June 12 by Governor Cayetano and took effect only last July 1 as Hawaii Act No. 159.

Abinsay said that in approving the measure, the State Legislature of Hawaii recognized that the members of the Filipino community in Hawaii have “contributed significantly and substantially to the growth and development of Hawaii.”

“Since the arrival of the first Filipinos in Hawaii in 1906, the rich culture and proud heritage of the Filipino people have been and continue to be a positive influence upon life in Hawaii,” the Hawaii lawmakers said.

“In recognition of the great contributions of Filipinos to Hawaii’s diverse and multi-cultural society, a celebration to commemorate their arrival and subsequent achievements in Hawaii is appropriate,” the lawmakers said.

According to Abinsay, the Filipino Centennial Celebration Commission will take charge of all arrangements for the commemoration of the centennial of the Filipinos in Hawaii.

The members of the 15-man commission, to be appointed by the governor from the Filipino community, will represent government, labor, business, culture and the arts, and the community at large.

GMA joining APEC summit to advance RP economy, coordinate security action with Pacific allies

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye today said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will be traveling to the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Leaders Meeting on Oct. 26 and 27 in Los Cabos, Mexico to advance the Philippine economy and coordinate security through concerted action with its Pacific allies.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, the Press Secretary said the President expressed the belief that now, more than ever, the member-economies of APEC must work together to bolster security and at the same time advance their economies.

“It is vital that the work of APEC continue undeterred by global terrorism or economic slowdown,” Bunye said.

The President believes that the opportunity to make the case for trade and investment in the Philippines to regional business leaders is critical to bringing about more economic opportunity to the Philippines, Bunye added.

The President is resolute in her belief that the APEC agenda and the benefits it brings in terms of jobs and trade and peace and security are essential at this important junction in time, Bunye said.

“The President looks forward to having frank and honest discussions with the other APEC leaders, including wide-ranging discussions on the hunt to destroy terrorists and the need to tackle poverty in order to undermine terrorism,” Bunye said.

The President will leave for Los Cabos on October 25 from Hawaii where she will hold meetings with US Senator Daniel Inouye and Admiral Thomas Fargo, Commander in Chief of the US Pacific Command.

In Los Cabos, the President will take the opportunity to hold bilateral meetings with her Australian Prime Minister John Howard, Russian President Vladimir Putin and New Zealand Prime Minister Helen Clark.

She will also be joining the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) leaders’ meeting with US President George Bush.

Aside from bilateral and multilateral talks, the President will address the summit and other meetings of the Chief Executive Officers (CEOs), APEC Business Advisory Council (ABAC), US Chamber of Commerce and the US-ASEAN Business Council.

Palace insists present situation does not warrant emergency powers for GMA

Malacañang today reiterated its previous stand that under the present situation, there is no need to clothe President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo with emergency powers.

In his regular press briefing, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said that although some well-meaning leaders in the House of Representatives, notably Deputy Speaker Raul Gonzales, volunteered to file a resolution giving emergency powers to the President, the administration does not see any need for them.

“The present situation does not warrant it,” Bunye said, adding that the proposal was not even discussed in official meetings in Malacañang.

Gonzales wanted the President to wield extra powers to cope with the threats of terrorism in the wake of bomb attacks in Zamboanga City and in Metro Manila.

In a related topic, Bunye also said that since they enjoy autonomy, local government units have the right to legislate within their jurisdictions and this includes the right to impose curfew for minors in their localities.

“The curfew is being undertaken by various local government units. For as long as they are covered by appropriate ordinances, these ordinances are deemed valid until proven otherwise,” Bunye said.

Bunye said that ordinances passed by local government units are deemed legal unless overturned later on by the Supreme Court or by some appropriate judicial body.

Special diplomatic mission to Europe a success — Ople

“The mission is a success,”

In a press statement issued today, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople said the special diplomatic mission to the European nations that he headed “succeeded in initiating the process of severely limiting the ability of the CPP-NPA-NDF (Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army-National Democratic Front) to mobilize and use their financial and material resources to commit acts of terrorism in the Philippines.”

Ople said the European officials who met with the diplomatic mission reiterated their support for the war against terrorism and expressed their desire to assist the Philippines in its own efforts to fight terrorism.

According to Ople, the diplomatic mission, composed of Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita, Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales, Presidential Management Staff Head Silvestre Afable, Jr., and Undersecretary Abraham Purunggan of the Office of the Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns, traveled to Germany, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Belgium and Spain “to ask the support of our European partners for our own efforts at combating terrorism and to bring terrorists to justice.”

Several European officials gave their commitment to declare the CPP-NPA as terrorist organizations while others agreed to study this matter closely, Ople said.

Ople said he led the diplomatic mission to end the death and destruction brought by the terroristic acts committed by the CPP-NPA-NDF and to bring peace and progress to the Filipino people.

“Within the span of a week, the diplomatic mission held discussions with senior officials from the ministries of foreign affairs, justice and interior of Germany, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Belgium and Spain,” Ople said.

The diplomatic mission also met with Javier Solana, Secretary-General of the European Union, and Chris Patten, the European Commission’s Commissioner for External Relations and former Governor of Hong Kong.

GMA orders PAGC to conduct lifestyle check on all gov’t officials

ARGAO, Cebu—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) to spearhead a lifestyle check of all government officials from Cabinet secretaries down to bureau directors as well as executives of government-owned and controlled corporations (GOCCs), government financial institutions (GFIs) and other offices of the executive branch.

In her speech at the Third Farmer-Scientists Congress held at the Colawin Technical School here, the President said that her administration will embark, starting next week, on a campaign to foster honesty in public service.

The President said that under this campaign those who have shown dedication and fidelity to the service will be rewarded but sanctions will be imposed on government officials and employees found to have amassed wealth and property beyond their means “or those who visibly live in affluence when their circumstances do not warrant such luxury.”

She said she has empowered the PAGC to enlist the material and manpower support of other Cabinet departments to enable it to carry out its work of cleansing the bureaucracy of corrupt officials.

The President was specific in ordering the PAGC to conduct the lifestyle check of government officials immediately.

In the presidential directive, the PAGC was ordered to undertake the following as part of the campaign:

- to determine compliance with present government requirements, such as submission of statement of assets, liabilities (SAL) and net worth, submission of income tax returns, and other requirements needed for assumption to office;
- to make determination in current standard of life of government executives covered by the order or consistent with submitted SAL;
- to make ocular inspections of the residences, properties and businesses of government officials;
- to submit reports to the Office of the President on the result of its work on regular basis;
- to communicate to the public its findings and recommendations; and
- to undertake investigation and prosecution as part of its work.

In her speech, the President, however, said that while the government is determined to conduct the campaign without pause, people should not expect prosecutions and convictions overnight.

“Due process will be observed in the course of the drive. The effort may be laborious but it shall be focused and determined,” the President said.

She also called on the perpetrators of graft “to change, to repent and to correct their ways.”

“Magbago na kayo. Magsisi, sa pamamagitan ng matuwid at malinis na paglilingkod (You change, you repent by being honest and dedicated in your jobs),” the President said.

Gov't lauds int'l call center firm for choosing RP as major operations hub

Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia A. Sto. Tomas today expressed the appreciation of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration to e-Telecare International, the country's largest call center, for choosing the Philippines as its major investment and operations site.

In a report, Sto. Tomas said that the call center industry is a sunshine industry that represents a window of growth for the country.

Sto. Tomas congratulated e-Telecare International for inaugurating its second call center facility at the PBCom Tower in Makati City.

The firm is expected to employ some 2,500 workers in its new facility that occupies three floors of the Philippines' tallest building.

e-Telecare International started with only 25 workers when it set up its first facility in the Philippines at the Citibank Square in Eastwood Park, Quezon City two years ago.

The firm now counts among its clients some of the world's top financial institutions, telecommunications giants and service organizations. By the end of this year, the company expects to have a workforce of 1,800. It expects to triple that number in three years.

"The services sector, including call centers and fast food chains, are boosting employment, and helping cushion weak job growth in other sectors," Sto. Tomas said.

She said the firm's opening of its second center in the Philippines shows that employment is flourishing in this particular industry.

The call center industry, Sto. Tomas said, attests to the fact that "the Philippines' best natural resource is labor."

James Franke, president of e-Telecare International, cited the role of the Filipino workers in the company. "Broadly speaking, the first member of our team is the Philippines itself, with its highly educated, English speaking workforce," he said.

Franke said the company's Filipino workers enabled the firm to clinch seven major awards in the United States in the past 12 months, adding that his company earned the "best of the best" distinction for outsourced call center services in the International Call Center Management Conference held recently in Chicago, USA.

GMA orders Perez to refer Transco raps to PAGC

CEBU CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today instructed Energy Secretary Vicente Perez to refer to the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) for investigation those implicated by Sen. Sergio Osmeña III in his privilege speech to the alleged anomalies in the National Transmission Co. (Transco).

In her speech at the University of San Carlos here, the President said she has also ordered the investigation of alleged anomalies in the Public Estates Authority, Philippine National Construction Corp., and the Movie and Television Review and Classification Board (MTRCB).

Just yesterday in Argao, the President ordered the PAGC to conduct a lifestyle check on top government officials – from Cabinet secretaries, undersecretaries, assistant secretaries to bureau directors; executives of government-owned and control corporations; heads of government financial institutions and other major offices in the executive branch of government – to see if they are living within their means.

The President, however, cautioned the people not to expect prosecution and convictions overnight.

"Due process will be observed," she said, adding that the process may be laborious but will be focused and determined.

Earlier this week, the President suspended all pending and planned projects of the PEA, especially those requiring public bidding "until the investigation of the alleged overpricing of the project at the reclamation area shall have been completed."

The President said she wants "to go to the bottom of the controversy, discern the truth, identify the wrong doers, if any, clear the innocent and possibly revamp the PEA for being embroiled in scandals."

GMA says she, First Gentleman to set example in fight against graft

CEBU CITY – In fighting graft and corruption, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said the primordial requirement is to set an example from the top.

This is why even the First Gentleman, Atty. Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo, is not above the law when she enjoined him to face a Senate investigation.

"I have enjoined him to face the Senate investigation to demonstrate that there are no sacred cows in my government," the President said.

And as expected, she said the accusations against him were found to be false and politically-motivated.

She said by letting her husband face inquiry, she has gained moral authority to call on investigation on graft herself.

"Batobato sa langit, pag natamaan huwag magagalit (whoever is hit should not get hurt)," she said.

Yesterday, the President ordered the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) to conduct a lifestyle check on all officials of the government, including those in government-owned and controlled corporations (GOCCs) and government financial institutions (GFIs).

GMA lauds police, Lobregat for speedy arrest of suspects in Zambo bombings

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Philippine National Police (PNP) and Zamboanga City Mayor Maria Clara Lobregat for their coordination resulting in the speedy arrest of five suspects believed behind the series of bombing attacks in Zamboanga City during the past weeks.

The five suspects, believed to be members of the terrorist Abu Sayyaf Group, were presented to the President at the Villamor Air Base upon her arrival this morning from Cebu City.

In her brief remarks at the presentation of the suspects, the President particularly congratulated PNP chief, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Chief Superintendent Eduardo Matillano, chief of the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (CIDG), and Mayor Lobregat.

Mayor Lobregat was also present during the presentation, along with Ebdane and Matillano.

The President also congratulated the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) for its role in the joint enforcement and command in Mindanao especially in the fight against terrorist elements.

She cited the example of Mayor Lobregat, saying that when the mayor is in command in the fight against crimes, law enforcement units act more in concert.

In answer to a query, the President said that police officers responsible for the arrests are not entitled to cash rewards but they will be given promotions aside from receiving medals of valor.

A PNP press statement said that the five suspects were arrested Tuesday by elements of PNP-CIDG, Police Anti-Crime Emergency Response (PACER) and Police Regional Office 9 during a raid conducted at a suspected Abu Sayyaf Group hideout in Guiwan, Zamboanga City.

The suspects were arrested based on the descriptions provided by the many witnesses who saw them park the bicycle where the bombs were attached at the entrance of the Fort Pilar Shrine last October 20 prior to the explosion that killed the Marine sentry and wounded 10 others.

Initial findings of the investigation showed that the security measures at the checkpoint had prevented the suspects from bringing the bicycle inside the premises of the Fort Pilar Shrine where it would have caused more damage.

Arrested in separate operations were the following:

- Abduljamin Asanul Habi alias Abdulasis/Jamin/Bas Jumail, 18 years old, Yakan, resident of Kalabasa, Curuan, Zamboanga City;
- Bas Ismael alias Big Boy Arab/Arab, 18 years old, Tausug, resident of Siasi, Sulu;
- Madznul Abdula Ladja alias Arjhon Morales/"Eddie", 23, Tausug, resident of Siasi, Sulu;
- Buyungan Bungkak alias Jul, 19, Tausug, resident of Manicahan, Zamboanga City; and
- Rajak Sagumayan alias Rajak, 27, Yakan, resident of Curuan, Zamboanga City.

The arrest were made by virtue of search warrants issued by Judge Jesus Carbon of RTC Branch 16, Ninth Judicial Region in Zamboanga City.

The PNP said their operatives recovered from the suspects two caliber .45 pistols and paraphernalia and equipment for making bombs like long-nose pliers, a cutter, two cell phone units, powder substances, one bicycle compressor, one alarm clock and documents containing instructions for bomb-making

According to the PNP, the suspects are believed to be responsible for at least three bombing incidents, namely, the Malagutay bombing last October 2, the twin explosions at Shop-o-Rama and Shoppers Central last October 7, and the Fort Pilar Shrine bombing last October 20.

The arrested persons are currently undergoing tactical interrogation. Appropriate charges are being prepared against them.

GMA stresses due process to be observed in fight against graft in public offices

CEBU CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that while her administration is determined to rid the bureaucracy of grafters and wrongdoers, the people should not expect convictions overnight because due process will still have to be followed.

In her speech this morning at the opening of the Catholic Student Leaders Conference held at the University of San Carlos here, the President said it is also part of the moral and principled leadership to observe due process in the course of the campaign against corruption in public offices.

In Argao yesterday, the President said that she had ordered the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) to conduct a lifestyle check on all officials of the government as part of her campaign against graft and corruption.

The President said she realized that graft in government could not be crushed in a single stroke like the slaying of the dragon by Saint Michael's sword or washed away like dirty tables with a Herculean douse of water.

She cited as example former Commissioner Rene Banez of the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) who tried to fight graft in the agency like Saint Michael or Hercules.

The President said that in his efforts to fight graft at the BIR as fast as possible, Banez was sabotaged by his own people, prompting him to resign and concentrate on his job as consultant at the Department of Finance.

The lesson that has been learned in the Banez case, the President said, is that like an infected wound, corruption must be healed not by Saint Michael's dragon but by "patient, constant and steady disinfecting, scraping, and cleansing."

The President said that part of this "scraping and cleansing" process is the adoption of the e-procurement program that has saved billions of pesos and minimized anomalies in government transactions.

She also announced that the BIR, under its new commissioner, former Customs Commissioner Guillermo Parayno, has been able to achieve its revenue target for the month of October after so many months of being below target.

The BIR collections for October, the President said, is about one-third higher than the bureau's collection for the same period last year, thus proving that it pays to have experienced and honest official in revenue generating agencies in the person of Commissioner Parayno.

GMA determined to stamp out graft, corruption

CEBU CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed that she is very concerned about stamping out graft and corruption in government.

In her speech at the opening ceremonies of the Catholic Student Leaders Conference at the University of San Carlos here, the President noted that she is very much influenced by his father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, who made God first, country second and family third in his priorities.

“We were disciplined to be self-effacing, not self-aggrandizing,” the President said.

In fighting graft and corruption, the President said the primordial requirement is to set an example at the top.

Yesterday in Argao, the President recalled, she announced the launch of “a campaign to foster honesty in public service, reward dedication, fidelity to service, and sanction government officials and employees discovered to have amassed wealth and property beyond their means, or who visibly live in affluence when their circumstances do not warrant such luxury.”

The President said she ordered the Presidential Ant-graft Commission (PAGC) to spearhead the conduct of a lifestyle check of Cabinet secretaries, undersecretaries, assistant secretaries, bureau directors, executives of government-owned or controlled corporations, heads of government financial institutions, and other major offices in the executive branch.

“Let me assure you, my young friends, that I am working diligently to ensure that the people are getting the professional and clean government you deserve,” the President told the student leaders.

“The Filipino masses are with me in this campaign,” the President said in Argao earlier. “And we shall celebrate the removal, charging in court and sending to jail of thieves in suit and barong.”

Bunye congratulates PBS program for winning CMMA

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye today commended Radyo Pilipinas-Overseas of the Philippine Broadcasting Service (PBS) for winning the Best Radio Feature Program for this year’s Catholic Mass Media Awards (CMMA).

In his letter of commendation to Tanny Rodriguez: Broadcast Station Manager of Radyo Pilipinas, the Press Secretary cited the prestige and honor that the station brought to the Office of the Press Secretary by clinching the award from the prestigious annual television and radio competition.

“Undas” examines the colorful burial traditions of both Christian and Muslim Filipinos; and provides an expert’s perspective on common experiences that are believed to be paranormal occurrences.

Radyo Pilipinas bagged the prestigious award for the second straight year.

Rodriguez dedicated the award to the millions of Overseas Filipino Workers across the globe who are the primary audience of Radyo Pilipinas.

Rey Sampang wrote the script, while Danny Morados provided the musical scoring. Joshua Ayuste and Gene Tan were the segment producers for the award-winning radio program.

Radyo Pilipinas uses the shortwave facilities of the International Broadcasting Bureau (Voice of America) for its worldwide transmission.

The station’s Filipino service is aired daily at the frequencies of 11.720/12.270/15/190 mHz, from 1730-1930 UTC. Its English Service, meanwhile, is aired over 11.885/15.120/15/270 mHz from 0200-0330 UTC.

GMA pushes for responsible parenthood

CEBU CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that her administration’s policy on population growth is based on the constitutional principle of responsible parenthood.

In her speech at the opening of the Catholic Student Leaders Conference held at the University of San Carlos here, the President said this policy is anchored on the principle of having God as the first priority in determining public policy.

The President said that the priorities of her father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, which she has adopted as a guiding principle in her public life, are God first, country second, and family only third.

According to the President, responsible parenthood means that parents are educated enough to be able to determine how many children they can afford to have.

“Then, having made that decision responsibly, it is they who will decide how to carry out their decision with regard to their respective religious and cultural beliefs,” the President said.

The President also said that there are laws that govern or punish couples who resort to abortion or the use of abortifacient in stopping birth.

She also said that responsible population policy is not just about birth control but also about creative programs like population dispersal.

The density level in Metro Manila, the President said, is already approaching unacceptable limits and that is why the government is setting up resettlement sites outside of Metro Manila.

One of these big resettlement sites is in Montalban, Rizal where some 16,000 former squatter families from Metro Manila are now resettled.

NSC urges fast-tracking of anti-terror law, strengthening of intelligence organizations

The National Security Council (NSC), chaired by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, endorsed today the fast-tracking of the anti-terrorism bills now pending in both the Senate and the House of Representatives.

In a press briefing in Malacañang after the NSC meeting at the State Dining Room of the Palace this afternoon, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez said the council also expressed the need to strengthen the nation's intelligence organizations and saw the danger of the indiscriminate arming of Barangay Tanod or village police.

The NSC also unanimously endorsed the proposal of Basilan Rep. Gerry Salapuddin to hold a Muslim-Christian congress that will consolidate the support of moderate Muslim groups in the government's anti-terrorism campaign.

Golez said the members of the NSC expressed concern that if the Philippines does not have a strong anti-terrorism law, it will become relatively soft compared to the hard position on anti-terrorism of countries like Indonesia, Malaysia, and Singapore.

Golez that Malaysia and Singapore already have their internal security laws while President Megawati Sukarnoputri of Indonesia came out last week with two decrees on anti-terrorism which were fully supported by Parliament.

The NSC also reaffirmed the need for a national Identification (ID) system but stressed they would prefer that it be handled through an Executive Order.

Golez said that the proposed ID system will be transaction-related and not obligatory and will be used for government transactions. Golez said this ID is going to be SSS or GSIS-based, referring to the Social Security System and the Government Service Insurance System.

The Security Council also urged the local government units (LGUs) to come up with their local ordinances for an ID that can be used for LGU-related transactions by the general public.

Golez also said the NSC suggested the further strengthening of the Regional Intelligence Coordinating Committee, which is actually chaired by the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency.

The aim is to bring the intelligence efforts down to the ground level and not just at the strategic and operational level of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, Golez said.

Seeing the danger of an indiscriminate arming of the Barangay Tanod, Golez said the NSC stressed that this be done by following the strict process for licensing and the carrying of firearms being implemented by the Philippine National Police.

Golez clarified that if the Barangay Tanod are going to be utilized in the fight against terrorism, they should fall under the Citizens Armed Forces Geographical Unit (CAFGU) system of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, depending on the degree of threat or concerns of the barangay.

Golez also said the NSC stressed the need to hold an international anti-terrorism conference as soon as possible as he revealed that a lot of countries in the region “are already expressing their keen interest in holding this international conference on terrorism.”

On Congressman Salapuddin’s proposal, Golez said the Bishop-Ulama Group will handle the holding of a Muslim-Christian congress in accordance with the inter-faith solidarity thrust of the President as enunciated in her 14-point anti-terrorism program.

“We felt that this is going to be very necessary in order to strengthen inter-faith solidarity,” Golez said.

The NSC also took note of the 10-point police-community program to be implemented by the Department of the Interior and Local Governments (DILG) and the local government units, and welcomed the employment of the LGU members in the hardening of targets as well as intelligence work.

Aside from the President and Golez, among those present during the NSC meeting were Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr.; former President Corazon Aquino; Senate President Franklin Drilon, Jr.; Senators Ramon Magsaysay, Jr., Loren Legarda, Manuel Villar, Rodolfo Biazon and Juan Flavio; Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr.; Congressmen Raul Gonzales, Salapuddin, Nephthali Gonzales, Jr., Apolinario Lozada, Agapito Aquino and Amado Espino; Bangko Sentral Governor Rafael Buenaventura; PNP Chief Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr.; AFP Chief Gen. Benjamin Defensor; Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao; Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye; Energy Secretary Vicente S. Perez; Justice Secretary Hernando Perez; Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr.; Chief Presidential Legal Counsel Avelino Cruz; Presidential Legislative Liaison Office Chief Gabriel Claudio; Presidential Adviser on Special Concern Norberto Gonzalez; Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Lauro Baja and Metro Manila Development Authority Chairman Bayani Fernando.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today designated Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. to act for and on her behalf during her visit to the United States and Mexico.

Lifestyle check part of campaign for good governance, says Malacañang

Malacañang said today the lifestyle check to be conducted by the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) against corrupt public officials is part of the administration's campaign for good governance and transparency.

"We all know that this administration is really for good governance," Press Secretary Ignacio "Toting" Bunye said during his regular press briefing at Malacañang this afternoon.

Bunye said all presidential appointees starting from the Cabinet Secretaries, Undersecretaries, down to the level of Director are now the subject of a comprehensive lifestyle check to be conducted by the PAGC.

He said the President issued instructions yesterday to PAGC Chairman Dario Rama to conduct the lifestyle check.

"Let's just give Chairman Rama a chance to do his work and let's judge him later on the amount of work that he does in implementing this order," Bunye added.

The Press Secretary also said the mandate or authority of the PAGC is only to initiate administrative investigations and if some people are later found to be criminally liable, the criminal charges will be recommended by the agency to the Office of the Ombudsman.

"So, as far as the PAGC is concerned, they are doing the administrative aspect and the sanctions here include reprimand, suspension and termination," Bunye said.

Prior to his appointment, Azcuna, 62, was senior partner of the Azcuna, Sarmiento, Chua and Caedo Law Office.

GMA departs for Honolulu en route to Mexico for 10th APEC Leaders' Meeting

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo left this afternoon for Honolulu en route to Los Cabos, Mexico, where she will attend the 10th Leaders' Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC).

The President and her official delegation boarded a regular Philippine Airlines flight for Honolulu at about 3:30 p.m. at the Centennial Terminal II of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport.

Before boarding her plane, the President was accorded the usual military honors. She did not have any departure statement.

The send-off party included Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr., Senate President Franklin Drilon, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Justice Secretary Hernando Perez, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Heherson Alvarez, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez, AFP Chief of Staff, Gen. Benjamin Defensor and Philippine National Police chief, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane.

Among the Cabinet secretaries who accompanied the President on her trip were Foreign Secretary Blas F. Ople, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye and Silvestre Afable, head of the Presidential Management Staff.

Earlier, the President designated Vice President Guingona to act for and on her behalf while she is on her official trip to the United States and Mexico.

In a directive, the President said that all acts of the Vice President for and on her behalf during her absence shall be approved directly by her or through Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo.

Although the President will be in Honolulu for less than 24 hours, she will have a hectic official schedule that includes meeting with Hawaii officials and Admiral Thomas Fargo, commander in chief of the Pacific Command (CINCPAC) of the United States.

While in Honolulu, the President will also meet with members of a very large Filipino community in Hawaii at the Filipino Community Center in the city.

In Los Cabos, Mexico, the President will be among the 21 leaders of the Pacific Rim who will discuss current developments, including terrorist attacks that occurred in the region.

This will be the second time that the President attends an APEC summit, the first was during the 9th APEC Leaders' Meeting in Shanghai in October last year. The 10th APEC Leaders' Meeting will be from October 26 to 27.

While the APEC member-economies always consider economics at the top of the agenda, terrorism's threat to trade, especially after the deadly bombing this month in Bali, Indonesia, could also be included in the list of topics to be discussed.

Aside from Indonesia, other APEC members, including the Philippines, Malaysia and Singapore, have been identified as possible havens for extremists linked to al-Qaeda, Osama bin Laden's terrorist network.

APEC was established in 1989 to promote open trade and economic cooperation among the 21 member economies around the Pacific Rim.

The APEC members are Australia, Brunei, Canada, Chile, China, Hong Kong, Indonesia, Japan, South Korea, Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Peru, Philippines, Russia, Singapore, Taiwan, Thailand, US and Vietnam.

Asia-Pacific is one of the fastest-growing regions in the world and a major contributor to global prosperity and stability. APEC members have a combined population of over 2.4 billion.

GMA to meet with Inouye, Fargo, Fil-American community in Hawaii

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will update the Filipino community in Hawaii on the developments in the Philippines, particularly of her two-year-old administration, when she personally meets with them shortly after her arrival today in the Aloha State.

The President, accompanied by First Gentleman Jose Miguel “Mike” Arroyo and a few members of the Cabinet, flew to Hawaii at 3:30 p.m. on board a chartered Philippine Airlines flight en route to attend the 10th Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Leaders Meeting in Los Cabos, Mexico.

Upon her arrival at the Honolulu International Airport, the President will be officially welcomed by Philippine Ambassador Albert del Rosario, Consul General and Mrs. Rolando Gregorio, Hawaii Governor and Mrs. Benjamin Cayetano and Admiral Thomas Fargo, Commander in Chief of the United States Pacific Command (CINCPAC).

After the welcome ceremonies, the President and her official delegation will be immediately whisked to their hotel, where Senator Inouye, supporter of Filipino causes in the US Senate, and Admiral Fargo are scheduled to make courtesy calls.

She will then attend a luncheon to be hosted by Governor Cayetano, a Filipino, at the Governor’s official residence – the Washington Palace.

Immediately after her luncheon meeting with Governor Cayetano, the President will meet the Filipino community at the Filipino Community Center in Waipahu, Hawaii.

Based on the 2000 US census, there are 275,728 Filipinos in Hawaii. They constitute a hefty 22.18 percent of the 1.2-million population of the 50th US state.

While in Hawaii, the President will conduct a press conference to be attended by Hawaii-based print and broadcast media representatives as well as the Filipino journalists covering her official engagements.

Before she leaves for Los Angeles on her way to attend the APEC summit meeting in Mexico City, the President will have dinner with the Filipino-American community at the Hilton Hawaiian Village Hotel.

Filipinos shine in Hawaii legislature

HONOLULU, Hawaii – President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo will be a proud visitor of Hawaii on October 24-25 (October 25-26 in Manila). For aside from the governor of Hawaii, the president of the state Senate of Hawaii is also a Filipino.

And there are three other state senators who are Filipinos or of Filipino descent.

In the other chamber of the state legislature, the House of Representatives, there are six members who are Filipinos or of Filipino descent.

The 10 constitute the biggest number of Filipino state legislators in Hawaii at any one time.

“This, in itself, is a big accomplishment for Filipinos here who first came to Hawaii in 1906 as mere sacadas or workers in the Hawaii sugar plantations,” according to Assemblyman Felipe Abinsay Jr., a Democrat who represents District 29 here consisting of Moanalua, Fort Shafter, Kalihi, Waena and Kapalama in the state House of Representatives.

Assemblyman Abinsay said the Hawaii Senate President is Robert Bunda (Democrat) who, like himself, was born in the Philippines – he in Ilocos Sur and Senator Bunda in Quezon City.

The three other Filipinos in the 27-member state Senate are Ron Menor (Democrat), also a son of a former sacada like Governor Benjamin J. Cayetano who almost became the first Filipino to be elected in the US House of Representatives earlier; Donna Mercado Kim (Democrat), a Filipino-Korean; and Lorraine Inouye (Democrat), a Filipino-Japanese.

Senate President Bunda represents District 29 composed of Wahiawa, Haleiwa and North Shore; Menor, District 18 composed of Waipahu, Crestview and Mililani; Kim, District 15 composed of Moanalua Valley, Alea, Pearlridge and Kalihi Valley while Inouye, District 1, composed of North Hilo, Hamakua and South Kohala.

Menor, following the footsteps of Governor Cayetano, is running this year for lieutenant governor of Hawaii. If he wins, he will be the hope of Filipinos to be the next Filipino governor of the Aloha State.

Aside from Abinsay, the five other members of the state House of Representatives who are Filipinos or of Filipino descent are Assemblymen Ben Cabreros (Democrat) of District 30 who, like Abinsay, is also originally from Ilocos Sur; Nestor Garcia (Democrat) of District 37; Willie Espero (Democrat) of District 41; Michael Magaoay (Democrat) of District 45; and David Pendleton (Republican) of District 50.

Filipinos have also their imprints in the Hawaii judiciary. Several Filipino lawyers have served or are still serving as judges in the lower, appellate and Supreme Courts of Hawaii.

At present, two of the five members of the state Supreme Court are Filipinos. They are Associate Justices Mario Ramil who was born in Quezon City and Simeon Acoba Jr. who is Hawaii-born.

Many Filipinos have also served as mayors or councilmen of the different cities of Hawaii.

Another son of a sacada from Negros, Virgilio de la Paz, born in Hawaii, served as Assistant Secretary of the Navy in the '70s, the highest position held by a Filipino-American in the US military service.

Many other Filipinos and Fil-Americans have brought pride to the Philippines through their accomplishments in various fields in Hawaii and the United States.

Among them are Miss America 2001 Angela Perez Baraquo, a teacher in Hawaii before she won the pageant, whose parents are originally from Mabini, Pangasinan and Manila; Olympic boxer Brian Vitoria; baseball player Benny Agbayani; and Dr. Jorge Camara, the first to conduct eye surgery through telemedicine.

In the field of construction, Lito Alcantara, a native of Ilocos Sur who served as president of the Filipino American Chamber of Commerce of Hawaii and had led several trade missions to the Philippines, stands out. His company built several hotels, homes and landmark buildings throughout Hawaii, earning for him the award as one of the Most Outstanding Minority Businessmen in Hawaii.

Filipinos in Hawaii believe it will not be long when they will be able to send a Filipino to the US Congress, either as congressman or senator.

“This is not far-fetched. This is very possible. In a few more years, we, in Hawaii, may be able to send the first Filipino member of the US Congress,” said Assemblyman Abinsay.

Abinsay recalled that the Filipinos almost made it in the mid-80s when now state Senator Ron Menor, whose father served as a member of the state Supreme Court of Hawaii, ran for US congressman but lost by a slim margin to a wealthier Japanese-American candidate.

Tiglaio back as Spokesman, to take oath as President's Chief of Staff on GMA's return from APEC meet

Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglaio is back and, in a briefing at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport today, announced he will take his oath as Chief of Staff of the Office of the President as soon as President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo returns from Mexico.

Tiglaio was among the members of the Cabinet and other government officials who saw the President off for the United States and Mexico, where she is attending the 10th Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit meeting.

“I’ve never left that job (of Presidential Spokesman). On leave lang (I just went on leave),” Tiglao said in his first press briefing since he went on leave on April 15 to assume a Visiting Professor Fellowship at the Center for Southeast Asian Studies of Kyoto University in Japan.

“I haven’t been sworn in as Chief of Staff,” Tiglao said, “but the President has already given me broad guidelines for the work.”

Tiglao also announced that the President has designated Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. to act for and on her behalf during her visit to the US and Mexico.

He also said Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo will be in charge of the day-to-day requirements of the government.

Tiglao actually returned to his job as Presidential Spokesman yesterday and immediately attended the National Security Council meeting the President called upon her return from a two-day visit to Cebu.

HONOLULU, Hawaii – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today brought good news to the Filipino community here: the passage of the absentee voting bill in both houses of Congress during the third and final reading.

Speaking at a press conference held at the Filipino Community Center in Waipahu, Hawaii, the President said “this is the farthest the bill has gone in all the administrations which attempted to enact it.”

The President asked the Filipinos in Hawaii to join her in praying that the differing provisions of the House and the Senate versions will be ironed out soon in the bicameral conference committee so that this can be implemented soon.

Earlier, the President had a luncheon hosted by Hawaii Governor and Mrs. Benjamin Cayetano. Among the other guests were top officials of Hawaii who are of Filipino descent.

Later tonight, the President will have, dinner with the Filipino-American community here at the Tapa Room of the Hilton Hawaiian Village Hotel where she is billeted.

The President made an overnight visit to this city on her way to attend the 10th Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (PAEC) Leaders Meeting in Los Cabos, Mexico.

According to the President, the history of the Philippines in Hawaii is a mirror of the partnership between the Philippines and the United States of America.

“This partnership is firm. It is molded by history and shared strategic interests,” the President said.

The President said her trip to Hawaii “is a very refreshing and rewarding experience.” She thanked Governor Cayetano and the entire people of Hawaii for their warm reception and hospitality.

GMA discusses R.P.-U.S. security cooperation, other vital concerns with Inouye, Fargo

HONOLULU, Hawaii – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo met separately Thursday (Friday in Manila) with United States Sen. Daniel K. Inouye and Admiral Thomas Fargo, the commander in chief of the US Pacific Command (Cincpac), on security issues and other matters of special concern to the Philippines and of mutual interest to the Philippines and the US.

The President said during a press conference at the Filipino Community Center in Waipahu that she and Admiral Fargo, the senior commander of American military forces in the Pacific and Indian Ocean areas, discussed security cooperation between the Philippines and the US.

“The forces under Admiral Fargo’s command have been working very closely with their counterpart in the Philippines under training activities covered by our Mutual Defense Treaty and the Visiting Forces Agreement,” the President said.

The Pacific Command covers more than 50 percent of the earth’s surface from the US West Coast to the east coast of Africa, from the Arctic to Antarctic, and including the states of Alaska and Hawaii. Its area of responsibility constitutes nearly 60 percent of the world’s population in 43 countries, 20 territories and possessions, and 10 US territories.

The President said she also met earlier with Senator Inouye, whom she described as a good friend of the Filipino people, and thanked him for his continued support and advocacy of Philippine interests in the American Congress.

“I thanked him because he was one of those who spearheaded the move not to give Philippine canned tuna a disadvantageous position with regard to the tuna imports to the United States from the Andean countries,” the President said.

The President said Senator Inouye will also help the Philippines get preferential treatment in the US market because the center of the tuna industry in the Philippines is in Mindanao, an area which is very much threatened by terrorist groups, including the Pentagon kidnap-for-ransom group and the Abu Sayyaf.

The President said she also thanked Inouye for spearheading support for the Filipino veterans’ rights in the US Congress.

The President also expressed the gratitude of the Filipino people to Senator Inouye for spearheading moves to increase appropriations for military assistance to the Philippines.

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, in a radio interview after the President’s meetings with Inouye and Fargo, said the Admiral expressed the desire of the US to cooperate in upgrading the intelligence gathering capabilities of the Philippine government.

The President and Fargo also discussed the improvement of Philippine capability to transport troops to areas where they are needed and the provision of armored vests for Filipino soldiers, Bunye said.

GMA: RP-US fight against terrorism stems from common belief on strong democratic institutions

HONOLULU, Hawaii – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the Philippine-American partnership in the fight against global terrorism is anchored on the two countries’ common belief in strong democratic institutions that create peace and freedom for people everywhere.

Speaking at a press conference held at the Filipino Community Center in Waipahu, Hawaii, the President said it is because of common democratic ideals that the Philippines has offered political, security and humanitarian assistance to the United States in the pursuit of her most vital interest against terrorism.

The President also said she will meet with US President George W. Bush in Los Cabos, Mexico on the sidelines of the 10th Leaders Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Cooperation (APEC) to take up not only security matters but also development initiatives that would strike at the very roots of poverty in terrorism prone areas.

The President said that the Philippines is determined to fight terrorism “to the end.”

She said that strategic assessments point to a possible shift in al-Qaeda terrorist operations to Southeast Asia. “America and the Philippines are sharing eyes and ears in this development,” the President said.

The Philippines, the President said, is also closely allied with Indonesia and Malaysia under a trilateral agreement to check terrorist movements across their common seas.

But whether terrorists in the Philippines are linked to al-Qaeda or not, they are still terrorists and must be crushed, she said. “Terrorism is a global phenomenon today and, therefore, there must be a global response to terrorism,” the President said.

She said that since terrorism is a borderless activity, therefore, the response must be borderless or transnational.

The President said that after the Bali bombing, the Philippines had its small bombings in Zamboanga City and Western Mindanao. She, however, reported that the suspects in these blasts have been arrested.

“We won’t let these incidents just stay for long. Our local communities are enthusiastically helping the national government watch out for terrorist movements,” the President said.

According to the President, her administration is focused on what needs to be done to address the war on terrorism and to win the battle against poverty in the Philippines within the decade.

“Terrorism will never completely go away unless we root out the handmaiden of terrorism – poverty,” the President said.

The President said that 21st century war against terrorism is a new kind of war that requires a new kind of peace.

She said that part of this new kind of peace process is reconciling the concerns of developing countries with the prospective of developed economies.

“Thus our partnership with America has also leaned much on the common belief that terrorism and poverty are a combined enemy,” the President said.

Filipino community leaders willing to help safeguard absentee voting in U.S. in 2004 — GMA

HONOLULU, Hawaii—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded leaders of the Filipino community in the United States for their willingness to extend financial support so that the absentee voting in the US in 2004 would be clean and honest.

In a press briefing at the Filipino Community Center here, the President said that before she left Manila, she got a call from Loida Nicolas, Alex Esclamado and other prominent leaders of the Filipino community in the US who said that they would fund a NAMFREL-type activity in safeguarding the votes in the overseas balloting.

NAMFREL is the acronym of the National Movement for Free Elections, accredited by the Commission on Elections as watchdog in all elections in the country.

“So, therefore, much of the projected expenses, they said, can be borne by the Filipino community here,” the President said when asked if the government has enough funds to implement the absentee voting law.

The President also said that she has left it to the bicameral committee of Congress to reconcile the differences in the two bills passed by the House and the Senate on absentee voting.

The important thing, the President said, is that the principle of overseas voting has been adopted by Congress which is fully justified, considering the $6 billion a year in remittances from overseas Filipinos.

She said that for the first six months of this year, some $4 billion have already been remitted to the Philippines by overseas Filipinos.

According to the President, while one-third of all overseas Filipinos are in the US, two-thirds of the overseas remittances come from the US.

‘Because of your remittances, you should really be given the chance to have your voice heard,’ the President said.

GMA optimistic on RP’s tourism industry

HONOLULU, Hawaii—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that she remains optimistic about the prospects of the Philippine tourism industry despite recent terrorist attacks in the region.

In a press briefing at the Filipino Community Center here, the President said that, in fact, as of October 2002, the country registered a 40 percent growth in tourism compared to the same period last year.

“So, while our budget is small, apparently it is very well allocated,” the President said, referring to the minuscule budget of the Department of Tourism (DOT) for promoting the Philippines in the international market.

The President said that when the bombings in Bali, Indonesia and in Mindanao occurred, Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon just came from a meeting of the World Tourism Organization (WTO) in Tokyo and the WTO is proceeding with its Visit the Philippines Year in 2003 as earlier scheduled.

While the President admitted that Thailand is number one in tourism in Asia, she said “we are not going to lose tourists to Thailand because they are already there.”

The Philippines and Thailand, the President said, have a twinning arrangement where long-haul tourists can visit and enjoy their holidays in both countries.

“It is not for us to compare ourselves with others. We have to find our own niche, our own market segment,” the President said.

According to the President, the Philippines’ number one market segment is beach tourism, followed by domestic tourism, shopping and sightseeing tourism, eco-tourism, Balibayan tourism, and the backpackers’ tourism.

The President then invited the Filipinos in all parts of the US to visit the Philippines next year, 2003 being Visit the Philippines Year.

Original ‘Sacadas’ children in Hawaii elated over meeting with GMA

HONOLULU, Hawaii (via PLDT) – For some of the remaining early Filipino sacadas or plantation workers and their children here, meeting President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is a privilege and rare opportunity.

“This is my first time to meet a president, a Philippine President. My first time to shake a president’s hand. It was a privilege,” said Livia Valido, 68 years old, whose parents were among the sacadas who arrived here in 1930.

Pedro Subia, who turned 82 today, considered his meeting with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as a “great gift.”

“I’m thankful to see President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo. Today is specially lucky for me. This is an opportunity, a great (birthday) gift,” Subia said in his native Ilocano dialect.

Ninety-three-year-old Damaso Gamundoy, the oldest living sacada here, is grateful and thankful to see the President. Gamundoy’s parents arrived and worked here in 1928.

These sentiments were also shared by representatives of the World War II veterans, sacadas’ children as well as Filipino-American students from various colleges and universities here.

The President met them informally at the grand ballroom of the $18-million Filipino Community Center in Waipahu after touring the three-story facility.

The President received cheers and applause as she entered the ballroom. The Fil-Ams here, who eagerly awaited her arrival, warmly and excitedly welcomed the Chief Executive, waving small Philippine flags.

In a brief message, the President thanked the Filipino-American community here for their support in helping improve and develop the Philippine economy.

The President also lauded the sacadas for their very important role in the history of Hawaii, citing the hardships they suffered like the parents of Hawaii Fil-Am Gov. Benjamin Cayetano.

Addressing the veterans, who submitted a resolution asking the President to intercede on their behalf with the US for the provision of their full benefits, the President said there is an appropriation measure that has already been passed in the US House of Representatives granting $65,000 for five years for the Filipino veterans’ health benefits in the US.

The President said this is now in the Senate, sponsored by Senator Daniel Inouye, a Japanese-American also from Hawaii.

She also informed them of the $500-million a year health benefits for veterans in the Philippines which has already been approved in the US Congress.

An impressed President described the Filipino Community Center here as fantastic and fabulous.

The construction of the Center started in 2000. It was formally opened in June 2002.

The FilCom Center serves as a gathering place for promoting activities that will help strengthen, perpetuate and promote the rich Filipino cultural heritage and values.

It also serves as a family-focused center offering varied social and human service programs for Filipino-Americans.

Int’l Agricultural Research Week proclaimed

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has declared the period from October 28, 2002 to November 3, 2002 as International Agricultural Research Week.

In Proclamation No. 279 which she signed Thursday (October 24), the President said there is a need to focus more attention on the important role played by agricultural research in national progress, development and poverty alleviation.

The Consultative Group on the International Agricultural Research (CGIAR) will be holding its annual general meeting in the Philippines for the first time from October 28 to November 1, 2002. The meeting will bring together more than 500 local and foreign scientist-delegates.

The CGIAR is a global alliance of investors, 16 international research institutes known as Future Harvest Centers, 58 member-countries from both developing and industrialized countries and other partner organizations which mobilize science to benefit the poor.

“The meeting in Metro Manila is being held because of the Philippines’ long-term support for, and membership in the CGIAR, and because of the Philippines’ international reputation in agricultural research, being host country to one of the top-notch research agencies, the International Rice Research Institute,” the President said.

APEC members commend GMA determination, prompt efforts to root out terrorism

The member-economies of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) today commended the administration of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for its determination and prompt and decisive efforts to root out and fight terrorism in the country.

In a radio interview this afternoon, Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Delia Albert, who is now in Los Cabos, Mexico, said that the foreign affairs and trade ministers of the 21 member-economies of APEC completed their 14th ministerial meeting today and condemned terrorism in the strongest terms.

Albert said the foreign and trade minister ministers of APEC came out with a statement praising the President and Indonesia’s President Megawatti Sukarnoputri for their “prompt and decisive efforts to find and bring the perpetrators, organizers and sponsors of terrorist attacks to justice.”

In a document to be released during the Los Cabos summit, the APEC leaders “condemn in the strongest terms recent terrorist acts in the APEC region, especially in Bali, Indonesia on Oct. 12, and bombings in the Philippines which claimed a large number of innocent lives.”

In their joint statement released today, the APEC foreign affairs and trade minister expressed their commitment to a sound macroeconomic and financial environment, the promotion of good corporate governance, and the common goal of free and open trade and investment in order to increase growth and improve the living standard within APEC economies.

They also said the recent attack in Bali is a tragic reminder of the importance of maintaining a united, committed, and sustained effort to ensure that terrorism does not prevent APEC from achieving its vision of free, open, and prosperous economies.

The Philippine delegation was able to get support on the initiative to hold a High-Level Meeting to Build Capacity in Maritime Security next year. This is a specific Philippine contribution to secure trade in the region. Among the economies which have so far endorsed this initiative are the US, Japan, Singapore, New Zealand, Chinese Taipei, and South Korea.

This initiative seeks to map out new strategies and fresh approaches to enhancing maritime security in the region, especially in the face of the lingering terrorist threat. It aims to build the capacities of the region and of individual economies in securing vessels, cargo, seaports, and seaport facilities, thereby promoting peaceful trade and travel within the region. It could also serve as a venue for launching cooperative action for the protection of the region’s marine resources and ecologically threatened areas.

The Philippines, along with other developing economies, pushed and endorsed WTO capacity and confidence building activities under the APEC Strategic Plan which the ministers believed should remain a top priority for APEC.

In particular, the ministers reiterated that APEC can contribute to the Doha Development Agenda (DDA) by encouraging and coordinating confidence building activities in areas such as investments, competition, trade facilitation, transparency in government procurement, and trade and environment.

RP humanitarian mission returns from Bali

The Philippine Medical Team sent by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to Indonesia returned yesterday after completing their one-week humanitarian mission.

The team, composed of two burn specialists and two nurses, was sent to Bali upon the specific instructions of the President to provide medical assistance to the victims of the terrorist bombings that rocked the island earlier this month.

Soon after bombs went off, the President telephoned Indonesian President Megawati Sukarnoputri to condole with the Indonesian people and to offer assistance.

This gesture is quite common between these two countries and is reminiscent of past instances where Indonesia similarly extended its assistance to the Philippines, especially during times of natural calamities.

Indonesian Minister of Health Achmad Sujudi called Philippine Ambassador Rafael Seguis to express gratitude for the dispatch of the Filipino medical team.

The directors of Sanglah General Hospital, where the team was stationed, likewise conveyed their appreciation and praised the Filipino medical personnel for their performance and the compassion they showed for our Indonesian brethren.

GMA calls on Fil-Ams in Hawaii to help build strong Republic

HONOLULU, Hawaii – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the more than 200,000 Filipinos in Hawaii to help her two-year-old administration build a strong Republic in order to achieve its goal of economic prosperity and stability.

In her speech during a dinner meeting with the Filipino community at the Hilton Hawaiian Village Hotel here, the President said her role is to serve as “chief architect and to see to it that our plans and blueprints are carried on time and correctly.”

However, the President said she can do this well “only if I can count on the support of more than 2-million Filipino-Americans, including the 200,000 Filipinos who are living in Hawaii.”

“As you got together to build the Philippine Community Center, as you got together to put this lovely (gathering) tonight, let us get together, bayanihan style, each contributing a meaningful embellishment to the plan of national greatness and prosperity,” the President said.

The President said the Filipino-Americans constitute one-third of overseas Filipinos, but they contribute two-thirds of the foreign exchange remittances to the Philippines.

“The Filipino-Americans represent the best in the Filipino. Thus, you are the most effective ambassadors of your mother country,” she stressed.

The President said she’s proud of all Filipino-Americans, whether well-known or anonymous.

“I am proud of Ben Cayetano, Jorge Garcias, the Loida Nicolases. But also equally proud of every Fil-Am who has made an investment in this nation and who seeks closer relations between the Philippines and the United States,” she added.

The President also said the Filipino worker has become a presence around the world because of talent and industry.

She cited as examples Filipinos who are known to be musicians of Asia. “In fact, Hawaii Governor Ben Cayetano told me earlier that the first Filipinos in Hawaii, they were not the Sacadas of 1906. They were preceded by some Filipino musicians who played here in Hawaii,” she said, adding that today international stars like Lea Salonga and a cast of Filipino talents are impressing audiences for their superb performances in Broadway.

She also paid tribute not only to the great, outstanding, world famous Filipinos like Hawaiian Governor Benjamin Cayetano but also to the thousands of nameless but unforgotten Filipinos who first landed on the Aloha State nearly a century ago.

The President also lauded the Filipino-Americans present during the dinner for their continued efforts to practice many of the Filipino customs and traditions that have found acceptance in Hawaii.

“These have been passed from one generation to the next, spreading to neighborhoods and communities, and reinforced by the succeeding wave of Filipino migration,” she said.

She likewise noted with gladness that the House of Representatives of the state approved the creation of the Filipino Centennial Celebration Commission, which she said, “is an acknowledgement of the greatness of the Filipino community in Hawaii.”

After her speech, the President was presented the symbolic key to Honolulu which is a tradition given to a visiting head of state.

She also received from the Filipino community their pledge of support to all the programs and projects of her more than 20-month-old government.

GMA assures signing of absentee voting bill within 24 hours after passage by Congress

LOS ANGELES, California—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured Filipino-Americans in the United States that she will sign into law the absentee voting bill “within 24 hours” after its final passage by both houses of Congress.

In her speech before a large gathering of members of the Filipino community at the Westin Hotel here, the President said that for the first time after so many attempts by so many administrations, the House of Representatives and the Senate had passed the absentee voting bill on third and final reading.

But the President said there are some conflicting provisions in the versions of the House and the Senate.

“Let us pray that the House and the Senate can iron out their conflicting provisions, because as soon as they do so, I will sign that bill into law within 24 hours,” the President said to the applause of the audience.

The absentee voting bill would allow Filipinos who are already living abroad or those working overseas to exercise their right of suffrage.

The President recalled that even when she was still a senator, she already filed an overseas voting bill but like many other similar bills filed before and after her Senate term, her bill did not even go beyond the committee level.

That is why when she became president early last year, she certified as urgent the passage of the absentee voting bill and the dual citizenship bill, the President said.

The Senate has also passed on third and final reading the dual citizenship bill, the President said.

The President said that her two-hour visit to this city is supposed to be a mere “technical stopover” on her way to Mexico but she insisted on addressing the Filipino community in Los Angeles, the largest Filipino community in the United States.

After the brief stopover, the President and her official delegation, flew to Los Cabos, Mexico to attend the 10th Leaders' Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC).

GMA says her persistence and advocacy for Filipino war veterans now paying off

LOS ANGELES, California—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that her persistence and advocacy on behalf of the Filipino World War II veterans are now paying off.

In her address before a large gathering of Filipino-Americans at the Westin Hotel here, the President said since last year, she had been working for the passage by the US Congress of a bill that would give additional benefits to Filipino veterans.

The President made a two-hour technical stopover here on her way to attend the 10th Leaders' Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) in Los Cabos, Mexico.

She said that during her official visit to Washington, D.C. last year, she took this matter up with US President George W. Bush "strongly and emphatically."

President Bush promised that a review of the services and benefits for Filipino veterans would be undertaken and the review is now yielding results, the President said.

According to the President, an appropriations bill that would expand benefit eligibility for health care compensation and burial benefits for Filipino World War II veterans to the tune of $65 million has already been passed by the US House of Representatives.

She then asked the Filipino community to pray that the bill would pass the US Senate.

The President also informed her audience that the Bush administration is giving assistance to Filipino World War II veterans who are in the Philippines in the amount of half a million US dollars a year.

"Again for the first time after so many attempts by so many administrations, the first half a million dollars will be handed over to the Philippine government this month of October," the President said.

GMA elated that some Fil-Ams eager to join gov't loan program for small business ventures

LOS ANGELES, California—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she was elated to hear that some members of the Filipino community here are interested in participating in the "one town, one product, one million peso loan" program that her administration is implementing in the Philippines.

In her speech before a large gathering of Filipino-Americans at the Westin Hotel here, the President said that she was informed about the desire of Filipinos here to take part in the loan program by Consul General to Los Angeles Marcelino Paynor.

The President told her audience that the program is aimed at pump priming the economy by strengthening the small and medium enterprises (SMEs), especially those in the countryside.

She said that even as her administration is resolved to fight terrorism, she is also focused on her work program for the next six months to rev up the economy that would be anchored on a strong domestic market.

The President also cited the measures undertaken by her administration in ridding the government of grafters and wrongdoers.

"Let me assure you that I'm working diligently to ensure that the Filipino people are getting the professional and clean government you deserve, for you are still part of the Filipino people even if you are here in America," the President said.

She said that the new e-procurement program adopted in the purchase of supplies and equipment is saving billions of pesos and minimizing anomalies in government.

The Presidential Anti-Graft Commission is also investigating a number of government officials, including directors of state-owned corporations, some of them have been asked to go on leave pending the results of their investigations.

She assured her audience that her government would pursue without letup the fight against graft and corruption in public offices.

GMA off to Los Cabos for APEC summit

LOS ANGELES, California—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo left today for Los Cabos, Mexico after a two-hour stopover here where she addressed a large gathering of Filipino-Americans at the Westin Hotel.

In an interview with Manila newsmen, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye, who is a member of the presidential party, said that in Los Cabos the President is scheduled to meet with some of the world leaders attending the 10th Leaders' Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC).

Bunye said that the President has a scheduled one-on-one with US President George W. Bush.

However, Bunye said, it is unlikely that the scheduled meeting with Russian President Vladimir Putin would push through since the Russian leader has announced that he would not attend the APEC summit because of the hostage crisis in Moscow.

Before she left Manila, the President said she would like to discuss with Putin the possibility of importing crude oil from Russia if an energy problem would arise in the event of a new Gulf war.

Earlier in Honolulu, where the President made an overnight stopover, she said that she would meet with Bush in Los Cabos to take up not only security matters but also development initiatives that would "strike at the very roots of poverty" in places in the Philippines that are breeding areas for terrorism.

"Let me say that a very important part of my talks with President Bush would be security cooperation in addition to economic cooperation," the President said.

The 10th APEC leaders' meeting, being hosted by Mexico, would be held from October 26-27.

Aside from the President, the heads of state of 20 other member economies of the Pacific Rim would be attending the meeting.

A joint statement issued by the 14th APEC Ministerial Meeting, that preceded the summit, cited global terrorism as a threat to the economic stability of the APEC member economies.

"Terrorism, in all its forms, is a threat to economic stability in APEC, as well as a threat to regional peace and security, and a direct challenge to APEC's vision of free, open and prosperous economies," the statement said.

The statement said that the recent attack in Bali, Indonesia "is a tragic reminder of the importance of maintaining a united, committed and sustained effort to ensure that terrorism does not prevent APEC from achieving its goals."

The statement said that APEC member economies have already made substantial progress in implementing earlier commitments to suppress the financing of terrorism, enhance air and maritime security, strengthen energy security and enhance security-related cooperation on customs and border security.

GMA tells U.S. execs of mission to create jobs, fight terrorism and poverty

LOS CABOS, Mexico – (via PLDT) President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she is here in Mexico with a mission to create jobs in the Philippines and to build on regional and global cooperation in the war against terrorism.

In remarks during a luncheon conference with the United States Chamber of Commerce at the clubhouse of the Esperanza Hotel here, the President told the US business leaders that “only by working together can we stamp out the evil of terrorism and the scourge of poverty.”

The President emphasized that she is focused on what needs to be done to address the war on terrorism and on winning the battle against poverty in the Philippines.

“Terrorism will never completely go away unless we root out the handmaiden of terrorism – poverty,” the President said.

The President pointed out that the entire agenda for fighting terrorism by fighting poverty will work only if infused with a real spirit of cooperation.

“We must believe that in freeing the poor from the prison of poverty, all nations will reap the boon of a more tranquil and peaceful world,” the President said.

The President stressed that just as terrorism is searched out and destroyed, the terror of poverty must also be searched out and destroyed.

“There is evil in being hungry just as there is evil in being a destructive terrorist. Let us work together as a family of nation to alleviate both,” she said, appealing to the US business leaders to “do business with the developing world.”

“Do business with the Philippines,” she said.

The President also conducted a dialogue with US executives, including Thomas Donahue, president of the US Chamber of Commerce; Larry Liebenow, chairman of the US Chamber of Commerce; James Hipps, president for Asia Pacific of Black and Veatch; Theodore Austell III, vice president of Boeing Company; Michael Ducker, president of the International FEDEX; Mustafa Mohataram, chief economist of General Motors corporation; and Pamela Passman deputy general counsel and head of global corporate affairs of Microsoft.

GMA welcomes Bush initiative for ASEAN-U.S. economic ties

LOS CABOS, Mexico – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today welcomed the proposal of United States President George W. Bush to launch an Enterprise for ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) Initiative.

“This is designed to boost trade and investment relations between ASEAN nations and the United States,” the President said in her meeting with the US-ASEAN Business Council here at the Clubhouse of the Hotel Esperanza.

The President pointed out that Bush’s Enterprise for ASEAN Initiative is a major step in deepening economic ties between ASEAN, a regional grouping of 10 nations in the region, and the United States.

The President said that globalization has its perils and opportunities. “The Philippines must address the perils of globalization by insisting on a rule-based multilateral trading system which ensures economic growth, employment, and development for all.”

However, the President said the Philippines must also grab its opportunities and not be left behind in maximizing the full potential of its trade and investment ties with the US.

Since the US will continue to be the major trade and investment partner of the Philippines for many years to come, the President said that both countries must work together to ensure that their economic relationship can be developed for their mutual benefit.

The President also stressed the need for ASEAN members to remain competitive in the American market.

She said Washington is seeking to conclude free trade arrangements with nations and regional groups that compete in certain areas with ASEAN member-states.

The President also said she welcomes the plan of the Bush administration for a closer study of individual ASEAN countries.

“Under this initiative, each country will be able to negotiate bilateral trade arrangements with the United States,” she said, adding that the Philippines will do so too.

The President also explained that the ASEAN Enterprise Initiative will help keep the US engaged in the region.

The President also noted China’s remarkable growth as a trade partner and competitor.

“Under these circumstances, ASEAN must have a bold vision to respond to existing and emerging challenges,” the President said.

Australia proposes anti-terror pact with RP

LOS CABOS, Mexico – (via PLDT) President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today extended her sympathies to Australian Prime Minister John Howard for the many Australians who died in the Bali bombing last October 12.

During their bilateral talks at the Hotel Esperanza here, Prime Minister Howard likewise expressed his condolences over the victims of the Zamboanga City bombings.

In light of the tragic experiences of the Philippines and Australia, Prime Minister Howard proposed a bilateral anti-terrorism agreement with the Philippines, which President Macapagal-Arroyo accepted.

The President explained that the Philippines has a trilateral agreement with Malaysia and Indonesia, and said that this new anti-terrorism arrangement with Australia was a welcome development.

In a briefing at the Press Room of the Sheraton Hotel here, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said the two leaders also discussed the issue of pineapple and banana exports.

The problem of the pineapple export is nearing solution, Bunye said. The Australians okayed the decrowning of the pineapple for export while the export of banana is temporarily stopped.

“The Australians are, however, apparently closed to idea of accepting banana as exports at this time,” Bunye said.

The two leaders also discussed sharing of intelligence information.

“This will be patterned after the anti-terrorism regional agreement with Malaysia and Indonesia,” Bunye said.

During their talks, President Macapagal-Arroyo invited Mr. Howard to visit the Philippines. Howard said such a visit would be convenient at the second half of 2003.

Howard likewise invited the President to visit Australia, but the President did not indicate any date, Bunye said.

GMA calls on APEC leaders to expand coalition against terrorism to coalition for free trade

LOS CABOS, Mexico (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo today called on world leaders in the Asia-Pacific region to extend the coalition against terrorism to a coalition in economic relations, saying that nations must ensure that the fight against terrorism does not make trade less free.

“My concern is how the terrorism shifted our attention away, from how to work to make the global economy thrive we have shifted our efforts to how to secure ourselves and our country,” the President said during the breakfast plenary session of the 10th Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Leaders’ Meeting here.

“The coalition against terrorism can and must extend to a coalition in economic relations,” the President said. “The global economy will be able to pull through if we approach it the way we have been approaching our fight against terrorism.”

Citing the Philippine experience, the President said “security impedes development and, conversely, poverty feeds extremists with recruits.”

During the plenary breakfast dubbed as “Conversation with Leaders,” the President said this coalition building could work equally well to lift the global economy out of its lethargy.

The key step is to build trust and faith once again in the global economy, the President said.

She cited two ways of doing this: first by dealing with terrorism as the most urgent priority and making sure that this is a secure world; and, by restoring faith and trust in the global economy by addressing the perceived inequality in receiving the benefits of integration.

Singling out the Philippines’ participation in the global efforts and work to promote this coalition at the regional level, the President said the Philippines has an anti-terrorism arrangement with Indonesia and Malaysia.

This arrangement, she said includes sharing intelligence, tightening border patrols and, if need be, joint peacekeeping.

“I think we should expand this coalition and take more aggressive action,” she said.

On the restoration of trust and faith in the global economy, the President said the World Trade Organization (WTO) should be reengineered to assure a level playing field, ensuring that the rules of trading are not tough in favor of developed countries.

The President proposed that APEC should influence the WTO to come up with early harvest of results that can benefit the most number of people in the world.

The President thus suggested the following:

- elimination of harmful agricultural export subsidies;
- the opening up of markets for tropical agricultural products and products of interest to developing countries, such as tuna and textiles;
- the liberalization of services where developing countries can benefit, including labor mobility in sectors such as information technology, health care, and education; and
- the enhancing of the capacity of developing country-members to negotiate effectively, implement commitments, and improve the competitiveness of products.

The President also underscored the need to pay special attention to the growth of the small and medium enterprises (SMEs), saying that these provide a business approach to the alleviation of poverty.

She said this is being done in the Philippines with her “one town, one product program.”

She expressed the hope that chief executive officers of APEC to look at integrating this self-help initiatives in their business plans.

Aside from President Macapagal Arroyo, two other women eladers in the Asia-Pacific region – Indonesian President Megawati and New Zealand’s Prime Minister Helen Clark – also sounded their calls for a united fight against terrorism and poverty.

GMA stands out in APEC Summit

This was how Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) chief executive officers described President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s speech during their breakfast plenary meeting, dubbed “A Conversation with Leaders,” at the Cabo Real Hotel here Saturday (Sunday morning in Manila).

The President and two other APEC women-leaders – Indonesian President Megawati Sukarnoputri and New Zealand’s Prime Minister Helen Clark – made presentations for their respective countries during the meeting.

The President expounded on the interrelated wars against terrorism and poverty and called for the expansion of the global coalition against terrorism into a coalition for free trade and economic security.

In a briefing here later, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye told Manila-based reporters the APEC business leaders gave President Macapagal-Arroyo a standing ovation after the event.

Quoting the CEOs, Bunye said the President’s message was powerful both in content and delivery.

He said Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo stood out from among the two other APEC women leaders, whom the President described in her speech as “tough, gifted and thoughtful.”

In her speech, the President said “I’m very honored to share this platform with them today,” referring to Megawati and Clark. “We come from three different countries with three different cultures and three different sets of challenges. But we share common commitments to prosperity, to democracy and to peace.”

The President threw her support behind the international fight against terrorism but said efforts to ease poverty were also crucial to build security.

“If we neglect the economic imperative at this time when we are so concerned with terrorism, we would be feeding terrorism by promoting hunger, disease and ignorance,” she said.

Europe tags CPP-NPA as terrorist, Ople reports

LOS CABOS, Mexico—Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople said yesterday a special diplomatic mission sent by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to European countries “successfully placed the terrorist character of the CPP-NPA in the agenda of the European Union, which has created a “clearing house” to make a list of foreign terrorist organizations to be submitted to the United Nations.

In a report to the President who was attending the 10th Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit meeting in Los Cabos, Mexico, Ople said the mission he headed was received in Europe “with great warmth and enthusiasm.” The other members of the special mission included Presidential Advisers Eduardo Ermita and Norberto Gozales, Undersecretary Abraham Puruganan and Presidential Management Staff chief Silvestre Afable, Jr.

Ople informed the President that most European governments indicated they would support a bid to endorse the New People's Army as a terrorist organization to the UN under Security Council 373, which mandates all states to commit themselves fully to the global fight against terrorism.

Ople said the mission covered six countries in seven days, namely Germany, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Belgium and Spain. "It was a whirlwind tour but the effort was worth it," he said.

Ople noted, however, the reservation of some governments such as Spain, to include the National Democratic Front under the foreign terrorist tag until they can sift stronger evidence linking the organization to the NPA's acts of terrorism.

The Secretary said the Department of Justice and Department of Foreign Affairs as well as the National Security Council were collecting evidence of three decades to show the NDF leaders, headed by Prof. Jose Maria Sison and former priest Luis Jalandoni, have directed terrorist attacks from their place of refuge in Utrecht, the Netherlands.

"The time is past when the CPP-NPA can hoodwink the international community about the nature of their organization," Ople said, adding:

"We would like to see the CPP-NPA-NDF go back to the negotiating table to consider a comprehensive peace settlement which would mean an end to the armed insurgency and their full participation in democratic elections under the constitution."

Ople said the leaders of Norway had agreed to take a more active role as mediator of the peace process.

GMA, other APEC leaders issue united message on fighting terrorism without slowing trade

LOS CABOS, Mexico – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo joined other leaders from the Asia-Pacific region in issuing a united message on how to stop cross-border terrorists without slowing trade.

The leaders of the 21 member-economies of the Asia-Pacific Economic Forum condemned in the strongest terms the recent terrorist acts in the APEC region – including the Philippines, Indonesia and the Russian Federation – and reaffirmed determination to enhance cooperation in countering and responding to terrorism.

(The Philippines has been the target of terrorist bombers. The Indonesian resort island of Bali was the recent scene of that Asian country's worst terrorist bomb attack. A theater in Moscow was the stage for a bloody siege by Chechen guerrillas who held hundreds of people hostage.)

The leaders of APEC, created in 1989 mainly to promote free trade among economies in the Pacific Rim, also issued a blueprint on conducting more efficient trade and on making physical borders safer.

The Philippine President herself has stressed the need to extend the coalition against terrorism into a coalition in economic relations to boost trade and foster prosperity in the region.

She said tackling terrorism would be no easy task: "That Bali attack and the other attacks in October remind us that this war will be long, difficult and borderless."

The President also called for a level playing field in trade and, along with the other leaders of the developing countries, criticized agricultural subsidies and trade barriers in the developed countries that hindered the poorer nations' exports.

The APEC declaration at the end of the two-day summit here thus also endorsed the elimination of agricultural export subsidies and called for the conclusion of global trade talks by 2005.

The APEC statement thus called "for progress across all areas in the lead-up to the 2003 World Trade Organization Fifth Ministerial Conference in Cancun" in Mexico and encouraged negotiators to finish global trade talks by Jan. 1, 2005.

RP, Australia to cooperate in war against global terrorism

The Philippines and Australia have agreed to cooperate in fighting global terrorism, according to Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye.

In a radio interview from Los Cabos, Mexico where he is a member of the official delegation of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Bunye said that it was Australian Prime Minister John Howard who broached the idea of intelligence sharing between the Philippines and Australia as one of the measures in fighting terrorism in the region.

The President and Howard met Sunday on the sidelines of the opening day of the 10th Economic Leaders' Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) hosted by the Mexican government.

According to Bunye, Howard proposed that the two countries sign a bilateral agreement on sharing of intelligence information.

In a statement, the leaders of the 21 member-economies of the Pacific Rim adopted several security measures as it condemned the recent terrorist attacks in Bali, Indonesia and in Moscow.

The APEC leaders also highly praised the firm and swift efforts made by the governments of Indonesia, the Philippines and the Russian Federation to arrest suspects in recent terror attacks in their respective countries.

Although Australia has not been hit by terror attacks, some 100 of the victims of the bombing in a nightclub in Bali were Australian vacationers.

Australia would be the fourth country in the region to sign an anti-terrorism agreement with the Philippines. The Philippines earlier signed a trilateral agreement against terrorism with Malaysia and Indonesia.

U.S. thanks GMA for support against terrorism

United States Secretary of State Colin Powell has expressed the deep appreciation of the Bush administration for the efforts of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to support the US in the global campaign against terrorism.

In a brief meeting with Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople in the sidelines of the APEC Ministerial Meeting held here on Friday. Powell also expressed his condolences to the victims of terrorist attacks in the Southern Philippines.

Ople and Powell also agreed the bilateral relations between the two countries remain strong and Powell said he was particularly pleased with the military to military cooperation between the United States and the Philippines.

The two officials agreed to support current APEC initiatives to promote trade security and fight terrorism.

Among these initiatives is the so-called "Star Initiative" (Secure Trade in APEC Region Initiative) proposed by the United States which was unanimously approved by APEC members.

STAR comprises a set of specific actions aimed at making the flow goods and people more secure and efficient with the help of advanced technology and improved monitoring procedures. APEC represents 60 percent of the world's GDP and half of its trade. Most of the world's top megaports are in APEC economies, as are most of the world's busiest airports.

More advanced economies – including the US, Japan, Canada, Australia — have agreed to help developing economies with capacity building assistance to enable them to achieve the goals specified under the STAR initiative. APEC members will cooperate to promote the implementation of these measures.

Included among the specific actions under the STAR initiative were:

- Improving airline passengers and crew safety by introducing highly effective baggage screening procedures and equipment in all APEC international airports as soon as possible. And in any case by 2005;
- Enhancing air cargo security by promoting adoption of the guidelines developed by the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) and the International Air Transport Association (IATA);
- Adopting standards of application of biometrics in travel procedures and documents such as those being developed by the ICAO and the International Standards Organization;
- Implementing expeditiously a container security regime that would assure in-transit integrity of containers, identify and examine high-risk containers, and support international efforts to provide advanced information on containers to customs, port, and shipping officials as early as possible in the supply chain while taking into consideration the promotion and facilitation of legitimate trade.

These and other measures were aimed at protecting cargo, ships in international voyages, international aviation and people in transit.

The United States also welcomed the moves of the Arroyo administration to host a high-level APEC meeting on maritime security next year to ensure that the movement of goods and people carried out through traditional maritime routes remain unimpeded.

The high-level maritime security conference seeks to map out new strategies and fresh approaches to enhancing maritime security in the region, especially in the face of lingering terrorist threats. The result of the conference will complement ongoing efforts to secure trade under the STAR initiative.

Other APEC members like Japan, Singapore, Russia, Papua New Guinea and Australia have also expressed support for the Philippine initiative to host the high-level maritime security conference.

APEC commends RP, Indonesia, Russ Federation on determination to bring terrorists to justice

LOS CABOS, Mexico – The leaders of the 21-member Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum today commended the determination by the governments of the Philippines, Indonesia and the Russian Federation to bring terrorists to justice.

In one of two statements issued at the end of their two-day summit meeting here, the leaders of the APEC also condemned the recent terrorist attacks in the Asia-Pacific region, especially in the Philippines, Indonesia and the Russian Federation.

The APEC leaders also expressed deepest sympathy and condolences to the victims of these attacks and their families and to the peoples of these APEC member-economies.

The statements issued at the end of the summit address the dangers posed by terrorism to the Asia-Pacific region and outline the twin APEC goals of enhancing security against terrorist threats while ensuring trade growth in the Asia-Pacific region.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said in her speech at the breakfast plenary meeting dubbed “A Conversation with Leaders” that tackling terrorism would be no easy task.

“That (Bali) attack and the other attacks in October remind us that this war on terrorism will be long, difficult and borderless,” she said.

The President threw her support behind the international fight against terrorism but said efforts to ease poverty were also crucial to build security.

“If we neglect the economic imperative at this time when we are so concerned with terrorism, we would be feeding terrorism by promoting hunger, disease and ignorance,” she told the meeting in this luxury Mexican beach resort.

APEC leaders have also agreed to enhance practical efforts to prevent terrorists and their organizations from transferring and accessing funding. These measures include fully implementing United Nations and other international instruments, promoting better monitoring of alternative remittance systems and non-profit organizations and enhancing law enforcement and regulatory capabilities.

GMA, other APEC leaders wear traditional Mexican attire for photo session

LOS CABOS, Mexico – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the other leaders attending the 10th APEC Economic Leaders’ Meeting here wore costumes deeply rooted in Mexican tradition during the meeting’s official photo session.

The President wore a “huipiles,” the most traditional form of women’s clothing in Mexico, which has been used since pre-Colombian times.

It consists of a swath of cloth, doubled over with an opening for the head.

Huipiles are still woven on handlooms, guaranteeing that each is an individual work of art.

The patterns woven into the cloth date back before the conquest and represent sacred beings and animals that protect the crops, fertility and harmony with the earth and, finally, the Mayan vision of the cosmos.

The huipil that the President and the other women leaders wore was hand-made by members of the indigenous cooperative SNA Jolobil in the Chiapas highlands.

Mexican President Vicente Fox and the other male leaders wore Mexico’s traditional white “guayabera.”

The guayabera, which originated from the Caribbean, arrived in Mexico during the colonial era. They were created by a pottery maker named Joselillo.

According to tradition, one day Joselillo received a bundle of cloth from his family back in Spain.

He asked his wife to use the cloth to make comfortable and cool shirts that he could wear.

The shirts were so admired that the style soon caught on with farmers throughout the region.

They later added pockets to the shirt to where they can put their belongings and tobacco.

The Escultura shirtmaking factory, founded in 1955, made the guayaberas that worn by male economic leaders.

APEC leaders okay Trade Facilitation Action Plan

LOS CABOS, Mexico – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the other APEC economic leaders today endorsed the APEC Trade Facilitation Action Plan which will implement their commitment to cut transaction costs by five percent in the APEC region by the year 2006.

In the declaration issued at the end of the APEC Leaders Retreat at Ventanas Al Paraiso Hotel here, the leaders recognized the significant economic and trade benefits which can accrue from trade facilitation and took special note of the action plan’s call for providing appropriate capacity building assistance to developing economies.

The leaders directed their ministers to continue moving forward with the selection and implementation of trade facilitating actions and measures and to assess the benefits of associated transaction cost reductions.

The leaders have adopted the Statement to Implement APEC Transparency Standards, and directed that these standards be implemented as soon as possible, and in no case later than January 2005.

The leaders likewise endorsed Pathfinder initiatives on advance passenger information systems, the revised Kyoto Convention on the Simplification and Harmonization of Customs Procedure, electronic SPS certification (e-cert), Electronic certificates of origin, mutual recognition arrangement of conformity assessment on electrical and electronic equipment Parts II and III, and corporate governance.

The statement to implement the APEC policies on trade and the digital economy, which contains a set of targets related to trade policies for the new economy, also a pathfinder initiative, was also adopted.

The leaders praised the strengthened peer review process of the individual action plans for monitoring process to achieve the Bogor goals.

They also endorsed the broadened Osaka Action agenda, which reflects their strong commitment to the achievement of the Bogor goals, while responding to changes in the global and regional economy.

GMA, other APEC leaders agree on need to crush terrorism to enhance growth

LOS CABOS, Mexico (via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the other leaders of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum agreed today on the need to crush terrorism, which poses a profound threat to their vision of free, open and prosperous economies.

In the APEC Economic Leaders' Declaration, the heads of the 21 member-economies of the Pacific Rim discussed the challenge posed to the region's security and prosperity by terrorist organizations, noting the need to strengthen security while maintaining the smooth flow of goods, capital and people that has been key to the region's economic growth.

"We welcomed the efforts of member-economies in APEC for a response to the 2001 Leaders' Statement on Counter-terrorism," the APEC leaders said.

The Leaders' Declaration, which was read by Mexican President Vicente Fox after the final "Leaders' Retreat" at the Las Ventanas al Paraiso Hotel here, condemned in the strongest terms recent terrorist acts in the APEC region, and reaffirmed the leaders' determination to enhance cooperation on countering and responding to terrorism.

The leaders have adopted the Los Cabos Statement on Fighting Terrorism and Promoting Growth, committing to take a series of concrete steps that will protect and make more efficient the flows of trade, finance, and information.

The APEC leaders likewise called for the development of capacity-building programs to assure that all economies are able to implement all elements of the statement.

The leaders further endorsed the strengthening of energy security in the region under the mechanism of the APEC Energy Security Initiative, which activates notably the reporting of monthly oil data, and were introduced and highly commended by the Eighth International Energy Forum last September.

APEC endorses negotiations for abolition of agricultural subsidies, export restrictions

LOS CABOS, Mexico – The leaders of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation member-economies today endorsed negotiations for the abolition of all forms of agricultural export subsidies and unjustifiable export prohibitions and restrictions which President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and other leaders of developing countries criticized as hindrances to their countries' expansion and development.

In the APEC Economic Leaders Declaration issued Sunday (Monday in Manila), the 21 Asian-Pacific leaders agreed to implement the APEC vision of free and open trade and investments.

The APEC leaders thus called on their ministers “to continue negotiations that will open markets and enhance the multilateral trading systems, foster economic growth and poverty reduction particularly in developing economies, promote sustainable development, improve disciplines, improve WTO (World Trade Organization) coherence with other institutions, and provide opportunities for all citizens of the world.”

“We discussed the fundamental contribution of trade to economic growth, and the need for APEC to strongly support the multilateral trading system, while implementing our commitment,” the leaders’ declaration stated.

The leaders likewise welcomed the launch of new multilateral trade negotiations in Doha and encouraged all economies to pursue substantive negotiations in all areas of the Doha Development Agenda by the agreed timelines to ensure that the deadline of January 1, 2005 to conclude such negotiations is met.

“We call for progress across all areas in the lead-up to the 2003 WTO Fifth Ministerial Conference in Cancun,” the leaders said.

The leaders have agreed that these negotiations hold the prospect of real gains for all economies, and particularly developing economies, in the area of agricultural reform, improved market access for goods and services, and clarification and improvement of trade disciplines.

President Macapagal-Arroyo and other leaders of developing economies have been calling for a leveling of the playing field in trade, saying that agricultural subsidies and trade barriers in the United States, Japan and the European Union have hindered exports.

GMA to continue to work for hiked benefits for Filipino war veterans from the U.S. gov’t

SAN DIEGO, California—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that she will continue to work for increased benefits for Filipino World War II veterans from the American government.

In her speech at a gala dinner at the Marriott Hotel organized by the Filipino community here, the President said that during her meeting with US President George W. Bush on Sunday in Los Cabos, Mexico, she again reminded the latter of his promises to help the Filipino veterans.

“When I was with President Bush at the APEC summit yesterday, I reminded him again about our Filipino veterans,” the President said.

The two leaders were among the heads of state and governments of the 21 member-economies of the Pacific Rim who attended the 10th Economic Leaders’ Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC).

The President said that she had included the veterans’ benefits in the agenda of all her bilateral meetings with President Bush, especially during her official visit to Washington, D. C. last year.

She also called on the Filipino community here to support American legislators who have endorsed the bill that would expand benefits for Filipino World War II veterans.

The President lauded in particular San Diego Congressman Bob Filmer, the principal author of a bill that has been passed in the US House of Representatives for health care compensation and burial benefits for Filipino veterans to the tune of $65 million.

“And I know that you, the Filipino community, will always support those who support the Philippine cause,” the President said.

The President then called on the Filipino-Americans here to pray so that the appropriations bill would pass the US Senate.

According to the President, her advocacy on behalf of the Filipino war veterans has paid off since the US Veterans Administration is providing $500,000 per year for veterans' health care in the Philippines.

The President said that this would be the first time in so many years and after so many attempts in the past that the American government is giving this amount to Filipino war veterans, adding that the first $500,000 would be released to the Philippine government within this month.

GMA seeks support of Filipino-Americans in San Diego in building strong republic

SAN DIEGO, California – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today brought to the 150,000 Filipino-Americans here the good news about what's happening in the home country, told them how she has been waging the war against terrorism, crime and poverty, and sought their continued cooperation and help in building a strong Republic.

In a speech before the Filipino community during a gala dinner at the Marriott Hotel here after two days of talks with other world leaders in Mexico, the President vowed to remain focused on her administration's economic policy reform agenda even as she spelled out her eight-point work program for the next six months.

"International credit rating agencies have rated us as stable when before I came in as president, they rated us negative," the President told the members of the Filipino community here.

A 5.2 percent growth rate in gross national product for the first half of this year makes the Philippines the best performing economy in Asia, she added.

"Your remittances have helped us grow higher than our neighboring countries," she said.

The President went on: the price of rice is stable at P14-P15 a kilo; about 200,000 urban poor families have acquired the right to buy the land they occupy; schools are being built where there used to be none; more than 3 million poor Filipinos now have health insurance.

Domestic terrorists, particularly the Abu Sayyaf, are on the run and the police and military forces have crushed at least five of the most notorious kidnap-for-ransom gangs, the President said.

"Even the Filipino-Chinese community, the favorite victims of those gangs, have said now 'All is quiet on the Binondo front'," she added.

The President also spelled out an eight-point work program for the next six months which is part of the bigger medium-term Philippine development plan to win the battle against poverty within the decade. The program aims to:

- strengthen our small and medium enterprises;
- jump-start housing;
- reduce transport costs from Mindanao to Luzon;
- decongest Metro Manila;
- mark up the contribution of the PCCG contribution to the fiscal resources;
- make Makati a specific urban tourist destination;
- stimulate private investment in agriculture; and
- make the reclamation area in Roxas Boulevard a tourism complex or the new Nayong Pilipino.

"After a year and a half in the presidency, I have come to realize that to overcome such tremendous odds, we must build a strong Republic. Upon the cornerstone of a strong Republic, we have to build a structure of shared ethical values, a firm consensus to serve the common interest and a common vision of our national future,” the President said.

She said “no President can build a strong Republic singlehandedly. I can do it and do it well only if I can count on the support of the more than two-million Filipino-Americans, including the 150,000 here in San Diego.”

“I ask you, stay with me,” the President said. “Even as you are helping build America here in San Diego, help me build a strong Philippine Republic.”

Filipinos come in Sunday best for dinner with GMA

SAN DIEGO, California (Via PLDT) — Filipino-Americans here and in the outlying cities of Los Angeles, Las Vegas and Phoenix came in full force and in their formal best to the gala dinner in honor of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo at the ballroom of the Marriott Hotel here.

Some 1,200 Fil-Ams came mostly in formal Filipino ternos and Barong Tagalog for Sunday’s night special event.

They packed the San Diego Marriott Hotel, many of them carrying small Philippine flags, and applauded and cheered as the President, in a red business suit, entered the hotel’s ballroom.

The President, together with First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel T. Arroyo and the Philippine delegation, had just flown in from Mexico where they attended the 10th summit meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Forum.

Most of the Filipino-Americans were professionals, including doctors, engineers, IT (information technology) workers, accountants, teachers, military officers and World War II veterans.

Also in the audience were four congressmen who are members of the Philippine caucus in the US House of Congress: Congressmen Bob Filmer, Randy Cunningham, and Darryl Issa and Congresswoman Susan Davis.

With the President were Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye and PMS Chief Silvestre Afable, Jr.

During the program, the President was handed the key to the City of San Diego by Mayor Dick Murphy who remarked that the key can also open the office of the mayor, meaning the President can also visit San Diego anytime.

Murphy informed the President that six percent of the city’s residents are Filipino-Americans.

“The Fil-Ams are responsible for my elections as mayor,” he boasted.

GMA pursues economic, security goals in trade, investment trip to California

SAN JOSE, California – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she is here in California for the same reason she was in Mexico for the 10th Leaders' Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum – to focus on the economy and security of the Philippines.

In a press conference at the Westin Santa Clara Hotel here, the President said that in this interconnected world, “opening a door in Silicon Valley can open an opportunity for job creation in the Philippines.”

“Whether it is the fight against global terrorism or improving education at home, at the end of the day, it is always about the economy and improving the lives of my Philippine citizens,” the President said.

The President explained that the APEC meeting in Mexico underscored a significant new trend among nations and leaders – the recognition that global terrorism must be fought hand-in-hand with the fight against poverty.

The President pointed out that the best antidote to terrorism and poverty is political freedom and economic opportunity.

“As the leader of a developing nation, I cannot achieve one without the other, that is why my fight against terrorism on my own soil is accompanied by efforts to bring jobs, education and opportunity to my people at the same time,” she said.

The President expressed the belief that the link between terrorism and poverty has finally been accepted by developed nations.

“Increasingly, you see a place at the table for focusing on anti-poverty and economic issues to aid developing nations as a serious component to the fight against terrorism,” the President said.

She noted that this was very evident at the recent APEC meeting, the Monterrey Consensus in Mexico last spring, and even through the Doha round of the World Trade Organization (WTO).

“In each instance, developed nations have increasingly come to understand that as we help fight terrorism, they must help us fight the handmaiden of terrorism – which is poverty,” the President said.

The President said it was no coincidence that she followed up her APEC meeting with a trade and investment trip to Silicon Valley.

The President said she is meeting Andy Grove of Intel and many other high-tech leaders in an effort to encourage greater investments in the Philippines.

Intel has already invested $1 billion and employs over 6,200 Filipinos.

“This is my idea of a good anti-terrorism plan,” the President said.

The President arrived here at the San Jose Mineta International Airport at about 9:40 this morning (California time).

She motored immediately to Westin Santa Clara for round-table discussions with Chief Executive Officers (CEOs) of semi-conductor industry association member-companies.

GMA cites role of citizenry in fight vs terrorism

SAN JOSE, California — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the cooperation of the citizenry in the fight against terrorism and other crimes in the Philippines.

In a press conference here, the President said that in the Philippines, the government has been conducting an information campaign on how the community can help in the fight against terrorism, kidnapping, and other forms of criminality.

“We have to remember that fighting terrorism is not the work only of the military or the police. It is also the work of citizens,” the President said.

The President mentioned the taxi driver who drove his vehicle to Camp Crame in Quezon City after he noticed that there was a box left inside the taxi that he suspected of being a bomb.

The police had been getting a lot of inquiries from the ordinary citizens on how to report crimes or detect bombs, the President said.

“We are responding to these inquiries. Alertness of a citizen even in the anti-kidnapping campaign has been a very, very big factor in our anti-crime drive,” the President said.

Asked whether the government has established a connection between the al-Q aeda terrorist group and the local terrorists, the President said that it is possible that al-Qaeda is making its way to Southeast Asia.

“But the most important issue is to break up the regional and global network, to stop the flow of money to terror groups and to break the militant cells wherever they may be across the globe,” the President said.

GMA’s California visit a boon for job generation

SAN JOSE, California – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s visit to California, particularly at Silicon Valley, is a logical sequel to her participation in the Asia-Pacific Economic Council (APEC) meeting in Mexico and her desire to generate more jobs for Filipinos back home.

In a radio interview, Press Secretary Ignacio “Toting” Bunye said the President’s visit to the Silicon Valley, particularly in the headquarters of Intel, is an extension of her campaign at Los Cabos for economic security for the Philippines and the people.

“Kasi doon sa APEC ay pinag-usapan ang mga solusyon sa mga problema ng terorismo at lumalabas na ang pinaka-importanteng solusyon dito ay ang paglaban sa poverty o kahirapan at ang sagot ng ating Pangulo sa solusyong iyan ay pagbibigay ng mga trabaho sa pamamagitan ng paghahanap ng mga puhunan na manggagaling

sa labas na dadalhin sa ating bansa (At APEC, during the discussions on the problem of global terrorism, the most important solution that surfaced was to fight poverty; and the President's solution against poverty is job generation through more foreign investments pouring into the country)," Bunye said. medium enterprises (SMEs) or businesses or just help them build their own houses worth from P15,000 to, say, P2 million.

He said building houses has a big multiplier effect that could greatly help the Philippine economy.

Bunye also noted that the mayor of Milpitas, Henry Manayan, happens to be of Filipino origin. Mayor Manayan was among those who welcomed the President and gave her the symbolic key to the city.

Bunye added that the President also visited the Intel headquarters in Silicon Valley.

Intel has billions of pesos invested in the Philippines and employs about 6,200 Filipinos in its Philippine-based manufacturing facility.

Palace confident measures against planned transport strike are enough

SAN JOSE, California – Press Secretary Ignacio "Toting" Bunye today said the government is confident that measures undertaken by the Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board (LTFRB) and the Department of Transportation and Communications (DOTC) against any planned transport strike are enough to cushion its impact on commuters.

Secretary Bunye said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is well updated on the strike and she is concerned about its impact on the commuters.

He said that we all know that the most affected sector of society during transport strikes is the riding public.

"So, she is appealing na kung puwede ay mapag-usapan ang bagay na ito at huwag humantong dito sa mga makakapinsalang mga strike sa ating mga kababayan (The President is appealing that the matter be discussed and settled so it won't lead to a strike that would affect the people)," Bunye said.

Bunye said the government is confident that LTFRB Chairman Dante Lantin and DOTC Secretary Leandro Mendoza are taking all the necessary measures to resolve the problem.

No loyalty check, Palace assures people

Malacañang today brushed off reports that the administration is out to conduct a loyalty check not only among military and police officials but also among the allies of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

In an impromptu interview, Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao said the term loyalty check is a misnomer. "There is no such thing as loyalty check," he said, adding that it is not the President's style to undertake such a check.

Tiglao said that all officials of the government are perceived to be supportive of the republic and the administration.

Tiglao also said that the spokesman of the Rebolusyonaryong Alyansang Makabansa (RAM) could have been misquoted in the report that says the group has now joined the so-called People's Consultative Assembly headed by administration critic Linda Montayre.

"You have to remember that the RAM is also very careful and the official stand of RMA comes from its board. I think you have to get an official statement from the RAM chairman himself," Tiglao said.

The news report about the so-called joining of forces of RAM and PCA was pegged on RAM's sending a representative to a meeting organized by the PCA at the University of the Philippines.

According to Tiglao, there were conflicting reports about the stand of RAM on the PCA's call for the ouster of the present government and the formation of an interim administration prior to the establishment of a parliamentary-type of government.

But the report quoted RAM spokesman, Col. Reynaldo Samaco, as saying that a coup at this time was not an option since an interim government would be unacceptable to the people.

Palace defends GSIS on purchase on Juan Luna painting

Malacañang today defended the Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) in buying the 110-year-old Juan Luna oil painting at an auction in Hong Kong, saying the painting is "part of our national history and culture."

In an interview with Malacañang Press Corps this afternoon, Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao said the money used by the GSIS for the purchase of Luna's oil painting, "Parisian Life," was not "an expenditure but an investment."

Tiglao also said that pieces of history, such as the Juan Luna painting, "are very important to us as a people."

He explained that had the government allowed Luna's painting to be auctioned to other individuals, it could have "ended up in some billionaire's private quarter and we cannot retrieve it."

"The price for 'Parisian Life' might seem to be big but the point is that it's really priceless," Tiglao said.

According to Tiglao, Luna's painting "is not only a work of art by a Filipino master but also an achievement of the Filipino people."

"Now, the GSIS on its own has the option to sell it to a Filipino collector who can assure us that the painting would remain in our country," Tiglao said.

The painting depicts a woman in a café. On one side are Luna, Jose Rizal and Dr. Ariston Bautista in a huddle.

Luna earned his fame as a painter at the turn of the 19th century. His most famous pieces include "The Death of Cleopatra" and "The Spoliarium."

GMA in Silicon Valley to make pitch for more U.S. investment in RP

SAN JOSE, California – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived here in northern California on a trade and investment mission designed to boost the combined trade between California and the Philippines that already exceeded $12 billion per year.

The President flew here from a meeting of the leaders of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) in Los Cabos, Mexico where she joined other APEC leaders in discussing ways to unite against terrorism and increase economic cooperation.

Speaking at a luncheon and program sponsored by the Commonwealth Club of California, the President said she is in California for the same reason she was in Mexico – to focus on the economy and security of the Philippines.

"In this interconnected world, opening a door in Silicon Valley can open an opportunity for job creation in the Philippines," the President said.

She said her mission is to stimulate trade and investment abroad in order to boost job creation and economic opportunity at home.

“It is no coincidence, therefore, that I am following up my APEC meeting with a business trip to Silicon Valley,” the President said.

In her speech, the President said that the APEC nations stand against terrorism and with the United States.

In the case of Iraq and North Korea, the objective is to peacefully disarm the two nations and for them to reform and open up to the world. These two nations, the President said, can do tremendous harm to the region with the weapons and arsenal at their disposal.

Also in the audience were leaders and members of the various Filipino-American organizations, leaders of the US chambers of commerce, and members of the Silicon Valley community.

GMA to pursue New Zealand offer

SAN JOSE, California – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said she would pursue New Zealand Prime Minister Helen Clark’s offer of capability-building assistance in support of the United States’ initiative of Securing Trade in the APEC Region (STAR).

In a press briefing at the Westin Sta. Clara here, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said the Filipino leader thanked the Prime Minister for the good quality of official development assistance (ODA) extended by New Zealand.

The President said this ODA assistance has seen excellent results in project sites she visited in Negros, Bukidnon, Dumaguete, Baguio, Banawe and other regions of the Philippines.

Bunye also said New Zealand is aggressively promoting the development of geothermal energy in the Philippines.

New Zealand, Bunye further said, has made substantial contributions to Mindanao, particularly through the Southern Philippines Council for Peace and Development (SPCPD).

During their meeting, the President told the New Zealand leader that the Philippines is very grateful for this assistance, noting that the funds have been well utilized.

The Prime Minister of New Zealand was also briefed by the Philippine President about the New People’s Army (NPA) in the country.

The President said her administration has been coping well with the insurgency problem, adding that the group has been listed by the United States among terrorist organizations.

The President said that funding for the NPA, which has been coming from abroad, is fast drying up, which is the reason why they are now resorting to extortion.

The President also said that the on-going training program of the Filipino soldiers with the US troops is needed to develop Filipino capability for anti-terrorism. She said the present campaign of her government is to encourage countryside vigilance against terrorists.

Prime Minister Clark likewise expressed interest in entering into air services agreement with the Philippines.

She noted that the bulk of foreign direct investments appear to be going to China.

This is the reason why it is important to pursue negotiations between ASEAN and China in order to improve investments, President Macapagal-Arroyo said.

The two leaders also agreed to increase trade in dairy products between the two countries. They acknowledged, however, that it is the private sector that must aggressively pursue this dairy trade.

GMA making headlines in U.S., Mexico visits

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has been making the headlines in the cities she has been visiting during her current trip to the United States and Mexico, where she took an active part in the 10th Leaders' Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation.

Her pictures have also been splashed on the front and inside pages of papers, particularly in the US.

More significantly, her call for the extension of the coalition against terrorism into a coalition for economic security and the fostering of economic growth and poverty reduction has won the support of the other APEC leaders at Los Cabos.

Her declaration – ‘Security impedes prosperity and, conversely, poverty feeds extremists with recruits. The war against terrorism is going to be long, difficult and borderless’ – has been widely quoted in the newspapers all over the world, particularly the Asia and Pacific region whose leaders agreed on the need to crush terrorism and exert stronger efforts at reducing poverty.

Her speech at the ‘Conversation with Leaders’ breakfast session – where she took the stand for the developing world along with two other women leaders, Indonesia’s Megawati and New Zealand’s Prime Minister Helen Clark – was widely applauded. One of the chief executive officers in the audience described her speech as ‘a homerun,’ powerful both in content and delivery.

‘He appreciates, admires my courage, my stand, my consistent position in the fight against terrorism,’ the President later told Manila-based reporters who accompanied her to Mexico. ‘He thinks it’s a good example for other leaders in the world.’

Another picture dispatched by Associated Press and Reuter to different newspapers all over the world showed her with Bush and Russian Prime Minister Mikhail Kasyanov.

Earlier during her visit to Hawaii, the Honolulu Star-Bulletin welcomed Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo on October 25 with the bold headline ‘Mabuhay, Presidente’ along with a photograph of her getting a warm welcome from the members of the Filipino community on the islands.

The story read: ‘The event was supposed to be limited to invited guests, but organizers said that despite security concerns they could not turn people away, and many were able to get close to her.’

Inside the same Star-Bulletin issue were photos of the President with Gov. Benjamin Cayetano, who is of Filipino origin, and his wife Vicky; the President planting a narra tree, the national tree of the Philippines, at the Filipino Community Center in Waipahu; and the President greeting senior members of the Filipino community in Hawaii.

There are some 200,000 Filipinos and Filipino-Americans on Hawaii, where many of the first Filipinos who migrated to the US went to work as ‘sacadas.’

In California, where most of the 2-million Filipino-Americans in the US are located, the San Diego Union Tribune ran a story on the President's visit with the local Filipino community in its Metro section.

"Fresh from meeting with President Bush at a summit of Pacific Rim leaders in Baja California, Philippine President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo yesterday came to San Diego with the message that the threat of economic recession is the key challenge to the stability of the region," read the lead of the Union Tribune's story on October 28 headlined "Arroyo addresses local Filipino leaders."

"This is a president who knew before our president knew how important the war on international terrorism is," the San Diego daily quoted Rep. Darrell Issa (Republican-Vista) as saying. Issa was part of a three-member Congressional team that flew to Manila in January 2001 for Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo's inauguration.

DOLE field doctors, social workers to provide on-site assistance to OFWSs

The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) has deployed seven social workers and six medical doctors to various countries to provide basic medical and counseling services and assistance to overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) as ordered by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

In her meetings with OFWs during her foreign trips, the President assured the country's "modern-day heroes" that her administration would work to provide them with more assistance and welfare in their work sites abroad.

"The deployment of these doctors and social workers demonstrates the Macapagal-Arroyo administration's concrete and continuing efforts to protect and enhance the safety and welfare of our overseas Filipino workers," DOLE Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas said.

Sto. Tomas also said that since the deployment is basically funded through the congressional initiative allocation (CIA) of Sen. John H. Osmeña, this shows convergence and unity of purpose between the executive and legislative branches of government.

In a report to Malacanang, Sto. Tomas said the deployment of the social workers and medical doctors was made under the Overseas Comprehensive Social Services Package for OFWs (OCSSP), a collaborative effort of DOLE, the Department of Health and the Department of Social Welfare and Development.

She said that under the terms of reference of the OCSSP, DOLE will identify the overseas posts where the medical doctors and social workers would be deployed and their respective dates of assumption.

The social workers were Dulfie Shalim, whose assumption in Singapore took effect August 31; Cynthia Barriga, Hong Kong, September 2; Fatima Abobakar, Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, September 5; Marlene Kahano, Kuwait, September 10; Gina Gonzales, Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates, September 14; Delia Pamani, Dubai, United Arab Emirates, September 29; and Ma. Theresa Rico, whose assumption in Taichung took effect on October 1.

The medical doctors who have been deployed were Ray Suanding, Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, October 12; Ignacia Fajardo, Hong Kong, October 15; Candido Alam, Kuwait, October 17; Regina Melodia, Korea, October 17; Ramon Moreno, Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, October 18; and Marietta Ann Balbas, Singapore, October 21.

Sto. Tomas said that DOLE's International Labor Affairs Service is still in the process of facilitating the travel requirements of two more medical doctors, namely, Ricardo Audan, to be posted in Bahrain on October 29, and Nestor Aviles, to be deployed to Abu Dhabi on November 4.

Part of the responsibilities of the medical doctors will be to plan and manage the daily health care requirements of OFWs, undertake worksite and jail visitation if allowed by the host country, and participate in the periodic dialogue with workers.

The social workers would provide counseling and other assistance to OFWs, develop and implement alternative measures to alleviate stress, undertake periodic jail visitations if allowed by host country, and participate in special projects and programs for the OFW community.

GMA thanks Bush for support to RP's fight against terrorism, Filipino vets' welfare

SAN FRANCISCO, California — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed her thanks to US President George W. Bush for his support not only in the Philippines' fight against terrorism but also in her government's advocacy for more benefits for Filipino World War II veterans.

In an interview with top editors of the San Francisco Chronicle, the President said that during her meeting with Bush on the sidelines of the recently concluded 10th Economic Leaders' Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) in Los Cabos, Mexico, Bush accepted her proposition about the link between the war against terrorism and the war against poverty.

"President Bush has been a very good friend of the Philippines and I appreciated the fact that he recognizes the partnership between the US and the Philippines," the President told the Chronicle.

The President said that the Bush has given his support to the Philippines' war against terrorism "in the manner that we want it to be given."

According to the President, Bush also admired her consistent stand and commitment to wipe out terrorism in the Philippines.

"He thinks it is a good example for other leaders to follow," the President said about her meeting with Bush.

The President also appreciated the fact that when she asked for the help of the US leader in providing more assistance to Filipino veterans, Bush graciously obliged, resulting in the passage of a bill at the US House of Representatives expanding benefits for the Filipino war veterans.

The bill, with San Diego Congressman Bob Filmer as its principal author, would provide health care compensation and burial benefits for Filipino war veterans in the amount of $65 million.

The President then urged the Filipino-Americans in the Bay area here to write letters to their senators so that House-approved appropriation measure would pass the US Senate.

GMA prefers 'overseas' voting to 'absentee' voting

SAN FRANCISCO, California – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she would convey her sentiments to the Philippine Congress to rename the absentee voting bill to overseas voting bill.

Speaking at a gathering of Filipino Americans here dubbed as "the Fil-Am Community Salutes the President," the President said she will also convey to Congress their recommendation on how the final versions should be and as soon as they reconcile their final versions, she will sign it into within 24 hours.

The President expressed elation that after so many attempts by so many administrations before her to pass a bill on "overseas voting," it is only during her administration that it has passed third and final reading in both houses of Congress.

"The most important thing is we get a bill out, because we have waited for so long and for the first time, it has reached this far," the President said.

The President also lauded the initiative of the National Federation of Filipino-American Associations (NFFAA), headed by Loida Nicolas Lewis and the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) for filing a petition for injunction to stop the enforcement of the US requirement for the federalized job of airport screeners.

“We agree that experience matters in securing airports and planes in the United States,” the President said.

The President said that although this is an internal matter, she will take it up with Ambassador Adelbert del Rosario to make known the Philippine government’s sentiments to the appropriate US official.

At the start of her speech, the President expressed her gratitude to San Francisco Mayor Willy Brown for presenting her the key to the city.

She also acknowledged two other city mayors, both Filipino city mayors, Henry Manayan of Melphitas City in Silicon Valley and Mike Guingona of Daly City.

“We are very proud of them,” she said stressing that Manayan is on his last term as mayor of Melphitas,

“He has been such a good Filipino here in Silicon valley and he wants to be a good Filipino representing Philippine interests in the state assembly next time around,” the President said.

GMA confident of regaining S&P credit rating

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo remains confident that the Philippines will regain its stable rating from Standard and Poor’s (S&P) Ratings Services.

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said in a telephone interview from San Francisco that the President respects the S&P observation but believes the ratings firm overlooked the country’s macroeconomic indicators.

The Press Secretary quoted the President as saying: “We have a high regard for Standard and Poor’s but Standard and Poor’s may have taken into account only one macroeconomic indicator and probably did not take into account our significant gains like highest growth rate in Southeast Asia and third largest growth rate in Asia, our low inflation rate regime and fiscal discipline.”

“Be that as it may,” the President added, “I believe we can make it back to stable. I am confident we can do it.”

Meanwhile, Malacañang learned that Moody’s Investors Service said it was maintaining its stable credit outlook for the Philippines.

Exports have recovered, the official foreign exchange reserves are still high and workers inflows continue, Moody’s said.

Meanwhile, Secretary Bunye believes that in the recent visit of the President to Silicon Valley, there are very positive notes that investment from that part of the globe will soon pour into the country.

He said business executives and investors who called on the President while she was in California affirmed that they are working on the approval of these investments.

GMA stresses role of U.S., other developed countries in fight vs terrorism, poverty

SAN FRANCISCO, California – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today underscored the important role of the United States and other developed nations in helping developing nations like the Philippines in their efforts to win the war against terrorism and poverty.

In an interview with top editors of the San Francisco Chronicle, the President cited three measures that the United States and other developed countries must undertake.

“For one, they should help the poorest of the poor all over the world because there are poor all over the world who live on less than a dollar a day,” she said.

The President stressed that these poorest of the poor “are the most fertile grounds for the recruits of terrorism.”

“Then number two, they must open up their doors to the products of the developing countries,” the President said.

According to the President, while developed nations preached to developing countries the blessings of liberalization, they actually practice protectionism.

In this connection, she stressed the need for developed nations to “open their doors if they are going to preach liberalization.”

“Third, they should invest more in developing countries,” the President said, adding that what developing countries need are not handouts but investments in people because this will be “investments in the fight against terrorism.”

As far as aid is concerned, the President said it is also the obligation of the developing countries to use their resources responsibly.

“So, the developed countries must also help the developing countries build the capability towards transparency of mobilization of resources,” she explained.

She also said that her administration supports the United States in the case brought to the United Nations against Iraq.

“And we are urging the UN to act on the US resolution,” the President said.

GMA gets assurances of new business, investments from Silicon Valley firms

Malacañang today said the visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in the Silicon Valley firms in California produced positive results as she convinced business leaders and executives in the world’s information technology capital to put their business and pour in more investments in the Philippines.

In a telephone interview from San Francisco with Malacañang reporters in Manila this afternoon, Press Secretary Ignacio “Toting” Bunye revealed that one of the chief executive officers of Silicon Valley, Richard Swanson, president of Sunpower Corporation, promised to establish a solar cell manufacturing company in the country.

Bunye said the assurance of Swanson to make a $200-million investment in the Philippines is the result of his meeting with the President last Monday (Tuesday in Manila).

He also said Swanson and his firm are rushing the paperwork needed for the approval of the Philippine investment plan.

Bunye said the solar cell manufacturing company will be fully operational before 2004 and would provide employment to Filipinos.

“(The) expected job generation (in the solar cell manufacturing company) is 1,400 jobs in four years,” Bunye said.

“This is the first solar cell manufacturer. It will produce clean electricity because its comes from the sun,” he added.

Aside from Sunpower Corporation, Cypress Semiconductor Corp. also informed the President of its plans to put up a silicon wafer fabrication plant in the Philippines.

Cypress, a company that specializes in high-volume manufacturing of silicon cells at very low cost, is a major partner of Sunpower, a premier manufacturer of ultra high-efficiency silicon solar cells.

Other major Silicon Valley investors in the country include PeopleSoft, Cisco, HP-Compaq, Oracle, Sun Microsystems, Sybase and Agilent Technologies.

GMA informed of launching of ‘adopt a barangay’ project in U.S.

SAN FRANCISCO, California – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was informed by Consul General Delia Menez-Rosal here of the formal launching of the Adopt-A-Barangay Coalition (ABC) at the Philippine Community Development Forum of the First Global Filipino Community Networking Convention held in this city last August 31, 2002.

Welcoming the President at a Filipino gathering here, Ambassador Menez-Rosal said that an alliance was established by a core group of concerned dedicated Filipinos in the Bay Area, as well as US and Manila-based foundations, such as Ayala Foundation, LBC Foundation and Philippine Children’s Fund to implement a “holistic approach” in mitigating poverty in the Philippines.

“The end objective of this coalition is to help our ‘Kababayan’ and to uplift the socio-economic conditions in the Philippines through the provision of health, nutrition, education and livelihood in the Philippines, as well as medical missions, food banks, scholarships, values orientation to the vocational training,” Menez-Rozal said.

An MOU was signed by the members of the core group and participants of the community development forum.

The launching, which was also attended by Senate President Franklin Drilon, Congressman Augusto Syjuco and Ambassador Albert del Rosario, was highlighted by a candle-lighting ceremony.

Before her speech at the Filipino community here, the President met with the officers of the National Federation of Filipino-American Associations (NAFFAA) lead by Ms. Loida Nicolas Lewis

The NAFFAA is a private non-profit, non-partisan, organization established in 1997 to promote the welfare and well-being of all Filipinos and Filipino-Americans throughout the United States.

The officers of the NAFFAA told the President said that their primary objectives include the following:

- promoting active participation of Filipino-Americans in civic and national affairs and in all other aspects of mainstream America;
- promoting awareness of Filipino-American contributions to social economic, cultural and political life in the United States; and
- securing social justice, equal opportunity and fair treatment of Filipino-Americans through advocacy and legislative and policy initiatives at all levels of government.

Palace condemns killing of Abra mayor, orders Lina to resolve case immediately

Malacañang has strongly condemned the shooting Tuesday of Tineg, (Abra) Mayor Clarence Benwaren inside a Catholic Church in Calauan, Laguna.

Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao told Malacanang reporters that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo had ordered Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. to immediately resolve the killing of Mayor Benwaren.

The mayor was felled by an assassin's bullet inside the San Isidro Labrador Church in Calauan while standing as a sponsor at a wedding.

Tiglao said the President wanted Lina not only to apprehend the remaining gunmen but also the mastermind of the crime.

Members of the Calauan police were able to kill one of the gunmen in the ensuing firefight but the other suspects managed to escape.

The Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) has control and supervision over the Philippine National Police (PNP).

Police are still trying to determine the motive of the killing.

Sa ngalan ng ating Pangulong Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, ng Unang Pamilya, ako po ay bumabati sa inyong lahat sa Araw ng Namayapa.

Ang pagbisita natin sa himlayan ng ating mga mahal na yumao ay isang tradisyon at kaugaliang nagpapakilala ng ating paggalang hindi lamang sa mga namayapa kundi sa mga adhikaing kanilang ipinanamana sa atin.

Ilan sa mga adhikaing dapat nating patuloy na ipaglaban ay ang pagkakaisa, kapayapaan, kaunlaran at kaligtasan mula sa mapanindak ng elementong walang puwang sa isang sibilisadong kaayusan. Nawa sa pagtugay ng ating Panginoon, ang Panahon ng Undas ay maging isang ginituang pagkakataon din upang ating patatagin at palakasin ang ating pagkakaisa bilang pamilya.

Ang matatag na pamilya ay isa sa mga sandigan ng isang malakas na Republika.

Sa ngalan ng ating Pangulong Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo at ng Unang Pamilya, harinawang maging makabuluhan at matahimik ang paggunita natin sa Araw ng mga Namayapa.

GMA's official visit to Mexico, U.S. 'an overwhelming success.' says Bunye

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was able to accomplish her mission in her week-long official trip to attend the 10th Economic Leaders' Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum in Los Cabos, Mexico and to meet with American investors as well as Filipino communities in the United States.

"The visit was an overwhelming success," Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said in summing up the trip of the President to Mexico and to the United States.

In an interview from San Francisco, California, Bunye said that while at the APEC summit, the President has taken up the cudgels for the developing countries as she called on the industrialized countries to practice what they preached on trade liberalization instead of maintaining their protectionist policies.

Bunye is part of the small official delegation of the President.

At the APEC, the President also restated the strong commitment of the Philippines in supporting the US in the fight against global terrorism, Bunye said.

The President has also successfully brought forward her stand that there is a link between terrorism and poverty, saying that poor countries can be an ideal breeding ground for terrorist activities, Bunye said.

Bunye said that in her meetings with the members of the Filipino community, first in Honolulu, and later in San Diego and in San Francisco, California, the President was warmly greeted by our kababayans, especially when she announced the passage by both houses of Congress of the absentee voting bill and the dual citizenship bill.

“Kaya’t napakaganda ng pagtanggap sa ating Pangulo sa lahat ng lugar ng kanyang binisita (That’s why the President was warmly received by our countrymen in the places that she visited),” Bunye said.

At the Silicon Valley, Bunye said, leading manufacturers of electronics and information and communications technology (ICT) products have also assured the President of their continued confidence in the Philippine economy.

The American ICT giants assured the President that they will not only expand their present operations in the Philippines but would also put new investments, especially in call center operations, Bunye said.

The President and her official party are scheduled to return early tomorrow morning, taking the regular flight of the Philippine Airlines from San Francisco, California.

GMA cites U.S. support in RP’s fight vs terrorism, veterans’ welfare as gains in official trip

SAN FRANCISCO, California — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that one of the gains of her official trip to Mexico and the United States is the assurance from US officials, particularly US President George W. Bush, that they will continue to support the Philippines in its fight against terrorism.

In a radio interview with Ely Saludar of the Radio Mindanao Network (RMN) here, the President also said that during her one-on-one with President Bush in Los Cabos, Mexico, the latter assured her of his commitment to work for expanded benefits for the Filipino World War II veterans.

The President and Bush were among the 21 leaders of the Pacific Rim who attended the 10th Economic Leaders’ Meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) held October 26-27 in Los Cabos, Mexico.

In fact, the President said, the Bush administration was largely instrumental in the passage at the US House of Representatives of a $65 million outlay for health benefits and burial assistance to Filipino veterans.

This appropriations bill, according to the President, is now in the Senate. That is why, she said, she had asked the Filipino Americans in the US to write to their senators so that the veterans benefit bill would be endorsed by the US Senate committee on veterans affairs to the whole Senate for approval.

The President said that during their talks, President Bush also assured her of continued US support to the Philippines’ fight against terrorism and poverty.

During the interview, the President also explained that there is still hope that the $30-million financial assistance for the Philippines, which forms part of the $5 billion package for several countries could be passed by the US Congress after it was vetoed.

The President said that Hawaii Senator Daniel Inouye, a friend of the Philippines and who inserted the $30 million outlay for the Philippines, would attempt to include the same amount in the next US budget.

Senator Inouye called on the President during her overnight stopover in Honolulu on her way to Mexico.

According to the President, the $30 million outlay, if finally approved, would be on top of the existing $50 million economic support fund that the US has extended to the Philippine government.

“Kaya tuloy mas marami pang makukuha natin kung ganoon (If this is the case, we could even get more),” the President said.

Fitch, Moody’s maintain ratings, stable outlook on Philippines

Two of the world’s leading credit rating, research and risk analysis firms – Fitch Ratings and Moody’s Investors Service – are maintaining their ratings and stable outlook on the Philippines.

Malacañang welcomed the decision of the two agencies even as investment bank JP Morgan expressed surprise over the downgrading by Standard and Poor’s (S&P), another ratings services firm, of its long-term outlook for the Philippines.

Brian Coulton, a senior director at Fitch, said the agency is maintaining its ratings on the Philippines long-term foreign currency debt at BB+ and its long-term local currency borrowings at BBB-.

Credit ratings are used by investors as indications of the likelihood of getting their money back in accordance with the terms on which they invested.

“The ratings remain the same,” Coulton said, “and the outlook does remain stable as well.”

Moody’s also said it was keeping its stable credit outlook on the Philippines, saying the country’s strong balance of payments outlook was a balancing factor to a growing budget deficit.

Moody’s lead analyst for Asia, Thomas Byrne, said: “Back in August, we issued a statement and we looked primarily at the fiscal factors. But at that time, we didn’t see anything that would make us change our stable outlook. And the recent information that was released hasn’t led us to change our conclusion that we made back then.”

Moody’s revised in February its credit outlook on the Philippines to stable from negative, an outlook that had been in place since October 2000.

“Exports have recovered, the official foreign exchange reserves are still high and workers inflows continue; in fact they are pretty good this year,” Byrne said.

“These factors suggest that there is no direct link, at least not yet, and probably not foreseeable, with the budget problems and the balance of payments position,” he added.

JP Morgan, meanwhile, said in a statement it was surprised by S&P’s revision of its outlook for the Philippines from stable to negative.

It said S&P should have deferred the action to revise the outlook until early next year “to assess the trends, especially after the critical April tax month.”

“Clearly, S&P has given little weight to the Arroyo government’s arguments about a deficit frontloading and emerging signs of tax collection improvements,” JP Morgan said.

In San Francisco yesterday, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo expressed confidence that the Philippines will regain its stable rating from Standard and Poor’s Ratings Services.

“We have a high regard for Standard and Poor’s,” Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye quoted the President as saying. “But Standard and Poor’s may have taken into account only one macroeconomic indicator and probably did not take into account our significant gains like highest growth rate in Southeast Asia and third largest growth rate in Asia, our low inflation rate regime and fiscal discipline.”

“Be that as it may,” the President added, “I believe we can make it back to stable. I am confident we can do it.”

GMA assures safety of Filipinos as nation marks All Saints’ Day tomorrow

SAN FRANCISCO, California — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the public that they can visit the graves of their loved ones or relax at the malls and other places without fear of terrorist attacks.

“Gusto ko lang ipaalam na sinisigurado natin ang kaligtasan ng ating mamamayan, kaya mayroon tayong mga Marines na nagbabantay ngayon sa mga malls para lalong ligtas ang ating mga mamamayan (I would like to assure the safety of our countrymen, that is why we have Marines guarding the malls),” the President told the Radio Mindanao Network (RMN) in an interview here.

The President said that she had declared October 31 and November 2 as special non-working days to allow the people not only to go to the cemeteries during All Saints’ Day but also to relax and enjoy during the long weekend.

She said that her mission in going to Mexico for the leaders’ meeting of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) and to Silicon Valley in California is two-fold.

One, the President said, is to participate in widening the global alliance in the fight against international terrorism, and second, to work for more employment opportunities for our people through additional foreign investments.

“Kasi, kahit anong pinag-uusapan natin, sa katapusan yun din ang ating talagang hangarin: na bumuti ang buhay ng ating mga mamamayang Pilipino (Whatever we discuss, in the end, our final objective is to improve the lives of our countrymen),” the President said.

The President and her official party are scheduled to return early tomorrow morning, taking the regular flight of the Philippine Airlines from San Francisco, California.

GMA says new enemy of 21st century requires transnational collaboration

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the new kind of enemy in the 21st century, which is terrorism, requires a transnational collaboration among nations.

“There is a new kind of war in the 21st century, which is terrorism. This is a transnational war and therefore, there must be transnational collaboration not only with the United States but also with other neighbors in the region and other members of the United Nations,” the President in an interview with CNN while on a brief visit in the United States from the APEC Leaders’ Meeting in Mexico .

The President noted the several and recent strikes of terrorists in many parts of the world.

‘They’re trying to get into the Philippines. They’re trying to get into Europe. They’re trying to get into America, so it’s an international threat and it must be answered also, transnationally,’ she said.

The Philippines has a trilateral agreement with Malaysia and Indonesia on intelligence sharing and border patrols against transnational crime, including terrorism.

Meanwhile, the President said the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) is ready and capable of dealing with transnational crimes as it is responsible for reducing the number of Abu Sayyaf from thousands to just a couple of hundreds.

“The Abu Sayyaf was numbering thousands. Now, they are numbering a couple of a few hundreds and they are holed up, by and large, now where they started,” the President said. “In other words, we are making tremendous gains in our fight against the Abu Sayyaf.”

The President stressed, however, that the government is holding peace talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front and that there is an ongoing cease-fire between the MILF and government troops.

She said the government is taking advantage of the peace talks to bring about development in the area where the MILF can get their sympathizers.

“And this reminds us, and reminds the world — and I’m glad now that the developed countries agree that if we are going to fight terrorism, we have to fight poverty as well — we have to fight terrorists where they are and we have to fight poverty where the terrorists are,” she added.

GMA elated by confidence of I.T. execs in Silicon Valley on RP growth

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today noted the confidence manifested by executives of the information technology enterprises in Silicon Valley on the ICT sector in the country.

“If the business community feels that way, especially the community in the growth sector of the future for the Philippines, which is ICT, then I think this message has to be brought back to the Philippines so that they’ll know that there is confidence on the most important growth sector for the future in our country,” the President said in an interview with Cable News Network (CNN) while in the United States.

In her brief visit to San Jose, California, the President was able to convince business leaders and executives in the world’s information technology capital to put their business and pour in more investments in the Philippines.

One of the chief executive officers of Silicon Valley, Richard Swanson, president of Sunpower Corporation, promised to establish a $200 million solar cell manufacturing company in the country, which would be fully operational by 2004.

It is expected to generate at least 1, 400 jobs in four years.

Aside from Sunpower Corporation, Cypress Semiconductor Corp. also informed the President of its plans to put up a silicon wafer fabrication plant in the Philippines.

Cypress, a company that specializes in high-volume manufacturing of silicon cells at very low cost, is a major partner of Sunpower, a premier manufacturer of ultra high-efficiency silicon solar cells.

Other major Silicon Valley investors in the country include PeopleSoft, Cisco, HP-Compaq, Oracle, Sun Microsystems, Sybase and Agilent Technologies.

Joma Sison, NPA now in EU’s Official list of terrorist groups or persons

The European Union (EU) has included Jose Maria Sison, erstwhile chairman of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP), and the CPP’s armed wing, the New People’s Army (NPA), in the list of persons and groups engaged in terrorist activities.

The list, which was adopted after written consultations among the 15 member-states of the EU, has been published by the EU’s Official Journal.

Earlier, the United States also formally tagged the CPP-NPA as a foreign terrorist organization (FTO). On the request of the US, the Dutch government had ordered a freeze in the financial accounts of Sison and cut off his monthly allowance from the Dutch welfare department.

Sison, along with top officials of the National Democratic Front (NDF) that included NDF chairman Luis Jalandoni, is now living in exile in Utrecht, the Netherlands. The NDF is the political front of the CPP-NPA.

The EU's official journal gave Sison's aliases as Armando Liwanag and Joma and described him as "in charge of NPA."

Sison left the Philippines in March 1986 shortly after he was released from detention by then president Corazon Aquino. He has sought political asylum in the Netherlands since 1988.

The EU Council Resolution dated October 28, 2002, was based on a decision agreed on December 2001 that imposed specific restrictive measures directed "against certain persons or entities with a view to combat terrorism."

With the terror tag, all EU member countries are obliged to freeze the assets or properties of Sison and his group.

Aside from the NPA, among the more well-known terror groups listed in the EU Council resolution are the Al-Aqsa Martyrs Brigade, the Abu Nidal Organization, Palestinian Islamic Jihad, Palestine Liberation Front, all in Israel; the Irish Republican Army in Northern Ireland; Revolutionary Armed Forces of Columbia (FARC); Shining Path or Sendero Luminoso in Peru; and Gamaa Al-Islamiya of Indonesia.

Last week, Foreign Secretary Blas F. Ople led a Philippine mission to six European nations to convince their governments to include Sison and the CPP-NPA in their terror list.

In his report to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Ople said most European governments have indicated their support in a bid to endorse the NPA as a foreign terrorist organization to the United Nations under Security Council 373, which mandates all states to commit themselves fully to the global fight against terrorism.

Ople's mission covered six countries, namely Germany, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Belgium and Spain.

GMA leaves tomorrow for Cambodia to attend eight ASEAN summit

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will leave on Sunday (November 3) for Cambodia to attend the 8th ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) summit.

The Chief Executive will be in Cambodia from November 3 to 6 for the summit to further Philippine interests in the multilateral gathering. After her three-day trip to Cambodia, the President will proceed to the Socialist Republic of Vietnam for a state visit on November 6 and 7.

The President, fresh from her successful trip to attend the 10th Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Leaders Meeting in Los Cabos, Mexico, will be accompanied by a small group of Cabinet members.

The President's five-day trip to Cambodia and Vietnam will be her first since she assumed the presidency in January 2001. Her attendance in the ASEAN summit will be her second. The first was in Brunei Darussalam during the Seventh ASEAN summit last year.

Upon arrival at the Pochentong International Airport in the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh, the President will be accorded simple arrival honors.

After the arrival ceremonies, the President and her official delegation will immediately be motored to Hotel Cambodiana, where they are going to be billeted.

The first official activity of the President in Cambodia will be a meeting with the Filipino community at the Hotel Cambodiana's Ballroom.

Based on a fact sheet released by the Department of Foreign Affairs, there are some 680 Filipinos living in Cambodia.

Most of the Filipinos in Cambodia work for non-government organizations, the United Nations and other international organizations. Others work as missionaries, engineers, factory workers, and in service works as singers and entertainers, teachers and restaurant workers.

Statement of Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao

We welcome the revision yesterday by the US State Department of its Oct. 23 'travel advisory' to the Philippines, which acknowledged our government's efforts to deter terrorist attacks in our country. American intelligence warned that such attacks would be launched, in the aftermath of the Bali, Indonesia bombings, in Southeast Asia by Jemaah Islamiyah and other terrorists cells linked to the Al Qaeda.

The US State Department's Public Announcement released yesterday, and which superseded its Oct. 23 announcement noted:

"Philippine authorities have confirmed that they have put into place extra security measures...to deter possible terrorists attacks and to protect the public, including resident and traveling foreigners."

There are actually two types of what are informally called "travel advisories" by the State Department. Travel warnings are issued by the State Department "to recommend that Americans avoid travel to a certain country. Public Announcement are issued "to disseminate information about terrorist threats and other relatively short-term and/or trans-national conditions posing significant risks to the security of American travelers."

As of today there are 25 countries in the US State Department's list of "Travel Warnings", or countries which it advises Americans to avoid travel to. The Philippines is not in this list.

The Philippines however is in the list of 17 countries, which the US has issued Public Announcements on. A US Public Announcement on a particular country essentially advises its citizens to exercise caution and vigilance when traveling to that country in the face of short-term terrorists or other threats.

President's Radio Address (Saturday & Sunday, November 02 & 03, 2002)

Magandang araw sa inyong lahat.

Kararating ko lang ngayon mula sa aking pagdalo sa Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) summit. Iyong APEC meeting sa Mexico ay nagbibigay diin ng isang importanteng bagong direksyon sa mga bansa at namumuno; na kinikilalang kailangan labanan natin ang pang-mundong terorismo kasama ng laban sa kahirapan.

The best antidote to terrorism and poverty is political freedom and economic opportunity. As the leader of a developing nation, I can't achieve one without the other. That is why my fight against terrorism on our soil is accompanied by efforts to bring jobs, education, and opportunity to our people at the same time.

Sa palagay ko itong koneksyon ng terorismo at kahirapan ay sa wakas tinatanggap na ng mga bansang maunlad. Dumadalas, makikita ninyong may lugar sa mesa para tumukoy sa mga isyu laban sa kahirapan at ukol sa ekonomiya, upang tulungan ang mga bansang umuunlad pa lamang bilang seryosong bahagi ng laban sa terorismo. Napatunayan ito sa nakaraang pulong sa APEC, sa consensus meeting sa Monterey sa Mexico ilang buwang nakaraan, at kahit na sa Doha Round ng WTO. Sa bawat panahon, ang mga bansang maunlad ay lalong naiintindihan na habang tumutulong tayo laban sa terorismo, sila ay dapat tumulong sa ating lumaban sa katulong ng terorismo – ito ay ang kahirapan.

It is no coincidence, therefore, that I followed my APEC meeting with a trade and investment trip to Silicon Valley. I met with Andy Grove of Intel and many other high tech leaders in an effort to encourage greater investments in the Philippines. Intel has already invested one billion dollars and employs 6,000 Filipinos. That's my idea of a good anti-terrorism plan.

Ang laban sa terorismo ay labang pangmundo at hindi lamang laban ng isang tanging bansa o rehiyon. Ang terorismo ay walang kinikilalang dulo. Ang pagkakaisa sa pulong sa APEC ay nagbibigay-diin na nasa lahat ng lugar ang bantang ito.

We must work together as nations around the world to fight terrorism. We can't sit back and wait; we must take this fight to the terrorists before they undermine our very way of living.

Naiintindihan natin ang hamon ng terorismo sa lahat ng bansa na nagbibigay halaga sa kapayapaan at katiwasayan. Mula noong ako'y nanungkulan, nagdeklara ako ng giyera sa terorismo sa Pilipinas. Kaya ako ang unang lider sa Asya na nakiisa sa pang-mundong koalisyon at sumama sa pamilya ng mga bansa sa laban kontra sa terorismo.

Here at home, I have welcomed US military assistance to help us in the fight against terrorism. A few of my opponents have criticized my decision. But I have to tell you; I make no apologies for aggressively seeking to root out terrorism in the Philippines and putting considerable effort into seeking regional consensus on fighting terrorism.

Itong mga terorista ay napatunayang muli na sila ay hindi ginagabay ng paninindigang moral o relihiyoso. Wala silang adhikain kundi mga mamamatay ng mga inosente, tulak ng ideolohiya ng kaguluhan. Naranasan na natin ang ganoong walang prinsipyong karahasan sa Pilipinas. Ang tanging gamot ay mawalan ng takot, at durugin ang sinisikap nila.

The APEC nations stand against terrorism. The issue is making sure to build the strongest alliance possible and most leaders believe that it is through the United Nations. The same is true whether we are dealing with Iraq or North Korea. The objective is to peacefully disarm a nation that, one, needs to reform itself and open up to the world, and, two, can do tremendous harm to the region with the weapons and arsenal it has at its disposal.

Ang layunin ng pagbuo ng APEC ay ekonomiya. Iyon ang nagpapakatako sa kaniyang agenda, at dahilan kung bakit ako ay dumalo. Inakap ko ang laban kontra sa terorismo mula noong unang araw; ang mas mahirap na tanong sa mga bansang maunlad ay panatilihin ang mundong nakatukoy sa trabaho at ekonomiya. Ang kahirapan at desperasyon ay ang pinakamalaking sandata ng terorismo laban sa ating bansa. Hindi ko natatanggal iyan sa aking paningin. Hindi rin dapat sa ibang bansa.

I inherited an economy heading for bankruptcy and a political environment teetering on chaos. We have instilled political order and fiscal discipline. Inflation is at its lowest point in over a decade, economic growth is among the highest in Asia. We have done significant reforms including anti-money laundering, privatization, banking asset reform, among others.

Mabuti naman at iyong international credit agency na ang Moody's ay tuloy na itinuturing ang ating pang-matagalang hinaharap bilang stable. We believe that their assessment of the Philippines takes into account the fact that not only do we have an economy that has delivered one of the highest growth rates in a world full of troubles, but we are also taking further steps to strengthen further our macro-economic fundamentals.

Tutuloy tayong mulat sa ating mga pagsisikap na bawasan ang kakulangan ng ating badyet at, sa bandang diyan, naniniwala ako na ang mga pangdagdag na koleksiyong hakbang na tinutupad ng Bureau of Internal Revenue pati na rin ng mahigpit na kontrol sa gastos ng pamahalaan na nilagay natin ay magsusuporta sa ating tagumpay dito.

We have demonstrated our ability to win the approval of the rating agencies and we are encouraged with the approval of Moody's.

Habang ginagawa natin ito tutukuyin natin ang mga positibong sukat ng lakas ng ating ekonomiyang pinapatakbo sa sariling sikap, kasama ng pag-angat ng GNP, mahinang pagtaas ng presyo ng bilihin, patas na gastos ng gobyerno, at malakas na pagbalik ng export.

Bilang inyong Pangulo, naniniwala ako na kaisa ko kayo sa paghahangad ng isang matiwasay na pamayanan, masaganang pamumuhay at matatag na Republika.

Maraming salamat po.

Gov't still open to peace talks with reds

The government remains open to peace talks with the communist rebels despite the decision of the European Union (EU) to declare Communist Party of the Philippines founder Jose Ma. Sison and the New People's Army as terrorists.

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said in a radio interview this morning that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration's policy to keep the doors open to negotiations stands.

Bunye said Secretary Rigoberto Tiglao, Presidential Spokesman and Chief of Staff of the Office of the President, has offered to serve as go-between in talks between the government and the communists.

Presidential Management Staff Head Silvestre Afable, Jr., who was directed by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to take charge of the back-channel negotiations, and Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales are also ready to serve as go-between, Bunye said.

Thus far, however, the CPP-NPA-National Democratic Front has not made any contact with these government negotiators, Bunye added.

“Although the formal negotiations are suspended, the communication lines remain open,” Bunye said. “The government wants peace.”

Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita, however, warned the communists against stepping up attacks in response to the EU position, saying it would only prove that they are terrorists.

Bunye also said it is up to Sison, who is now in the Netherlands on political asylum, if he wants to return to the country. Sison left the Philippines in March 1986 shortly after he was released from detention by then President Corazon Aquino. He has been in the Netherlands since 1988.

“We all know he will hardly have freedom of movement now in Europe” because of the October 28 decision of the Council of the European Union to declare him and his group as terrorists, Bunye said.

Foreign Secretary Blas Ople said the EU move would deny “sanctuary” to Sison and other guerrilla leaders in Europe, freeze suspected rebel funds and cut off financing from their European supporters.

“They have no place to hide,” Ople added.

The decision of the Council, the legislative body of the European Union, calls upon all its 15 member-states to freeze the assets of the NPA and Sison – whom it described as “in charge of NPA” known by his aliases of Joma and Armando Liwanag. The member-states of the EU are Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and the United Kingdom.

As early as last August, the Bank of England, as agent for Her Majesty’s Treasury, has “directed all financial institutions that any funds which they hold for or on behalf of the Communist Party of the Philippines (‘CPP’), its armed wing the New People’s Army (‘NPA’) and Jose Maria Sison, the founder of both the CPP and the NPA, must be frozen. This is because the Treasury has reasonable grounds for suspecting that the CPP, NPA and Jose Maria Sison are or may be persons who commit, attempt to commit, facilitate or participate in the commission of acts of terrorism.”

GMA off for ASEAN Summit in Cambodia

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo left this afternoon for Cambodia to attend the eighth Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) summit that is expected to focus on terrorism, the same theme spotlighted by last week’s Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Leaders’ Meeting in Mexico.

The President was accorded departure honors before boarding a chartered Philippine Airlines plane bound for the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh at around 12:40 p.m. at Terminal 1 of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport.

Among the Cabinet members who accompanied the President in the trip were Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II, Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon and Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye.

During the two-day summit meeting that opens tomorrow, the President, widely considered in the region as the most vocal on the security issue, is expected to raise the urgency of collectively fighting poverty which, she says, breeds terrorism.

She is also expected to solicit support for an international conference on terrorism that the Philippines plans to host.

After the Cambodia summit, whose theme for this year is “Towards a Community of Southeast Asian Nations,” the President will proceed to the Socialist Republic of Vietnam for a state visit on November 6 and 7.

This is the second time the President will attend the gathering of the leaders of 10-member Asean. Last year, she attended the summit meeting in Brunei Darussalam. The Asean is composed of the Philippines, Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, Singapore, Brunei Darussalam, Cambodia, Vietnam, Laos and Myanmar.

While in Cambodia, the President is expected to meet with the small Filipino community in Phnom Penh. According to the Department of Foreign Affairs, there are some 680 Filipinos living in Cambodia.

Most of the Filipinos in Cambodia work for non-government organizations, the United Nations and other international organizations. Others work as missionaries, engineers, factory workers, and service works such as singers and entertainers, teachers and restaurant workers.

Among the highlights of the Phnom Penh summit are:

- the signing of the ASEAN Tourism Agreement by the ASEAN leaders which will enhance cooperation and assistance in the development and promotion of the tourism industry in the region;

GMA welcomes Moody’s continued stable rating

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today welcomed the decision of Moody’s Investors Service, one of the world’s leading rating agencies, to maintain its stable credit outlook on the Philippines.

“We believe that (Moody’s) assessment of the Philippines takes into account the fact that not only do we have an economy that has delivered one of the highest growth rates in a world full of troubles, but we are also taking further steps to strengthen further our macroeconomic fundamentals,” the President said in her radio message aired yesterday and today.

The President said the administration will remain focused on efforts to reduce the budget deficit.

She said that with the improved collection efficiency of the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the tight controls on government spending, she is confident of success towards this end.

“We have demonstrated our ability to win the approval of the rating agencies, and we are encouraged with the approval of Moody’s,” the President added.

“I inherited an economy heading for bankruptcy and a political environment teetering on chaos,” the President recalled.

“We have instilled political order and fiscal discipline,” she added.

Inflation is at its lowest point in over a decade and economic growth is among the highest in Asia, the President said. “We have done significant reforms, including anti-money laundering, privatization, banking asset reform, among others.”

Moody’s, in maintaining its stable credit outlook on the Philippines, said “exports have recovered, the official foreign exchange reserves are still high and workers inflows continue; in fact they are pretty good this year.”

GMA arrives in Cambodia for ASEAN Summit

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived at the Pochentong International Airport at 2:45 p.m. (Cambodia time) on board a chartered Philippine Airlines flight from Manila for the eighth summit conference of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

GMA to push for initiative to curb terrorism in meetings with ASEAN leaders

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (Via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is expected to push for her initiative for a regional cooperation in the fight against terrorism as she meets with leaders of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

International terrorism is expected to dominate talks both in the summit proper as well as informal discussions among heads of state attending the eight ASEAN summit here.

In an interview, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said the President will likely take advantage of the presence of the ASEAN leaders in one venue, to push for stronger regional and global cooperation in the fight against terrorism.

He said the President is also expected to take advantage of her meetings with ASEAN leaders to reiterate her invitation for a regional conference on international terrorism to be hosted by the Philippines.

ASEAN leaders are under pressure to prove to the rest of the world that they can curb terrorism, especially in light of warnings from the United States that more attacks could be staged in the region.

The US State Department issued a statement expressing concern "that individuals and groups may be planning terrorist attacks against US citizens and interests as well as sites frequented by Westerners" in Southeast Asia.

ASEAN is scheduled to issue a joint statement on terrorism Monday, stressing its commitment to curb this international menace.

Apart from this, ASEAN leaders are also set to sign a Memorandum of Understanding with China, declaring their determination to cooperate with each other in addressing transnational crimes, including terrorism.

GMA lauds Filipinos in Cambodia

PHNOM PENH (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo lauded the members of the Filipino community here for being worthy partners of the people of Cambodia in nation-building even as she exhorted them to help and support her administration in its efforts to build a strong Republic.

After just one year, Filipinos here in Cambodia made their mark as managers, engineers, teachers and school administrators, entertainers, doctors, social workers, agricultural experts and members of religious organizations, among many other callings, the President said in her speech before close to a thousand members of the Filipino community gathered at the Cambodiana Hotel.

“You have been our exemplar of the great Filipino worker, known worldwide for discipline, talent, professionalism and a shepherding and compassionate spirit,” she told the overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

The President, who is on her first visit to Cambodia, encouraged the OFWs here to be the Philippines’ ambassadors of goodwill and to “maintain our friendly relations with the Cambodian government and people.”

The President asked the members of Filipino community led by chairman Antonio Gomez to maintain their bond with their homeland and “deepen further your appreciation of your national identity.”

The President said she was proud that Filipinos have been worthy partners of the people of Cambodia in nation building.

“Your contribution to democracy is important as our contribution as a country is important. You were sent here to oversee the transition to democracy because the Philippines... (is) the most vibrant and dynamic democracy in Asia. And we are very proud of it and we are very proud of you,” she said.

The Chief Executive told the members of the Filipino community that no president can build a strong Republic single handedly.

“I can do this well only if I can count on the support of the more than 7 million Filipinos overseas. You are the wellspring of support, the network of Filipinos all over the world, that I am counting on,” she declared.

The President thanked the overseas workers for their care and support to their Filipino brothers and to their country as a whole.

“Ipagpatuloy natin ang ating magagandang gawain, ang ating pagbubuklod-buklod, at ang ating pagkakaisa (Let us continue to do our good work, and remain united), she said.

“Even as you are helping build a new Cambodian nation, help me build a strong Republic,” the President said..

Among those present during the affair were Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople, Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II, Press Secretary Ignacio “Toting” Bunye, Ambassador Voltaire Gazmin, and Presidential Adviser for Regional Development Paul Dominguez.

GMA stresses importance of Overseas Voting Bill

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo underscored the importance of the overseas voting bill among Filipinos working or residing abroad which has passed both houses of Congress.

“Through this act of empowerment, we envision our overseas Filipinos to have a greater stake in governance and the future direction of our country,” the President said in a speech before the officers and members of the Filipino community in Cambodia during a reception held yesterday at the Cambodiana Hotel here.

The President asked the close to 1,000 overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in Cambodia to pray that the House of Representatives and the Senate can iron out their conflicting provisions of the overseas voting bill soon “because as soon as they do so, I will it sign into law within 24 hours.”

The President recalled that she filed an overseas voting bill when she was still a senator.

“But like many other overseas voting bills before and after mine, my bill did not even progress beyond the committee level. So when I became President, I certified as one of my five most urgent bills — the overseas voting bill,” she stressed.

The President asked the Filipino community led by its chairman Antonio Gomez to maintain their bond with their homeland and “deepen further your appreciation of your national identity.”

Gomez, meanwhile, pledged the support of the Filipino community in Cambodia to the Macapagal-Arroyo government and its programs and projects, particularly the overseas voting bill.

“Kinagagalak namin na sa oras na maging batas at maging epektibo ito, magkakaroon din kami ng pagkakataon sa wakas na magpasiya sa pagpili ng mga taong mamumuno sa ating mahal na bayan (We are happy that when the overseas voting bill is signed into law and becomes effective, we will be able to choose the leaders we want to lead our country),” Gomez said.

Gomez said the passage of the overseas voting bill represents the Macapagal-Arroyo administration’s care and support for the overseas Filipinos who, despite their being away from the Philippines, have remained Filipinos in heart and spirit.

He also informed the President that the members of the Filipino community in Cambodia are also supporting her other programs, particularly on poverty alleviation and socio-economic reforms, livelihood, housing, and education which are all aimed at helping the poor.

“We are also one with the President in her efforts to fight terrorism and poverty in the country,” Gomez said.

The spokesman for the community told the President that they will also help in improving the country’s tourism industry by encouraging more people to go and visit the Philippines.

GMA stresses need to step up sub-regional cooperation among ASEAN members

PHNOM PENH (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo underscored Sunday the need for the leaders of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to intensify sub-regional cooperation against terrorism not only under the Greater Mekong sub-region but also under the BIMP-EAGA (Brunei-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines East ASEAN Growth Area).

The President told other ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) heads of state and government attending the Eighth Summit here that the development of BIMP-EAGA should remain in a very high priority concern of the four participating governments because “this is where Jemaah Islamiya (JI) terrorists have located their training camps, taking advantage of these areas and the high poverty incidence of its residents.”

The President, accompanied by a few members of her Cabinet, arrived here Sunday afternoon to attend the two-day Eighth ASEAN Summit which opened this morning.

“The development of BIMP-EAGA is precisely being undertaken to address this backwardness and high poverty incidence and, therefore, is a necessary parallel economic effort alongside the intelligence, police, and military actions being utilized in medium and long-term plans to eliminate the security and terrorism threat in the sub-region,” the President said.

The President requested that officials responsible for implementing the Trilateral Agreement Against Terrorism be instructed to give special focus on the BIMP-EAGA areas because of the presence of the JI training camps and recent terrorist acts reportedly perpetrated by the JI in North Sulawesi and Mindanao.

Officials responsible for BIMP-EAGA, the President said, should now focus their activities on programs and projects that would clearly contribute to enhancing security in the sub-region.

The President pointed out that Customs, Immigration and Quarantine officials of the most active ports in BIMP-EAGA should further intensify their communication and coordination to prevent the movement of terrorists and criminal elements through these sensitive borders such as General Santos City-Manado and Zamboanga-Sandakan.

She further recommended that BIMP-EAGA officials undertake a massive information and communication program within BIMP-EAGA to expand stakeholder awareness of BIMP-EAGA and elicit their support to combat terrorism and criminal activities which are now the main obstacle to the development of the sub-region.

“An objective of this information and communication program would be to increase the participation of local government leaders who, because of the new autonomy laws in Indonesia and the Philippines, are now in the forefront on both development and security programs,” she added.

The President exhorted BIMP-EAGA officials, with the assistance of the Asian Development Bank (ADB), to focus their efforts specifically to the small and medium enterprise sector as this is the sector of the business community whose presence and commitment to invest in BIMP-EAGA has been the least affected by the increasing security concerns.

She suggested that BIMP-EAGA officials focus their investment and tourism marketing efforts in China and Korea as the interest of these countries in the BIMP food products and tourism services remains strong in spite of the recent incidents.

For the medium and long term, the President said, “we could undertake economic initiatives, such as the formulation of a three-year BIMP-EAGA Strategic Development Plan, including a review and update of the 1996 ADB investigative study.”

The President expressed confidence that under the leadership of Prime Minister Samdech Hun Sen of Cambodia, the Eighth ASEAN Summit and the summit meetings with the four leaders will be fruitful and will enrich and build upon the existing strong bonds of geopolitical affinity, history and kinship.

ASEAN is composed of the Philippines, Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar, Brunei Darussalam, Vietnam, and Indonesia.

GMA calls for more intelligence exchange joint border patrols in Asean region

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo called on the other leaders of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to push for the implementation of the Agreement on Information Exchange and Establishment of Communications Procedures “more vigorously by upgrading our intelligence exchange and carrying out joint border patrols.”

“One of the steps we took immediately following our summit last year was the signing of the Agreement on Information Exchange and Establishment of Communications Procedures among Indonesia, Malaysia, and the Philippines, with Cambodia acceding last July,” the President told other ASEAN leaders here.

The President said she is looking forward to Thailand and Brunei Darussalam acceding to this agreement during the Eighth ASEAN Leaders Summit which had its first working meeting this morning. ASEAN is composed of the Philippines, Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, Singapore, Brunei Darussalam, Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam and Myanmar.

She also said that later this week in Manila, the Philippines is hosting an anti-terrorism conference with the World Tourism Organization.

“In accordance with one of our initiatives in last year’s summit, the Philippines will host a Multilateral Seminar Game on Emergency Responses to Terrorist Threats sometime in December this year or early next year,” she said.

The President explained that the simulation is a practicum in security cooperation.

She added that her government intends to test existing hotlines and person-to-person contacts for coordinating anti-terrorist operations.

“We could explore sharing of airline passenger lists and shipping passenger manifests to fix and apprehend suspects. We could also simulate the deployment of more law enforcement officials to identified entry and exit points used by potential terrorists,” she declared.

The President also said that it is high time that Regional e-Security is included in the implementation of the e-ASEAN initiative.

As a first step in this direction, the President said two proposals could be considered.

One, is the creation of a working group on critical infrastructure security.

“This working group, which will be a sub-unit within the e-ASEAN Working Group will discuss Regional Information and Communications Technology (ICT) concerns and will update the ASEAN senior officials on the matter,” she said.

Two, is linking existing national anti-terrorist agencies and institutions.

GMA presents short, medium and long-term measures to curb terrorism

PHNOM PENH, (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo presented Sunday short, medium and long-term measures to curb terrorism, as she stressed the need for Southeast Asia to approach the problem in a holistic, complementary and time-bound manner.

The President cited the urgency for the regional grouping to dispel speculations that the region has become the main focus of terrorism.

The President said that ASEAN must address the perception that the network of international terrorism has shifted to Southeast Asia, stressing that it is now time to intensify security cooperation in the region.

The President reiterated the common sentiment of ASEAN leaders, sympathizing with Indonesia for the tragic bomb attacks in Bali that killed 180 people, many of them foreign tourists.

“For the second time, the bell has tolled for ASEAN and the world community to unite against a common menace threatening global peace and security,” the President told the other leaders attending the Eighth ASEAN Summit here.

As an immediate short-term measure, the President said ASEAN leaders should concentrate on enhancing security and security cooperation.

This, she said, is due to the fact that it is the perception that the region is a hotbed of terrorism that is discouraging the development of the sub-region.

The President said this could be initially addressed by using the existing hotlines and person-to-person contacts for coordinating anti-terrorist operations, sharing of airline passenger lists and shipping passenger manifests and the deployment of more law enforcement officials to identified illegal entry and exit points.

For the medium and long-term, the President said ASEAN could look to the strategic development plan already adopted by the Brunei-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines East Asian Growth Area (BIMP-EAGA), as well as the investigative study of the Asian Development Bank (ADB) in 1996 as a framework in fighting terrorism.

The President said it is only after the ASEAN has effectively addressed the problem of terrorism that the regional could maximize its growth potentials.

ASEAN leaders are under pressure to prove to the rest of the world that they can curb terrorism, especially in the light of warnings from the United States that more attacks could be staged in the region.

The US State Department earlier issued a statement expressing concern ‘that individuals and groups may be planning terrorist actions against US citizens and interests, as well as sites frequented by Westerners’ in Southeast Asia.

GMA, 9 other ASEAN leaders sign tourism agreement to enhance travel in region

It is estimated that that the tourism industry creates an annual revenue of about US$26 billion for businesses in Southeast Asia.

ASEAN leaders accept RP invitation to Anti-Terror conference in Manila

PHNOM PENH (Via PLDT) – All the members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) today formally accepted the invitation of the Philippine government to attend the International Conference on Anti-Terrorism and Tourism Recovery set for next week in Manila.

The acceptance of the invitation was contained in the declaration on terrorism issued by the 10 ASEAN member-states in their eighth summit here.

The ASEAN leaders issued a strong declaration projecting the region's strong determination to fight terrorism as they were concerned over the warnings of the United States that more attacks could be staged in the region.

The US State Department issued a statement expressing concern "that individuals and groups may be planning terrorist actions against US citizens and interests, as well as sites frequented by Westerners" in Southeast Asia.

In the declaration, the 10 countries in the region stressed that "we are determined to carry out and build on the specific measures outlined in the ASEAN Declaration on Joint Action to Counter Terrorism, which we adopted in Brunei Darussalam in November 2001."

"We resolve to intensify our efforts collectively and individually to prevent, counter and suppress the activities of terrorist groups in the region. The ASEAN countries shall continue with practical cooperative measures among ourselves and with the international community," the declaration stated.

In the same declaration, ASEAN states lashed out at the members of the international community that tend to indiscriminately issuing travel advisories against trips to countries in Southeast Asia, warning that such actions serve no purpose but to help terrorists achieve their objectives.

"We call on the international community to avoid indiscriminately advising their citizens to refrain from visiting or dealing with our countries in the absence of established evidence to substantiate rumors of possible terrorist attacks, as such measures could only help achieve the objectives of the terrorists," the leaders stressed.

ASEAN nations also deplored “the tendency in some quarters to identify terrorism with particular religions or ethnic groups,” even as they denounced “once again the use of terror, with its toll on human life and society, in many places around the world for whatever cause and in the name of whatever religious or ethnic aspiration.”

Assuring the rest of the world of ASEAN’s determination to cooperate actively in mitigating the adverse impact of terrorist attacks in Southeast Asia, the leaders urged “the international community to support ASEAN’s effort to combat terrorism and restore business confidence in the region.”

ASEAN leaders also took advantage of the summit to air their collective condemnation of “the heinous terrorist attacks in Bali, Indonesia, and in the Philippine cities of Zamboanga and Quezon.”

“We extend our deepest sympathies to the families of those who died and to those who were injured. We express the solidarity of our countries with Indonesia and the Philippines and ASEAN full support for their determined pursuit of the terrorist elements responsible for the attacks,” the state leaders declared.

They likewise commended the Philippines and Indonesia “for their efforts to curtail terrorism within their borders and for their determination to step up those efforts.”

The conference in Manila was just among the activities the ASEAN set as part of the efforts to curb terrorism in the region.

The other activities include the regional conference on combating money-laundering and terrorist financing scheduled in Bali in December and the Intersessional Meeting on Terrorism of the ASEAN Regional Forum in Kota Kinabalu, Sabah in March next year.

Asean leaders also agreed to hold a ministerial meeting on transnational crimes with ministerial counterparts from China, Japan and the Republic of Korea in Bangkok in October next year.

They likewise committed to establish a Regional Counter-Terrorism Center in November in Kuala Lumpur.

ASEAN, China pledge cooperation in field of non-traditional security issues

PHNOM PENH (Via PLDT) – Leaders of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and China today issued a Joint Declaration on Cooperation in the Field of Non-Traditional Security Issues.

In the Joint Declaration, China and the 10 ASEAN states pledged to cooperate in addressing the problems of terrorism, trafficking in illegal drugs, people smuggling including trafficking of women and children, sea piracy, arms smuggling, money laundering, international economic crime and cyber crime.

The 10 ASEAN members are the Philippines, Malaysia, Indonesia, Thailand, Singapore, Brunei, Myanmar, Lao, Vietnam and Cambodia.

The 11 countries committed to strengthen information exchange; personnel exchange and training as well as capacity-building; joint research on non-traditional security issues; and the exploration of other areas and modalities of cooperation.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo earlier today stressed before ASEAN leaders the urgency of efforts to further enhance person-to-person contacts for coordinating anti-terrorist operations; sharing of airline passenger lists and shipping passenger manifests; and the deployment of more law enforcement officials to identified illegal entry and exit points.

These measures, the President said, are necessary, if ASEAN is to erase the perception that the region is a hotbed for terrorism.

The 11 countries declared their commitment to “enhance their capacity in dealing with non-traditional security issues; promote their stability and development and safeguard regional peace and security.”

The 11 state leaders also committed to “task our Ministers concerned to follow up on the implementation of this declaration.”

The declaration also provides that ASEAN and China will “use existing ASEAN mechanisms, as far as possible, such as the ASEAN Ministerial Meeting on Transnational Crime and the Senior Officials Meeting on Transnational Crime, to pursue the cooperation.”

“Long-term and mid-term cooperation plans will be formulated based on the purposes and principles of the Joint Declaration to serve as guidance for cooperation,” the leaders stated.

They also announced the creation of ad hoc working groups for cooperation in relevant fields to implement the plans through ASEAN mechanisms, “supported by the competent authorities in ASEAN member-countries and China.”

PHNOM PEHN (PNA via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is optimistic that tension in the South China Sea, including the Spratlys, would be effectively diminished following today's signing of the Declaration on the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea.

Claimants to the disputed Spratly Islands finally committed to a code of conduct on the resolution of their conflicting claims, as they affixed their signature to the declaration.

The signatories to the agreement are Brunei Minister of Foreign Affairs Prince Haji Mohamed Bolkiah, China Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs Wang Yi, Cambodia Minister of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation Hor Namhong, Minister for Foreign Affairs Dr. Hassan Wirayuda of Indonesia, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs Somsavat Lengsavad and Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Lao People's Democratic Republic, Foreign Affairs Minister Datuk Seri Syed Hamid Albar of Malaysia, Foreign Affairs Minister Foreign Affairs Minister Win Aung of the Union of Myanmar, Secretary Blas Ople, Singapore Foreign Minister S. Jayakumar, Thailand Foreign Minister Surakiart Sathirathai and Vietnam Foreign Minister Nguyen Dy Nien.

The signing was witnessed by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and other heads of state of the claimant countries attending the Association of Southeast Asia Nations (ASEAN) summit, as well as Chinese Premier Zhu Rongji.

“The signing would contribute significantly towards building trust and good neighborliness among countries in the region. The signing also manifests the parties' commitment to the maintenance of peace and stability which are requisites to regional growth and development,” Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye quoted President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as saying.

The document declares that the claimants would no longer engage in the construction of new structures in the disputed territories, to avoid further conflict, and ensure the peaceful resolution to the issue.

“The parties undertake to exercise self-restraint in the conduct of activities that would complicate or escalate disputes and affect peace and stability including, among others, refraining from action of inhabiting on the presently uninhabited islands, reefs, shoals, cays and other features and to handle their differences in a constructive manner,” the document declared.

It also states that the parties shall “undertake to resolve their territorial and jurisdictional disputes by peaceful means, without resorting to the threat or use of force, through friendly consultations and negotiations by sovereign states directly concerned, in accordance with universally recognized principles of international law, including the 1982 UN Convention on the Law of the Sea.”

While the declaration is not as binding as a formal agreement or a treaty among the claimants, Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Lauro Baja earlier said the document will likely bind the six parties to work for the peaceful resolution of the dispute.

Although it does not specifically declare the areas covered by the declaration, Baja explained that the mere mention of South China Sea already indicates that it includes the Spratly Islands disputed by the Philippines, China, Taiwan, Vietnam, Malaysia and Brunei, along with the Scarborough Shoal being claimed also by Manila and Beijing, and the Paracel Islands which is subject of conflict between China and Vietnam.

The declaration likewise aired the commitment of the signatories “to enhancing the principles and objectives of the 1997 Joint Statement of the Meeting of the Heads of State/Government of the member-states of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and the president of the Peoples’ Republic of China.

In the same declaration, the claimants committed to hold dialogue and exchange of views between their defense and military officials and exchange relevant information.

At the same time, the agreed to undertake cooperative activities in the disputed territories including marine environment protection, marine scientific research, safety of navigation and communication at sea, search and rescue operation, and combating transnational crime, including, but not limited to illicit drugs, piracy and armed robbery at sea and illegal traffic in arms.

GMA optimistic signing of Code of Conduct to reduce tension in South China Sea

PHNOM PENH (Via PLDT) – Philippine trade officials are optimistic that the country’s trade surplus with China would significantly go up following the conclusion of a framework agreement between Beijing and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to establish a free trade area.

Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II and Philippine International Trading Corp. president and chief executive officer Anthony Abad said the Philippines anxiously looks forward to taking a share of China’s market of 1.7 billion consumers as it joins the nine other ASEAN members – Malaysia, Thailand, Singapore, Indonesia, Brunei, Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia and Myanmar – in signing the Framework Agreement on Comprehensive Economic Cooperation with China.

The Framework Agreement sets the tone for the establishment of an ASEAN-China Free Trade Area within 10 years.

Abad said the framework agreement seeks to open the gateway to talks between ASEAN and China for a free trade agreement that is expected to allow Southeast Asian nations to penetrate the Chinese market which has a combined gross domestic product of $1.5 trillion to $2 trillion and two-way trade of $1.2 trillion.

The framework binds ASEAN member-states and China “to begin negotiations next year on the creation of an ASEAN-China Free Trade Area within a decade, aimed at liberalizing trade in goods and services and developing a transparent and liberal investment regime.”

The agreement, which will come into force on July 1, 2003, is expected to facilitate the elimination of tariffs and non-tariff barriers to trade in goods and services over a period of 10 years.

Trade and Industry Secretary Roxas sees the agreement as a means to promote the economic integration of ASEAN and bridge the development gap among the member-states.

The agreement also contains a provision for an early harvest of goods and services with reduced tariff rates within three years, as well as the simplification and standardization of customs procedures.

“We hope to be able to avail of those flexibilities for ourselves,” Roxas said, as he assured that the Philippines would not be left at the losing end, once the free trade agreement comes into full force.

Roxas assured that the free trade agreement “will have a feature... something called an early harvest where ASEAN will be able to harvest or benefit earlier than China.”

By early harvest, Roxas explained the Philippines will be able to gain greater access to the Chinese market “ahead of their having similar access to us.”

Abad noted that the Philippines has a recourse it can take, to be able to survive competition, even with the free trade with China, adding that there are relief measures available to “industries that are challenged by Chinese products or products coming from any other part of the world.”

He said the Philippines could invoke agreements with the World Trade Organization (WTO) providing for safeguards against unfair competition for Philippine local industries that are in distress.

“Philippine industries that require time to adjust its WTO obligations can impose a safeguard measure, which may be an increase in tariffs across-the-board on a particular product, provided that the Philippine industry which is in trouble, or requires rehabilitation is rehabilitated,” Abad said.

He stressed that “the challenge now is for ASEAN to become more integrated as a single economy that we are able to provide counter-weight against China and become also more competitive with economies of scale.”

GMA, other ASEAN leaders sign framework pact with China for economic cooperation

PHNOM PENH (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the nine other leaders of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) signed with Chinese leaders last night a framework agreement on comprehensive economic cooperation that includes elements of the establishment of an ASEAN-China Free Trade Area within 10 years.

The President and the leaders of China, Cambodia, Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore, Thailand, Brunei, Vietnam, Laos and Myanmar individually affixed their signature to the agreement during ceremonies following the ASEAN+China Summit at the Intercontinental Hotel here.

Under the Framework Agreement, a free trade area covering trade in goods, services and investment will be realized for Brunei, China, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand by 2010. The free trade area will be extended to the newer ASEAN members by 2015.

In signing the framework agreement, the ASEAN and Chinese leaders recognized the important role of the private sector and the need to promote future business opportunities.

In expanding trade and investment, the leaders of ASEAN and China expressed their desire to minimize barriers and deepen economic ties, creating bigger and more efficient market with greater opportunities and economies of scale.

The Framework Agreement is designed to strengthen economic cooperation between Southeast Asia and China by progressively liberalizing and promoting trade in goods and services while creating a transparent and liberal investment regime.

Leaders of both sides likewise agreed to explore new areas and develop appropriate measures for closer cooperation and to facilitate the more effective integration of the newer ASEAN members and to bridge the development gap among countries.

The agreement also calls for both the ASEAN and Chinese leaders to progressively eliminate tariffs and non-tariff barriers on “substantially all” trade in goods while taking similar steps to free trade in services.

ASEAN and China also agreed to establish an “open and competitive” investment regime, which provides for “special and differential treatment” and “flexibility” for the newer members of ASEAN to address the sensitive sectors of any of the contracting parties.

Measures to make trade and investment easier include simplifying customs procedures and concluding mutual-recognition agreements.

To accelerate trade liberalization, the agreement provides for an “Early Harvest” program for selected agricultural items, which covers eight chapters ranging from live animals, meat, fish, dairy and other animal products to live trees and vegetables as well as fruits and nuts.

For services, ASEAN and Chinese leaders agreed to explore the feasibility of an “Early Harvest” program early 2003.

They also agreed to strengthen cooperation in five priority sectors of agriculture, information and communications technology, human resource development, investment and Mekong River Basin development.

Cooperation between the two parties will be extended to other areas including banking, finance, tourism, industrial cooperation, transport, telecommunications, intellectual property rights, small and medium-sized enterprises, the environment, biotechnology, fisheries, forestry and forest products, mining, energy and sub-regional development.

Measures to promote and facilitate trade and investment include the assessment of standards and conformance, technical barriers to trade, non-tariff measures and cooperation in the area of customs.

Other steps to strengthen cooperation also include increasing the competitiveness of small and medium-sized enterprises, promoting electronic commerce, capacity building and technology transfer.

Under the time frames for implementing the agreement, negotiations to reduce and eliminate tariffs will start early next year and be concluded by mid-2004. For services and investment, negotiations will start early next year and be concluded as expeditiously as possible.

During the signing ceremonies, China accorded Most-Favored Nation treatment to Cambodia, the Lao People’s Democratic Republic and Vietnam, three ASEAN countries that are not yet members of the World Trade Organization (WTO).

The agreement also stipulates for the protection of national security and articles of artistic, historic and archaeological value as well as public morals along with human, animal or plant life and health. It likewise provides for a dispute-settlement mechanism to be set up within a year of the agreement coming into force on July 1, 2003.

Negotiations between ASEAN and Chinese leaders are to be carried out by an existing body known as the ASEAN-China Trade Negotiation Committee, which will report regularly to ASEAN Economic Ministers and China’s Ministry of Foreign Trade on the progress and outcomes of negotiations, with support from the ASEAN secretariat and China.

PMS adopts novel computer leasing program

In this age of rapid advancement in information technology (IT), buying hundreds of new computers can saddle an organization with obsolete IT in a few years, when faster, more powerful and cheaper machines hit the market. One solution: lease PCs, thus cutting costs while constantly equipping with the latest hardware.

That is what the Presidential Management Staff (PMS) of the Office of the President has done in a novel agreement with IBM Philippines, Inc. and the latter's business partner, Advance Solutions, Inc, PMS will lease 300 desktop and 45 laptop computers for P8.1 million a year, renewable for two more years.

The lease agreement breaks new ground in government IT procurement, where purchasing remains the norm. Leasing PC workstations could lower the Total Cost of Ownership (TCO). The three-year contract will provide PMS officials and personnel with the latest desktop and notebook PCs while keeping expenditure down at a time of budget constraints. The agreement comes with full service maintenance, training and on-call technicians.

In addition, as a unique public-service feature of the agreement, the Advance Solutions, Inc. agreed to donate the 345 computers to the Department of Education (DepEd) or to any public schools designated by DepEd for their IT program at the end of the lease period in 2005. Thus, the deal will enhance information technology not only at the highest levels of government, but among Filipino schoolchildren as well.

The Office of the President and the PMS are finalizing three other contracts for the lease of computer servers, printers and other support equipment for the OP/PMS to use in critical applications such as secure e-mail and other support requirements in Malacañang.

No mass layoff of 7,000 state workers Boncodin assures public for the nth time

Secretary Emilia Boncodin of the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) today called on the media to be more objective in their reporting as she assured the public for the nth time that there will be no mass layoff of some 7,000 state employees.

In a radio interview, Boncodin said she could not understand why some sectors in the media continued to report the so-called mass layoff when she has been saying all along that this is not going to happen.

"Let us not conclude that there will be a lay-off of 7,000 and I would like to appeal to the media and to all those who are making all these pronouncements," Boncodin said.

Boncodin clarified that there is indeed an ongoing study on the operation of some 14 small government agencies whose functions may have overlapped with those of other agencies or are so small that their functions could be merged with other existing offices.

"Ang sinasabi ko ay pinag-aaralan namin ang mga opisinang ito na ang kabuuan nga ay 7,000 ang empleyado para-i-improve ang operations nila (What I have said is that we are still studying how we can improve the operations of these agencies that have a total of 7,000 employees)," Boncodin said.

She said she could not understand the logic or the conclusion arrived at by some media practitioners that this would mean the outright dismissal of 7,000 employees.

"Ang concept natin ay i-streamline ang operations (Our concept is to streamline the operations)," Boncodin said.

One example that Boncodin cited was the National Printing Office (NPO), whose operations, she said, are now being reviewed.

According to Boncodin, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye has assured her that the NPO is willing to improve its operations to make it more efficient and profitable.

GMA thanks Asian nations for supporting Philippine bid for seat in U.N. Security Council

PHNOM PENH (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has expressed her sincere appreciation for the other Asian countries’ endorsement of the Philippine bid for a seat in the United Nations Security Council in 2004-2005.

In a statement she issued at the ASEAN+3 summit conference yesterday, the President assured the nine other leaders of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations and the heads of Japan, South Korea and China that the Philippines will do its best to “represent Asia’s vision and role in world peace and stability, and to stand, on our own behalf and for the group, in service of our collective interest within the larger community of nations.”

During the ASEAN+3 summit, the President also invited the governments of Japan, South Korea and China to an international Conference on Anti-Terrorism and Tourism Recovery in Manila towards this weekend.

The President said she would like to invite participants not only from ASEAN – which is composed of the Philippines, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Thailand, Brunei, Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar and Vietnam – but also from China, Japan, and Korea to join the conference, especially since tourism in the region has been severely affected by terrorist incidents.

In this connection, she conveyed her thanks and appreciation that Japan, Korea and China are the Philippines’ biggest tourist markets.

The President, at the same time, joined the other ASEAN members in appealing to all nations not to issue discouraging travel advisories, saying that the members of the regional grouping are, more than ever, working together to protect tourist destinations from terrorist attacks.

As part of the joint anti-terrorist activities, the President said that the Philippines will host in December or early next year Multilateral Seminar Games on Emergency Responses to terrorist threats.

The President likewise invited the security, defense and police officials of Japan, South Korea and China to participate in these seminar games.

She noted that the Philippine government is hosting these games in compliance with one of the initiatives in last year’s ASEAN summit meeting in Brunei Darussalam.

The President explained that the Simulation Games would be a practicum in security cooperation where existing hotlines and person-to-person contacts for coordinating anti-terrorist operations would be put to the test.

She also said that through these games, the sharing of airline passenger lists and shipping passenger manifests to fix and apprehend suspects could be explored.

According to the President, the Seminar Games could also simulate the deployment of more law enforcement officials to identified entry and exit points used by potential terrorists.

The President likewise emphasized the need for developed countries to exert more efforts in opening their markets.

She expressed the hope that developed countries in East Asia would consider providing more funds and resources for capacity-building to enhance supply-side capacities, improve private sector competitiveness, implement trade agreements, and meet continuing obligations under those agreements.

Asean, Japan sign joint declaration on comprehensive economic partnership

PHNOM PENH — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the other leaders of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) and Japan signed today a joint declaration on Comprehensive Economic Partnership that would further expand trade and boost growth between the 10-member regional grouping and Japan.

The declaration, which was signed on the second day of the two-day ASEAN summit here, underscored the importance of economic partnerships and linkages between the 10-member grouping and Japan in promoting not only economic growth but also political stability in the region.

“We viewed that a comprehensive economic partnership between ASEAN and Japan would provide greater market opportunities to their economies, through the creation of larger and new markets and enabling the industries to enjoy bigger economies of scale, and that such partnership would bring about greater stability and prosperity to this region, nurturing a sense of community between ASEAN and Japan,” the declaration said.

The declaration said that by the year 2020, the export value from ASEAN to Japan would increase by $20,630 million, which would be equivalent to 44.2 percent of that in the base year 1997. The export value from Japan to ASEAN would also increase by $20,022 million, which would be equivalent to 27.5 percent of that in the base year.

The leaders also recognized that ASEAN and Japan should seek broad-based economic partnership to cover not only liberalization of trade and investments but also trade and investment promotion and facilitation measures such as those involving customs procedures, standard conformance and non-tariff measures.

Through the declaration, ASEAN and Japan also sought co-operation in such areas as financial services, information and communications technology, science and technology, human resource development, small and medium enterprises, tourism, transport, energy and food security.

The leaders decided that ASEAN and Japan should develop a framework that would provide a basis for concrete plans and elements towards realizing an ASEAN-Japan Comprehensive Economic Partnership “in accordance with such guiding principles as comprehensiveness of countries and sectors, reciprocity and mutual benefits.”

The leaders also affirmed the need for providing “special and differential treatment” to developing countries in ASEAN in accordance with World Trade Organization (WTO) agreements. There is also a need for “additional flexibility” for new members of ASEAN, referring to Cambodia, Myanmar, Laos, and Vietnam.

The declaration was signed by Haji Hassanal Bolkiah, Sultan of Brunei Darussalam; Prime Minister Hun Sen of Cambodia; President Megawati Sukarnoputri of Indonesia; Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi of Japan; Prime Minister Bounnhang Vorachith of Laos; Prime Minister Mahathir bin Mohamad of Malaysia; Prime Minister Senior General Than Shwe of Myanmar; President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo of the Philippines; Prime Minister Goh Chok Tong of Singapore; Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra of Thailand; and Prime Minister Phan Van Khai of Vietnam.

GMA welcomes China’s growing cooperation in regional affairs

PHNOM PENH (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today welcomed China’s growing cooperation and participation in regional affairs, particularly in economic development and security concerns.

The President cited in particular the signing of the Framework Agreement on Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN)-China Comprehensive Economic Cooperation, the ASEAN-China Declaration on the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea and the ASEAN-China Joint Declaration on Cooperation in the field of non-traditional security issues.

The President said the framework agreement on economic cooperation signed yesterday on the first day of the Eighth ASEAN Summit at the Intercontinental Hotel here is the appropriate legal instrument to define the vision and future direction of the ASEAN-China economic relationship.

She said that the signing of the agreement was an occasion for the nations of ASEAN to reflect on “our own economies to determine how best we can position ourselves to ensure the continued competitiveness of our exports and capitalize on the opportunities presented by a more open China.”

She said it is imperative that the implementation of the framework agreement ensures economic growth, employment, and development for all.

According to the President, if the parties concerned do not benefit from it, the benefits of trade liberalization could be put in doubt and the system could lose credibility.

This could undermine the ability to mobilize support for trade policy reforms, she stressed.

She thus emphasized the need for flexibility in order to have a realistic implementation process of the Free Trade Area components.

The President Macapagal-Arroyo also welcomed China's participation not only in the ASEAN-Mekong Basin Development Cooperation Project but also in the Brunei Darussalam-Indonesia-Malaysia-Philippines East ASEAN Growth Area or BIMP-EAGA.

She also reiterated her invitation to China to explore opportunities for human resources and product development on food and energy in the BIMP-EAGA sub-region.

On the signing of the Declaration on the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea, the President said Asean and China deserve accolade from the entire community of nations after working, sometimes contentiously, for over three years on the document.

She said she is proud of the role played by the Philippines in this effort.

Immediately after the 1998 Hanoi Plan of Action called for efforts to establish a Regional Code of Conduct in the South China Sea, the Philippines shepherded the draft through various amendments and proposals.

In 1999, ASEAN submitted an initial draft to China and, in January 2000, ASEAN adopted the Philippine proposal to establish a task team to focus on the code. By October of the same year, China and ASEAN came up with three consolidated texts, each time narrowing the differences between them.

During the ASEAN+China Summit, the President said the Philippines is also honored that its fellow ASEAN claimant-countries nominated Senior Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Lauro Baja, Jr. to represent them in the initialing of the Declaration on the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea

The President also expressed the hope that through the ASEAN-China Joint Declaration on Cooperation in the field of non-traditional security issues, China would help in addressing terrorism, trafficking in illegal drugs, human smuggling, sea piracy, arms smuggling, money laundering and cyber crime.

GMA joins call for North Korea to abandon nuke arms development

PHNOM PENH (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today joined the call for North Korea to abandon its nuclear weapons development program and open up to the rest of the world.

The President raised the warning at the Association of Southeast Asian Nations ASEAN+Korea summit at the Hotel Intercontinental here.

Addressing the leaders of ASEAN and Korea, the President said the Philippines associates itself with the views of the Republic of Korea on the situation in the Korean Peninsula.

She specifically cited the Philippine position favoring the call for the peaceful disarmament of North Korea and the need for the communist state to implement reforms.

The President also warned that the development of nuclear weapons by North Korea could threaten regional stability.

In the same meeting, President Macapagal-Arroyo cited the common stand of the Philippines and the Republic of Korea against terrorism, adding that she foresees the building of strongest alliance among East Asian nations.

The President likewise lauded the efforts of the Republic of Korea, particularly its role in the establishment of the East Asia Vision Group and the East Asia Study Group.

The creation of the two groups was proposed by Korean President Kim Dae-Jung to provide a concrete framework by which ASEAN members as well as China, Japan and Korea can pursue their collective vision of a united East Asian community.

GMA cites India's vital contribution to Southeast Asian growth

PHNOM PENH (via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited India's increasing involvement in and vital contribution to Southeast Asia's development arising from its "Look East" policy.

In her remarks during the ASEAN (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) + India meeting at 2:00 p.m. (Cambodia time), the Chief Executive said India's world renowned information technology capabilities, as well as its advancements in science and technology, must be the pillars of ASEAN-India cooperation.

On the part of the Philippines, the President said that in addition to information and communications technology (ICT), the country enjoys a unique partnership with India in the fight against poverty in the Philippines.

To provide affordable medicines for the vast majority of the Filipino people, the President said the Philippines imports medicine and materials for medicine from India.

The President said this is in recognition of the advanced capability and competence of India's pharmaceutical industry.

She said she looks forward to expanding the country's relationship with India to address the need for affordable but quality medicines for the Filipino people, particularly the poor.

The President likewise welcomed Indian Prime Minister Atal Vajpayee to the ASEAN fold.

The inaugural ASEAN-Summit in Cambodia marks a milestone in the relations between ASEAN and India which began a decade ago with India being admitted as a sectoral dialogue partner in 1992 in the areas of trade and investment, science and technology and tourism.

The ASEAN-India Summit here also provided an important venue to chart the strategic direction towards strengthening ties and fostering closer economic integration between Southeast Asia and South Asia.

India was elevated to a full dialogue partner of ASEAN in December 1995 and it participated in the ASEAN Ministerial Meeting, the Post Ministerial Conference and the ASEAN Regional Forum in July 1996 in Jakarta.

In 1998, ASEAN-India relations developed further through intensified cooperation in human resources development, science and technology, with India extending its technical and economic cooperation programs to ASEAN.

This year, India has agreed to assist in the implementation of the Initiative for ASEAN Integration (IAI), adopting ICT as a major thrust of the cooperative efforts.

In politics and security, India can contribute to the regional balance of power that impacts on the stability, peace and prosperity of Asia.

Strengthening its relations with ASEAN and East Asia is the focus of its “Look East” policy initiated by India in 1991 and the realization of the ASEAN-India Summit is a major achievement in this policy.

GMA: Signing of Code of Conduct to allow claimants to focus energies on development

PHNOM PENH (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the signing of the Declaration of the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea will finally allow parties to the territorial disputes to shift their energies and resources towards broader cooperation in economic and social development.

The President issued the statement a day after the signing of the declaration which Senior Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Lauro Baja, Jr. had described as “essentially a Philippine draft.”

“The document should give our people peace of mind. It is also important to the stability and progress of Asia,” the President said.

The signing of the declaration, the President said, has turned the South China Sea from a major flashpoint in Asia to “an avenue for shared prosperity.”

“Now we can ease our anxieties. Under the declaration, all claimants are now committed to resolve their territorial and jurisdictional disputes through peaceful means without resorting to the threat or use of force, in accordance with the recognized principles of international law, including the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea,” the President said.

The President said “the claimants have also agreed to hold dialogues and exchange of views among their defense and military officials.”

“They will also step up coordinative activities to combat transnational crime and terrorism” she added.

The President cited the years of effort the Philippines had put in, trying to forge an agreement among the claimants to the disputed territories in South China Sea, particularly the Spratlys for the resolution of the issue.

“I would like to commend the entire government team headed by the Department of Foreign Affairs that worked on this issue over several years,” she said.

Now that anxieties over the dispute in the Spratlys, Scarborough Shoal and Paracel Islands have settled down, the President said “ASEAN and China could now shift their energies and resources towards broader cooperation in economic and social development.”

“This would mean ultimately, more jobs, and economic opportunities for the people, and the speedier alleviation of poverty in the region and in the Philippines,” she said.

Palace: new amnesty plan to be submitted to Congress for concurrence

Malacañang today said that a new presidential proclamation that would extend amnesty to members of rebel groups in the country would be submitted to both houses of Congress for concurrence.

In an interview, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita said that the National Amnesty Commission (NAC) would brief the Cabinet early next week on the proposed amnesty proclamation.

Ermita explained that there are now a total of 2,603 applications for amnesty that the NAC could not act on because there is no applicable amnesty proclamation.

The last amnesty proclamation, issued during the term of former President Joseph Estrada, expired last August 2001, Ermita said.

According to Ermita, the offer of amnesty to members of the New People's Army (NPA) and other anti-government groups has nothing to do with the declaration of the CPP-NPA by the United States and European Union as a foreign terrorist organization (FTO).

He said that the NAC has submitted drafts of a new amnesty proclamation in August and September this year, or even before the inclusion of the CPP-NPA in the list of FTOs by the US and the EU.

Ermita said that the Cabinet would deliberate on what kind of amnesty would be offered, whether it would be general, conditional or selective as well as when it will take effect and for how long.

On the report that the CPP-NPA has scuttled the peace process with the government, Ermita said that the government side has not received any official communication in this regard from Luis Jalandoni, official negotiator of the National Democratic Front (NDF), the political arm of the CPP-NPA.

Ermita said that what has been reported could be just individual reactions to the inclusion of the CPP-NPA as well as CPP founder and former chairman, Jose Maria Sison, in the list of terrorist individuals and groups by the US and the European community.

Growth in exports, inflation rate drop sure signs of RP economy rebound, GMA tells Filipinos in Hanoi

HANOI, Vietnam — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that the growth in exports and the continued decline in the inflation and interest rates in the Philippines are sure indicators that the country's economy is in for a rebound.

In her remarks before members of the Filipino community here, the President said the almost 20 percent growth in Philippine exports has surprised even Thai Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra and business executives in the Silicon Valley.

The President starts her two-day state visit here after attending the Eighth ASEAN Summit held in Phnom Penh, Cambodia.

The President said that based on the reports from Manila, the inflation rate in October slowed down to 2.7 percent from the 2.9 percent in September this year.

"Ang layunin natin ay para bumuti ang ating ekonomiya at magkaroon ng trabaho ang ating mga mamamayan (Our goal is to improve the economy and provide jobs for our countrymen)," the President told her audience.

The President also cited the 40 percent growth in Philippine tourism despite the terrorist threats in the Southern Philippines and in Metro Manila.

Earlier in Phnom Penh, the President said that the country's inflation rate is at its lowest point over a decade and the country's economic growth is among the highest in Asia.

"We have done significant reforms, including anti-money laundering, privatization, banking asset reforms, among others," the President said.

Because of the decline in inflation rate, the President said, prices of prime commodities in the Philippines have not gone up, adding that the price of ordinary rice has been pegged at P14 to P15 per kilo while the well-milled rice is at P18 per kilo.

In a statement, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) said that the average inflation rate of 3.2 percent for the first 10 months of this year remains consistent with the BSP's assessment of a benign inflation environment for the remainder of 2002.

"Against a backdrop of benign future inflation, the BSP believes that the current monetary policy stance remains appropriately supportive of the economy's growth objective while guarding firmly against price pressures," the BSP said.

The President said that reports reaching her from the Department of Agriculture also indicated that there would be a bumper crop this year.

The DA said that good weather and increased government support to rice farmers are expected to push the 2002 domestic palay production to a new record of 13.11 million metric ton (MT), up by 1.2 percent from last year's high of 12.95 MT.

Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor reported that despite initial expectations of output declining to 12.68 million MT due to a prolonged dry spell in the second quarter, government intervention is expected to lead to a rebound in the fourth quarter.

Montemayor said that sufficient rainfall in the third quarter, coupled with the government's quick turnaround (QTA) planting scheme for rice, is expected to increase palay production in the fourth quarter by as much as 440,000 MT.

A National Statistics Office (NSO) said that year-on-year inflation slowed down to 2.7 percent in October from 2.9 percent in September this year as the inflation rates of food, beverages and tobacco (FBT) and housing and repairs (H&R) went down, comparatively taking into account the 5.5 inflation rate a year ago.

The NSO said that the country's merchandise export performance increased by 16.8 percent this September, with both electronics component and manufactured goods accelerating by 17 percent and 17.1 percent, respectively.

The NSO report noted that the inflation rate in the National Capital Region (NCR) decreased by 0.3 percentage point to 2.6 percent in October from 2.9 percent in September, the lowest inflation since February 2000. This was brought about by the slowdown in the inflation rates of FBT, H&R and fuel, light and water (FLW).

Inflation rate in areas outside the NCR remained at its September rate of 2.8 percent as mixed trends were observed in the regions.

The NSO report also said that for September 2002, merchandise exports earnings went up by 16.8 percent to $3.190 billion from $2.731 billion during the same month a year ago.

The top four export earners as of September this year are:

- Electronic components, accounting for 53 percent of the aggregate export revenue for the month, increased by 17.0 percent to $1.690 billion from $1.445 billion last year;
- Apparel and clothing accessories remained as the country's second top earner with a combined share of 8.1 percent and an aggregate receipt of $257.62 million or 39.4 percent higher than $184.82 million a year ago;
- Products manufactured from materials imported on consignment basis, ranked third with a total revenue of $50.51 million reflecting a 21.3 percent increase from $41.64 million last year;
- Coconut oil ranked fourth with sales amounting to $45.46 million, a year-on-year growth of 75.8 percent from $25.87 million;

GMA arrives in Hanoi for two-day state visit

HANOI, Vietnam (Via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived at the Noi Bai International Airport at exactly 10:00 a.m. (Hanoi time) on board a chartered Philippine Airlines plane from Phnom Penh where she attended the ASEAN Summit.

The President and her delegation were received warmly at the airport by ranking officials of the Vietnam government.

In her two-day state visit here, the President is accompanied by Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, Presidential Management Staff Head Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr., Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Lauro Baja, and Anthony Abad, former National Food Authority administrator and now the president and CEO of the Philippine International Trading Corporation (PITC).

From Noi Bai International Airport, the President and her official party motored to the Melia Hanoi Hotel, where they are to be billeted.

Upon arrival at the hotel, the President took a one-hour rest before meeting the members of the Filipino community here.

In her impromptu speech, the President informed the 100 Filipinos, who attended the meeting, on the ongoing programs and developments of her two-year-old administration.

After the Fil-com meeting, the President motored to the Presidential Palace for a courtesy call on President Tran Duc Loung.

GMA: RP's balance of trade with China proves Manila to gain out of free trade with Beijing

PHNOM PENH — The balance of trade between the Philippines and China after the latter's entry to the World Trade Organization (WTO) indicated that Beijing will not gobble up the economy of Manila even with free trade.

This was the argument raised by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in Tuesday night's press conference at the Hotel Intercontinental here after the signing of Thailand's accession to the agreement on exchange of information among the Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia.

"Before China entered WTO last year, our trade imbalance was US$300 million. After China entered the WTO, we have a positive balance of trade with China to the tune of US$700 million," the President said.

Even before its accession to WTO agreements, the President said "China has in fact assured us that she is not interested in gobbling up all our countries. She is interested in being a good citizen of the international trading community."

The President added that the fact that all 10 members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) signed the Framework Agreement on Comprehensive Economic Cooperation with China was a clear proof that not one of them see free trade with Beijing as disadvantageous to their respective economies.

The framework signed between ASEAN members and China opens the gateway to further talks for a free trade agreement that is expected to allow Southeast Asian nations to penetrate the Chinese market which has a combined gross domestic product of US$15 trillion to US$2 trillion and two-way trade of US$1.2 trillion.

"The fact is that all 10 ASEAN countries signed and we're determined to take advantage of the (trade) opportunities (with China)," the President said.

But she was quick to add that "of course, we will protect ourselves against the threat by maximizing the flexibilities that we asserted during the negotiations."

Among these flexibilities embodied in the framework was the provision for an early harvest of goods and services with reduced tariff rates within three years, as well as the simplification and standardization of Custom procedures.

Trade Secretary Manuel Roxas II earlier explained that under the framework, Asean member-economies will be able to harvest or benefit from free trade earlier than China.

Roxas explained the early harvest provision to mean that the Philippines will be able to gain greater market access to China "ahead of their having similar access to US."

GMA accomplishes goals in Cambodia trip

PHNOM PENH — Philippine officials wrapped up their work at the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) here, confident that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo accomplished the goals she set for her administration during the summit.

In an interview, Trade Secretary Manuel Roxas II said what was significant in the President's trip to Cambodia was that she was able to strengthen the Philippines' linkages not only with Asean members, but even with Japan, China, Republic of Korea and India.

The two-day meeting of ASEAN leaders also included the ASEAN-China, ASEAN-Korea and ASEAN-India summit, expanding the talks to include other countries in Asia beyond the 10 regular members of the regional grouping.

According to Roxas, a major accomplishment of the President's trip is that the Philippines was able to prove that we are serious about fighting terrorism as reflected in the ASEAN Declaration, and is committed to promote tourism and further enhance trade with other ASEAN members as well as with Japan, China, South Korea and India.

The declaration on anti-terrorism alone, Roxas said, was already a clear indication that ASEAN countries are committed to addressing the problem of international terrorism.

"And this increases the attractiveness, not only of the Philippines, but even of the rest of ASEAN, to investors," Roxas said.

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople said the summit displayed the ASEAN members' determination to expand economic cooperation and raise standards of regional security amid persistent talks of Al-Qaeda terrorist cells penetrating the Southeast Asian region.

Ople also cited the forging of the landmark agreement to promote ASEAN as a single tourist destination with improved security and favorable conditions for all travelers, as a dramatic response to adverse travel advisories being issued by the United States and other countries.

"This tourism agreement underscores the strong commitment of ASEAN to fight against unfair propaganda meant to depict the sub-region as an alleged hotbed of terrorism. ASEAN as a tourism brand name will be collectively carried by all member-countries," he said.

Ople likewise cited the signing of the Declaration on the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea among claimants to the disputed territories in the area, as a major accomplishment of the Philippine government.

"What began as a Philippine initiative four years ago is now historic agreement that upholds peaceful means of resolving territorial and jurisdictional issues between and among these member countries with China," Ople said.

19 countries confirm participation in international tourism, terrorism meet

HANOI, Vietnam (Via PLDT) — The Department of Foreign Affairs today said at least 19 countries have already confirmed that they are taking part in the International Conference on International Terrorism and Tourism Recovery to be held in Manila on Friday and Saturday.

Foreign Affairs Undersecretary for Political Affairs Lauro Baja said leading the list of countries attending the conference are the nine other members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, South Korea and China.

Aside from the Philippines, the other ASEAN members are Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, Singapore, Brunei, Cambodia, Myanmar, Laos and Vietnam.

Baja said that the Department of Foreign Affairs in Manila confirmed that these countries are sending at least 75 representatives to the conference.

GMA pledges RP support for Viet admission in WTO

HANOI, Vietnam (VIA PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today pledged the Philippine government’s continued support to the Socialist Republic of Vietnam’s bid into the World Trade Organization (WTO).

In her opening statement during the bilateral meeting with Vietnamese President Tran Duc Luong at the Presidential Palace here, the Chief Executive said the Philippines will continue to strongly endorse Vietnam’s bid for admission into the WTO.

She added that Vietnam’s admission as a WTO member would further enhance its pursuit of integration and competitiveness in the global economy.

The President, however, said that the struggle for economic competitiveness of both the Philippines and Vietnam need a foundation of security – an environment where people and commerce can feel safe as they go about the business of nation building.

In this connection, the President urged President Tran Duc Luong to work together with the Philippine government to eradicate the murderous destructiveness of terrorism.

President Macapagal-Arroyo stressed that in light of present realities, there is a dire need for greater cooperation in combating terrorism.

She invited Vietnam to accede to the Agreement on Information Exchange and Establishment of Communication Procedures which the Philippines signed together with Indonesia and Malaysia last May, and which was acceded to by Cambodia last July and by Thailand yesterday (November 5) during the Eighth ASEAN Summit in Phnom Penh, Cambodia.

The President stressed that the agreement is a model tool for transnational cooperation in the common fight against terrorism. She added that this would be logical for Vietnam, which has been very active in the international community of nations.

She likewise thanked Vietnam for its support to the Philippine effort to formulate a framework to guide the behavior of stakeholders in the South China Sea with the signing of the Regional Code of Conduct.

She also expressed the hope that the two countries can finally resolve the issue of the remaining Vietnamese nationals in the Philippines.

The President noted that many of them have expressed their desire to settle in the Philippines. But there are also those who wish to return to their homeland, she added.

“We hope that Vietnam will continue to accept and facilitate the process of repatriation,” the President said.

“I assure you that we welcome them because they have become law-abiding and productive members of Philippine society and a reminder of the friendship and fraternity between our two countries,” she added.

Earlier, President Macapagal-Arroyo thanked the Vietnamese leader for the warm and gracious hospitality that the people and government of Vietnam have accorded her and her official delegation.

She also congratulated the Vietnamese leader for his country’s good economic performance and congratulated him for the successful conduct of in Vietnam with a 100-percent voters turnout. The President was referring to the re-election of a number of key officials of Vietnam, including President Tran Duc Luong.

President Tran Duc Luong described the Filipino leader’s two-day state visit to Vietnam as coming at a “crucial time for both our countries in the context of changes in regional and in work situation.”

He said the President's visit is "a wonderful opportunity for a new momentum for the growth of our relations."

"It is a good opportunity for us to see each other after the Asean Summit in Cambodia," the Vietnamese President said.

GMA hails Filipinos in Vietnam

HANOI, Vietnam (Via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the 500 professional Filipino workers here for their contribution to the development of Vietnam and the Philippine economy.

In her speech before members of the Filipino community here, the President said: "Nagpapasalamat ako dahil sa maganda ninyong kontribusyon sa ating ekonomiya at sa ibinibigay ninyong tulong sa pag-unlad ng Vietnamese government (thank you for your contribution to our economy and for your help in the development of the Vietnamese government)."

The President also informed the members of the Filipino community, many of whom occupy top managerial and executive positions in the big corporations in Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City, of the passage of the absentee voting bill by both the Senate and the House of Representatives.

The President said the absentee voting bill is now in the bicameral conference committee of the Congress.

Based on the record of the Philippine Embassy, the Filipino workers here include engineers, accountants, managers, singers and garment factory workers

The President also told the Filipino community here that despite the economic slowdown in the world after the terrorist attack in the United States last year, the Philippines and Vietnam have posted the highest growth rates in Asia.

She added that the tourism industry in the Philippines is now enjoying a 40 percent growth rate after the Abu Sayyaf Group was neutralized by the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police.

President Macapagal-Arroyo also told the Filipino here that her administration is seriously pursuing an anti-corruption campaign in the government.

She also said that her administration is now working to cut down the budget deficit, improving the revenue collection of the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) and keeping the inflation rate down.

RP, Vietnam agree to resolve refugee issue

HANOI — The Philippines and Vietnam today agreed to resolve the issue involving the 1,600 Vietnamese refugees who fled their homeland during the Vietnam war in the 1970s.

The commitment was sealed in the Framework of Bilateral Cooperation between the Philippines and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam in the Next Quarter Century and Beyond.

Signed at the Presidential Palace here this afternoon, the agreement covers a wide range of issues, including economic and defense cooperation, as well as other concerns such as the refugees issue.

Before the signing, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo told top Vietnamese officials here that the Philippines appreciates their willingness to welcome home their countrymen who have fled their homeland years ago.

“For those who wish to come home to Vietnam, we hope that you will continue to accept them and facilitate the process of their repatriation,” the President said during her expanded bilateral meeting with Vietnamese officials at the Presidential Palace.

According to Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Lauro Baja, Jr. over 1,500 Vietnamese refugees are still in the Philippines, and have not been accepted by the host countries in the West where they had applied for asylum.

“They were supposed to go to third-party countries like the United States, Australia, Scandinavian countries, but somehow, along the way, they were not able to fulfill certain requirements for entry,” Baja said.

Under the framework, the two countries declared that they “will cooperate in resolving the Remaining Vietnamese Nations (RVN) issue and in implementing the Orderly Departure Program (ODP).”

ODP involves the sending by Vietnam of a mission to the Philippines to examine the identities of the refugees and determine whether they are indeed Vietnamese.

If found to be Vietnamese, Baja said they will be interviewed whether they are interested in coming home to Vietnam.

“They are interviewed if they want to return home. The mission determines whether they are Vietnamese, and second, if they have something or somebody to return to, in Vietnam,” Baja said.

He said most of the Vietnamese refugees still in the Philippines have already intermarried with Filipinos.

RP, Vietnam sign landmark agreement

HANOI — The Philippines and Vietnam today signed a landmark agreement identifying the areas of cooperation the two countries will explore in the future, further strengthening their economic and diplomatic ties.

In the same framework, the two countries declared their determination to “continue with the process of confidence-building despite territorial disputes among various parties in the South China Sea.”

The two countries are among the six claimants to the Spratly Islands. The other claimants are China, Brunei, Malaysia and Taiwan.

“While seeking a long-term fundamental solution to these disputes, the parties will refrain from any action that may further complicate the situation and negatively affect the friendship and cooperation between the two countries,” the document stated.

Under the framework of bilateral cooperation between the government of the Republic of the Philippines and the government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam, the two countries set the direction of their diplomatic, economic and security ties in the next 25 years.

The framework agreement was signed by Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople for the Philippines and Foreign Minister Nguyen Dy Nien, in the presence of Philippine President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and Vietnam President Tran Duc Luong at the Mirror Room of the Presidential Palace here.

The signing was set just hours after the President and her official delegation arrived at the Noi Bai International Airport here, from a three-day visit to Cambodia where she attended the 8th summit of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

In an interview, Senior Foreign Affairs Undersecretary Lauro Baja, Jr. said the framework would serve as the guidespot for negotiations for future agreements on matters involving the two countries' economic and security relations.

Under the agreement, the two countries committed to promote cooperation in the field of defense "with a view to enhancing mutual understanding and trust, building closer relations between the two countries' defense institutions and armed forces and expanding cooperation in security and crime control between the two governments and their security and police forces."

The defense cooperation outlined in the framework include exchange of information on anti-piracy as well as search-and-rescue operations.

The two countries also agreed to strengthen and expand their bilateral cooperation in the fields of agriculture, fishery, education and training, culture, science and technology, civil aviation, taxation, healthcare, labor and employment, telecommunications, information technology, tourism and sports.

"The parties attach great importance to their economic development and agree to strengthen and expand the bilateral cooperation in above-mentioned areas of exchanging information and expertise, and by organizing joint promotion programs targeting specific markets in North America, Europe and other potential regions," the document read.

At the same time, the two countries committed to "pursue mutually beneficial joint ventures in order to benefit from various ASEAN economic cooperation schemes such as the ASEAN Industrial Cooperation (AICO), and ASEAN Investment Area (AIA)."

Among the areas identified in the agreement where the two countries would engage in joint ventures are manufacturing, agriculture, forestry, fishery and mining.

In closing, the two countries assured that they will conduct frequent consultations on regional and international issues, especially those relating to ASEAN "with a view to building a Southeast Asia of peace, stability, cooperation and development and an ASEAN of solidarity and cooperation on the basis of non-interference, consensus, equal and mutually beneficial cooperation and equitable development."

A new step forward in RP-Vietnam cooperation

HANOI, Vietnam (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that her two-day state visit to the Socialist Republic of Vietnam added another "new step" in the development of the friendship and cooperation between the Philippines and Vietnam since the establishment of diplomatic relations 26 years ago.

Meeting Prime Minister Phan Van Khai of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam at the Government Office here this afternoon, the Chief Executive indicated that her visit shows the government's continuing commitment to promote stronger and greater bonds of friendship and cooperation between the Filipino and Vietnamese people.

She also congratulated the Vietnamese government and its people on the holding of peaceful, fair and democratic elections for members of the National Assembly last May.

She also expressed sympathy for the victims of floods in the Central provinces in Vietnam.

On regional issues, President Macapagal-Arroyo told the Vietnamese Prime Minister that with the recent developments, it has become even more imperative for individual nations of Southeast Asia to work together and speak as one.

She added that it is in this context that the Philippines' commitment to ASEAN regionalism has become even stronger.

The President mentioned to the Vietnamese leader the successful outcome of the just-concluded ASEAN Summit in Phnom Penh.

She also reiterated the Philippines' commitment to the attainment of ASEAN's objective of narrowing the development divide between its older and newer members.

According to the President, the signing of the ASEAN-China Declaration on the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea is an important achievement, saying that it shows the steadfast consistency of Philippine-Vietnam taking the same position that led to the signing of the Declaration of the Regional Code of Conduct to achieve peace and security in the region.

The draft regional code of conduct was initiated during the ASEAN Summit in Hanoi four years ago under the Hanoi Plan of Action.

The Prime Minister said the most important event that took place this afternoon here was the signing of the Framework of Bilateral Cooperation Between the Government of the Republic of the Philippines and the Government of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam in the next quarter century and beyond.

He lauded President Macapagal-Arroyo for her leadership in the political and economic development of the Republic of the Philippines, saying that despite the global economic crisis, she was able to achieve significant growth in her country as a whole.

GMA lauds Vietnam's hosting of AIPO, sees closer ties with Vietnam

HANOI, Vietnam (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded Chairman Nguyen Van An of the National Assembly of Vietnam for the successful hosting by the Vietnam government of the 23rd General Assembly of the ASEAN Inter-Parliamentary Organization (AIPO) in September this year.

The President, who met with Nguyen Van An at the Government House here yesterday afternoon, said the successful hosting by Vietnam of the AIPO signaled the beginning of his country's capability to hold other international conferences in the years ahead. These include the Asia-Europe Meeting (ASEM) in 2004 and the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation Leaders Meeting in 2006.

"We have similar viewpoints about realities in the region and in the world," she said as she touched on the Philippine government's foreign policy.

"We move together as ASEAN and we give importance to three active nations, namely, the United States, China, and Japan – countries with huge economic potentials," the President said.

The President said the steadfastness of both the Philippines and Vietnam together with other ASEAN nations led to the signing of the Declaration of the Regional Code of Conduct in the South China Sea.

She expressed the hope that the two countries will "move together in this direction and in all our other initiatives as well."

The chairman of Vietnam's National Assembly, who warmly received President Macapagal-Arroyo, said her visit to the Socialist Republic of Vietnam "is a leap forward in our relations in the years ahead."

He told the President that during the recent elections of Vietnam's National Assembly, there was an increase of 27.31 percent of women parliamentarians elected.

"Women in Vietnam played important roles in the past struggles to defend the country," Nguyen Van An said adding that today women play very important role in building the country.

He told the President that he was delighted to see her because "this is the first time I met a woman-President."

In closing, the Vietnamese official said the exchange of high-level visits between the Philippines and Vietnam "set the growing foundations to improve relations and enhance mutual understanding between the two countries."

Among those who accompanied the President during her call on Nguyen Van An were Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople, Philippine Ambassador to Vietnam Guillermo Wong, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, Presidential Management Staff Head Silvestre Afable, Jr. and DFA Undersecretary Lauro Baja, Jr.

Statement of the Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao on reports about coup plots

Reports of coup plots in this country in this day and age have assumed the genre of UFO-and men-from-Mars sightings that have been played up in the 1950s and 60s American grocery-counter tabloids.

Media reports of “coup plots” however gravely distort the image of our country in the world. Worse, they insult the integrity and loyalty of the overwhelming majority of our soldiers and policemen who again and again have proven their loyalty to their Commander-In-Chief, the President of the Philippine Republic, and to our Constitution.

Officers and men of the Armed Forces of the Philippines have repeatedly expressed to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo their appreciation of her efforts to improve their and their family’s quality of life. Our soldiers who have been wounded and killed to uphold their duty to defend the Republic are our national heroes of today.

President Macapagal-Arroyo early last year pushed with all her political resources for the passage of the bill, sponsored by Senator Ramon Magsaysay, Jr. which granted pay increases to our military to put their salaries on the same level as policemen ordered by a 1999 law.

The full implementation of the 1999 law for policemen’s salaries was undertaken on three steps within a span of three years, because of our country’s budget constraints. The law to increase the soldiers’ and officers’ pay will be implemented in just 15 months, which began October 1. We have received reports that a few disgruntled scalawags in the military are distorting this issue to invent reports of soldiers “low morale”, leading to fabrications of “coup plots.” They are only spitting upon the Republic’s image in the eyes of the world, and upon the integrity of our soldiers.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo deeply appreciates the patriotism and understanding of our soldiers that the pay increases, as in the case of policemen’s salaries cannot be fully implemented in one swoop, to ensure that such spikes in expenditures do not derail our budgetary program.

The President has often emphasized to her officials that ways and means must be found to help our soldiers and their families achieved a comfortable life even with their net take-home pay set by law of as low as 4,000 pesos.

As one way of achieving this, the President gave specific orders to Housing Secretary Mike Defensor to implement within six months the first phase of a massive housing program for our soldiers.

Secretary Defensor on Wednesday had reported to Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo that these housing projects are on the way towards becoming reality in six months in 21 camps and military reservations all over the country. Among these are those to be built in a 20-hectare land in Camp Riego de Dios, Cavite, 30 has. In Camp Aquino, Tarlac; and 20 has. in Camp Evangelista in Cagayan de Oro City.

RP, Vietnam form bilateral commission to further strengthen economic ties

HANOI, Vietnam (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has announced that the Philippines and Vietnam have agreed to form a joint bilateral commission to further strengthen the counter-trade between the two countries.

The President made the announcement in her press conference held at the Melia Hanoi Hotel Wednesday night.

The Chief Executive said that in order to achieve a counter-trade volume of $600 million per year, she and Vietnamese Prime Minister Tran Duc Luong have agreed to create a joint bilateral commission.

The President explained that the joint bilateral commission will be chaired by the ministers of foreign affairs of both countries “so that they can operationalize the framework agreement for the next 25 years.”

She said that there will be no problem in the implementation of joint bilateral agreement since the two countries have many things to sell and buy from each other.

“Only a narrow avenue, a sea, separates us, not an ocean but a narrow sea, and that’s the South China Sea. And although we did not know each other well for many years when we had different economic and political systems during the Cold War in the 21st century, in fact in the 1990s, we began to know each other and understand each other more and behave more like neighbors,” she said.

In working for the Declaration of Conduct in the South China Sea, the President said that the Philippines and Vietnam are always working together, always pushing together, in the same policy direction.

On the signing of sports agreement by both countries, the President said she expects a lot of benefits for both the Philippines and Vietnam, such as in training one another in areas where one country is an expert.

The President wished good luck to Vietnam for its hosting next year Southeast Asian Games.

To start the operational framework of the counter trade, the President said that the Philippines intends to buy more Vietnam rice.

The President also clarified that the Philippines has a big advantage in the field of tourism, because despite of all the threats in South East Asia, between October last year to October this year, the country’s tourism grew by 40 percent.

She said that her administration is now making sure that all the country’s beach resorts and other tourist spots are secure and safe.

GMA cites key role played by Vietnam in the forging of the South China Sea pact

HANOI, Vietnam — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has cited the important role played by Vietnam in the forging of the Declaration of the Regional Code of Conduct in the South China Sea.

In a press conference held Wednesday night at the Melia Hanoi Hotel here, the President said Vietnam’s “unstinting cooperation” during the four years that the declaration was being negotiated paved the way for its adoption during the 8th Leaders’ Meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) held in Phnom Penh, Cambodia.

The declaration, the President said, should give people in the region “peace of mind.”

“It is also important to the stability and progress of Asia, the South China Sea being a main artery in the regional and global trade,” the President said.

Aside from Vietnam and the Philippines, the string of islands, islets and atolls that straddle the South China Sea, are being claimed in part or wholly by China, Brunei Darussalam, Taiwan, and Malaysia.

According to the President, negotiations for the adoption of the declaration started four years ago after the ASEAN promulgated the 1998 Hanoi Plan of Action that called for a regional code of conduct in the South China Sea.

Instead of being a potential flashpoint or area of conflict, the South China Sea will now be an avenue for shared prosperity since all claimants are now committed to resolve their territorial and jurisdictional disputes through peaceful means without resorting to the threat or use of force, the President said.

“But the most important principle is the principle of no occupation which is contained in the declaration,” the President said.

She said this principle means the claimant countries would not go to war against each other “but go to war against global terrorism.”

Vietnam good place for RP investments, says GMA

HANOI, Vietnam — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has expressed confidence that with her visit to Vietnam bilateral trade arrangements, including investments, can be expanded between the Philippines and Vietnam.

In a press conference held at the Melia Hanoi Hotel here Wednesday night, the President said the Philippines has always recognized Vietnam as a good place for investments, with the Philippines having big investments already in Vietnam.

“We have a brewery here, we have pharmaceutical companies here, we have packaging companies here and we have a car manufacturing here,” the President said enumerating the various investments of the Philippines in Vietnam.

She said she is not aware of any developing country where the Philippines has a large investments except Vietnam.

“We also buy rice from Vietnam so we have many sources of good bilateral arrangements and I hope that with my visit they can be expanded,” the President said.

With the signing of the sports agreement with Vietnam, the President also expressed the hope that both Vietnam and the Philippines will be able to benefit by helping one another, training one another in the areas where one is an expert.

The President said that she discussed with the Vietnamese Prime Minister a counter-trade volume of about $600 million a year.

As the Philippines is buying rice from Vietnam, Vietnam will also buy fertilizer and other products from the Philippines, the President said.

To achieve this, the President said the Philippines and Vietnam have agreed to form a joint bilateral commission to be chaired by the ministers of foreign affairs of the two countries.

Foreign trips part of mission to create more jobs for Filipinos, says GMA

HANOI, Vietnam — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said her recent trips to attend the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Economic Leaders’ Meeting in Los Cabos, Mexico, the 8th Summit of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) Conference in Cambodia, and to Vietnam for a two-day state visit were all done as part of her mission to create jobs in the Philippines and to build on the regional and global cooperation in a war against terrorism.

The President attended the APEC Summit from October 26 to 27, the ASEAN Summit from November 4 and 5. From the ASEAN Summit in Phnom Penh, she proceeded to Vietnam for a state visit.

In both the APEC and ASEAN meetings, the President stood pat on her stand that the eradication of terrorism hinges on the success in fighting poverty.

In a press conference held at the Melia Hanoi Hotel here Wednesday night, the President said “whether the issue is the defense of the nation’s sovereignty or fighting global terrorism, at the end of the day, it is always about the economy and improving the lives of our citizens.”

The President noted that the Philippines had a particular competitive advantage in terms of skills and human resource, making the service sectors, like information and technology industry, a good pool for employment locally and offshore. However, job creation, the President implied, hinges on a secure world economy.

“We support the principle of secure trade since developing countries cannot as yet pay the cost of all the detailed components of secure trade. We have proposed, and many developed countries agreed, capacity building in terms of training and acquisition of new technology be extended to developing economies to enable us to comply with rigid timetables and prosperity,” the President said.

The President acknowledged that there is a need to strengthen cooperation among nations in the global fight against terrorism. “But just as we’re taking security measures to prevent terrorist acts, we should also address the poverty and hopelessness that provide recruits for terrorism,” she said.

“The gap between developed and developing economies has not really narrowed and even with our own developing economy we have to be constantly mindful of the effects of the steps we take on small communities and small enterprises,” the President pointed out.

The President stressed that “just as we search out and destroy terrorism we must search out and destroy the terror of poverty.”

“There is evil in being hungry just as evil in being a destructive terrorist. We must work together as a family of nations to alleviate both,” the President said.

The President pointed out that to secure world economy there is a need to expand deterrent measures to include port security, travel documents, air cargo security and others. “We support measures on a secure trade and movement of goods from port of origin to port of destination in the same manner that we support measures will deter movement of terrorists across borders,” she said.

GMA to lead nation in National Day of Prayer and Fasting

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will lead the country in celebrating the annual National Day of Prayer and Fasting (NDPF) to rally the nation to overcome challenges and adversities through prayer and action on Saturday November 9, 2002. The theme of this year’s NDPF is “We Shall Overcome.” It is also the title of a well known civil rights and Church song.

The national program, an Inter-Faith Prayer Rally, will be held in Boni Avenue corner San Joaquin Street, Barangay Plain View, Mandaluyong City from 3 to 4 p.m. and will be broadcast live. There will be similar activities in all provincial, city, and town centers initiated by local governments and religious leaders.

This year’s celebration is pursuant to Proclamation No 47, declaring the second Saturday of November as National Day of Prayer and Fasting (NDPF). The NDPF is the day government sets aside for the nation to come together in fasting and prayer for the intentions of the nation.

Instead of the traditional mammoth prayer rally at the Luneta Park, this year’s national prayer event will be simultaneously held in six locations: two in Luzon, two in Visayas, and two in Mindanao. The nation’s top government officials will lead the six prayer rallies.

In Mandaluyong City, Mayor Ben-Hur Abalos, Congressman Neptali Gonzales II, Manila Archbishop Jaime Cardinal L. Sin and other religious leaders will pray for “National Renewal, the Poor, Penance, and Devotion.”

Vice President Teofisto Guingona Jr. will be at the Dr. Torres Memorial Hospital in Lamitan, Basilan to pray for “Protection Against Violence and Terror and the Development of Mindanao.”

Senate President Franklin Drilon will be in Sea Front, Iloilo City to pray for “Moral Renewal and for Families and the Youth.”

In Igorot Park in Baguio City, House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. will pray for “Environmental Protection and the Preservation of Cultural Traditions.”

Supreme Court Chief Justice Hilario Davide will be in the provincial capitol in Cebu City to pray for “Justice, Good Governance and for Livelihood and Sharing of Economic Gains.”

Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao Governor Parouk Hussin will also pray for “Peace, Unity and Global Understanding” at Camp Duma Sinsuat, formerly Camp Abubakar.

President Macapagal-Arroyo will then cap the prayer rally by leading the nation in the “National Prayer for Peace, Progress” in Mandaluyong City.

The National Day of Prayer and Fasting national program will be broadcast live on television networks NBN 4, RPN 9, IBC 13, ANC 21 and over the radio stations of MBC-DZRH, RMN-DZXL, and the Bureau of Broadcasts.

GMA back from highly successful trip to Cambodia, Hanoi

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived this afternoon from a highly successful trip in Cambodia, where she attended the Eighth Association of Southeast Asian Nation Summit and Vietnam.

The President arrived on board a chartered Philippine Airlines flight at around 1:25 p.m. at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport.

She was accorded foyer honors and was welcomed by Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr., Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Soliman, Presidential Adviser on Education Mona Valisno, Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao and Foreign Undersecretary Franklin Ebdalin.

Presidential daughter Evangeline Lourdes “Luli” Arroyo was also on hand to welcome the President.

In her statement distributed at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport by Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, the President said her visit to the two countries immensely contributed to the Philippine economy and national security.

“They are important to the well-being of our people and the alleviation of poverty through more investments and jobs,” the President said.

The President noted that in Hanoi, she and Vietnamese President Tran Duc Luong agreed to step up bilateral trade to $500 million to $600 million within the next five years following the signing of a comprehensive Framework of Cooperation for the next 25 years.

The two countries, she further noted, would immediately work on a countertrade arrangement wherein the Philippines will increase fertilizer exports to that country in exchange for rice imports from Vietnam. This proposal is part of the first item to be tackled by the Philippines-Vietnam Joint Commission which will meet soon, the President said.

The President also said the two countries agreed to work for the upgrading of the newly signed ASEAN Declaration on the South China Sea to a Code of Conduct that would be more binding and more detailed.

“From the point of view of our national interest, this is the most important document produced during the eight ASEAN Summit,” she said.

According to the President, the Philippines and Vietnam have consistently advocated common positions on the peaceful resolution of disputes in the South China Sea following the launching of multilateral negotiations on the issue after ASEAN’s Hanoi Plan of Action in 1998.

Vietnam has also agreed to favorably consider signing into the Trilateral Agreement on Terrorism entered into by the Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia last July, and shortly thereafter by Cambodia. Thailand also signed in the course of the ASEAN summit.

The President said overall regional security against terrorism would improve greatly if the six nations sharing common seas were part of the accord. She was referring to the claimants to parts or the whole of the Spratly group of island. The claimants include the Philippines, Vietnam, Malaysia, China, Brunei Darussalam and Taiwan.

The President also noted that during the summit, ASEAN also entered into a tourism agreement, considering that tourist arrivals in the Philippines increased by 40 percent in October compared to the same period last year.

“My trip to Phnom Penh and Hanoi integrated very well with the same economic and security goals in the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) summit and in my trade mission to Silicon Valley in California last week,” the President said.

During her trip to the APEC, United States President George W. Bush unveiled the Enterprise-ASEAN Initiative, which aims to open up bilateral free trade agreement between the U.S. and ASEAN, the President said.

After the arrival ceremonies at the NAIA, the President went straight to the Makati Medical Center, where her daughter-in-law, Angela Montenegro Arroyo, gave birth to a healthy daughter last November 4.

At the hospital suite, the President doted on Mikaela Gloria Arroyo her first granddaughter, holding her attentively.

The President said first and foremost, she felt happy with the arrival of her Mikaela Gloria.

When asked by reporters if she wants her first grandchild to follow her footsteps, the President said, “I hope she grows up to be a good servant of the Lord.”

“I want her to be what God wants her to be,” she added.

With the President at the hospital were Angela Montenegro Arroyo, her mother Rosario Montenegro and members of both Montenegro and Arroyo families.

GMA to host dinner for participants in int’l meet

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will be the guest of honor at a dinner in honor of the participants in the two-day International Conference on International Terrorism and Tourism Recovery tomorrow.

National Security Adviser Roilo Golez said that senior officials from several countries—including the other nine members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Japan, South Korea and China—will converge at the Shangri-la Hotel in Makati to discuss the fight against international terrorism and salvaging Asia’s battered tourist industry.

According to Golez, the meeting will seek to identify “doable projects” and discuss the experience of participating countries in fighting terrorism.

President Macapagal-Arroyo first proposed the meeting during this week's ASEAN summit conference in Phnom Penh.

According to Golez, the first day of the "International Conference on International Terrorism and Tourism Recovery" would discuss the fallout of the bombings in Indonesia and the Philippines on the region's tourism industry.

He said the terrorism problem would take center stage on the final day, Saturday.

GMA says talks with NDF may continue but only if reds renounce terrorism

HANOI, Nov. 7 (PNA) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said her administration is still willing to formally go back to the negotiating table with communist rebels, but only if they renounce terrorism.

The President stressed this in a durian party she hosted last night for members of the delegation accompanying her on her state visit to Vietnam.

The President's pronouncement came after the government successfully secured the support of the European Union in declaring the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) and the New People's Army (NPA) as a foreign terrorist group.

The declaration was necessary to stop the flow of financial aid to the NPA that has allowed the group to engage in what the administration has declared as terrorist attacks against civilian establishments and individuals.

"The peace talks will not resume unless they renounce terrorism," the President said in an interview with Manila-based reporters here.

The President stayed here overnight after a three-day stay in Cambodia where she attended the eight summit of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

The President assured that her administration remains committed to arriving at a peace agreement with the communist rebels.

Security and defense officials have stated that the government has not closed the door on communist rebels willing to talk peace.

- GMA, Taylor discuss strengthening of counterterrorism capabilities
- GMA leads day of prayer, fasting rites tomorrow
- Tomas sees more demand for Filipino health professionals abroad
- Peso to strengthen as remittances from OFWs start coming in

GMA, Taylor discuss strengthening of counterterrorism capabilities

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today discussed with Ambassador Francis Taylor, the United States government's Coordinator for Counterterrorism, ways and means of strengthening the counter-terrorism capabilities of the Philippines and other countries in Southeast Asia.

Taylor, who heads the US delegation to the two-day International Conference on Terrorism and Tourism Recovery which opened today at the Shangri-la Hotel in Makati, also gave the President an update on his visit to other countries in the Asian region which centered on regional cooperation in the fight against terrorism.

Specifically, the President and Taylor, who is one of US President George W. Bush's advisers, talked about increased sharing of intelligence, the rooting out of terrorist cells, tightening of border security and disrupting of terrorist money flows.

The President proposed that a Philippine-US training exercise be conducted jointly in the Philippines for the police.

She also proposed the holding of an intelligence gathering exercise, in the same manner that joint training exercises are being held for Filipino and US soldiers.

The President and Taylor also discussed the status of the Anti-Terrorism Bill and amendments to the Anti-Money Laundering Law which they emphasized were vital to efforts to stop the flow of money being used by terrorist groups.

During the two-day international terrorism and anti-terrorism conference, Taylor is expected to propose strategies for building international and regional cooperation in the fight against terrorism.

"I come here to support the tremendous effort of the government of the Philippines to work together against terrorism and, more specifically, from a regional perspective," Taylor said.

Aside from the subject of combating terrorism, the President likewise brought up the plight of the Filipino veterans in the US.

The President also asked for Taylor's help for Filipino airport screeners who stand to lose their jobs in view of a requirement in the US Aviation and Transportation Security Act that all airport security screeners be US citizens. Airport security screeners are the ones who check passengers and baggage at the airport before they are allowed on board planes.

"They will be losing their jobs next week," the President told Taylor. The US official assured the President he will see what he can do on the matter.

Taylor is a former brigadier general who served with distinction in numerous command and staff positions in his 31 years in the US military service. Prior to his appointment as State Department Coordinator for Counterterrorism with the rank of Ambassador at Large, Taylor headed the US Air Force Office of Special Investigations, where he was responsible for providing commanders of all Air Force activities independent professional investigative services in fraud, counterintelligence and major criminal matters.

As head of the federal Office of Counterterrorism, Taylor coordinates all US government efforts to improve counterterrorism cooperation with foreign governments.

As the Coordinator, he chairs the inter agency Working Group on Counter terrorism and the State Department's terrorism task force to coordinate responses to major international terrorist incidents that are in progress.

Taylor was accompanied to Malacañang by US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone.

GMA leads day of prayer, fasting rites tomorrow

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will lead the nation in tomorrow's celebration of the National Day of Prayer and Fasting (NDPF) with an Inter-Faith Prayer Rally on Boni Avenue, Mandaluyong City starting at 3 p.m.

Under Proclamation No. 47, the second Saturday of November has been designated as a National Day of Prayer and Fasting for National Strength and Unity Against All Adversities.

This year's celebration, under the theme "We Shall Overcome," will also be held simultaneously in six locations: two in Luzon, two in the Visayas, and two in Mindanao.

This year's celebration is intended to rally the nation to overcome challenges and adversities through prayer and action.

The country's top government officials will lead the six prayer rallies. Among them: Vice President Teofisto Guingona (Dr. Torres Memorial Hospital in Lamitan, Basilan); Senate President Franklin Drilon (Sea Front, Iloilo City); House Speaker Jose de Venecia Jr., (Igorot Park, Baguio City); Chief Justice Hilario Davide (Provincial Capitol, Cebu City); and Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao Governor Parouk Hussin (Camp Duma Sinsuat, formerly Camp Abubakar).

The President will then cap the prayer rally by leading the nation in the "National Prayer for Peace and Progress" in Mandaluyong City.

Sto. Tomas sees more demand for Filipino health professionals abroad

Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia A. Sto. Tomas has said that emerging trends in the health services sector of countries in Europe, North America and Asia all point to an increasing demand for Filipino doctors, nurses, dentists and other health-related workers.

In a report, Sto. Tomas said the Philippines does not have a policy of exporting people but the character of overseas employment is basically shaped by international demand for foreign workers.

The world has become one global workplace and this has facilitated the rising demand for Filipino workers abroad, especially in the health professions," she said.

Sto. Tomas said that health education institutions must continuously upgrade their curriculum, and put premium to training and upgrading of skills and competencies.

"Perhaps we can pattern the training for the nursing profession after the training specialization curriculum for medical doctors to avoid shortages in emergency room nurses in critical areas," Sto. Tomas said.

She noted the difficulty in hiring emergency room nurses both for foreign and local hospitals because of the relative differences in the training of emergency nurses to those of ordinary nurses.

Sto. Tomas revealed that 20,000 nurses are now needed in The Netherlands; 1,000 in Milan; 3,500 in Norway; and 7,500 more in the United Kingdom.

In Malaysia, 2,500 pharmacists and doctors for government hospitals are needed while Canada, Ireland, Japan, Singapore, Guam, the United States, New Zealand, and Australia, have all expressed their desire to hire foreign workers in the nursing and other related fields, Sto. Tomas said.

With this demand, she said, the 16,240 professional nurses who were deployed from 1998 to 2000 are expected to further increase, citing as reason aging population of developed countries, along with expanding opportunities in home care and out-patient surgical centers, and the growing number of older and more acutely ill hospitalized patients.

Sto. Tomas said that in 2001 alone, overseas deployment of health professionals – including nurses, dentists, doctors, pharmacists, midwives, and medical technicians – reached more than 16,472, or 69.3 percent higher than the 9,716 health workers deployed the previous year.

Sto. Tomas said that the Philippines should not stop at the numbers but should aim for higher international comparability and standards, if we are to truly participate as a global leader in the supply of health services and maximize opportunities in the global market.”

Peso to strengthen as remittances from OFWs start coming in

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) has said the peso should strengthen in the coming weeks as dollar remittances from overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) have started to come in.

The BSP said the peso should stabilize this month until December considering the expected flow of dollars from overseas Filipino workers (OFWs), the bullish export performance, and a correction in oil prices.

The government expects dollar remittances from OFWs to reach $8 billion this year, or 43 percent more than the 2001 level.

The BSP also reported the country's gross international reserves (GIR) reached $15.945 billion as of end-October 2002. This level was slightly lower than the end-September 2002 level of $16.025 billion.

The current GIR level is equivalent to 5.1 months of imports of goods and payment of services and income.

The minimal decline in the GIR, the BSP said, was due primarily to debt service payments for maturing obligations of the BSP and the national government, including the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR).

Meanwhile, the BSP's net international reserves (BSP-NIR) as of end-October 2002 reached $12.283 billion from $12.606 billion a month ago.

President's radio/TV message

Mga kababayan, wala nang atrasan ang pakikibaka natin sa terorismo. nakiki-isa tayo sa hinagpis at pagdurusa ng mga pamilyang nasawi o nasaktan sa mga atake ng terorista. At dapat tayong humanap ng lakas sa pagkilos sa halip na magtago sa takot.

Dapat makipag-tulungan tayo sa mga bansa ng buong mundo upang labanan ang terorismo. Hindi dapat magwalang bahala. Kailangang tugisin ang mga terorista bago nila wasakin hindi lamang turismo, kundi pati ang pamumuhay natin mismo.

Pag-upo ko pa lamang bilang pangulo, inilunsad ko na ang digma laban sa terorismo. Kaya nung nangyari iyong mga pangyayari noong Sept. 11, 2002, agad akong lumahok sa koalisyong pan-daigdig kontra terorismo.

Hindi ako nagsisisi sa masigasig nating pagdurog ng terorismo sa Pilipinas at sa hangad nating magsanib ang mga bansa ng Asya laban sa terorismo. Samantala, ginagawa natin ang lahat upang ipagtanggol ang mga mamamayan, ang pamahalaan at lahat ng nasa Pilipinas.

Walang relihiyon na nagtatakdang paslangin ang walang malay at walang sala. Tanging hangad ng mga tunay na Muslim sa Pilipinas ang kapayapaan at pag-angat sa buhay. Lumalabag sa Islam ang teroristang kinakasangkapan ang relihiyon para sa karahasan. Hindi sila maka-Diyos o maka-bayan, kungdi mga mamamatay-tao na walang ideolohiya. Kundi paghahasik ng ligalig.

Digmaang pandaigdig ang pagsugpo sa terorismo. Dapat tayong makipag-palitan ng impormasyon tungkol sa mga terorista, at handlangan ang paglilipat nila ng pera sa iba't-ibang bansa. Dapat ding tuntunin at wasakin ang mga lungga ng terorista, saan man sila nakapag-ugat.

Kaya naman, aktibo ang Pilipinas at ang inyong lingkod upang isulong ang alyansiya ng mga bansa sa asya kontra terorismo. Sa katatapos na mga pagpupulong ng APEC sa Mexico at Asean sa Cambodia, masigasig nating ipaglaban ang mga deklarasyon kontra terorismo at kooperasyon sa larangan ng seguridad at pani-niktik o intelligence.

Lumahok sa alyansiyang itinatag ng Pilipinas, Malaysia at Indonesia, ng Thailand at Cambodia. Sa kabilang dako, sa pamamagitan ng kasunduan tungkol sa pagkilos ng mga bansa sa South China Sea, lalakas ang pakikipag-tulungan upang masawata ang pag-galaw ng masasamang loob sa karagatan.

Sa tapang ng ating mga sundalo't pulis at sa tulong ng mga ka-alyado nating bansa, nananalo na tayo laban sa mga terorista sa Pilipinas. Lubha ng nanghina ang Abu Sayyaf at ipit na sa Sulu. Daan-daan ang mga kasapi nilang nalipol o nahuli, at napuksa ang marami nilang Intelligence Cells. Hindi na rin makakakilos nang malaya ang mga teroristang banyaga matapos mahuli ang ilan nilang pinuno at mabigo ang mga planong pag-bobomba.

Gayunpaman, upang tunay na magwagi sa terorismo, kailangang magtulungan ang maunlad at umuunlad na bansa upang wakasan ang karalitaan. Sapagkat kahirapan ng buhay ang nagtutulak sa maraming sawing-palad na maakit sa terorismo at sa mga huwad na pangako ng mga terorista.

Kailangan ding magtulungan ang iba't-ibang bansa upang malabanan ang kahirapan. Kaya naman nananawagan ako sa APEC na buksan ng mga mayamang bansa ang mga merkado nila sa mga produkto natin. Dapat din nilang dagdagan ang puhunan at salaping tulong para sa mga bansang umuunlad. At sa ating bansa naman, isinusulong ko ang pag-unlad sa agrikultura at negosyong munti upang lumikha ng milyong trabaho at makaahon ang milyun-milyong Pilipino sa kahirapan.

Ito ang laban nating mga pilipino kontra karahasan at kahirapan. Sa tapang, sigasig at pagkakaisa natin at sa awa ng maykapal, magwawagi tayo.

Maraming salamat sa inyong lahat.

GMA dissuades Western nations from issuing travel warnings

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Friday asked Western nations to refrain from issuing travel warnings and advisories that discourage tourism and investment into affected countries.

“We should not be penalized by those who are well aware of the tough decisions and actions we’ve taken to not only deal with terrorists on our own shores but also to work with other countries to ensure that in our region and around the world, we cooperate by sharing intelligence and assisting in apprehending terrorists who are not restricted by national borders,” the President said in her speech before the opening of the International Conference on Terrorism and Tourism Recovery at Shangri-La Hotel in Makati City.

The President said that in the case of the Philippines, the strongest argument that the nation has against such penalties is the reputation of the Filipino workers all over the world.

She said she hopes that friends in the western world and elsewhere will think long and hard about how they can support the efforts of the Philippines to not only remove the scourge of terrorism from the Philippines and other countries in Southeast Asia but also the work being done to ensure that countries in our region are just as active in fighting this global war.

“We need cooperation from our friends internationally, not misguided condemnation,” she said.

The President noted that at the end of the day, the Western countries must realize that no nation is not doing anything to fight terrorism.

On the part of the Philippines I would say that while there are many others fighting this as much as we are, nobody is fighting more than we are,” she said.

She said she looks forward to working closely with the western world and neighbors in what is unfortunately going to be a long war.

She noted that just as nations search out and destroy terrorism we must search out and destroy the terror of poverty.

“Whether it’s the fight against global terrorism or the promotion of tourism, at the end of the day it’s always about the economy and improving the lives of our citizens,” she said.

GMA lauds big labor group's unilateral move not to press wage increase at this time

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Friday night said she's glad over the decision of the Labor Solidarity Movement, the umbrella organization of the country's mainstream labor groups, not to press for wage increase at this time.

In her keynote speech on the first day of the International Conference on Terrorism and Tourism Recovery at the Shangri-La Hotel In Makati, the President called the movement's decision as an act of patriotism. The movement is composed of Trade Union Congress of the Philippines (TUCP), Federation of Free Workers (FFW), Alliance of Filipino Workers (AFW) and the Trade Union of the Philippines and Allied Services (TUPAS).

"This patriotic act by the four biggest labor unions of the country is one such mechanism by which existing jobs can be preserved," the President said.

The President also noted the efforts made by the Employers Confederation of the Philippines (ECOP), which committed to pay for any increases in workers' contribution in Social Security System premiums for as long as there are still no wage increases.

"While government works hard at creating new jobs through investment as well as through tourism and the encouragement of Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs) to build up domestic demand, we must also put in place job preservation mechanisms at a time when the world is in economic difficulty," the President said.

"This patriotic act by the four biggest labor unions of the country is one such mechanism by which existing jobs can be preserved. The same is true of the employers' group who made their own contribution through a social accord that will allow us to weather this difficult time," she added.

On the part of government, the President said she has ordered agencies to ensure that government does its share in jobs preservation.

"We must learn to conserve our gains during difficult times. More important we must stand together to move this country, our country, forward," she said.

Her orders are:

- The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) to strictly enforce existing labor standards so workers may get their lawful due;
- The National Food Authority (NFA) to assist workers to get cheaper rice and other basic necessities;
- The Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) to intensify its drive to provide affordable housing to workers through rent-to-own and similar schemes to allow workers decent dwelling places.

Let's all fight, not fear terrorism — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Friday enjoined countries to come together and pour efforts in fighting terrorism instead of seeking refuge in fear.

At the same time, the President announced the Philippine hosting of multilateral seminar games on emergency responses to terrorist threats tentatively set in December.

"We must work together as nations around the world fight terrorism. We cannot sit back and wait. We must take this fight to the terrorists before they undermine not only our tourism but our very way of living," she said during her keynote speech at the two-day International Conference on Terrorism and Tourism Recovery at the Shangri-La Hotel in Makati City.

The President also expressed gladness over the heavy turnout of delegates from around the world. “The fact that you all arrived in such short notice only emphasizes the urgency and importance of our undertaking,” she said.

She noted that terrorism impacts directly on tourism, saying that as forum for facilitating the movement of people across borders, the World Tourism Organization (WTO) indeed has a stake in making sure that we are able to have a safe place in this world today.

“It’s a twin job that is very important. Achieving the goal of making goods move and people move, but also taking necessary steps to protect them against terrorism. This requires a combination of the application of new technology and cross-border cooperation among government agencies,” she said.

The President further noted the challenge terrorism posed for all countries that value peace and order. “It confirms that we must continue to take a firm stand against terrorism and work diligently with the family of nations in the global campaign to end the scourge of terrorism once and for all,” she said.

On the Philippines’ efforts against terrorism, the President said the government has set to work to crush terrorism militarily and economically, moving aggressively to challenge the Abu Sayyaf in their turf, cutting their numbers to less than or about 200 from over a thousand.

“The Abu Sayyaf remain a threat but a diminished one. We have worked to crush their armed soldiers and break up their intelligence cells,” she said.

She also noted that the government is pursuing inter-faith dialogs to promote Christian and Muslim solidarity. “Terrorists wish to instigate a religious war. We must make this an opportunity for religious understanding, ecumenism and solidarity,” she added.

On the Al-Qaeda connection in the Philippines, the President confirmed that this is real but that it is not necessarily strong.

“The Philippines is just one of many nations scattered throughout the world, including US and Europe, where Al-Qaeda is trying to operate. If anything, we’re better prepared and taking more aggressive steps to stop terrorism in the Philippines than in many other parts of the world, because we know from first-hand experience the pain of terrorism. It becomes a cancer if you don’t cut it out,” she said.

The President reiterated that the government supports a United Nations’ resolution on Iraq as she stressed that this must be a fight of the community of nations against a nation that seemingly refuses to abide by UN resolutions asking it (Iraq) to destroy its weapons of mass destruction.

She also emphasized that she is not making apologies for aggressively seeking to root out terrorism in the Philippines and to putting considerable effort in seeking regional consensus on fighting terrorism.

Citing the three-nation anti-terrorist working arrangement among the Philippines, Indonesia and Malaysia and supported by Cambodia and Thailand, the President said the government is working to promote cohesion and cooperation at the regional level.

“Through this coalition which is now a five-way coalition, we work to share intelligence on terrorist activities. We will tighten border patrols and if necessary, partake in joint peacekeeping operations. We are looking forward to take more aggressive action through this international conference on terrorism and tourism recovery,” she said.

GMA confident on professionalism of our military

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today, during a joint Armed Forces of the Philippines-Philippine National Police (AFP-PNP) Command Conference in Malacañang, reiterated her confidence in the professionalism of the Filipino soldiers.

“I have faith in the men and women of the Armed Forces and the men and women of the Philippine National Police,” the President said brushing aside rumors of coup as figments of the self-interest of certain political grandstanders.

The President, however, believes that issues such as pay increases of soldiers, should really be explained within the military organization, and not just to the public.

The President pointed out that it is only in her administration that the full implementation of the 1999 law for policemen’s salary increases was undertaken. “Even if there is no budget for it, because this came in the middle of the budget year, we gave our initial 20 percent increase,” she said.

The President said that the law to increase the soldiers’ pay will be implemented in just 15 months beginning October 1 this year.

The President expressed the hope that people, particularly the soldiers, be informed that it is the Macapagal-Arroyo administration which made it possible for soldiers to get the same pay as the teachers.

“There has to be more reaching out to them (soldiers) about these facts, so that we can neutralize the rumor mill and the misperception that provides the environment for misplaced discontent,” the President said.

Secretary Emilia Boncodin of the Department of Budget and Management (DBM) said Friday that the pay hike for soldiers was approved by Congress last July but its effectivity was moved to October because only P1 billion is available for the purpose.

Secretary Boncodin doused speculations that the Philippine National Police is favored over that of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) in terms of salary adjustments.

She said it took more than three years before the 100% salary hike for PNP was fully implemented.

Boncodin pointed out that the law passed by Congress mandates a 20 percent increase for the pay hike of soldiers’ pay for 2002, 30 percent in 2003 and 50 percent in 2004.

She said it is only the Macapagal-Arroyo administration which is trying to correct the disparity in the pay scales between soldiers and policemen.

GMA to AFP commanders: coordinate closely with counterparts among claimant countries in Spratlys

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo directed her military commanders to take note of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations-China Declaration of Conduct in the South China Sea.

The ASEAN-China Declaration of the Regional Code of Conduct in the South China Sea was formally forged during the Nov. 4-5 Eighth ASEAN Leaders Meeting held in Phnom Penh, Cambodia.

Under the ASEAN-China Regional Code of Conduct, the principle of no occupation should be observed.

The President, giving her guidance during the joint AFP-PNP command conference in Malacañang, said the declaration calls for a closer coordination and communication among military commanders of the claimant countries in the South China Sea.

“I’d like you to take note of this and come up with a broader ‘keep in touch program’ with the Chinese defense and military establishments as well as other claimant countries,” the President said.

She said that the coordination must be on the ground level so that the declaration can be pushed forward and, possibly upgraded into a formal code of conduct in the future.

“But for now, this declaration is sufficient,” she said, emphasizing that the central provision of the declaration is that there will be no new occupations.

GMA to DND: operationalize Philippines-Malaysia-Indonesia-Cambodia-Thailand anti- terrorist agreement

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo directed the Defense Department headed by Secretary Angelo Reyes to operationalize the anti-terrorist exchange of intelligence agreement with Malaysia, Indonesia, Cambodia and, recently, with Thailand.

During today’s Armed Forces of the Philippines-Philippine National Police (AFP-PNP) Joint Command Conference in Malacañang, the President also discussed the importance of the accession of Thailand with the Philippines, Malaysia, Indonesia, and recently Cambodia to the agreement to fight terrorism in the region.

Thailand’s accession to the tripartite agreement to fight terrorism between the Philippines, Malaysia and Indonesia and, recently, Cambodia was forged during the 8th Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) Leaders Meeting held in Phnom Penh, Cambodia last November 4 to 5.

“We must take this framework and hammer it into a detailed blue print,” the President said.

The President also underscored the importance of the continued creation of unfriendly communities for terrorists.

“We have to empower people and set mechanisms for their participation in detection of terrorists,” she said.

She said that quick reaction mechanism to counter and respond to terrorist activities must be established.

The President welcomed Malaysian Prime Minister Mohamad Mahathir’s statement saying “we really should be having more joint border patrols.”

“I think that these joint border patrols are very useful,” the President said, citing for instance people who take a plane trip to Manado, Indonesia with the idea of sneaking into Mindanao. “If we have joint patrol, then that can be minimized,” she said.

The President recalled that she initiated the multilateral anti-terrorist coalition with Malaysia and Indonesia last year.

Thailand acceded to the coalition during the recent ASEAN summit, while Cambodia also acceded last July.

GMA names PA chief to replace outgoing AFP Chief of Staff Defensor

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today named Philippine Army Chief Lt. Gen. Dionisio Santiago as the new Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Presidential Spokesperson Rigoberto Tiglao said that Santiago will succeed Defensor when he retires on November 18.

“The extension period is finished,” Tiglao said of Defensor whose term has been automatically extended by two months and four days by the President.

“The President believes that given the criteria for the Chief of Staff, Gen. Santiago complies with all those criteria and she has full confidence in Gen. Santiago,” Tiglao said. He said that Santiago has proven his loyalty to the Constitution.

Tiglao clarified that as November 18 is fast approaching, the President decided to make the announcement now. “The decision was finalized yesterday,” she said.

“And so she thought that rather than leaving these things in a cloud of speculation, it would be appropriate for her to announce it,” Tiglao added.

Santiago, an alumnus of the Philippine Military Academy, class 1970, was an International Fellowship Program awardee in the US Army War College from 1993-94.

In fact, he received a Certificate of Honor from the International Fellows Hall of Fame at the US Army War College in Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania only last October 18, 2002.

Born in Navotas, Metro Manila on April 19, 1946, Santiago is married to Hermogena Santiago, with one daughter and two sons.

GMA leads nation in prayer for peace and unity

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the nation in prayer, imploring the Almighty Lord to bring peace and unity in the hearts and minds of every Filipino.

In ceremonies held in Mandaluyong on the occasion of National Day of Prayer and Fasting, the President noted that we are now living in a world torn by strife, poverty, terror and deceit where the essence of our humanity is dulled.

“And so, we pray, remind us of the reasons for our being and that we are all created in our image and likeness. Remind us of our strength as a handmaid of Your love, so You can selfishly share our character, talents and resources in the spirit of love, courage, power and justice that You bestowed upon us,” the President said.

The President beseeched God to bring strength to each and everyone so that “we may rise above the situation and realize self-reliance.”

“When we are weakened, we can find strength. When we are shackled by oppression, we can fight for freedom. When we find ourselves in the midst of struggle, we pursue with perseverance. When we find suffering, we offer compassion and action. When we are divided by different beliefs, we stand in tolerance and understanding. When we see greed and corruption, we stand up with conscientiousness and honesty.”

Dear God, open our eyes to the truth of Love, Peace, Hope and Joy amidst adversity. Help us to believe in Your goodness and look straight in the eyes of our brothers and sisters and see that same goodness in them. Help us to build our country not in the illusion of material wealth, aggression, influence, and coercion. Help us to see that You alone, God, are the firm foundation of our nation, and despite differences in color and creed, we can be one in praise, power and purpose,” the President said.

With the President at the Mandaluyong event were former President Fidel V. Ramos, Manila Archbishop Jaime Cardinal Sin, Mandaluyong Mayor Benhur Abalos, Rep. Neptali Gonzales III, Commission on Elections Chairman Benjamin Abalos and Presidential Assistant for Media and Ecclesiastical Affairs Conrado Limcaoco.

The President’s prayer formed part of the prayer for national renewal, penance and devotion to God. In the same occasion, religious leaders recited their own separate petitions.

Simultaneous prayer rites led by government officials in various parts of the country exhorted the people to a national prayer.

Among these officials are Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr. in Lamitan, Basilan, Chief Justice Hilario Davide in Cebu City, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. in Baguio City, Senate President Franklin Drilon in Iloilo City and Governor Parouk Hussin in Maguindanao.

The President later inspected the models for socialized housing units that would benefit at least 5,500 families.

In a meeting with the local officials after the inspection and launching of the housing project, the President had an informal meeting with some of the mayors and other local officials of Cavite on her ongoing One Town, One Product, One Million Peso project to help municipalities improve and develop livelihood programs through small and medium enterprises (SME).

GMA prods APEC youth leaders to enhance regional cooperation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the youth leaders of the Philippines and the other member-economies of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC), extolling them to further enhance cooperation among the countries.

The youth leaders paid the President a courtesy call in Malacañang this afternoon before proceeding to convene the Fourth APEC Future Leaders' Forum.

"I'm very honored to have you here today," the President told the participants.

The conference, organized by the University of Asia and the Pacific School of Management, has the theme "Challenges and Opportunities for Business, Government and Social Sector Partnerships in Building Civil Society."

The conference proper will be held starting today until November 13 at the UA&P campus in Ortigas, Pasig while fellowship activities will be held on November 14 and 15 at Subic Bay, Zambales.

Leading the participants were Dean Jose Rene Gayo of the UA&P School of Management; Hareesh Daswani, president of the Asia-Pacific Association for Student Exchange; (APASE) and Stephen Gan, former president of APASE.

During her trip to the APEC summit in Los Cabos, Mexico, the President was able to accomplish her mission to further the Philippines' interest in the forum.

She was likewise able to meet with America investors as well as Filipino communities in the United States.

Issuance of a new amnesty proclamation now in the offing, says Palace

Malacañang today said there has been a consensus to approve the proposal to issue a new presidential amnesty proclamation but certain procedural matters are still being threshed out.

In his regular press briefing this afternoon, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said the consensus on the need for a new amnesty proclamation was arrived at in today's meeting of the executive committee of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security chaired by Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo.

Bunye said that in an earlier meeting, the National Amnesty Commission (NAC) reported that there are some 2,600 applicants for amnesty but their applications could not be acted upon because of the absence of a new amnesty proclamation.

According to Bunye, of the total amnesty applicants, some 1,500 are active members of the New People's Army (NPA) while the rest belong to the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) and other rebel groups.

"The proposal is to extend the proclamation period by one year from effectivity of a new proclamation that will be signed by the President," Bunye said.

Bunye explained that the previous declaration by the government and other foreign countries that the NPA is a terrorist organization would not pose a problem.

He said the government would have to make a distinction between the group and the individual members who want to avail themselves of the proposed amnesty program.

“In other words, mere membership in this organization, which has been identified as a terrorist group by the EU and other countries, will not disqualify the individual members from applying,” Bunye said.

In an earlier interview, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita said that any presidential proclamation that would extend amnesty to members of the rebel groups would have to be submitted to both houses of Congress for concurrence.

Ermita explained that there are now a total of 2,603 applications for amnesty that the NAC could not act on because there is no applicable amnesty proclamation.

The last amnesty proclamation, issued during the term of former President Joseph Estrada, expired last August 2001, Ermita said.

Ermita said the Cabinet would deliberate on what kind of amnesty would be offered, whether it would be general, conditional or selective, as well as when it will take effect and for how long.

On the report that the CPP-NPA has scuttled the peace process with the government, Ermita said that the government side has not received any official communication in this regard from Luis Jalandoni, official negotiator of the National Democratic Front, the political arm of the CPP-NPA.

Ermita said that what has been reported could be just individual reactions to the inclusion of the CPP-NPA as well as CPP founder and former chairman, Jose Maria Sison, in the list of terrorist individuals and groups by the US and the European community.

GMA still has full trust, confidence in Camacho, says Palace

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has continued to have trust and confidence in Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Malacañang said today as it continued to brush aside reports that there is an impending Cabinet shakeup.

In his press briefing this afternoon, Bunye said that although the President respects the opinion expressed by some legislators, the position of Camacho is one of trust and confidence.

“And Mr. Camacho continues to enjoy the trust and confidence of the President,” Bunye said.

Some senators, including one coming from the administration party, have called for the resignation of Camacho for his alleged failure to curb the ballooning budget deficit.

When asked why the President herself has not personally issued a denial on the Camacho case, Bunye said “that’s the reason why we’re here. We’re authorized to issue statements for and on behalf of the President.”

Bunye also continued to categorically deny that there is going to be a major revamp in the Cabinet.

He said that former Senator Ernesto Herrera, who was mentioned as a replacement for Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, has specifically denied in a radio interview that he was offered the post of Sto. Tomas in the supposed revamp.

Bunye also reiterated his earlier statement that the President has given a general instruction to the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) to conduct a lifestyle check on government officials.

“If there are any allegations of a possible lifestyle out of the ordinary, then this should be investigated. And the President was very categorical when she stated that the PAGC can start with the First Gentleman,” Bunye said.

Bunye says he, Tiglao part of same team, work for same president

“I welcome working with (Presidential Spokesman) Secretary (Rigoberto) Tiglao.”

Thus said, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye when asked by members of the Malacañang Press Corps how he will delineate his working relationship with Tiglao, who is now back to his position as Presidential Spokesman, during a briefing this afternoon at Malacañang.

Bunye said he has a high regard for Tiglao and “we both feel that we are working for the same President.”

He said that as government officials, they are part of the same team working under the Macapagal-Arroyo administration.

Bunye emphasized that working with Tiglao, as far as coordination is concerned, “is not really a problem.”

“But what happened, as you know, Secretary Tiglao came in on October 23rd and on October 24th, I left for the United States. So, we hardly had time to really get to talk to one another during that period,” Bunye explained.

“But now that we’re back, hopefully for a longer period, then all these coordination matters could be threshed out,” he added.

Bunye stressed that he is now working full time as Press Secretary and as such he is mandated to act as information officer of the national leadership and the national government.

“That includes exercising oversight functions over the information functions of agencies of the government such as PIA (Philippine Information Agency), the government-owned and controlled television and radio stations and the National Printing Office,” he said.

GMA orders speedy probe of crash, consoles victims at hospitals

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Air Transportation Office to conduct a speedy investigation into the crash of a Laoag Air Fokker plane in Manila Bay.

The President issued the order immediately upon learning of the air tragedy this morning.

Before noon, after attending a scheduled engagement in Tanza, Cavite, to inaugurate a housing project for the poor and middle-income, the President asked to be driven directly to the San Juan de Dios Hospital in Pasay City to console the plane crash survivors.

Later in the afternoon, after attending another previously scheduled engagement in Malacañang, the President proceeded to the Ospital ng Maynila, where some of the other survivors and victims were taken by rescuers.

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said the President has also asked the Air Transport Office, the Philippine Coast Guard and Philippine Navy to intensify their search and rescue operations.

During her visit to the San Juan de Dios Hospital, the President consoled passenger Nemia Castillejos, flight attendant Adhika Espinosa and another passenger who survived the plane crash.

Later in the afternoon, she also visited three survivors at the intensive care unit of the Ospital ng Maynila and three other crash victims who suffered only minor injuries and were being treated at the infirmary of the same hospital.

GMA lauds PSG officer for successful defense of world title in powerlifting championship

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the victory of Lt. Col. Antonio Taguibao of the Presidential Security Group (PSG) for successfully defending his World Title in Powerlifting Championships for the third time last October 10 and 11 in Cordoba, Argentina.

The President described Taguibao as a world-class Filipino for bringing honor to the country. Taguibao serves as a veterinarian of the PSG's K-9 unit,

As reward, the President is bestowing Taguibao with P200,000 as prize and P100, 000 to the PSG as bonus. “Paratuluy-tuloy ang panalo mo (so that your victory will continue),” she said.

In this year's competition, Taguibao defended his World Masters title in the flyweight category (bodyweight from 114 pounds and below) to become World Champion for the third consecutive year.

Meanwhile, Taguibao's teammate Renato Dio won third place overall in the lightweight category (bodyweight from 165-181.5 lbs.). Dio improved his sixth place overall standing in last year's World Masters Powerlifting Championship in Saskatchewan, Canada.

Two years ago, Taguibao won three gold medals and one bronze in the 2000 World Masters Powerlifting Championships in Ustinad Labem in the Czech Republic in October 2000.

Taguibao won two gold medals in the Master A Category (40-49 years old) by lifting 165 kg in the squat event and 190 kg in the deadlift. He won a third gold with a total lift of 435 kg. He won the bronze with a lift of 80 kg in the bench press.

The Czech competition was the first international tournament participated in by the Powerlifting Association of the Philippines, which is supported by the Philippine Sports Commission and the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

A year later, Taguibao defended his world title when he brought honors to the PSG and to the country for winning the gold medal in all four events of the flyweight (114 lbs.) category in the 2001 World Masters Powerlifting Championship in Saskatchewan, Canada in October 2001.

Taguibao lifted 385 lbs in the squat, 187 lbs. in the bench press and 435 lbs. in the dead lift for a total of 1007 lbs.

GMA okays measures to strengthen disaster response mechanism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, during the regular Cabinet meeting today, approved several measures aimed at strengthening the country's disaster response mechanism.

The President directed the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC), chaired by Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, to draft a presidential issuance updating the NDCC's implementation of contingency plans that would incorporate the consequences of terrorist-initiated incidents.

Reyes cited the bombings that rocked the island resort of Bali, Indonesia, stressing that through the way it was carried out, one can deduce that it was carefully planned and timed to maximize the number of casualties.

To cope with an incident of similar magnitude, Secretary Reyes recommended the following measures that will improve the current system of handling such a disaster:

- To minimize confusion and chaos during emergency situations, local disaster coordinating councils (DCCs) should familiarize themselves, to include the local Philippine National Police (PNP) and Bureau of Fire Protection units under them, with operational procedures of the NDCC incident command system;
- Local DCCs should improve law enforcement within the incident area through the local police, auxiliaries and AFP units in the area;
- Local DCCs should strengthen their damage and needs assessment capability for post-disaster rapid assessment activities which shall be the basis for prioritizing needed resources;
- Local DCCs should mobilize emergency relief operations in accordance with the initial results of a rapid damage and needs assessment;
- Local chief executives should create an area coordination center in all local government units (LGUs). This will be a permanent facility that can also serve as emergency operations;
- Local DCCs should ensure the availability of temporary evacuation centers and transportation for hauling of evacuees, basic services for the evacuees and victims to include psycho-social care services, emergency medical service units for deployment during emergencies, and communication lines between the incident command posts and the area coordinating center (ACC); and

- Local DCCs should develop search and rescue capabilities and maintain linkages with volunteers response groups for possible deployment during emergencies.

In the event of a partial or complete incapacity of the local government, or the magnitude is beyond its capability to handle, the national command system takes over, Reyes said.

According to the NDCC chairman, the recommended measures are also aimed at enhancing the implementation of the government's pillars of policy and action.

Specifically, these measures are in conjunction with the policy that prescribed an internal focus against terrorism which calls for the support and active participation of all local government units down to the barangay level, non-government organizations and private citizens.

Cabinet officials asked to focus on priority projects not on 2004 polls, says Palace

Malacañang today denied reports that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has given the go-signal for her Cabinet secretaries interested in running for senator in the 2004 national elections to start campaigning now.

In an interview, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said on the contrary the President has called on her Cabinet secretaries to give full attention to their priority projects.

“Sa katunayan, gusto nang Pangulo na asikasuhin muna ng mga Cabinet officials yong mga priority projects na dapat ipatupad at huwag munang pag-isipan itong eleksiyon total malayo pa naman iyan (The truth is that the President wants the Cabinet officials to work on their priority projects and not to think of the elections which are still far),” Bunye said.

Bunye also continued to deny that there is going to be a revamp in the Cabinet.

“We have repeatedly denied that there will be a major revamp to be implemented November 30,” Bunye said.

But Bunye said that the President would make a major policy announcement around November 30. He said he did not have the details yet on this announcement.

Barangay info, assistance center project pilot-tested in 35 villages in Metro Manila

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. reported to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the Cabinet today that pilot-testing for the Gabay sa Mamamayan Aksyon (GMA) Center has been done successfully in 35 barangays in the National Capitol Region.

In his report to the Cabinet, Lina said the full implementation of the project, which seeks to establish information and action centers in every barangay nationwide, will start in January 2003 and be completed by June, 2003, with all barangays having a GMA Center.

The GMA Centers, ordered established through Executive Order 130 which was issued on September 30, 2002, ensure the people immediate access to information on government services such as livelihood and job opportunities, peace and order and public safety, health and sanitation, education and social welfare, agricultural support services, infrastructure development, environmental management and sports development.

The GMA Centers also ensure fast and efficient delivery of government services as the barangay residents and leaders themselves serve as frontliners in the provision of information and delivery of services.

The GMA Centers thus constitute a vital component of the President's campaign to win the war against poverty.

In his briefing for the Cabinet during its regular meeting this morning, Lina said the pre-implementation and piloting phase for the project is being conducted from September to December, 2002.

The GMA Centers are to be headed by the Punong Barangay or barangay head as executive officer. He will be assisted by the Barangay Kagawad or councilmen and the chairman of the Sangguniang Kabataan as head information action officers for the various government services.

The local government units in every town, city and province are expected to provide administrative, technical and financial assistance to the GMA Centers.

The national government would provide the GMA Centers with technical assistance through training, and ensure the supply of agency brochures and other reference materials responsive to the information needs of community residents.

The partner agencies for the various government services are:

- Department of Trade and Industry and the Department of Labor and Employment for livelihood and job opportunities;
- Department of National Defense and Department of the Interior and Local Government for peace and order and public safety;
- Department of Health for health and sanitation;
- Department of Education and Department of Social Welfare and Development for Education and Social Welfare;
- Department of Agriculture for agricultural and support services;
- Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council and the Department of Public Works and Highways for housing and infrastructure development;
- Department of Environment and Natural Resources for environmental management; and
- Philippine Sports Commission for sports development.

GMA certifies anti-terror bill as urgent

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has certified as urgent the anti-terror bill to show the government's firm resolve to win in the fight against violence and terrorism in the country.

In a statement, Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao said that the certification of the anti-terror bill as urgent was made in response to the growing menace of terrorism not just inside the country but also in the entire civilized community of nations.

"Terrorism respects neither race nor religion. It knows no boundaries. It follows no laws and respects no Constitution," Tiglao said.

Tiglao said that at the end of the day, what would count is how to protect our children, our homes and our communities.

He said that the President is confident that the legislators can craft a law which will not only address the problem of terrorism but also would take into consideration the rights of persons who we are trying to protect.

In another development, Tiglao said the amnesty proposal being worked out by the Cabinet is a sincere effort of the government to welcome back to the mainstream of society those who have been misled into joining "a useless and futile campaign" to bring about a new order in our country.

"Many of these misguided Filipinos are tired of fighting and want to return home to their families," Tiglao said.

He said that the administration has been seriously implementing reforms that address the roots of their grievances.

“The amnesty offer is the government’s way of giving them a chance to once again live normal lives,” Tiglao said.

GMA accepts Ang resignation with regrets

Presidential Spokesperson Rigoberto Tiglao today said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has accepted with regrets the resignation of Dante Ang as his Presidential Consultant on Public Relations.

“The President wishes him good luck in his business interests and she hopes that Mr. Ang’s business interests would redound to the benefit of the economy,” Tiglao said in a press briefing in Malacanang.

According to Tiglao, Ang resigned from his government post out of delicadeza. “And the President appreciates that kind of response from his consultant,” Tiglao said.

“And we have a press secretary who handles the President’s publicity needs,” he said.

Tiglao clarified that Ang would like to have time to cleanse his name.

“Ang gusto niya ituloy-tuloy na ito (He wants to continue this up to the end),” Tiglao said.

“That’s delicadeza and I think such kind of delicadeza is very praiseworthy,” Tiglao said.

GMA lauds Manila Bay crash rescuers, consoles relatives of victims

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the Philippine Coast Guard, the Philippine Navy, the Philippine National Police and civilian volunteers for their swift action to recover the survivors and remaining casualties in the plane crash in Manila Bay.

The President motored to the PCG headquarters this afternoon after her regular Cabinet meeting in Malacañang to personally observe the search and rescue operations for victims of the Laoag International Airlines crash and get a briefing from Rear Admiral Reuben Lista, Coast Guard chief, on the status of retrieval operations.

Lista informed the President that early this morning, three more bodies were recovered by Philippine Navy frogmen. Lista also said a total of 16 fatalities have been identified and two other victims remained nameless.

Lista also told the President that a total of 15 survivors were accounted for and one passenger, an Australian, was still missing.

Lista assured the President that the PCG, the PNP, Navy frogmen and civilian volunteers are still working to recover the missing Australian national.

After the briefing, the President met with Cherrie Ann Mata to console her and express her deepest condolences over the death of her husband, passenger Jefferson Mata.

President also gave Mrs. Mata, who has been married for only nine months, a Mass card and financial assistance.

She also handed over three Mass cards to Australian Ambassador Ruth Pierce and expressed her condolences over the death of Australian nationals.

From the PCG headquarters, the President motored to La Funeraria Oro in Sampaloc, Manila and visited the wake of another plane crash victim, Joaquin Padilla, an engineer of the Department of Public Works and Highway assigned in Batanes, and Normita Mata.

The President also expressed her condolences and gave Mass cards and financial assistance to Virginia Padilla, wife of engineer Padilla, and Norman Mata, son of Normita.

She also signed Republic Act No. 9176, or Free Patent Law, extending until December 31, 2020 the period for the filing of applications for administrative legalization and judicial confirmation of imperfect and incomplete titles to alienable and disposable lands of the public domain.

The President also signed Republic Act No. 9177, declaring the first day of Shawwal, the tenth month of the Islamic Calendar, as a national holiday for the observance of Eidul Fitr; and the tenth day of Zhul Hijja, the twelfth month of the Islamic Calendar, as a regional holiday in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) for the observance of Eidul Dha.

The President also signed Republic Act No. 9178, or Barangay Micro Business Enterprises (BMBEs) Act of 2002, in order to hasten the country's economic development enterprises.

GMA orders DOTC to conduct separate probe on Manila Bay plane crash

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza to conduct a separate investigation at the department level on the Laoag International Airline (LIA) Fokker 27 plane that crashed Monday into the Manila Bay.

“I have asked Larry Mendoza that the investigation must be elevated to him. I talked to him this morning. So, he is constituting a board at the level of the department to investigate the accident,” the Chief Executive said in her regular meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps.

The President said that while it is automatic for the Air Transportation Office (ATO) to investigate the accident, she had also asked Mendoza to “conduct an investigation at the department level.”

“People want to know what happened. Praise God our plane accidents are quite rare. So that when it happens people really want to know as soon as possible what happened and they want as much as possible an objective investigation,” she said.

The President pointed out that a C-130 of the Philippine Air Force will be used to transport the victims and their families to Batanes because now that the LIA planes are grounded, there are no flights to Batanes.

She stressed that even before the plane accident, she had released additional funds to the Department of Transportation and Communications (DOTC) so that it can conduct more trainings for the country’s air safety inspectors.

“That’s why it is a coincidence or may be providential. I am not saying that there is a failure of inspection here. But what I am saying is that we are continuously upgrading the capability of the regulatory framework for air safety especially at the time when we have a terrorist threat,” she said.

The President said that Budget and Management Secretary Emilia Boncodin has released an initial P35 million upon her instructions from the budget of DOTC.

GMA reveals plan to form Council of Economic Advisers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today told reporters not to expect Cabinet changes on November 30 but rather major policy directions for the coming year.

In her regular luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President gave a hint of what to expect: “I want to form a Council of Economic Advisers made up of professional economists who are not in the executive.”

The President said changes in the Cabinet have been a continuing thing. “It is not exactly the same Cabinet I started with,” the President said.

She said here is nothing unusual to expect on November 30 with regard to the Cabinet. “Right now, I have nobody in mind for announcing on November 30,” the President said.

In revealing her plans for the formation of a Council of Economic Advisers, the President stressed the importance of having people who are not in government provide a different outlook.

“When you are already immersed in the work, you are in the forest,” the President said. “So it is very important to have people look at it from outside the forest.”

GMA signs law extending period for filing applications for free patent to public lands

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today signed Republic Act No. 9176, known as the Free Patent Law, extending until December 31, 2020 the period for the filing of applications for administrative legalization and judicial confirmation of imperfect and incomplete titles to alienable and disposable public lands.

The law, signed in the presence of members of the Senate and the House of Representatives at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall this morning, gives impetus to the President's campaign for agricultural modernization and the empowerment of the people.

The President said this law will enable landowners to secure financing for business ventures that they may wish to go into.

Landowners and claimants to the alienable and public domain lands will now have enough time to register their land.

However, the law provides that the extension period shall apply only where the area applied for does not exceed twelve hectares.

The applications for the free patents may be filed in the DENR – Community Environment and Natural Resources Office in every region.

After the establishment of the American government in the Philippines, the United States Congress passed the Philippine Bill of July 1, 1902 for the methods of disposing of the public domain ceded to the United States by Spain.

It authorized the Philippine government to dispose of the public agricultural lands in the country by means of free patent, among others.

In accordance with said authority, the Philippine Commission passed Public Land Law No. 926 which was later superseded by Act No. 2874 which in turn has been superseded by the present Public Land Law known as Commonwealth Act No. 141.

A deadline to avail for legalization (free patent) was set by Republic Act No. 107 until December 31, 1957. This deadline was again re-set since there were many who were not able to apply. The last deadline was on December 31, 2000 and yet many still failed to apply.

GMA presents suspected Abu Sayyaf bomb squad leader to media

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the intelligence agents of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP) for their swift action leading to the arrest of a suspected leader of the Abu Sayyaf Group's (ASG) urban special operations and explosive team Tuesday afternoon in Pasay City.

The President presented to media the suspected ASG bombing suspect, identified as Abdulmukim Edris y Ong who uses the aliases Mukim Edris, Hamil Hamja Ajilul, Alex, Ryan at Villamor Air Base minutes before she flew to Batangas City this morning.

The arrested bombing suspect has a P1-million reward for his capture as per joint Department of National Defense-Department of the Interior and Local Government memorandum NR:01-2001 dated June 12, 2001.

In a press conference held at Kalayaan Lounge of Villamor Air Base, Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Benjamin Defensor informed the President that Edris was captured by the Philippine Air Force's 300th Air Intelligence and Security Group headed by Lt. Col. Francisco Cruz in coordination with the Intelligence Service of the AFP, PNP Intelligence Group and the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency (NICA).

President commended Cruz and the men for the successful operation. "Congratulations to you and to your men. Keep up the good work," the President said.

Defensor said the arrest of Edris was the result of six months of intelligence operations, dubbed as "Operation Gideon-Alfa," and the continuing vigilance and close coordination among the government intelligence community to uncover and neutralize terrorist plans and personalities.

Defensor reported to the President that Edris was arrested by virtue of 11 arrest orders for kidnapping and serious illegal detention, triple frustrated murder and murder issued by the Regional Trial Court of Isabela, Basilan.

The AFP chief said Edris was implicated as the mastermind in the bombing of Puriculture Food Court center last October 28, 2001 and the simultaneous bombings in Shoppers Plaza, Shop-O-Rama and Shoppers Center in Zamboanga City last October 17, 2002.

Edris and a certain Abbas were pinpointed as the ones who prepared the improvised explosive devices (IED) used in the bomb attacks.

Defensor added that Edris admitted that he trained for one month together with two others in car-bomb preparation and assembly of IED using cellular phones and digital clock as activating devices by two Yemeni nationals believed connected with the Al-Qaeda and the Jema'ah Islamiyah cell in Southeast Asia.

He said Edris was also believed to have participated in the Dos Palmas kidnapping in Palawan two years ago.

Batangas natural gas power plant lessens country's dependency on imported energy — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today flew to Batangas City this morning to witness the completion of the largest natural gas manpower generation facility in the Philippines.

Recounting her visit to the Ilijan Power Plant in Batangas before members of the League of Municipalities of the Philippines (LMP) who were having their 12th General Assembly at the Manila Hotel, the President said what she witnessed this morning was a milestone event for the country.

“Because now, with the opening of the Ilijan Natural Gas Power Plant, more than 52 percent of our total energy requirements is supplied by resources from right here in the Philippines,” the President.

Prior to her administration, the President said, the country was importing most of its energy resources.

This Ilijan power plant not only accelerates the development of the country's indigenous industry but also enables increased utilization of environment-friendly fuel, because natural gas is environment friendly, she said.

The Ilijan Plant, the President pointed out, is also the largest investment exposure of South Korea in the Philippines, with a total project cost of $1 billion.

“And the good news is that the investors told me they are still looking for other investment opportunities in the Philippines,” the President said.

Along that line, the President exhorted the municipal mayors to court these investors as well as other prospects to invest in their localities.

No cabinet revamp on Nov. 30, says Palace

Malacañang said today there will be no major re-organization of the Cabinet or major moves on November 30.

Press Secretary Ignacio “Toting” Bunye said during a press briefing in Malacañang that the matter of appointments or retention of Cabinet members is a prerogative which the President can exercise in the manner that she deems fit.

Bunye said reorganization is a presidential prerogative and it is only the President who can decide when and how, as the situation warrants.

“What is important is everything is being done in the national interest. So if somebody has to be affected, if somebody will be affected, that will be done and the proper announcement will be made,” Bunye said.

“Right now, we do not want to preempt the President,” Bunye stressed.

Yesterday during the luncheon meeting of the President with the Malacañang Press Corp, she said changes in the Cabinet have been a continuing thing. The President pointed out that the present composition of her Cabinet is not the same as when she assumed office.

The President said there is nothing unusual to expect on November 30 with regard to the Cabinet. “Right now, I have nobody in mind for announcing on November 30,” she said.

What the President revealed were plans to form a Council of Economic Advisers made up of professional economists who are not in the executive.

Malacañang has no business in Senate Presidency row — Bunye

Malacañang today reiterated that the executive branch has no business in the internal affair of the Senate especially with regards to the “gentleman’s agreement” between Senate President Franklin Drilon and Senator Renato Cayetano on term-sharing for the Senate presidency.

Press Secretary Ignacio “Toting” Bunye said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will not meddle in the issue of the Senate presidency because she consider the matter as an “internal affair” which only the senators can resolve.

“All I know is that our President is not in a business to meddle in the Senate presidency which she considers as an internal affair of the Senate,” Bunye said in his regular press briefing in Malacañang this afternoon.

Based on reports, Drilon said that he would honor his commitments to yield the post to Cayetano after 18 months.

Reports also said both Drilon and Cayetano had a “gentleman’s agreement” to share the position for a three-year term. Drilon’s three-year term ends in December.

GMA cites KEPCO for providing electricity to Batangas barangays, investing in RP

ILIJAN, BATANGAS CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today awarded a presidential citation to the Korean Electric Corporation for investing in the development of the Philippine electric industry and generating jobs for Filipinos.

The President, who flew here to mark the completion ceremonies of the 1200-Megawatt Ilijan Natural Gas-Combined Cycle Power Plant, awarded the citation to Kepco president and chief executive officer Kang Dong Suk.

In brief remarks, the President noted Kepco’s significant contribution to government efforts to provide electricity in the barangays.

She revealed that in Kang’s letter to her, the Kepco chief expressed his company’s willingness to help in the electrification of 200 barangays.

“This is over and above the $1 billion that they have put up in this plant, the biggest Korean investment in the Philippines today,” the President said.

Kepco will be working closely with its partner, Kepco Iligan Corp. (Keilco), in providing electricity to the barangays.

Aside from awarding the citation, the President also led the ceremonial turn-on of the Kepco power plant.

The new plant, which lies on a picturesque 25-hectare area by the sea, was put up under a build-operate-transfer scheme, with Kepco as sponsor and National Power Corp. as off-taker.

Its operation actually started in June 2002 and its target availability is expected to last for 20 years.

The 1200-MW plant has two blocks of 600-MW each, with two gas turbines running on 200 MW and one steam turbine on 200 MW.

The plants boasts of having the lowest level of sulphur.

It is considered a pillar of the $5-billion natural gas industry in the country.

To keep the environment clean, Kepco said it strictly monitoring Stack Emission and Ambient Air quality as well as the effect, if there is any, on the water and coral reefs.

The President was accompanied during her visit here by Energy Secretary Vicente Perez, Jr., Rep. Alipio Badelles, chairman of the House Committee on Energy, and Roland Quilala, NPC president and chief executive officer.

Among those who welcomed the President were Batangas Gov. Hermilando Mandanas, Batangas City Mayor Eduardo Dimacula, Batangas Rep. Francisco Perez (2nd District), Korean Ambassador Son Sang Ha, Keilco chairman Chung Kyung Nam, Keilco president and CEO Lee Gil Gu, Mitsubishi Corp. executive vice president Naoshia Tonomura, Mirant Managing Director for Asean Region Frederick Kuester, Southern Luzon Commander Major Gen. Roy Kyamko and Philippine National Police Region IV-A Director Chief Supt. Enrique Galang.

GMA prods town Mayors to play active role in anti-terrorism, anti-poverty programs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo urged municipal mayors to take a more active role in the Department of the Interior and Local Government's (DILG) police and community-based anti-terrorism plan.

The President, speaking before members of the League of the Municipalities of the Philippines (LMP) during their 12th General Assembly at the Manila Hotel today, specifically underscored the importance of implementing the four-point plan in the local government's participation in the war against criminality and terrorism. Following is the four-point plan:

- For the governors, city and municipal mayors to immediately convene their peace and order councils or committees;
- These councils and committees must adopt or implement their public safety plans, including a provision for reporting and feedback mechanism, to ensure regular monitoring of unusual and suspicious movements of people in their localities;
- Barangay assemblies all over the country, under the guidance of the mayors, must convene and educate their constituents on how to deal and cope with terrorist threats in their barangays; and
- All public safety officers must undergo mobilization and training through distance education on intelligent gathering and on the reporting system. This means the conduct of daily "rondas" or neighborhood patrols and searches in accordance with law within their areas of jurisdiction.

The President also told the mayors to take note of the Cabinet approval the other day of the draft of a presidential issuance updating the National Disaster Coordinating Council's (NDCC) contingency plans and the management of the consequences of terrorist incidents. This includes the participation of local government officials, especially the mayors, the President said.

She explained that when an incident actually occurs, it is the mayors who will be in charge of such matters as how to rescue and how to make sure that the place is safe.

The President likewise commended the LMP's workshop for confronting head-on the issues concerning the use of a municipal identification system. "Maraming salamat sa inyo doon," she said.

The President likewise lauded the town mayors for including in their agenda the issue of the selective arming of barangay tanods or neighborhood police in high-risk areas.

The condition for this, the President said, is "they must be accredited as CAFGUs (Citizens Armed Forces Geographical Unit) with commensurate training," the President said.

"And I am also glad that because the fight against terrorism must go hand and hand with the fight against poverty, you are supporting the Kapit Bisig Laban sa Kahirapan or Kalahi program, that was put together as a common strategy for poverty reduction," the President.

The President said that the war against poverty and the war against terrorism are two sides of one coin.

Municipal Mayors play key role in a strong republic, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today highlighted the important role of the municipal mayors in building a strong republic saying its credibility and moving force largely rest upon their shoulders.

Speaking at the 12th General Assembly of the League of Municipalities of the Philippines (LMP) at the Manila Hotel, the President cited to the municipal mayors the two essential attributes of a strong Philippine Republic which her administration is aiming to achieve.

First, the Republic must be autonomous of dominant classes and sectors so that it represents the people's interest, and not only the interest of the powerful minority groups," the President said.

Second, the Republic must have the capacity, represented through strong institutions and a strong bureaucracy, to implement its policy and deliver its services, she added.

Expounding on these two attributes, the President said the first and foremost strong institution of a strong Philippine Republic is an effective government, from the national to the local governments, with a professional and dedicated civil service.

"Such a combination for an effective government delivers basic services for every one, the most important of which is an environment of peace and order, and the rule of law and the necessary infrastructure," the President pointed out.

In addition, the President said that an effective Republic must help its poorest and weakest citizens, empower them and dismantle the structures that make them poor and weak.

The President called for the strengthening of the country's justice system to become an efficient institution for all, not just for the powerful, saying that an effective government rests on the rule of law.

This is what her administration is seeking to achieve, she said, "an effective government that performs."

"A strong republic makes sure that essential services, especially peace and order, and the necessary infrastructures reach the people, whether these services are provided for by government or by the private sector," the President said.

The 1,496 members of the League of Municipalities of the Philippines, headed by its president, Mayor Ramon Guico, Jr., presented a resolution to the President, which calls for the adoption of the national identification system, arming of the barangay tanods and the implementation of nationally-funded projects to fight criminality and terrorism and win the war against poverty within the decade.

The mayors also tackled in their 12th General Assembly other programs such as environmental governance, agrarian reform, agricultural modernization and local governance performance.

Mayor Guico, who is also president of the Pangasinan Mayors League, said there is a popular clamor among local leaders to support the national ID system but mayors are pushing for its early implementation on the local level while Congress has yet to pass a law for its national implementation.

The general assembly of municipal mayors at the Manila Hotel was ushered in by the opening of government booths that doubled as express lane for national government agencies to provide quick responses to concerns of municipal mayors attending the conference, from the followup of projects being implemented in municipalities to release of funds intended for the local government units.

Among the Cabinet officials who attended the occasion were Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Agrarian Reform Hernani Braganza and National Anti-Poverty Commission Lead Convenor Teresita Deles.

Bush assures GMA of continued U.S. support in war against terrorism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night received the assurance of United States President George W. Bush of continued US support for the Philippine government's efforts to combat terrorism.

The US President pledged US assistance during a telephone call to Manila to discuss with the Philippine leader the current situation in the war on terrorism.

Mr. Bush "expressed appreciation for President Arroyo's leadership in combating terrorism in the Philippines, and pledged continued US support for her government's effort," White House Deputy Press Secretary Scott McClellan told White House reporters during his daily briefing in Washington.

The Philippine President has been at the forefront of regional efforts to combat terrorism in the Southeast Asian region.

She was among the first world leaders to support the US President's call for a global coalition to fight international terrorism.

The White House spokesman said "we are making tremendous progress" in the global war against terrorism.

There is a global coalition of 90 countries in the war against terrorism working to find, to hunt down and bring terrorists to justice, wherever they are, McClellan said.

Some 167 countries are also working closely together to block terrorist assets, cutting the flow of terrorist money through a number of funding pipelines.

The White House also said some 60,000 US troops are deployed around the world, including the Philippines.

GMA welcomes 150 NPA rebel returnees

BARAS, Rizal – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today welcomed back to the fold of the law some 150 former members and sympathizers of the New People's Army (NPA) from Rizal province who were presented to her at the Multi-Purpose Gym of Barangay Pinugay here.

"Welcome back, my countrymen and countrywomen. Hindi kayo magsisi na kayo ay nagbalik-loob (You will not regret your coming back to the fold of the law)," the President said.

The rebel returnees were mostly members of the urban poor communities in 17 barangays in six towns of Rizal, namely, Rodriguez, Tanay, Baras, Pililia, Morong and Antipolo.

The President said the national government will be giving to the surrenderees and others who are planning to come down from the mountains core shelters, or munting pabahay located at Barangay Pinugay here. The land was donated by the provincial government of Rizal.

“So isasama natin sa Kalahi program ang munting pabahay for the rebel returnees (We will include in the Kalahi program the construction of small houses for the rebel returnees), the President said, citing as a model the government’s housing program in Baseco in Port Area, Manila.

The core shelters, the President said, were meant to be temporary homes for the residents in Baseco until the government could find another place for them.

The President, however, said the residents were satisfied with the beautiful but small “bahay-kubos” or huts which were bigger and better than their old dwellings.

“So, okay na ito, bahala na kaming magpalaki pag umunlad ang aming kabuhayan (This is all right. We will rebuild and make extensions as our income grows),” the President quoted the residents of Baseco as saying.

Aside from the housing program, each rebel returnee received cash assistance of P2,500 from the Office of the Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process, a check for P2,000 from the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office, one-year free medical assistance from PhilHealth Insurance Corporation and food packages from the Department of Social Welfare and Development.

The former NPA rebels surrendered to the officers and men of the 2nd Infantry Division under the command of Maj. Gen. Efren Abu.

According to the surrenderees, life is hard in the mountains. There is no source of income, and even if they plant vegetables, there is no market since the marketplace is too far away.

General Abu said these rebels came to recognize that the government was sincere in helping those who wish to go back to the folds of the law and lead normal, productive lives.

The former NPAs took their oath of allegiance to the Philippine Constitution before the President.

Upon her arrival in the area, the President inspected the high-powered weapons seized and captured from the rebels which were displayed in an area near the stage.

GMA lauds joint rehab project of PNR-Sino firms

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today thanked the Philippine National Railways (PNR) and two major companies in China for their effort to finance the rehabilitation of Mainline South railways from Calamba, Laguna to Albay and the extension of Mainline South to Matnog, Sorsogon.

The President made the statement after she witnessed the signing of Memorandum of Understanding held at Malacañang’s Ceremonial Hall this afternoon between the PNR and China National Technical Import-Export Corporation (CNTIC) and the China National Machinery Import & Export Corporation (CMC).

This project will constitutes a key component of the President’s vision of a national railway system under an integrated Philippine National Rail Authority (PNRA).

The MOU was signed in the presence of the President together with House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Transportation Secretary Leandro Mendoza and Chinese Ambassador Wang Chungui.

PNR Chairperson Josefa Aquino and Jose Ma. I. Sarasola, general manager of PNR, were the signatories on behalf of PNR while Jiang Xinsheng, president of CNTIC, and Li Bin, president of CMC, signed for the Chinese companies.

Also present during the signing ceremony were Zhang Ru En, vice president of China General Technology (Group) Holding, Ltd., parent company of CNTIC and CMC; and Yu Shizong, Economic and Commercial Counsellor of China.

The Chinese group is committed to complete the project study within 120 days and subsequently develop a firm, fast-track implementation of the schedule with 100% financing under the most favorable obtainable terms available from the People's Republic of China.

The completion of Mainline South will kick-start the economic development of the entire Southern Luzon region.

With regards to the creation of a rail extension to Matnog, Sorsogon, the government expects an economic magnet which will spur trade between Southern Luzon and the Visayas region.

Statement of Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao

Changes in Cabinet posts are undertaken through presidential actions, not through media speculations, and will be undertaken at any time there is a need to do so.

So-called "courtesy resignations" are neither necessary nor relevant for the President's decision to make Cabinet changes. She will make changes the moment there is a need to do so, with or without courtesy resignations.

All Cabinet members have individually expressed to the President that they have the fullest confidence in her judgment to make Cabinet changes. They all have emphasized that they serve at the pleasure of the President, and that they will leave government the minute the President thinks they are or can no longer be effective in their posts.

It is deplorable that one newspaper has been persistent for several days now in claiming – always quoting unnamed sources — a plan for a Cabinet "revamp". There is simply no such plan.

***

The Meralco controversy which started way back in 1994 involving whether or not the company overcharged customers since that year has been decided upon by the Third Division of the Supreme Court, appealable to the Court en banc.

The Executive branch of the government is mandated by the Constitution to implement all the decisions of the judicial branch of government.

We take exception to the bleak economic scenario Meralco's lawyers have foisted before the Supreme Court and the media, if their client loses its case. Meralco's lawyers should not spread in the media unfounded fears and claims intended to influence the justices' decision.

With the ongoing deregulation of the power sector, Meralco is one of the country's many electricity distribution companies. There is no doubt at all that our financial system and our national electricity infrastructure will weather the problems of one corporation.

GMA urges foreign business leaders to continue to share vision of strong republic

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged foreign business leaders to continue to share her vision of building a strong Republic.

In her speech before a luncheon meeting of the joint foreign chambers of commerce at the Shangri-La Hotel in Makati City, the President said her administration has done things nobody was able to do for many years.

She said that the government has worked hard to deliver a stable economy.

“In moving towards a strong Republic, when you are starting from what many have considered for a long time as a soft state, you often have to wait a while before you get the dividend of economic reform,” she said.

“Let me remind you that I have been in office 21 months. It takes three years to construct your factory from the time you conceptualized it. When I say I am moving towards a strong Republic, don’t expect that it should be there the next day,” she said.

“Before you get there, you go through all of these economic and political difficulties. I am willing to go through them but I ask you, the members of the international business community, let us share this vision together,” the President added.

In stressing the need for cooperation and unity, the President enumerated eight points that she intends to tackle in the six months. These are:

- promote the growth of the small and medium enterprises, which are the most effective and efficient leaders of capital.
- jumpstart housing, a sector considered to effect the biggest multiplier.
- reduce transport costs from Mindanao to Luzon through a P30 billion roll on-roll off port and ferry system to be funded by the Development Bank of the Philippines.
- infrastructure to decongest Metro Manila, with focus on the North Rail between Metro Manila and Clark and the continuation of the South Toll Road all the way to Batangas Port.
- mobilize the contribution of the Presidential Commission on Good Government to the fiscal resources of the government, particularly the $600-million Marcos deposits with the Philippine National Bank and liquefy the coconut levy’s remaining 27 percent share of San Miguel Corp.
- make Makati a specific urban tourist destination with its compact, easy to secure location, world-class mall and entertainment facilities and internationally considered cheap shopping
- stimulate private investment in agriculture by pursuing legislation to enable banks to accept agricultural land as collateral
- Begin the complete staff work to make the reclamation area in Roxas Boulevard a tourism complex to be called the Bagong Nayong Pilipino Tourism Estate.

The President noted that her administration is an active reformist government. “I would be the last person to pretend that we’re always 100 percent right but we have a strong record to look to. We offer it at a time of intense international uncertainty and concern. We offer a capacity as well, a record of stability, of predictability and of knowing what we believe in a what we stand for,” she said.

In the light of negative travel advisories on the Philippines, the President urged the foreign business leaders to help bring to their countries and governments a true picture of the country.

GMA assures foreign investors of continued good governance

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured that she is working diligently to ensure that the people get the professional and clean government that they deserve.

The President made the assurance during her remarks before a luncheon meeting of the joint foreign chambers of commerce at Shangri-La Hotel in Makati City.

The President said she focuses on the need to execute the policy of fighting corruption, delivering the essential services and maintaining peace and order.

“Fighting corruption is an essential part of the broader policy that we know as good governance. I believe that the primordial requirement in building a strong Republic is good governance and fighting corruption starts with setting the example at the top,” she said.

The President noted that even her husband, First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel “Mike” Arroyo, is not above the law though she consider intrigues against him as simply an occupational hazard.

She said that although evidence showed the accusations were false and politically-motivated, she still encouraged her husband to face the Senate investigation and let the investigations go wherever evidence takes them.

“Because my husband has humbled himself by submitting to Senate investigations, I have enhanced my moral authority to investigate any serious allegations and hold anyone accountable if corruption is found to take place,” she said.

On corruption within the courts, the President said that with the help of the Supreme Court, some of the erring state prosecutors and bureau directors will get their walking papers very shortly.

Meanwhile, the President announced the creation of a one-stop shop that would ensure an efficient, clear and transparent service to foreign investors on key areas like taxation, customs, immigration and labor relations.

The President also emphasized the importance of the sanctity of contracts, a concern of the foreign business leaders.

“We respect the sanctity of contract even as we are aggressive in correcting what we see is illegal or grossly onerous,” she said.

Presidential broadcast message

Magandang araw po sa inyong lahat.

Sa ating hangaring maitayo ang isang malakas at matatag na Republika, dapat nating palakasin at patatagin ang partnership ng iba't-ibang sektor ng ating lipunan. Kabilang na rito ang ugnayan ng national government at local government units, ng Ehekutibo, Lehislatura, ng kapulisan at komunidad.

Sa aking pagdalo sa General Assembly ng League of Municipalities of the Philippines noong Huwebes, binigyang-diin ko ang mahalagang papel na ginagampanan ng ating mga mayors para maging mapayapa at mabilis na umunlad ang ating bansa. Ang ating Republika ay lubos na umaasa sa kanilang mga pagsisikap dahil sila ang direktang nakikipag-ugnayan sa mga mamamayan. Ang kredibilidad ng gobyerno at pananaw ng mga tao sa matapat na pamamahala ay naka-atang higit sa lahat sa kanilang mga balikat.

Kaya, natutuwa ako na sa ginanap nilang pagpupulong, sama-sama nilang binalangkas ang maaari nilang gawin upang ipatupad ang mga programang tutugon sa kahirapan, lilikha ng mga gawaing pang-kaunlaran at magpapasigla ng ating ekonomiya. Pinagtibay nila ang mga plano para mapanatili ang kapayapaan at itaguyod ang sapat na pagkain, trabaho, pabahay at edukasyon sa kanilang mga nasasakupan. Ang mga ito ay angkop na pagkilos bilang suporta sa ating mga pambansang adhikain.

Isang halimbawa nito ang kanilang panukalang magpatupad ng Municipal Identification System. Naglaan na rin sila ng salapi para maka-likha ng intelligence network na susubaybay sa mga kahina-hinalang kaganapan at kilos ng mga tao sa kanilang lugar. Ako ay nagagalak na kusang-loob nilang pinag-iibayo ang ating laban kontra sa krimen at terorismo on the ground in our communities.

Natutuwa rin ako sa magandang samahan ng Executive at Legislative branches ng ating pamahalaan. Ang pinakahuling patunay nito ay ang limang bagong batas na aking nilagdaan. Isa rito ay tahasang makakatulong sa pagpapalago ng ekonomiya sa kanayunan, ang Batas Republika Bilang 9178, o Magna Carta for Barangay Business Enterprises.

Pasisiglahin nito ang pagtatayo ng maliliit na negosyo sa mga barangay, hindi sila kailangang magbayad ng income tax. Magandang dagdag ito sa ating programang "Isang Bayan, Isang Produkto, Isang Milyong Piso" na naglalayong palawakin ang small and medium-scale enterprises sa ating mga lungsod at bayan.

Ang partisipasyon naman ng komunidad sa ating anti-terrorism plan ay napakahalaga para mas maging epektibo ang ating pagpapatupad ng batas.

Marami sa mga tagumpay ng police operations nitong mga huling buwan ay bunga ng bugso ng impormasyong binigay ng mga mamamayan tungkol sa kasamaang nagaganap sa kanilang paligid — mula sa pagkapatay sa mga kidnapper na tulad ni Faisal Marohombsar at Rolando Patinio hanggang sa pagkahuli sa mga suspek sa pagbomba sa Kidapawan at Zamboanga.

Sa ating 10-Point Police-Community Anti-Terrorism Plan, ang mga mamamayan ay hinihikayat na maging alerto at kaagad i-report sa mga awtoridad ang mga kahina-hinalang tao, bagahe o iba pang bagay na kanilang mapapansin. Ang mga may-ari ng mga establisyimento naman ay hinihimok na pahusayin pa ang kanilang seguridad at siyasating mabuti ang mga pumapasok at kanilang dala-dalahan sa mga gusali. Ang mga sectoral organization naman, tulad ng NGO's, mga grupo ng simbahan, at mga asosasyong sibiko, ay inaasahang tutulong para ipabatid sa mga mamamayan kung papano nila haaharapin ang anumang banta ng krimen o terorismo.

Malaki rin ang maitutulong ng mga local government units, mga barangay, at lalung-lalo na ang mga mamamayan sa ating kampanya laban sa graft and corruption.

Maaari ninyong i-monitor ang pagpapatupad ng mga proyekto ng gobyerno, tulad ng imprastruktura, at siguraduhin na walang iregularidad o anomalyang nagaganap dito. Maaari rin ninyong isumbong ang mga nagtrabaho sa pamahalaan na nagpapayaman sa kanilang tungkulin at namumuhay ng marangya, kagaya nang ipinag-utos kong lifestyle check sa matataas na opisyal ng aking administrasyon. Tiyakin lamang ninyo na mayroon kayong matibay na ebidensiya para suportahan ang inyong alegasyon nang sa ganoon ay hindi ito maging maliwanag na paninira lamang.

Ang ganitong mga pagka-kasama at pakikipag-ugnayan ang kinakailangan ng ating matatag na Republikang Pilipinas. Ito ay isang Republika na may mga epektibong institusyon para protektahan ang mahihina. Ang isang matatag na Republika ay may mapagkaka-tiwalaang pagpapatupad ng mga batas para tiyakin ang katarungan para sa lahat. Ang isang matatag na Republika ay may masiglang kultura na pananagutan ng bawa't isa upang ang bawa't mamamayan ay maging mahalagang bahagi ng ating pagiging isang bansa.

Ganyan ang pangarap nating malakas at matatag na Republikang Pilipinas. Kaya, palakasin at patatagin natin ang ating samahan upang makamit natin ang pangarap na iyan.

Maraming salamat po.

GMA congratulates Bayer's five young environmental envoys

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today congratulated the top five Bayer Young Environmental Envoys, who, based on the presentation and defense of their respective action plans, were proclaimed winners during awards night held at the Heritage Hotel on September 23, 2002.

The President, during a courtesy call in Malacañang, wished these five young envoys good luck when they embark on an educational trip to Germany from November 17 to 23. They were accompanied to Malacañang by Senator Loren Legarda-Leviste.

Together with their counterparts from Thailand, Singapore and India, these envoys will have the opportunity to observe environmental best practices in a highly developed country like Germany.

The Bayer Young Environmental Envoy Program originated in Thailand in 1995 under the auspices of the United Nations Environmental Program (UNEP) Regional Office for Asia and the Pacific and a group of companies operating in Thailand.

Bayer Thai has always been a major supporter of the program that seeks to educate the youth in the global efforts to save and protect the environment.

Owing to its success, the project expanded to an international level. In 2001, Bayer Philippines decided to adopt the same project in the country.

Bayer Philippines and Luntiang Pilipinas program established a joint project in cooperation with the Commission on Higher Education (CHED) to look for qualified applicants for environmental envoys.

Applicants were required to submit their resumes and write an essay on "My personal contribution to the environment and how it has made a difference" in no more than 500 words.

During their call on the Palace, the five envoys presented to the President their action plans, while at the same time sought her endorsement that these be implemented in their respective localities with the help of their governors.

Bonar Laureto from the Central Mindanao University in Musuan, Bukidnon presented his action plan on non-industrial solid waste segregation program.

Shenna Rhea Maranguit of the University of the Immaculate Conception in Davao City expounded on her Sagip watershed action plan, while Jennifer Orbeso of the Universidad de Santa Isabel in Naga City, explained her “three year development plan for Universidad de Santa Isabel Ecological Park.

Ivan Pumaren of the West Visayas State University in La Paz, Iloilo presented his composting project and Stephanie Sunshine Sy of the De La Salle University in Manila gave an action plan for her “pay it green forward” project.

Guardians express full support for GMA

LOS BAÑOS, Laguna — The Guardians Philippines Anti-Crime Organization Incorporated (GPI) today expressed full support for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and her administration during the First National Congress of the GPI held at the Philippine Council of Agriculture, Forestry and Natural Resources Research and Development (PCARRD) complex here.

The GPI, through its national president Bernard Corela, presented a signed manifesto of support to the President.

The manifesto declared the group’s unequivocal support for the President’s programs and projects, including those that address poverty and efforts to lift the Filipino nation and its people.

“Maraming salamat sa inyong suporta (Thank you for your support),” the President said in her speech.

The President said she believes in the sincerity of the Guardians efforts to bring peace and prosperity to the nation.

“The various activities you have undertaken this year indicate your mission of relevance and involvement in nation-building,” she said.

The President noted that the Guardians have come a long way since its inception years ago.

She further noted that times have changed so much in such a short time as information technology has rapidly succeeded in changing lifestyle.

“Kailangan natin ng bagong paraan ng pagsugpo sa krimen at lalong kailangan natin ng bagong pananaw para sa lahat ng mga nagnanais sumali sa laban sa kriminalidad. Kaya pinupuri ko kayo sa inyong pagkukusang makipagtulungan upang magapi ang terorismo at ibang uri ng krimen sa bansa (We need new ways of combating crimes and, more so, new ideas for those who wish to join the fight against criminality. I praise you all for your voluntary support to eradicate terrorism and other forms of criminality),” she said.

She enjoined the leaders of the group to inspire their members to take on the challenges of responsible citizenship.

“I know and I hope and I’m confident that you will inspire the rest of your colleagues who are all over the country and even all over the world along the road of responsible citizenship,” the President said.

The President also noted the Guardians advocacy of democracy, unity, peace, stability and progress. “These are the very same aspirations of a strong Philippine Republic. Democracy, through strong institution of representation. Peace, through strong institutions of conflict resolution and stability, through strong institutions of justice,” she said.

Meanwhile, the President said she is designating retired Police Gen. Nestorio Gualberto (former Chief of the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group), to draw proposals and necessary papers for the conduct of orientation seminars and trainings for Guardian members.

The seminar, dealing with aspects of counterterrorism, is to be handled by the PNP.

“Bagamat tapos na ang career niya bilang police, inaasahan ko pa rin na hindi pa tapos ang kanyang papel sa aking administrasyon. Meron pa siyang second career na inaasahan kong makatulong sa aking pagbuo ng matatag na Republika ng Pilipinas,” ( Although his career as a policeman is over, I still hope he still has a role to play in my administration. He still has a new career, and that is, help me build a strong Republic), the President said.

The President praised Gualberto for successfully apprehending the syndicates behind fake videos and raiding illegal video factories just before he retired.

“I said to him, what a fitting curtain call for your police career,” she said.

The President recalled that her office made available a P1 Million loan for the group’s livelihood programs.

“Our strong Republic requires the efforts of all citizens to fortify the economy and win the war against terrorism and poverty. Nasa pagkakaisa at pagtutulungan ang katatagan ng republika kaya salamat na narito kayo. Palagay ko gusto kong asahan na ang ibig sabihin nito ay sinasamahan ninyo ako parati. Magtayo tayo ng malakas at matatag na Republika ng Pilipias,” (The strength of a Republic is in our unity and your support, and for this, I thank you. It’s my hope that your support means you are with me. Be with me always. Let us build a strong and firm Republic), she said.

The President was welcomed at the occasion by Laguna Governor Teresita Lazaro, Los Banos Mayor Cesar Perez, Laguna Rep. Joaquin Chipeco (2nd district), Calamba City Mayor Severino Lara, guardians Grand Master Founder Liborio Jangao, GPI International Chairman Nestorio Gualberto, GPI National Adviser Major Gen. Alberto Braganza, Southern Luzon Commander Major Gen. Roy Kyamko and Philippine National Police Region 4-A Director Enrique Galang.

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. also attended the event.

GMA to youth: Pray in time of challenges and for discernment

LOS BAÑOS, Laguna — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday advised the youth to make prayerful discernment and look for the confluence of events in times of challenges and major decisions in their lives.

The President, who made an unscheduled visit to the First Youth for Christ Metro Manila Conference here Saturday (Nov. 16) in the Philippine High School for the Arts, said she based many of her career decisions on these two things.

She said it is easy to discern what is wrong and right, sin or not sin, but it is sometimes difficult to discern what God wants us to do.

“Sa aking buong karera, mula nang ako ay naguumpisa pa lamang, kinilala ko ang discernment, papano maka-discern (In my whole career, even from the start I have recognized discernment, how I can discern). What does God want to do for you,” the President said.

The President told the youth to work to have a prayerful common sense. “Magdasal para mabigyan ng linaw ng Panginoon. Gamitin ang utak para mag-analyze kung ano ang dapat gawin at hintayin sa mga kilos ng panahon kung iko-confirm ng Lord o hindi niya iko-confirm yung inaakala nating yun ang gusto niyang gawin (Pray so the Lord may grant you enlightenment. Use your mind in analyzing what should be done and let the confluence of events confirm the Lord's will),” the President said.

She said that in other words, after praying and prayerful analyzing, one must watch out for the confluence of events.

The Chief Executive noted that doing so helped her accept events in life.

She noted that her unscheduled visit to the YFC event is an example of a confluence of events, saying she had a schedule with the Guardians Philippines Inc. at a nearby venue, which had been arranged early on.

“But I found out that you are here, and so I feel that God wants me to be with you,” she said.

The President related that during the impeachment crisis, her popularity rating plunged from being the highest to the least popular public official.

“Sabi ko, Lord, bakit nagkaganito? Yun pala, magiging Pangulo ako dahil sa EDSA Dos. Parang ang mensahe sa akin ng Diyos,” Gloria hindi ka naging Presidente dahil popular ka at magaling ka, naging Presidente ka nung ikaw ay pinakamababa sa yung popularity dahil ako ang nagluklok sa iyo bilang Pangulo’ (I said, Lord, why is this happening? What I didn't know is I will become President because of EDSA Dos. Looking back, it seems that the message of the Lord was: Gloria, you didn't become President because you're popular or good. You became President even when your popularity was at its lowest because I willed it),” she said.

The President noted that there are many instances when she felt that the guidance from the Lord is strongest when she makes a prayerful discernment of things.

She noted that when she first ran for Senator, her ranking plunged from being sixth to twelfth in the ballot counting.

“Yun pala, bagong politician ako, yun pala, I never knew there was such a thing as bawas-dagdag.”

“Yun ang halimbawa ng mga malalaking broadstrokes sa aking career, na may kinalaman sa ating national history, kung saan nararamdaman ko ang kilos ng Panginoon, ngunit kahit na maliit na bagay, nakikita ko yung kanyang confirmation kapag gumawa ako ng decision through prayerful discernment na tama ang aking ginawa (These are just the example of the big broadstrokes in my career that in a way have something to do with our history and from which I felt the works of the Lord. But even in small ways, I can see His confirmation every time I make a decision through prayerful discernment and, in the end, I can see that my decision was right).”

She further noted that when she invited the heirs of the Sultan of Sulu to Malacañang to discuss the Sabah issue on a randomly picked date, one when her schedule was not that busy, she found out later that that day was the anniversary of the Sultanate of Sulu from its inception in the 1300s.

The President said God must be telling her that her decision to meet the heirs is a right thing to do.

GMA welcomes Cambodian Prince on 5-day visit

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today welcomed Cambodian Prince Norodom Ranariddh who is in the country for a five-day visit.

In her remarks during a luncheon for the Prince, the President said she was happy to note that Ranariddh, who is also president of Cambodia's National Assembly, was among a number of parliamentarians in the Southeast Asian region who are working towards the establishment of an Asean (Association of Southeast Asian Nations) parliament, similar to the European parliament.

Prince Ranariddh, the son of King Norodom Sihanouk, arrived in the country yesterday with his wife, Princess Norodom Marie Ranariddh, and their daughter Princess Norodom Ratanederie.

The President cited the very warm and close relations between the National Assembly of the Kingdom of Cambodia and the House of Representatives of the Republic of the Philippines.

She also noted that Cambodia would be holding elections for the National Assembly next year, adding that "Your Highness' role in ending civil strife in Cambodia which makes elections possible is well recognized."

The President wished Ranariddh continued success in his drive for peace, stability and prosperity in Cambodia.

The President said Cambodia and the Philippines can learn much from each other.

"The Philippines could consider Cambodia's rich cultural heritage and the effort to preserve and promote it as an area of bilateral cooperation," the President said.

The President took the opportunity to congratulate the Prince for his talent in filmmaking and his courageous vision for the future of Khmer art and culture.

The Prince has not only produced but also directed his first movie, "Raja Bori" or Royal Land.

The President said the desire of the leading man in the movie to preserve and promote the beauty of the Angkor Wat and the leading lady's desire to promote the Khmer dance reflect the aspirations of the Cambodian people to preserve and strengthen the Khmer culture.

On a personal note, the President said she felt sentimental to host the Prince today "because 40 years ago, my father, then-President Diosdado Macapagal, also hosted your father – his Royal Highness then, His Majesty now – in this very same room."

The President earlier received Prince Ranariddh at Malacañang's Study Room and later on joined the Prince and his wife and daughter in a luncheon at the State Dining Room.

Also present during the luncheon were First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo, Presidential Daughter Luli, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople, Senate President Franklin Drilon, and House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. and his wife Gina.

GMA extols two fishermen, sons as 'heroes of nation' for saving plane passengers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today received in Malacañang two fishermen and two teenage sons, extolling them as "heroes of the nation" for saving passengers of the ill-fated Laoag International Airlines flight 585 that crashed into Manila Bay a week ago.

The President also presented two checks for P50,000 each to brothers Edgar and Crispulo Naga as token of gratitude for their heroic deeds. The two fishermen were with Elorde Naga, 12, son of Edgar, and Rico Cayabyab, 15, an adopted son of Edgar, who helped rescue plane passengers.

Edgar Naga said the money was early "pamasko" (Christmas gift) of the President to them. He said he would be used the President's gift for the schooling of Edgar and Rico.

The President said she hopes Edgar and Rico, who are out-of-school youths, would be able to finish their education.

Elorde said in an interview after their meeting with the President that he wants to become a policeman and help apprehend kidnappers.

Rico said he also wants to finish school.

Crispulo Naga said he would be use the money to send his three children through high school.

The fishermen recounted to the President that they were already at sea on that fateful morning when they saw the Fokker plane going down.

Their immediate reaction was to approach the plane and rescue passengers. They said they were the first ones to arrive at the crash site and were able to pull some of the survivors out of the sinking airplane.

Fearing an explosion and afraid that the sinking plane might also pull their boat down, the four fishermen said they had to move out of the area quickly.

They said they brought three female survivors that got onto their boat to the shore near Baclaran where other people helped bring them to hospital.

Malacañang clarifies media reports on general perceptions on corruption

Malacañang today said it was unfair and incorrect to conclude that corruption in the Philippines has worsened based on a survey of Transparency International (TI).

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, citing statements by TI itself, said the media was using the wrong analytical framework, which is the ranking of the Philippines.

“This is irrelevant since the number of countries identified in the survey changes every year. The number of countries surveyed increased from 91 in 2001 to 102 in 2002. As a result, the Philippines ranked 77th as opposed to the 65th in 2001. This does not mean its absolute ranking dropped since its Corruption Perception Index (CPI) score only moved .3 points,” he stressed.

The media erroneously reported this as a drop of 11 ranks, Bunye said.

TI itself says “comparisons to the results from previous years should be based on a country’s score, not its rank. A country’s rank can change simply because new countries enter the index and others drop out.”

The truth is that the Philippines only dropped by .3 points in the 1-10 index, which is negligible, Bunye said.

Bunye said this year’s CPI score for the Philippines of 2.6 with a 0.6 standard deviation, is close to the score of 2.9 in 2001, indicating a more or less steady view by business people, risk analysts and the general public of the degree of corruption in government over the last few years.

“TI uses the annual CPI scores of countries to rank relative degrees of corruption. To determine whether corruption is perceived to be worsening or not, TI recommends that CPI comparisons be made based on an individual country’s year-to-year CPI scores,” he said.

Bunye stressed that TI further cautions that year-to-year shifts in a country’s score can also result from changes in sample and methodology, not just from changing perception of a country’s performance.

According to Bunye, data for this year’s survey were culled from 15 polls from nine institutions, as compared to 14 polls from seven institutions for 2001.

“The CPI score relates the degree of corruption as perceived by business people and risk analysts and the general public in government. Rates for the degree of perceived corruption ranges from 1, meaning highly corrupt, to 10, meaning highly transparent and clean,” he said.

Bunye also said that countries subjected to the survey are then ranked according to CPI scores.

In a separate finding, Bunye said, the Political Economic Risk Consultancy, Inc. (PERC) last year, noted that the risk of doing business in the Philippines is lower because of government effectiveness.

GMA orders Perez to organize high-level group to address Meralco problems

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ordered Energy Secretary Vicente Perez to organize a high-level working group, composed of Manila Electric Company’s official representatives and the company’s major creditors, including government stakeholders, to address the company’s problems and formulate a plan to maintain its financial stability as a public utility.

In his regular press briefing, Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao said the President’s order was given in light of the Supreme Court Third Division’s decision on the issue of the firm’s having overcharged its customers since 1994.

Tiglao said the President, accompanied by her economic advisers, had a meeting with the Lopez group in Malacañang last Friday.

Tiglao said that during the meeting, members of the Lopez group maintained that the Supreme Court’s decision was not right. “The President simply remarked that the Supreme Court is a very independent institution,” Tiglao said.

“No mention at all or appeal to the President to do anything about it,” Tiglao added.

Tiglao said Secretary Perez has scheduled a meeting with Meralco officials and the company’s creditors to undertake initial discussions to address the company’s problems and to reach a consensus on the creation of such a working group, which is tasked to formulate a detailed plan to maintain the utility firm’s credit standing.

Tiglao assured that the President is committed to implement strictly the Supreme Court’s decision, as soon as it is executory and as soon as the Energy Regulatory Commission, a quasi-judicial body that by law deals with electric rates, formulates the details and mechanism for implementing the High Court’s decision.

With the President during the meeting were Tiglao, Perez, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho and Presidential Legal Counsel Avelino Cruz while the Lopez group was represented by, among others, Oscar Lopez, Gabby Lopez and Manolo Lopez.

GMA proclaims Dec. 24 as special non-working day

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today declared December 24, Christmas Eve, as a special non-working day.

In issuing Proclamation No. 292, the President noted that December 24 has, in the past, been declared a special public holiday to give the people the full opportunity to enjoy the Christmas holidays with their families, relatives and friends.

The proclamation of December 24 this year, a Tuesday, as a special non-working day was recommended by the Department of Tourism.

- GMA meets U.S. trade industry envoy on ASEAN-U.S. economic ties
- Opening of NAIA 3 deferred due to security, safety concerns

GMA donates one-month salary to Children's Hour

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo donated last night the equivalent of one month of her salary to Children's Hour, a fund-raising program to champion the cause of less fortunate children and youth.

Presidential Daughter Evangeline Lourdes "Luli" Arroyo also made a donation to the program which invests funds in carefully selected projects addressing child abuse and deprivation as well as health care and education.

The President led government and business leaders in the Children's Hour fund-raising dinner held at the Le Souffle at the Fort in Fort Bonifacio.

Among the other officials present during the affair were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Benjamin Defensor, and retired general and former Executive Secretary Renato de Villa.

During the benefit dinner, the Children's Hour raised P3 million, P1.2 million of which came from the employees of Globe Company who voluntarily donated one hour of their monthly salaries.

The global fund-raising campaign involves the donation of one hour's worth of earnings to Children's Hour, which, to date, has raised about P40 million from companies, employees and private individuals.

In his welcome remarks, Jaime Augusto Zobel de Ayala II, honorary chair of Children's Hour, said the Children's Hour Steering Committee is inviting more government and business leaders to champion the cause of the children and youth.

"We wish to build on the wellspring of generosity to re-launch the Children's Hour to give them once again an opportunity to champion the cause of children among their employees and company executives. We can then advocate among other companies to come and join us in this campaign to save our children from illiteracy, homelessness, hunger and abuse," Zobel said.

Children's Hour was launched in the Philippines in 1999 and again this year to assist millions of Filipino children in need.

Children's Hour has helped over 88,000 Filipino children and youth through hospitals and organizations that provide preventive and rehabilitative services, temporary shelter, feeding and nutrition programs and education.

Organizations that have been supported by Children's Hour include Bantay Bata, the Center of Excellence in Public Elementary Education, Tuloy sa Don Bosco Street Children Project, Tabang Mindanaw II, International Deaf Education Association, Kamalayan Development Foundation and the Bulig Foundation.

Children's Hour was re-launched in Manila, Davao and Cebu this year and the institution is currently led by a steering committee composed of Jaime Augusto Zobel de Ayala II as chair and Gina Lopez as vice chair. Its members include Emily Abrera, Corazon Alma de Leon, Ramon del Rosario Jr., De Villa, Carlos Dominguez, Susana A.S. Madrigal, Narcisa L. Escaler, Bob D. Gothong, Patricia B. Licuanan, Guillermo M. Luz, Justo A. Ortiz, Alexandra Prieto-Romualdez, Mayan Quebral, Pedro Roxas, Bienvenido Tan Jr. and Bishop Socrates.

GMA orders Perez to review power policies

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered Energy Secretary Vicente Perez to immediately review the country's power policies and programs, as well as the changing legal framework, to ensure that the energy sector would continue to attract private investments.

In a statement, Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao said that the President's directive to Perez was also aimed at ensuring that the energy requirements of the people would be served.

The President's order came on the heels of the Supreme Court decision ordering the Manila Electric Company (Meralco) to refund its more than three million customers for over billing dating back to 1994.

Tiglao said that the President's efforts in the past several days are intended to ensure Meralco's "stability to continue electricity distribution, and to undertake an orderly, yet strict compliance with the law the minute the Supreme Court orders the refund."

He stressed that "no refund can be made if Meralco is unable to continue its operations and ceases to exist."

According to Tiglao, for Meralco's customers to be refunded, the moment the Supreme Court issues its final ruling and it becomes executory, there must be an entity that will handle the refunding.

The President has earlier directed Perez to form a working group, consisting of Meralco's officials and creditors, including government stakeholders, to address the company's problems and to formulate a plan to maintain the firm's financial stability as a public utility.

This presidential directive for the formation of a working group represents one of the President's efforts to find ways and means to ensure the stability of the public utility and its capability to comply with a Supreme Court final decision on the refund, Tiglao said.

Tiglao clarified that it is Meralco as a public utility, and not any private shareholder in the company, that the government is mandated to support.

GMA meets U.S. trade industry envoy on ASEAN-U.S. economic ties

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today met with Ambassador Robert Zoellick, United States Trade Representative, and discussed with him the implementation of President George W. Bush's initiative to further enhance Association of Southeast Asian Nations-United States (ASEAN-US) economic ties.

The Enterprise for ASEAN Initiative (EAI), launched by President Bush during the last APEC meeting in Los Cabos, Mexico, offered the prospect of bilateral free trade agreements between the United States and ASEAN countries that are committed to economic reforms and openness.

The President said that while she is "sticking her neck out" in her support of the US policies and decisions such as the fight against international terrorism and other US policies on trade, the President called on the US to give ASEAN countries, specially the Philippines, more access to the US market.

The President also said the Philippines must first address the perils of globalization by insisting on a rule-based multilateral trading system which ensures economic growth and employment for the people.

“There are barriers and sanctions that the Filipino people perceive to be adding to the poverty of the nation,” she said, stressing that these must be removed, if not minimized.

The President also pointed out that the Philippines is moving toward its intellectual property rights. She cited the “substantial and dramatic” achievement in this field, saying that the government has closed down the big factories that manufactured pirated copies of films and CDs.

The President likewise reiterated his congratulations to President Bush for the latter’s recent victory in the passage of the United Nations Security Council Resolution on the inspecting for weapons of mass destruction, Iraq.

After the meeting of President Macapagal-Arroyo with Ambassador Zoellick at the State Dining Room of Malacañang, the two proceeded to have lunch with five ASEAN Economic Ministers at the Music Room of Malacañang wherein Ambassador Zoellick also discussed the Enterprise ASEAN Initiative.

Aside from Ambassador Zoellick, also present at the luncheon meeting were Thai Economic Minister Adisai Bodharamik, Singaporean Economic Minister George Yeo, Lao People’s Democratic Republic Economic Minister Sovlivong Daravong, Vietnam Economic Minister Truong Dinh, Philippine Ambassador to the US Albert del Rosario and US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone.

Opening of NAIA 3 deferred due to security, safety concerns

Malacañang announced today that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ordered the Department of Transportation and Communication (DOTC) to postpone the “soft opening” of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) Terminal 3 on December 15 due to security and public safety issues that have not yet been addressed by PIATCO.

Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao said the deferment of the opening of NAIA 3 was based on the recommendation of Transportation Secretary Leandro Mendoza.

“It was Secretary Mendoza’s recommendation, which means he provided arguments for that. Other officials and advisers of the President agreed on the recommendation,” Tiglao said during a press briefing in Malacañang this afternoon.

Tiglao said that once an independent audit body tells the Department of Transportation and Communication (DOTC) that the terminal is ready to open, then the government will abide, Tiglao said.

“We have repeatedly said that this is not a kind of sari-sari store. This is an airport. You are risking the lives of the people here if you do not strictly comply with the contract requirements,” Tiglao added.

Mendoza has sought the President’s reconsideration of plans to open the airport terminal on December 15, informing her of significant security and safety issues that have to be resolved.

BIR to enforce stringent measures to hike tax collections, says Camacho

The Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) will continue to implement more stringent measures to increase its tax collections.

Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said the budget deficit requires the government to be merciless in the enforcement of tax laws.

“While the budget deficit remains a challenge, we are taking concrete steps to address it,” he said.

Camacho said the BIR is cross checking the importation data of the Bureau of Customs (BOC) with its corresponding tax filings.

“In fact, this process has already helped the BIR identify such corporate tax delinquents and we have sent them demand letters with a payment deadline. If they fail to meet the deadline, they face closure and prosecution,” he said.

Camacho said audit intensification for both corporate and individuals has also helped increase BIR's tax collections.

The agency likewise will promote the wide availability now of online-payment option, he said.

Also, the passage of other revenue-generating reform measures that have been submitted to Congress is expected to enhance long-term revenues, Camacho added.

These include bills to create an excise tax, a tax on auto imports and sales, and a documentary stamp tax.

The finance chief said these measures are deemed necessary in meeting the revenue target for 2002. BIR's tax collections account for 70 percent of the government's revenue.

Camacho said government spending is on track, providing adequate stimulation to the economy while “remaining within the budget authorized by Congress.”

“The economy is on track to achieve a 4 to 4.5 percent Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth in 2002,” he said.

GDP, the common measure of economic performance, already grew 4.1 percent for the first semester of this year.

Economic planners expected the domestic economy to have grown 3.9 percent to 4.4 percent in the third quarter.

Camacho said other key indicators that the economy could grow as targeted are the low inflation and interest rates, growth in imports that transferred to higher exports and a healthy balance of payments.

GMA gets CREBA support for housing

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has received a pledge of support from the Chamber of Real Estate and Builders' Associations Inc. (CREBA) for her program to provide decent housing and basic services to homeless citizens.

In a statement issued last night by its national president Florentino Dulalia Jr., Creba acknowledged the President efforts to provide affordable housing to the masses, "synergizing the housing industry and its scores of allied industries, and creating more employment opportunities for thousands of workers and professionals, thereby promoting economic growth."

Dulalia said that responding to the call of the President, Creba is committed to build 325, 456 housing units within the next couple of years, as part of the effort to transform into reality the aspiration and dream of every Filipino to own a decent shelter for himself and his family.

"With this commitment, backed by our unity of purpose, vision, political will and conviction, all Creba developers throughout the country are ready to respond firmly and affirmatively to the challenges of a viable housing program for homeless Filipinos and thereby achieve the goal of enhancing the quality of life of every Filipino," Dulalia said.

Dulalia conveyed Creba's support to the President during the signing of a memorandum of agreement (MOA) among the Department of Agrarian Reform, the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council, Creba, and other non-government organizations on equitable land access and the availability of at least 200, 000 hectares of land for housing and urban development for the next 20 years.

"It will now be possible to reduce by at least 50 percent the current shortage of housing units, estimated at some 5 million, by the year 2010," Dulalia said.

Palace readies alternative vending sites, livelihood for sidewalk vendors

The National Anti-Poverty Commission and the Workers in the Informal Sectors (NAPC-WIS) today reported to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that the organization of sidewalk vendors has undertaken a listing of "legitimate" members in their area and submitted this to the mayors in Metro Manila for relocation or integration to other forms of livelihood.

At the same time, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. said the mayors have also conducted their own mapping to determine the number and location of sidewalk vendors, and identified alternative vending sites for them.

It was also reported to the President that the Development Bank of the Philippines has come up with P7 billion window program for 17 Metro Manila local government units, plus Angono, Rizal, that can be used for alternative livelihood plans for the street vendors.

The local executives will be encouraging the vendors to join existing cooperatives so that those who want to shift to other means of livelihood can be accommodated.

Workers in the Informal Sector (WIS) Representative Susanita Tesiorna recognized the efforts of the government in addressing the issues of the vulnerable sectors in Metro Manila, at the same time emphasizing support to the government efforts in clearing the sidewalks in the metropolis and giving back the streets to the citizenry.

Tesiorna reported to the President that a meeting between the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority (MMDA) board and the NAPC revealed the following:

- Quezon City, according to its survey, has 7,088 vendors, of which 2,588 vendors are located in critical areas;
- Muntinlupa has provided 186 vendors with free rental of stalls, allowing these vendors to pay only a market entrance fee;
- The city government of Mandaluyong has provided the amount of P5,000 each for vendors to help finance deposit payments for private market stalls while a private bank has allowed the use of its vacant lot to be converted into jeepney terminals with provisions for vendors;
- In Makati, the Office of the City Mayor facilitated the bidding of food ambulant stalls as a replacement for the previous jeepney stalls for informal sectors;
- In Pasay, the city government is requesting the assistance of the vendors themselves to establish an alternative vending site for 2,000 vendors, with the city government providing assistance in the negotiation for the purchase of the site;
- In San Juan, the Office of the Mayor has provided the amount of P7,500 to support the microfinance activities of the vulnerable street vendors who are willing to use vacant public market stalls;
- The Caloocan City government is undertaking several initiatives to help the vendors in their respective areas.

Other LGUs are reported to be conducting regular meetings with the street vendors for the latter to identify alternative vending sites, renegotiate private market fees on behalf of these vendors, and implement alternative livelihood program for those who opt to shift to other forms of livelihood.

Landbank okays P210-M for individual coco farmers

The Land Bank of the Philippines (LBP) today reported to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that it will make the amount of P210 million available to Quedancor and/or farmers cooperatives and small coconut farmers organizations which will serve as loan conduits to qualified individual small coconut farmers.

The Land Bank said during the Fourth National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) meeting in Malacañang that under this program, small coconut farmers can avail themselves of a loan averaging P10,000 each within the next six months.

The LBP will also lend the amount of P90 million to accredited coconut farmers cooperatives that will serve as credit conduits to oil mills and other coconut processors.

Philippine Coconut Authority Administrator Danilo Coronacion said there are 1.6-million coconut farming families deserving of livelihood assistance. They include small farmers with landholdings of five hectares and below.

Livelihood projects may include direct copra marketing, farm diversification through high value crops, intercropping, livestock raising, aquaculture, and production of other coconut by-products.

The PCA Administrator said that as directed by the President in the last NAPC en banc meeting in Malacañang, the lending program will prioritize the highly affected famine-stricken coconut farmers in the Bondoc Peninsula and the Visayas region.

Urban Poor Week celebration to highlight asset reform, livelihood

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will be the guest of honor and speaker at the celebration of the Urban Poor Week 2002 at the Quezon City Memorial Circle on December 7, 2002.

According to Presidential Commission for the Urban Poor (PCUP) Chairman Percival Chavez, this year's celebration is a one-day fair and celebration in three major cities across the country. It will focus on two of the five cornerstones of the anti-poverty program of this government — asset reform and livelihood.

“This focus is hinged on the growing recognition that security of land tenure and livelihood are at the core of the urban poor’s struggle towards a better life,” Chavez said.

This year’s celebration aims at showcasing President Macapagal-Arroyo’s programs and accomplishments on security of land tenure and livelihood and the role the urban poor sector plays in bringing these issues to the government agenda, Chavez said.

To stress the role of the urban poor groups in these efforts, PCUP said it has invited urban poor leaders to share their perspectives on current developments concerning general programs and specific projects.

“The idea is to communicate that the urban poor groups’ efforts at making their concerns known to government is fundamental to the success of these programs,” Chavez said.

Key economic indicators show positive growth despite breach in budget deficit target, says DBM

The country’s key economic indicators continued to show positive growth despite the shortfall in revenue collections that has resulted in a higher budget deficit, according to the Department of Budget and Management (DBM).

In a statement, DBM Secretary Emilia Boncodin said for the past 10 months of this year, the inflation and interest rates are at “all-time” lows, with inflation averaging 3.2 percent.

Boncodin said that the 3.2 percent average inflation rate is way below the target of 4.5 percent to 5.5 percent. The 91-day Treasury bill rate is averaging 5.5 percent, also below the estimated 7 percent to 8 percent, she added.

Boncodin said that the government is confident that it can meet its 2002 projection of 4 percent growth of the gross domestic product (GDP). The GDP growth for the first semester of 2002 was 4.1 percent.

The DBM chief, however, admitted that because of the shortfall in revenue collections, the national government is revising its budget deficit target for 2002 to 5.6 percent of GDP and its 2003 budget deficit target to 4.7 percent of GDP.

Boncodin expressed the belief that both these revised figures will allow the government to achieve its GDP growth target for 2002 and its 4.2 to 5.2 percent GDP growth target for next year.

“This strong level of economic growth will ensure that we are able to continue to create additional jobs, increase access to health care and education, and provide new opportunities for people throughout the country,” she said.

Boncodin said that compared with the original estimate of zero growth, the export sector grew by 7.8 percent year-to-date while imports showed a 7 percent growth compared with an estimate of 6 percent.

She said that strong remittances from expatriate Filipino workers have continued to fuel domestic consumption.

According to Boncodin, the Macapagal-Arroyo administration is committed to fiscal discipline and “only our untiring determination to do better for the country over the medium term will justify our actions today.”

Bocondin appealed to everyone’s kind understanding of the many challenges as she expressed confidence that “together we will overcome these challenges and continue walking the road toward sustainable growth and development.”

If final decision is refund, you will get your refund, GMA assures people

"If the final decision is refund, I will make sure that one way or another the consumers — you, the consumers — will get your refund."

This was the assurance given by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to the people in connection with the Supreme Court decision on the overcharging case against the Manila Electric Company (Meralco).

In her speech during a dinner meeting with the Chamber of Real Estate and Builders Association (Creba) in Malacañang last night, the President assured that nothing will stand in the way of her foresworn duty to serve the public interest.

Her assurance came as part of her disclosure of the administration 's policy on the Meralco issue:

“First, we are taking steps to ensure the financial viability of Meralco as an institution”

“Second, the decision of the Supreme Court regarding Meralco’s obligations shall be implemented.”

“Third, I am duty bound to ensure that there will be no crisis in power services as a result of these financial problems.”

The President said her mind is clear on how to deal with the Meralco issue. “It will be in the context of the larger power sector as the key reform area facing us today,” she added.

The President said that through the Department of Energy, the government is shepherding a series of consultations that began the other day between Meralco and its creditors.

“We will see to it that a rehabilitation plan is set up that is fair to creditors, investors and, most of all, the public,” she said.

She also said “we shall await the finality of the (Supreme Court) decision and then act accordingly.”

“I’m constitutionally-bound to serve the public interest,” she said.

500,000 homes to be built until 2004, GMA assured

Emerging from a meeting last night with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, the Chamber of Real Estate and Builders’ Association (CREBA) and the Subdivision and Housing Developers’ Association (SHDA) have jointly pledged to build more than 500,000 housing units until 2004, in line with the Chief Executive’s thrust to provide decent and affordable housing to the homeless.

In a press briefing at Malacañang this afternoon, Secretary Michael Defensor of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) said CREBA committed 325,425 housing units while SHDA pledged to build 236,076 units.

Defensor said CREBA national president Florentino Dulalia Jr. has assured that all CREBA developers throughout the country are ready to respond firmly and affirmatively to the challenge of a viable housing program for the homeless Filipinos.

Defensor said SHDA’s commitment of 236,076 housing units embodied in their program called SHDA Pledge 2002 are distributed as follows: 77,000 units of low-cost housing amounting to P28.9 billion, 33,084 socialized housing units worth an estimated P6.6 billion and 66,423 middle-income units worth P33.2 billion.

According to SHDA Chairman Teofisto Guingona III, SHDA Pledge 2002 is a showcase of what the government and private sector can accomplish together if they harmonize their objectives and work for a common goal.

“This is our way of returning the support of the housing sector given by the President, Secretary Defensor and the key shelter agencies,” Guingona said.

Last night, the President also witnessed the signing of a Memorandum of Agreement among the Department of Agrarian Reform, HUDCC, CREBA, SHDA, the Builders Alliance Toward Action (BATA), National Real Estate Association (NREA), the Organization of Socialized Housing Developers’ Association (OSHDP) and the Women in Shelter and Environment (WISE).

The MOA would provide equitable land access and make available at least 200,000 hectares of land for housing and urban development for the next 20 years.

Defensor said the MOA is expected to reduce by at least 50 percent the current shortage of housing units estimated at 5 million by 2010.

Meanwhile, Defensor announced that the HUDCC has recently carried out a series of reforms to make housing more affordable for low-salaried employees.

He said PAG-IBIG has lowered interest rates as follows:

- For loans P150,000 and below, the interest rate will be 6 percent;
- For above P150, 000 but not more than P225,000, the interest rate will remain at 9 percent;
- For loans above P225,000 but not more than P500,000, the interest rate was reduced to 10 percent;
- For loans above P500,000 but not more than P2 million, the interest rate is pegged at 12 percent, provided the borrower pays on or before the due date.

“We have increased our loan to collateral value to 100 percent for loans below P150,000 to P500,000 which will further lower if not eliminate the equity requirement of home borrowers,” Defensor said.

He added that PAG-IBIG has also extended the loan term from 20 to 25 years for loans over P500,000 to further reduce the monthly amortization of homebuyers.

“We have also allowed the refinancing of an existing mortgage loan with an institution acceptable to PAG-IBIG. This is to enable qualified members to benefit from the low interest rates,” he said.

At the same time, the HUDCC chief said PAG-IBIG member-borrowers are no longer required to complete the 24 months membership to qualify for a housing loan. The amended guidelines now allow a member to make a lump sum payment equivalent to 24 monthly contributions to meet this requirement.

“These are some of the reforms that we are doing to ensure that the housing program of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration reaches those who need it most,” he said.

Perform well or you’ll get axe even without courtesy resignation, GMA warns officials

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has warned government officials, including members of the Cabinet, that she would not wait for their courtesy resignations and would dismiss them if they failed to perform well for the benefit of the people.

“I can assure you, I’m not going to wait on courtesy (resignation) if someone in my government isn’t working out for the benefit of the nation,” the President bluntly said in her address Thursday night before the 2002 General Alumni Homecoming of the College of Law of the University of the Philippines held at the Shangri-La Hotel in Makati City.

The President said she chose those she wants to be in her Cabinet. "I can add or subtract Cabinet members when I need to, based on performance," she said.

The President's remarks came on the heels of reports about a Cabinet revamp as well as calls for the Cabinet members to file their courtesy resignations.

In her speech, the President also reiterated her government's resolve to rid the bureaucracy of corruption, saying that this is the same resolve that the government is having in the fight against criminality.

She said that her hands-on involvement in the war against crime has in no way deprived suspects of their right to free and fair trial but does put them and others like them on notice that they cannot hide if they break the law.

"This is the same warning I have to those who practice corruption in and out of government," the President said to the applause of the audience.

Gov't making inroads in solving peace-order challenges, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has said that her two-year-old administration is making significant inroads in solving peace and order challenges.

In her keynote speech during the University of the Philippines Law Alumni Association (UPLAA) homecoming last night at the Shangri-La Hotel in Makati City, the President said that when she took over the government in January 2001, kidnapping and organized crime were the main concern.

The President said peace and order was rated then as among the top three concerns in surveys.

She said that in the November survey, fighting terrorist groups and fighting kidnap-for-ransom syndicates rate among the top five issues "where the government is assessed to be doing a good job."

"This administration is tackling the issue of peace and order on many fronts. We have developed a formula that's working. We've become tougher on crime," the President said.

"I make no apologies for being tough on crime and criminals and terrorism and terrorists. Our people deserve no less than to feel absolutely safe to live, work, and raise a family. I will do everything in my power to improve the situation and will continue to do so," she said.

According to the President, the government looks at the drug problem as a source of the peace and order challenge, saying that a Special Drug Enforcement Agency has been set up to address this.

The President has also instructed Philippine National Police Director General Hermogenes Ebdane to focus on kidnapping and weeding out misfits from the police.

"We have stepped up intelligence coordination. We have a hot line, telephone number 117. And related to this, community mobilization has been very effective in locating criminal fugitives," she added.

The President noted that the Presidential Anti-organized Crime Commission Secretariat "supplements the work of the enforcement institutions."

"Now, we have inter-agency coordination mainly through stronger police work. The result is reduction in the crime rate," she said.

In order to preserve the growth and success the government achieved in this field, the President said her administration is professionalizing the police and fighting the root cause of criminality by focusing on poverty reduction and sustainable economic development.

The President announced that the government has a higher budget to “provide higher pay to the police and soldiers, who, under this new budget ,will earn as much as the teachers currently do.”

She also mentioned the increased educational requirements of the police, adding that they now have to have a college degree to enter the force.

Aside from this, the President said she had already increased the budget for training policemen.

GMA says she won't be swayed by power politics

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said that as long as she is the Chief Executive, she will act for the interest of the country and cannot be swayed by power politics.

This was the assurance made by the President during her speech at the 2002 General Alumni Homecoming of the University of the Philippines College of Law held at the Shangri-La Hotel in Makati City last night.

“I shall not be swayed by populist politics nor by power play. I shall not please the poor by tearing down the rich nor please the rich by ignoring the poor, because there is nothing more important to me than the future of this country,” the President said.

The President also spelled out the administration's actions on the decision of the Supreme Court on the refund to Meralco customers.

She reiterated her administration's policy to see to it that the decision of the Supreme Court regarding Meralco's obligation to its customers will be implemented.

“We do believe that this decision, whatever it is, can be manageable. And if indeed the final decision is a refund, it is my duty to see to it that one way or another, you, the consumers, will get your refund,” she added.

The President said it is her duty as President “to serve the public interest” in order to ensure that there will be no power crisis that could result from the financial problems of Meralco.

Meanwhile, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said that nobody could question what the President is doing because all the programs in her administration are geared towards serving the majority of the people.

“The President is focused on what needs to be done as President and she knows that. She has to concentrate on some problems like generating jobs. She would have to address the health problems. We have to educate the next generation of Filipinos. We'll have to come up with good governance and she's doing what needs to be done along those lines,” Bunye said.

Presidential broadcast message

Ngayong malapit ng magtapos ang taon, naalala natin ang maraming bunga ng ating pagsusumikap, habang kinikinita naman natin ang marami pang kailangang gawin.

Sa dalawampung buwan kong panunungkulan sa bayan bilang inyong Pangulo, nakita ko ang sakripisyo at dedikasyon ng mga kapwa kong nanunungkulan sa Republika ng Pilipinas: ang mga government employees. Lubusan akong nagpapasalamat sa kanila, sa mga opisyal at empleyado sa mga opisina ng gobyerno, sa mga guro, sa mga sundalo't pulis.

Hindi natin lubusang magagantimpalaan ang dedikasyon at paninilbihan sa ating mga government employees and men in uniform.

Mahigpit ang ating situwasyong pananalapi. Subalit sa gitna ng lahat ng kahirapang ito at matapos ayusin ang lahat ng natitirang cash resources ng ating Pamahalaan, ipinapahayag ko ngayon ang isiguradong pagkakaloob ng siguradong limang libong pisong (P5,000.00) cash gift sa lahat ng naglilingkod sa gobyerno, pati mga guro, pati mga sundalo. Sa nakaraang taon, hindi nakakakinabang itong cash gift na nakukuha ng ibang empleyado ng gobyerno. Ito ay ipapamahagi bago mag-akinse ng Disyembre.

Ang cash gift na ito ay isang munting pasasalamat ko, at ng Republika, sa ating mga government employees. This P 5,000.00 cash gift will be given to all government employees, even those who did not get it before, including teachers, soldiers and police officers.

Ang pamahalaan natin ay lubusang kinikilala ang kontribusyon ng lahat ng nagtrabaho dito, anuman ang kanilang ranggo o saan man sila nakatalaga, sa pang-kalahatang tungkulin ng serbisyo publiko.

Ang lahat ng nagtrabaho sa gobyerno ay dapat maramdaman na sila ay kabilang sa isang organisasyon at isang pangarap — service to the higher ideals of the public interest and the common good. Paglilingkod sa mataas na mithiing malasakit ng sambayanan at kapakanan ng lahat.

Naiintindihan ko na ang pa-suweldo sa gobyerno ay mababa. Marami ang kinakailangang magsakripisyo. Pero patuloy tayong magsisikap na magkaroon ng pay packages na makatarungan at makatuwiran, at igagawad ang mga ito batay sa merit at performance.

Kasabay nito, gusto kong gamitin ang pagkakataong ito para tiyakin sa ating government employees na ginagawa natin ang lahat para mapa-sama kayo sa ating socio-economic programs. Tulad ng iba pa nating mga kababayan, ang inyong mga pangunahing pangangailangan ng kalusugan, edukasyon at lalo na ang pabahay ay aming prayoridad. Nais natin na ang inyong mga pamilya ay maging matatag at matiwasay. Ito ay mahalaga upang mas higit kayong makapaglingkod sa bayan.

Gusto kong malaman ninyo na inatasan ko ang aking gabinete at lahat ng mga pinuno ng ibang government agencies na maghanap, at gumawa ng mga programa para sa ikabubuti ng kanilang mga empleyado, para makahanap ng ibang paraan para mapabuti ang kanilang kalagayan.

Nais kong iparating sa lahat ng empleyado ng gobyerno na napakahalaga ang bawat isa sa inyo. Empleyado sa opisina, mga guro, mga sundalo, mga pulis; kayo ang mga front-liners, kayo ang mukha ng Republikang Pilipinas.

Sa ating pagtutulungan, maitatayo natin ang isang matatag na Republikang Pilipinas, na tunay na manunungkulan para sa ating lahat at sa mga darating pang henerasyon ng Pilipino.

Lubusang nagpapasalamat ako sa inyong mga kapwa kong nasa gobyerno. Ipagpatuloy ninyo ang inyong dedikasyon, tulungan ninyo ako para mapatatag natin ang bansa't gobyerno ng Pilipinas.

Maraming Salamat.

GMA okays P5,000 cash gift for all govt employees

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has approved the grant of a P5,000.00 cash gift to all government employees including teachers, soldiers and policemen who in the past did not receive an extra bonus like other state workers.

In a radio message this morning, the President said the cash gift is a small token for the dedicated service of all government employees including the men in uniform.

“Sa dalawampung buwan kong panunungkulan sa bayan bilang inyong Pangulo, nakita ko ang sakripisyo at dedikasyon ng mga kapwa kong nanunungkulan sa Republika ng Pilipinas: ang mga government employees. Lubusan akong nagpapasalamat sa kanila, sa mga opisyal at empleyado sa mga opisina ng gobyerno, sa mga guro, sa mga sundalo't pulis (In my 20 months as President, I have witness the sacrifices and dedication of my co-fellow workers in the service of the Republic of the Philippines: the government employees. I fully thank the officials and employees in all the offices of our government, to the teachers, and the soldiers and policemen), the President said.

The President said the government's finances are tight but after consolidating the remaining cash resources of the Government, she is announcing the grant of additional cash gift of P5,000 for all state workers.

“Ang cash gift na ito ay isang munting pasasalamat ko, at ng Republika, sa ating mga government employees (This cash gift is my and the Republic's small token to all government employees). This P5,000.00 cash gift will be given to all government employees, even those who did not get it before, including teachers, soldiers and police officers,” the President said.

The President said the government fully recognizes the contributions of all state workers, irrespective of their ranks or place of assignment, to public service.

“Ang lahat ng nagtrabaho sa gobyerno ay dapat maramdaman na sila ay kabilang sa isang organisasyon at isang pangarap (All state workers should feel that they belong to an organization and a dream)- service to the higher ideals of the public interest and the common good. Paglilingkod sa mataas na mithiing malasakit ng sambayanan at kapakanan ng lahat (Service with the highest ideals of common good and public welfare),” the President said.

GMA to state workers: expect more pay packages and inclusion in govt socio-economic programs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said the government would continuously find ways for additional just and fair pay packages based on merit and performance for state workers including their inclusion in all government socio-economic programs.

In her weekly radio address, the President said she understands that government employees are underpaid and sacrifice a lot.

inyong mga pangunahing pangangailangan sa kalusugan, edukasyon at lalo na ang pabahay ay aming prayoridad (Also, I wish to use this occasion to assure our government employees that we are doing everything so that they will be included in our socio-economic programs. Like the rest of our countrymen, your needs for health, education and housing will be given priority.),” the President said.

The President stressed that she wanted government employees’ families to be secured and well-provided for. This is important, she said, so that state workers can work more efficiently for the nation.

“Gusto kong malaman ninyo na inatasan ko ang aking gabinete at lahat ng mga pinuno ng ibang government agencies na maghanap at gumawa ng mga programa para sa ikabubuti ng kanilang mga empleyado, para makahanap ng ibang paraan para mapabuti ang kanilang kalagayan (I would like all of you to know that I have directed my Cabinet and all heads of other government agencies to find and establish programs for the benefit of their employees welfare),” the President pointed out.

The President exhorted all government employees to join her in building a strong Republic, one that will truly serve the nation and generations to come.

“Lubusang nagpapasalamat ako sa inyong mga kapwa kong nasa gobyerno. Ipagpatuloy ninyo ang inyong dedikasyon, tulungan ninyo ako para mapatatag natin ang bansa’t gobyerno ng Pilipinas (I am fully thankful to all my co-workers in government. Continue with your dedication, and help me strengthen our country and the Philippine government),” the President said.

No wage increase position of labor groups patriotic — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded anew the decision of the Labor Solidarity Movement (LSM), the umbrella organization of the country’s mainstream labor groups, not to press for wage increase at this time.

The President met with LSM members at the State Dining Room in Malacañang and assured them that in return for their very patriotic decision, her administration is doing all it can to prevent an increase in transportation fares.

“You are very helpful in offering not to demand a wage increase,” the President told the group.

The movement is composed of Trade Union Congress of the Philippines (TUCP), Federation of Free Workers (FFW), Alliance of Filipino Workers (AFW) and the Trade Union of the Philippines and Allied Services (TUPAS).

The President also told the group that the Employers Confederation of the Philippines (ECOP) has committed to pay for any increases in workers’ contribution in Social Security System premiums for as long as there are still no wage increases.

The President said that while government works hard at creating new jobs through investment as well as through tourism and the encouragement of Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs) to build up domestic demand, it must also put in place job preservation mechanisms at a time when the world is in economic difficulty.

The President earlier called LSM’s decision as a patriotic act and one such mechanism by which existing jobs can be preserved.

During the luncheon meeting, the President and LSM discussed ways to improve the plight of the workers. Among these are: the need for the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) to strictly enforce existing labor standards so workers may get their lawful due, how the National Food Authority (NFA) could assist workers to get cheaper rice and other basic necessities, how the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) could intensify its drive to provide affordable housing to workers through rent-to-own and similar schemes to allow workers decent dwelling places.

Among those who attended the meeting were Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, TUCP representatives Victorino Balais, Avelino Valerio, Zoilo dela Cruz Jr., FFW representative Ramon Jabar, AFW members Gregorio del Prado, Tony Dumpit, Leonardo Desierto, Rafael Quilitan and TUPAS representatives Vladimir Tupaz, Romeo Arica and Vicente Apor.

Statement of Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao

Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho proposed changes in Meralco's management structure in order to address concerns over the company's financial stability in case it would have to implement the Supreme Court's decision for a consumer refund.

Camacho made the proposal on the basis of the success of the recent program to turn around the then financially-distressed Philippine National Bank, majority-controlled by the tycoon Lucio Tan. One of the program's most important features, which restored the financial community's confidence in the bank, was the change in its top management and directors of the bank, and not changes in ownership.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has emphasized repeatedly that the greater private capital is the crucial element to develop the power industry so that it would meet the country's requirements, and not a reversion to the government's former domineering presence in and control of the electricity sector.

Secretary Camacho felt that the firms creditors and the financial market in general would find comfort in the entry of new set of professionals, and independent managers and directors.

It was not at all a proposal for a government takeover but simply a plan to upgrade Meralco's corporate standing in the financial market.

Secretary Camacho's "proposal" in fact was preliminary working draft for discussion purposes only and certainly not a demand. It had emerged out of his conversations with Eugenio "Gabby" Lopez III, a member of the family who was his classmate during their Harvard years. Camacho candidly discussed with Gabby Lopez his view of the financial markets' worries and the beneficial impact of a change in Meralco's management structure.

Gabby Lopez gave the Finance Secretary the impression that his family was open for discussions for such changes. Camacho therefore proceeded to write down his view of the changes required, using as a pro-forma template PNB's "memorandum of agreement" with the government, and gave it to Gabby. The Finance secretary repeatedly emphasized to him that the draft was merely a starting point for discussion and that the family could propose changes as they see appropriate.

As a very rough draft, the proposal had not even reached the level of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for evaluation and decision.

It is quite unfortunate that the Lopez family have totally misinterpreted Camacho's proposal. Camacho have never brought up a proposal for a change in ownership, only the entry of new set of professional and independent board of directors and managers. Such changes could also put a stop to perceptions of alleged lapses in corporate governance in the utility firm.

Two companies controlled by or allied with the Lopez family are the registered owners of 28.5% of Meralco, down from the family's nearly 100% ownership before 1972. It's beneficial ownership however – because there are other shareholders in these firms — amounts to 5%. The government and its agencies constitute the biggest single stockholder of Meralco, with its official and beneficial ownership amounting to 25.5% of the company.

The government does not need to "want Meralco". It already has a big stake in Meralco both as shareholder, and as a government duty-bound to ensure the stability of a public utility.

Secretary Camacho's proposal was made in the context of President Macapagal-Arroyo's guidelines to undertake efforts to assure Meralco's financial stability, so it would be able to continue electricity-distribution and implement, when it becomes final, the Supreme Court's decision ordering it to refund its consumers.

- GMA urges Red Cross-Red Crescent campaign vs children in war, for building strong republics
- GMA thanks UNIDO for continued support to RP's industrial development

GMA lauds Central Bank, Monetary Board for initiatives to promote growth of SMEs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the officials of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) and members of the Monetary Board for their initiatives to support and promote the administration's priority programs to develop the small and medium term enterprises (SMEs) in urban and rural areas in the provinces.

In a meeting with banking associations at Malacañang's Heroes Hall this morning, BSP Deputy Governor Alberto Reyes reported to the President that the BSP and the Monetary Board are very supportive of the SMEs and have in fact launched a series of initiatives to promote the SME sector.

Also present in the meeting were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo and Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II.

Reyes told the President that the BSP and the Monetary Board are now conducting continuing dialogues with businessmen in the provinces to inform them about the need to promote the growth of SMEs to reinvigorate the domestic economy and win the war against poverty.

Among the previous initiatives of the central bank is the requirement for all lending institutions to set aside at least 6 percent for small enterprises and 2 percent for medium enterprises for 10 years starting August 1997 to the year 2007.

Under the new initiatives, the BSP has also deferred for one year the implementation of the common rate of 91-day Treasury-bill interest rate (from previous 91-day T-bill minus 1%) to help jump-start SME lending, the BSP Deputy Governor said.

He added that the BSP has also lowered and standardized at 6% the rate of return (RR) on Negotiable Order of Withdrawal (NOW) accounts to restore the substantial differential in favor of Trade Banks and Commercial Banks.

Reyes also said the BSP is now in the process of reviewing the present 35 percent singles borrower limit (SBL) to give wholesale government banks for SME relending more room to lend to conduit banks if this is a binding constraint.

The BSP is also considering more liberal access to branching as an incentive for banks that achieve substantial direct lending to SMEs as a percentage of total loan portfolio (TLP). The study, Reyes said, will be completed at the end of next month.

Among the other initiatives of the BSP are as follows:

- To look into the feasibility of creating a mechanism jointly with banks that will encourage them to discount/factor trade receivables of SMEs to generate reasonably priced working capital for them. One possibility is to create a liquid bankers acceptance market that can be traded among banks as another vehicle to spur further development of the capital market.

- To participate in regional consultation and/or business forums with SME beneficiaries and banking institutions in the locality to address the issues and concerns of SME in coordination with the Department of Trade and Industry as lead agency.
- To coordinate with the Philippine Information Agency (PIA) on putting up a regular radio program to be called “Buong Serbisyo at Paglilingkod” (BSP) which will be hosted by top BSP officials for purposes of informing the public on the BSP policies and procedures to implement the mandated credit allocation of the Magna Carta Law (Republic Act 6977) as well as for answering incoming phone queries from the public.
- To strongly support private sector efforts to establish comprehensive credit information bureaus where all banks share credit information and thus credit reduce risk.

GMA urges Red Cross-Red Crescent campaign vs children in war, for building strong republics

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the Red Cross and Red Crescent societies to take a more active campaign against the employment of children and minors in combat and work for the building of strong republics across the Asia-Pacific and Middle East regions.

During a luncheon meeting with the delegates to the Sixth Asia-Pacific-Middle East Regional Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies in Malacañang, the President also lauded the efforts of the Red Cross and the Red Crescent for alleviating the pain of events around the world that kill, maim and displace people and cause untold sufferings.

The President called on the Red Cross and Red Crescent to elevate other issues related to conflict or terrorism to a higher place in their action and advocacy plan.

“One is an active campaign, I hope, against the employment of children and minors in combat,” the President said, noting that just a week ago, she attended a surrender ceremony of former communist rebels wherein she saw how the youth were recruited at such an early age to wage war against the government.

“I ask for your support and cooperation in facing this serious challenge to the community of civilized nations,” the President said.

The President also called on the two humanitarian organizations to work for the building of strong republics across the regions “so that we can try to endure the collective security against terror and transnational crime and build societies that would help one another defeat poverty.”

“This is my call on the other side of our equally great effort to build the institution of human dignity and institutions – institutions like yours – that make for a just, human and peaceful society. For institutions like yours are indispensable institutions of good governance and strong republics,” she said.

The affair at the Palace was also attended by Princess Margriet of The Netherlands, who is the chairperson of the Standing Commission of the International Federation of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies.

For Princess Margriet’s attendance, the President said she feels a sense of déjà vu because a generation ago, during the time of her father, the late President Diosdado Macapagal, Queen Beatrix, then the Crown Princess, also visited the Philippines and “my father hosted a party for her in this very same hall.”

“I’m very honored and we are all honored as Filipinos that Princess Margriet is here. Because causes are more successful when there are symbols, and Princess Margriet is a symbol. She epitomizes the woman in humanitarian work around the world. I’m glad, Your Highness, that you’re gracing the conference and providing it with inspiration,” she said.

The President said the work of humanitarian organizations like the Red Cross and Red Crescent alleviates much of the pain of events that kill, maim, displace and cause untold suffering among human beings.

“It’s our challenge to persevere even against seemingly insurmountable odds in a world of conflict,” she said as she noted that the Red Cross has been a partner of the Philippines for a long time.

The conference focuses on three areas: Health, Population Movement and Disasters.

As she continues to work to steer the country back on track, the President said she hopes to expand to tenfold a government program she has started that would cut in half the price of medicines most often purchased by the poor.

She also noted that the government now provides health insurance for millions of poor Filipinos.

The President also said her administration is working on developing the infrastructure and logistics backbone that would hopefully combine to disperse urban development and decongest Metro Manila.

“This would open up new options for the urban sector to improve the quality of life. For example, affordable and dependable mass transport for the surrounding provinces in Metro Manila will make it possible to choose to establish a wholesome family life in the countryside where the cost of living is less while still working in the city,” she said.

The President also thanked the Red Cross for giving assistance to the evacuees of the recent war in Mindanao.

Also in attendance during the testimonial lunch were the Chair of the Asia and Pacific Conference Planning Committee and Member of the Philippine National Red Cross (PNRC) Board of Governors Mario Nery; International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement President Don Manuel Suarez del Toro; and PNRC Board of Governors chairman Brig. Gen. Jaime Canatoy.

GMA thanks UNIDO for continued support to RP’s industrial development

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today thanked officials of the United Nations Industrial Development Organizations (UNIDO) for their continued assistance to the industrial development and the anti-poverty program of the Philippines.

The President also lauded the UNIDO for its plans to launch a separate small and medium enterprise (SME) project in Mindanao in September next year.

“Thank you and we will welcome your support for that. Just to inform you, the SME is my priority program right now,” the President told UNIDO Director General Carlos Alfredo Magarinos during his courtesy call this afternoon at Malacanang’s Music Room.

During their brief conversation, the President assured Magarinos that her administration will try to maximize the UNIDO assistance for industrial development in the Philippines.

“Industrial development is very important to us in order to help the global economy to recover,” the President told Magarinos.

In his remarks, Magarinos informed the President that since 1998 UNIDO has addressed financial administration problems of many countries by providing them with industrial development to generate more employment.

Magarinos also advised the President to continue her strong leadership, maintain her political will to resolve all problems and pursue her strong commitment to fight local and international terrorism.

GMA asks petro-chem industry leaders to remain competitive

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the leaders of the country's petrochemical industry that her administration is working to remove tariff distortions to make the sector more competitive.

"We want you to remain competitive in the market," the President told the downstream petrochemical associations, in a meeting in Malacañang.

Those who met with the President were officials of the Philippine Plastic Company Inc., Philippine Electrical, Electronics and Allied Industries Federation, Association of Home Appliance Mfg's, and Consumer Electronic Products Mfg's Association.

The officials informed the President that they oppose the proposed suspension of the reduction of tariff rates for mid-stream petrochem and resins producers under the ASEAN free trade concept.

They said the suspension would only prolong tariff distortion and this would be detrimental to the growth of the industry.

With the President in the meeting were Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Alex Teng of the Philippine Plastic Industry Association Inc., and industrialist Raul Concepcion.

GMA witnesses signing of M.O.A. restructuring national steel

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today witnessed the signing of a Memorandum of Agreement on the restructuring of the National Steel Corporation.

The MOA, signed by the various shareholders of the firm as well as the various creditors of the NSC at the Ceremonial Hall this morning, will effect write-downs or write-offs by the Malaysian investments "so that while they now own about 90 percent of the entire firm, it will now be reduced to 20 percent ownership," Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II said.

"So the value of what they've invested, about $700 million, will now be reduced so that they would now be owning the equivalent of about P2 billion (about $40 million)," Roxas added.

Meanwhile, the creditors, who have an accumulated outstanding exposure to NSC of about P18 billion, will be left with P2 billion in loans and the balance converted into equity representing 80 percent ownership of the corporation.

The present shareholders of NSC include the Danaharta, the Malaysian government's equivalent of the Asset Privatization Trust (APT). On the Philippine side, the National Development Corp. also holds a minority stake. So does Marubeni Corporation of Japan.

Among the creditors of National Steel are 16 Philippine-based banks, including some foreign banks with Philippine operation. The Philippine-based banks, led by Philippine National Bank, have an exposure of about P18 billion, including accumulated interest and penalties.

The investment by the Malaysians is estimated at about $700 million.

In 1999, the NSC ceased operations. The plant closed down and shortly thereafter, the firm filed for rehabilitation and subsequently receivership with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The entire process was embroiled in a number of shareholder vs. creditor vs. shareholder acrimony as threats of suits, actual pleadings, and court actions filed back and forth ensued among the various participants until in 2001, the President stepped in and instructed the Department of Trade and Industry to look for a solution.

Roxas said the key event in all of these was the state visit by the President to Malaysia in late 2001, when the National Steel issue was made a part of the bilateral one-on-one conversation between the President and Prime Minister Mahathir.

Before NSC folded up in 1999, it was one of the biggest contributors to the country's economic development.

It was paying every year almost P1 billion in taxes to the national government, P200 million in real estate taxes to the city of Iligan, was employing almost 4,000 people, buying almost 70 percent of the total power output of the National Power Corporation in the region and was providing livelihood to countless people doing downstream business in the area.

Among those who attended the signing are Iligan Mayor Franklin Quijano, SEC Chairman Lilia Bautista, Land Bank of the Philippines president Margarito Teves, PNB president Lorenzo Tan and Iligan Rep. Abdullah Dimaporo.

Statement of the President

I have authorized Justice Secretary Hernando Perez to go on a 30-day leave starting tomorrow in order for him to focus on refuting the accusations made against him by the congressman from Manila.

This is also necessary in order that the functioning of the Justice Department, one of the most critical agencies of the executive branch, is not in the least affected by the allegations made against its head.

I expect his accuser, Representative Mark Jimenez, to prove to our people within this 30-day period, that his isn't a political game, or a strategy to evade extradition proceedings against him. The congressman must produce within this 30-day period credible indication that the Justice Secretary extorted money, as he alleges, from the congressman.

If he cannot provide credible indications – and I am not demanding evidence that can stand up in court, but merely plausible substantiation – the congressman must apologize directly to the Justice Secretary and to the Congress, which he has used as a forum to hurl his charges. If he is able to do so, let justice take its course wherever the evidence leads to.

As Chief Executive, I am issuing this direct order to the incoming Officer-in-Charge of the Justice Department and the National Bureau of Investigation to organize a special team to acquire and evaluate all the evidence the Manila congressman claims he has or can produce.

Jimenez has also offered publicly to open his foreign bank accounts for scrutiny to prove his accusations. I am directing the Department of Foreign Affairs to assist the National Bureau of Investigation and the Justice Department to undertake talks with foreign governments or their banking regulatory offices to allow the scrutiny of these pertinent foreign bank accounts.

A basic foundation of our Republic is the rule of law. Nobody is above the law. But basic decency requires that one must have proof before he can accuse any man of any wrongdoing.

Camacho: gov't has no intention of taking over Meralco

Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho today stressed that it was never the intention of the government to take over the Manila Electric Corporation (MERALCO) when he submitted a draft to the Lopez Group specifying how the government could help in maintaining the financial viability of the firm.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Camacho said what was contemplated in the draft was a "share-taking" situation that was meant to forge a partnership and consolidate the different interests of the various stakeholders in the public utility firm.

"We have one common interest here with everybody, including the Lopez Group, the creditors, the other stakeholders and the public, and that is to know the financial viability of the company. That is the one common interest," Camacho said.

Camacho said the draft he gave to the Lopez Group was just a starting point and strictly for discussion purposes only.

"We would like to invite their reaction, their comment and their proposed changes, anything that they want, anything they don't want out of the draft. That was really the spirit in which it was given," he said. "Because you know, we could have a month of verbal discussions or telephone conversations and lead to nowhere unless you start working on something."

Camacho also said the timing of the draft, which was three days before the Supreme Court decision on the matter, was only incidental. He said the adverse decision of the Supreme Court was clearly something that people were concerned about.

"That's why we were trying to look for solutions regardless of whatever that decision is, of making sure that the financial viability of the company is maintained," he said.

"What is contemplated here is a share-taking situation because anticipating that there would be some financial instability in the company because of those, you know, adverse decisions that they were anticipating, we deemed that there would be a period of concern from the public, from the stakeholders, from creditors, from the shareholders, financial markets, and the public."

"It was important to be able to promote a structure, a situation where really government is working with them in a form of partnership. It could be like a confidence-building measure and that was really what the draft was intended for," Camacho said.

Camacho orders review of B.I.R. ruling on tax exemptions

In an effort to address the country's fiscal deficit and improve revenue collections, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho today ordered the review of all the rulings of the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) that provide tax exemptions based on their interpretation of the country's tax laws.

Briefing members of the Malacañang Press Corps this afternoon, Camacho said the review will be undertaken in two months by a three-man team to be headed by Finance Undersecretary Cornelio Hizon together with BIR Commissioner Guillermo Parayno and Lina Esurena of the National Tax Research Center.

“The objective of this review, which we hope to complete by the end of January, is to harmonize the different tax rulings, because it has been observed that there are tax rulings that contradict each other,” Camacho said.

Camacho also said that the project is designed to tighten up on those BIR rulings, particularly those that involve tax exemptions.

“So that if it is deemed appropriate from the review that certain rulings are contracting, they should be harmonized. And if certain tax rulings have provided loopholes to our tax collection, then they should be revoked or repealed,” he added.

Camacho pointed out that his directive for a review of all BIR rulings “is really part of our efforts to address our fiscal deficit problem and improve our revenue collection.”

“It has been observed that loopholes exist because of varying BIR rulings that have been given, over a period of time, especially after the promulgation of the Comprehensive Tax Reform Program. So, this is really part and parcel of our measures to address our fiscal deficit,” he said.

Kua term as PTA Chief expired on Oct. 2, says Malacañang

The term of Nixon T. Kua as General Manager of the Philippine Tourism Authority has expired as of October 2, 2002.

This was the assertion of the Office of the Presidential Legal Counsel today as it justified the appointment of Kua's replacement.

Presidential Decree 564, as amended by Presidential Decree 1400, which created the Philippine Tourism Authority, provided:

Section 23-A. General Manager – Appointment and Tenure – The General Manager shall be appointed by the President of the Philippines and shall serve for a term of six (6) years unless sooner removed for cause; Provided, That upon the expiration of his term, he shall serve as such until his successor shall have been appointed and qualified.

The Presidential Legal Counsel opined that the reckoning date for the commencement of the term of office of the first PTA General Manager after the issuance of Presidential Decree 1400 shall be the date of effectivity of PD 1400 and not on the date of the first appointment.

In view thereof, the Presidential Legal Counsel explained that the appropriate starting point of the term of office for the PTA General Manager is October 3, 1978 and the terms of the person subsequently appointed to the said position shall be reckoned from said date, as follows:

First Term October 3, 1978 to October 2, 1984

Second Term October 3, 1984 to October 2, 1990

Third Term October 3, 1990 to October 2, 1996

Fourth Term October 3, 1996 to October 2, 2002

Fifth Term October 3, 2002 to October 2, 2008

The Presidential Legal Counsel explained that there is a difference between term and tenure. In a Supreme Court case, Republic vs. Imperial, the term of office was distinguished from the tenure of the incumbent.

The term means the time during which the officer may claim to hold office as of right and fixes the interval after which several incumbents shall succeed one another.

The tenure, on the other hand, represents the period during which the incumbent actually holds the office.

The tenure may be shorter than the term for reasons within or beyond the power of the incumbent.

The same ruling said that the tenure of the appointee may be shortened but not his term.

Since Kua was appointed on November 7, 2000, his term of office shall be for the fourth term in the table above or from October 3, 1996 to October 2, 2002.

Thus Kua may continue to hold office until the expiration of his term or unless otherwise removed for cause or any other legal ground.

GMA gives medals, cash rewards and promotes four army troops wounded in NPA ambush

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today honored four wounded Army soldiers with medals, spot promotion and cash rewards for their bravery and courage in responding to a distress call from their comrades who were ambushed by New People's Army rebels in the vicinity of Barangay Villaflor in Puerto Galera, Oriental Mindoro last Sunday.

The President visited the wounded soldiers – Staff Sgt. Elmer Arimando, Sgts. Romeo Bustarde and John Delizo, and Cpl. Anrico Almoguera – at the Fort Bonifacio Hospital in Taguig where they are recuperating from wounds they sustained in fighting the NPA ambush.

She pinned on each soldier the Wounded Personnel Medal, gave cash assistance of P50,000 to Sergeant Bustarde who sustained a major injury and P20,000 each to the three other troops who sustained minor injuries, and then promoted all four to the next higher rank.

The soldiers, from the 16th Infantry Battalion, Second Division of the Philippine Army, were part of the reinforcement responding to a call for assistance from a group of about 30 soldiers on board two vehicles who were ambushed last Sunday by about 50 NPA rebels in the mountainous area of Puerto Galera.

The distressed soldiers were led by Col. Jovito Palaparan of the 204th Infantry Brigade, who was also himself wounded in the encounter with the rebels.

Sergeant Arimando, the leader of the responding troops, said they were also met with a hail of bullets and explosions when they arrived at the ambush scene.

Arimando said that fortunately, none of them died in the encounter.

The President's Day: November 28, 2002

28 NOVEMBER 2002

- Economy maintains growth momentum, expands by 3.8 percent in 3rd quarter
- GMA orders deactivation of SPDA
- Short stint as AFP chief not sole measure of good leadership, says GMA
- GMA presides over AFP change of command from 'Poet General' to 'Chuck Norris' of RP
- GMA calls on people to do away with too much politics
- GMA to make 4-day state visit to Japan
- GMA issues A.O. designating OVP to oversee, supervise, implement development projects

Economy maintains growth momentum, expands by 3.8 percent in 3rd quarter

The economy maintained its growth momentum in the third quarter of the year, expanding by 3.8 percent from a year earlier as growth in the non-agricultural sector offset the slight decline in agriculture.

Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante B. Canlas, who is also secretary general of the National Economic and Development Authority, said the real gross domestic product (GDP) in the first three quarters of the year expanded to 4.1 percent, taking into account the adjusted second quarter growth of 4.8 percent from an initial estimate of 4.5 percent. GDP is the value of all goods and services produced domestically.

"We are confident about realizing the government's projections for the Philippine economy in 2002: 4.0-4.5 percent for GDP growth and 4.5 -5.0 percent for GNP," Canlas said.

The National Statistical Coordination Board (NSCB) said the GDP growth for the first three quarters of 2002 is 1.1 percentage points higher than its 3.0 percent performance in 2001.

With the Net Factor Income from Abroad (NFIA) showing a 6.0% improvement over its level last year, the country's Gross National Product (GNP) increased by 4.2 percent.

The NCSB said per capita GDP rose by 1.9 percent, from 0.8 percent growth registered in the first nine months of last year. Similarly, per capita GNP moved up by 2.1 percent while per capita PCE (personal consumption expenditure) grew by 1.6 percent during the period.

The NCSB, an agency under NEDA, said the services sector maintained its economic strength, contributing 2.3 percentage points to the GDP growth. It posted a 5.1% increase in the first three quarters of the year, higher than its 4.2 percent upswing last year.

All of the services sectors showed improved growth during the period, except for the trade sector which maintained its growth of 5.5 percent, the NCSB added.

The statistical board said the growth rate of finance increased by 0.9 percentage points from 1.7 percent in 2001 to 2.6 percent in 2002 while ownership of dwellings and real state recovered from its negative performance last year, reflecting a positive 1.4 percent growth.

According to the NCSB, the industry sector posted a 3.8 percent increment in the first three quarters of 2002, 2.3 percentage points higher than its 1.5 percent growth recorded a year ago. The growth of the industry sector can be attributed to the recovery of mining and quarrying and construction sectors.

Canlas said the strong growth of industry and services indicates that the policies of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration designed for macroeconomic stability and long term industrial restructuring are working. These policies contribute to the recovery of industry and the self-sustaining growth in services, he added.

Canlas also said the administration's commitment to the Agriculture and Fisheries Modernization Act is transforming agriculture. The growth of poultry and livestock and fishery attests to this, Canlas added.

On the side of aggregate demand, the overall resilience of the economy is due to private consumption, which grew at its fastest rate of 4.1 percent in four and a half years, and robust investments in fixed capital, Canlas said.

"We attribute the healthy growth of private domestic demand to policies that have kept inflation and interest rates on a downtrend in the midst of rising fuel prices: reduced tariff rates, timely management of rice stocks, policies to reduce electricity prices, and sound monetary policy," Canlas said.

Consumption also drew strength from stable income growth of overseas Filipino workers, Canlas said. However, government consumption retreated in line with the government's efforts to curb the deficit, he added.

"We expect the fall in government spending to be temporary in view of the Administration's enhanced tax collection efforts," the socioeconomic planning secretary said.

Moving forward, sustained growth of personal consumption spending, replenishment of reduced inventory levels, and continuing growth of the country's external trade partners will maintain the economic growth momentum, Canlas said.

"The expected recovery of agriculture, specifically crops, in the fourth quarter, along with the continuing strength of the non-agricultural sector will keep production humming in 2002 and beyond," Canlas added.

GMA orders deactivation of SPDA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the immediate deactivation of the Southern Philippines Development Authority (SPDA) and declared vacant effective immediately all positions in the board of directors, board of advisers and the administrator.

The President, through Executive Order No. 149, created a Task Force to oversee the deactivation process of SPDA. Presidential Assistant for Mindanao Jesus Dureza has been designated head of the Task Force with representatives from the Department of Budget and Management (DBM), National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) and the Office of the Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process as members.

The Task Force was tasked to recommend to the President not later than March 30, 2003 and, subsequently, implement the dispositive action with reference to the functions, personnel, assets and liabilities of SPDA. It was also asked to safeguard the assets of SPDA pending their final disposition.

The Task Force was also directed by the President to file criminal and administrative charges against any SPDA official or personnel who may be found liable for any wrongdoing in the course of the audit of its operations.

"Deactivation" is a winding up process within presidential prerogative, short of abolition. Only the Congress can abolish SPDA as it was created by legislative fiat, Presidential Decree 690, as amended. SPDA is an agency attached of the Office of the President.

SPDA personnel, except those who shall be needed for the skeletal force, whether permanent, contractual, consultant or job-hired, are deemed separated from the service effective December 30, 2002. SPDA personnel qualified for retirement may elect optional retirement.

All benefits, including payment of leave credits, will be paid within one month from the filing of the necessary clearances and other documents by SPDA personnel.

Displaced SPDA personnel shall be given priority in hiring for existing vacant positions in other government agencies, subject to compliance with established standards set by the receiving agencies. Said transfer or re-employment with other agencies shall be exempt from the prohibition on new hiring.

E.O. 149 said some of the functions of SPDA are also being performed by other existing agencies of the bureaucracy. It further noted that there is a need to constantly monitor the overlapping functions among the agencies of government to avoid duplication of work and in order to streamline the functions of the bureaucracy.

Under Section 74 of Republic Act No. 9162 or FY 2002 General Appropriations Act, the President may direct changes in the organization and key positions in any department, bureau or agency.

Short stint as AFP chief not sole measure of good leadership, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that the length of command in the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) is not the most relevant trait of a good military leadership.

In her speech during the AFP change of command ceremony in Camp Aguinaldo this morning, the President scored her critics for questioning the short terms of former Chiefs of Staff Generals Roy Cimatu and Benjamin Defensor.

“I am unperturbed by criticisms of the short terms of the last two chiefs of staff. For it is leadership, not time, that is the sole measure of command. And I shall continue to judge the command only by a high standard of merit and professionalism,” the President said.

The President believes that there is no essential relationship between the brief stints of the last two chiefs of staff and the stability of the Armed Forces.

“Our last two chiefs of staff are our best argument that the length of command is not the most relevant trait of good military leadership,” she said.

The President said that under General Defensor, the AFP started to untie the “Gordian knots” of local terrorism, insurgency and poverty through successful military operations against the Abu Sayyaf and the local communist movements.

The President then enjoined General Dionisio Santiago, the new AFP chief, to “continue untying that Gordian knot.”

She assured the military organization that she would continue to judge the command of the AFP only by the high standard of merit and professionalism.

Present during the ceremony were former President Fidel V. Ramos, House Speaker Jose De Venecia, Jr., National Security Adviser Roilo Golez, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, and Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Secretary Eduardo Ermita.

GMA presides over AFP change of command from ‘Poet General’ to ‘Chuck Norris’ of RP

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presided over the change of command in the Armed Forces of the Philippines from the “Poet General” to the “Chuck Norris of the Delta Force of the country.”

The President handed over the saber of command of the AFP from outgoing Gen. Benjamin Defensor, whom she called the Poet General, to General Dionisio R. Santiago, whom she described as the Chuck Norris of the Delta Force, during ceremonies held in Camp Aguinaldo, Quezon City, this morning.

In her speech, President said that in her 20 months of leadership, she has presided over the AFP change of command from the “Philosopher General,” now Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, to Gen. Diomedio Villanueva, to the “Thinking General,” Roy Cimatu, to Defensor and Santiago.

The President said all her choices for AFP chief of staff have shown outstanding leadership, loyalty to the Constitution, and faith in the change of command and the Commander in Chief.

The President said General Santiago, who headed the Special Operations Command (Socom), put his career on the line for the people in the events leading to January 2001.

“And that is why I trust him with my life. I trust him, I entrust to him the leadership of the Armed Forces of the Philippines,” the President added.

Two crucial moments stand out in the career of Santiago: January 2001 when he decided to support the people’s clamor for the restoration of moral ascendancy to the tarnished image of the presidency while he was in command of the Army’s Socom and May 1, 2001, his successful defense of Malacañang against groups attempting to wrest control of power while he was overall commander of Joint Task Force Libra.

As Socom chief, he was the overall leader of an elite group of Scout Rangers and Special Forces men.

The President said Santiago conceptualized the formation of Light Reaction Companies in all tactical units of the Philippine Army, which has become one of the most cost-effective strategies of counterinsurgency and counter-terrorism.

She said Santiago is comfortable in the field as in the boardroom, having served as assistant chief of staff for plans of the Philippine Army, director of the National Security Studies, trade attaché at the Philippine Embassy in Kuala Lumpur, and attaché at the Philippine Consulate in Seattle, Washington.

The President said: “To me, the greatest part of (Santiago’s) preparation for his present work is not really in his biodata. Most of all, to me, from what I have seen of him, I consider (Santiago) as the Socom Commander; that’s why I call him the Delta Force and the Chuck Norris.”

General Santiago is a seasoned combat officer whose expertise was molded by the divergent threat environments in Luzon, the Visayas and Mindanao. He has also had diverse postings in government agencies and diplomatic missions.

Santiago belongs to Philippine Military Academy (PMA) Class ’70. He is married to Hermogena M. Santiago and is blessed with three children – Mylene Marie, Marco Jonet and Melon Carlo.

GMA calls on people to do away with too much politics

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the Filipino people to do away with too much politics as she said that our political system, which is based on patronage, is largely to be blamed for the country’s economic woes.

In her policy speech at the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) change of command ceremony held this morning at Camp Aguinaldo in Quezon City, the President said that too much politics that has contributed to a weak state is a collective blame “that we must all share in,” admitting that she herself is a politician.

“What is important is the willingness to change. And over time, this can happen,” the President said.

The President cited three symptoms of a weak state that her administration, as well as the administrations before hers, have tried to correct.

First, she said, is the large gap between the rich and the poor, a gap that has been exploited for political ends.

The second is that the country's political system is based on patronage and ultimately corruption to support patronage, the President said.

She also said that in recent years, destabilization, black propaganda and character assassination have been used as political tools by some unscrupulous individuals or groups.

"The common word in this is politics, too much politics, and that's why I am glad we have an Armed Forces that is above politics," the President said.

The President recalled that in her first State of the Nation Address (SONA), she said that the ultimate goal of great revolutions from Bonifacio to EDSA was to transfer power from the traditional economic and political bosses to the people.

"Our task is to complete this revolution. The enemy to beat is ourselves, when we spread division rather than unity, when we put ourselves above country, and profit above fairness, when we make politics replace patriotism in our country's hour of need," the President said.

GMA to make 4-day state visit to Japan

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is making a four-day state visit to Japan, the biggest official development assistance (ODA) provider to the Philippines, from December 2 to 5.

In a briefing during the 63rd Cabinet Meeting in Malacañang, Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo Siazon, Jr. said the theme of the forthcoming state visit of the President is "Philippines-Japan Partnership for Peace and Prosperity."

Ambassador Siazon underscored the significance of the visit in terms of strengthening the bilateral relations between the Philippines and Japan and also in terms of the personal relations of the President with the present Emperor and Empress of Japan.

"This will be the first state visit by a Philippine President to Japan in the 21st century, the last being that of President Fidel V. Ramos in 1993," Siazon said.

According to Siazon, Japan only accommodates four to five state visits a year.

The present Emperor and Empress visited the Philippines in 1962, when Diosdado Macapagal the President's father, was President. At that time, President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo was a teenager.

The visit of then Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko was a very difficult chapter in the Philippine-Japan relations, Siazon said.

He pointed out that the visit of the Crown Prince and Princess of Japan started a new phase of relations. "It was economic development, and Japan from that time on, assisted the Philippines' various programs on economic development," he said.

This visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo also completes the cycle of relationship she has established with the Emperor and the Empress.

“Because now, she is going in her own right as head of state of the Philippines. It also marks the beginning of a new phase of relations between Japan and the Philippines wherein before we used to be recipient of mainly technical assistance from Japan,” Siazon said.

Siazon said that during the President’s visit, not only economic cooperation will be discussed. “We are also talking about peace, meaning security in the region, and prosperity, meaning not only our own economic development but contributing to the economic development in the region,” he said.

Aside from the traditional state call on the Emperor and the Empress, the President will also give a speech before the Diet or Parliament where she will underscore the importance of Japanese relations with the Philippines.

Siazon said only selected world leaders are invited to address the Japanese parliament.

Previous speakers included President Carlos P. Garcia, Helmut Kohl of Germany, President Nelson Mandela and US President Bill Clinton. United State President George Bush also spoke before the Diet in February this year.

GMA issues A.O. designating OVP to oversee, supervise, implement development projects

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has issued Administrative Order No. 45 designating the Office of the Vice President (OVP) to oversee, supervise and implement agreed development programs.

In signing A.O No. 45, the Chief Executive said there exists a vital need to promote, accelerate and implement various socio-economic programs.

A joint statement issued by the President and Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr., on July 2, 2002 identified as vital programs the Overseas Filipino Investment Bond, the housing program for Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs) and the establishment of an integrated steel plant in Mindanao.

The President said the establishment of a seafarer’s welfare program is another vital program, adding that there are other socio-economic programs, particularly those involving the development of Mindanao, that may hereafter be agreed to be covered within this A.O.

“The OVP shall oversee, supervise and implement all the aforementioned programs. The OVP shall be the representative of the government in the oversight and supervision of such programs until their completion,” she said.

She added that the concerned government agencies institutionally in charge of the relevant projects under these programs shall be placed under the oversight and supervision of the OVP with respect to the relevant projects to ensure smooth, timely, effective implementation under the agreed programs.

Pursuant to its mandate, the President said, the OVP shall exercise the following powers and functions:

- Advise the President in matters concerning the aforementioned programs, and provide analysis and recommendations on policies and operational issues, particularly those relative to Mindanao development;
- Review all aspects related to the aforementioned programs, recommend short and long term measures and appropriate actions to address policy, institutional implementation, and operational issues and concerns, particularly those relative to Mindanao development. The OVP shall therefore oversee and supervise the implementation and completion of all relevant projects under these programs;
- Call upon any agency of the government for such assistance as may be necessary to address problems affecting the relevant projects;
- Promote foreign and local investment opportunities related to these programs, and as necessary, prioritize relevant projects in cooperation with national government agencies, local government units, and other stakeholders;

- Call for assistance of all presidential appointees, on areas that may be appropriate, to promote and accelerate the socio-economic development of the people in Mindanao;
- Enjoin all elected officials in areas affected by these programs to continue to perform their functions relative to the socio-economic projects covering their respective areas of responsibility as provided by law; and
- Perform all other functions that the President may direct.

Under A.O. No. 45, the OVP is authorized to formulate the organizational structure of its secretariat and engage the services of consultants, as may be approved by the President.

The President also said that funding shall be taken from such available resources as may be determined by the Department of Budget and Management. She added that appropriations for the succeeding years shall be incorporated in the budget proposal for the OVP.

She noted that all executive issuances, rules and regulations or parts thereof which are inconsistent with Administrative Order No. 45 are hereby revoked, amended, or modified accordingly.

The President said A.O. No. 45 shall take effect immediately.

- GMA names Coronel Anti-Smuggling Center head
- GMA lauds accomplishments of exporters

Statement of Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye

The use of the term "Mindanao Czar" is not accurate.

Administrative Order 45 covers very specific programs some of which have no reference to Mindanao, such as the overseas Filipino workers bond, housing for overseas Filipino workers, and establishment of a seafarers welfare program.

These are the specific programs which VP Teofisto Guingona Jr. agreed to oversee.

The term "Czar" does not appear anywhere in the administrative order and its use is entirely my own interpretation.

The clarification is being made to forestall any possible misinterpretation of the scope of new responsibilities being attached to the Office of the Vice President.

Vice President Guingona also said he is willing to be active in those programs mentioned in the Administrative Order, particularly those involving the OFWs and seafarers, and perform the functions stated in the AO, but will not do so in a Cabinet official's capacity because of his stand on certain policy issues which may not be consistent with those of the administration.

GMA orders DOJ, PAGC to probe, prosecute all those involved in PIATCO contracts

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Department of Justice (DOJ) and the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) to investigate and prosecute all those found to be culpable in the five contracts of the Philippine International Air Terminals Corporation (PIATCO) on the construction of the Terminal 3 of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA), which the Executive Department's legal offices have found to be null and void.

The President, who issued this statement during the 2002 Golden Shell Awards in Malacañang, said the Office of the Solicitor General and the DOJ have determined that all five agreements covering the NAIA Terminal 3, most of which are contracted in previous administrations, are null and void.

"I cannot honor contracts which the Executive Branch's legal offices have concluded are null and void. I, therefore, order the Department of Justice and the PAGC to investigation any anomalies and prosecute all those found culpable in connection with the NAIA contract," the President said.

The President, however, said that despite all of the problems involving the PIATCO contracts, she guarantees that the new airport will be opened.

"I'm assuring our people, our travelers, our exporters (that) my administration will open the terminal even if it requires invoking the whole powers of the presidency under the Constitution," she said.

She added that the new airport would be safe, secure and smoothly functioning, a world-class airport.

She said the PIATCO issue is not just a simple problem but a test-case of the integrity and efficiency of the Republic in building the infrastructure the nation requires.

“An international airport is any nation’s gateway to the world, the first contact of foreigners to the Philippine Republic, especially those foreigners who have not been in contact with the wonderful exports of the Philippine economy, those foreigners who have not had the benefit of enjoying Philippine export products,” the President said.

The President further noted that it is not only a matter of opening the new airport but making sure that it is a world-class airport that operates without any hitches at all and without a slightest risk to travelers.

“It’s also emerging as a test-case of my administration’s commitment to fight corruption, to free our state from the hold of any vested interest,” she said.

GMA dares Perez accusers to go to Ombudsman

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today challenged the critics of Justice Secretary Hernando Perez to bring up their charges against the Cabinet member to the Office of the Ombudsman, the proper office that would address their evidence, if there were any.

The President made this statement during the 2002 Golden Shell Awards at the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang.

“I appeal to his accuser, rather than filing your charges in the media, file it with the Office of the Ombudsman. Submit your documents and speed up the investigation,” the President said.

She noted that the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission is also doing its own investigation.

The President earlier authorized Secretary Perez to go on a 30-day leave in order for him to focus on refuting the accusations made against him in the House of Representatives by the congressman from Manila.

She earlier said that she expects Perez’s accuser, Rep. Mark Jimenez, to prove to the people within this 30-day period that his action isn’t just a political game or a strategy to evade extradition proceedings against him.

“If he cannot provide credible indications – and I am not demanding evidence that can stand up in court, but merely plausible substantiation – the congressman must apologize directly to the Justice Secretary and to the Congress, which he has used as a forum to hurl his charges. If he is able to do so, let justice take its course wherever the evidence leads to,” she said.

GMA declares 8,100 hectares of Compostela Valley as mineral reservation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has designated 8,100 hectares in Monkayo, Compostela Valley as mineral reservation, being an environmentally critical area thereby not eligible for direct mining operations by private individuals or entities.

Under Proclamation No. 297, the President also declared that mining operations in the mineral reservation can only be undertaken by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) directly, subject to payment of just compensation that may be due to the legitimate and existing claimants, or through a qualified contractor, subject to existing rights.

The President also directed the DENR to formulate and issue the appropriate guidelines, including the establishment of an environmental and social fund, to implement the conversion of the 8,100 hectares into a mineral reservation.

The proclamation is pursuant to the Philippine Mining Act of 1995 which states that the Chief Executive may, upon recommendation of the Director of Mines and Geosciences, through the DENR Secretary, and when the national interest so requires, establish mineral reservations where mining operations shall be undertaken directly by the DENR or through a contractor.

The proclamation is aimed at maintaining a rational and orderly balance between socio-economic growth and environmental protection, the President said.

The 8,100 hectares are part of an area excluded in Proclamation No. 369, series of 1931, which declared that certain tracts of public land situated in the then provinces of Davao, Agusan and Surigao, with an area of approximately 1,927,400 hectares, are not for settlement and disposition.

The President said that since 1983 when gold deposits were found within the said 8,100 hectares located in Monkayo, Compostela Valley, unregulated small-to-medium scale mining operations have been undertaken causing serious environmental, health, and peace and order problems.

The declaration of the 8,100 hectares of land as mineral reservation, according to the President, is in the national interest to prevent the further degradation of the environment and to resolve the health and peace and order problems spawned by the unregulated mining operations in the area.

Furthermore, the President said, before the declaration of the 8,100 hectares as mineral reservation, the Director of Mines and Geosciences has conducted public hearings on September 6, 9, and 11, 2002, to allow concerned sectors and communities to air their views on the issue.

GMA names Coronel Anti-Smuggling Center head

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today designated former Police General Miguel Coronel as head of the Anti-Smuggling Intelligence and Investigation Center that is tasked to handle the smuggling that takes place outside of the Bureau of Customs area.

The Chief Executive made the announcement during her speech at the 10th Golden Shell Awards and Top Export Performers Award held this morning at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall.

The President described Coronel as a "very reputable man with that sterling reputation for integrity."

"He (Coronel) will be the head of the new Anti-Smuggling Intelligence and Investigation Center, and with their combined efforts, the goal is to increase tax and customs revenues to reduce the deficit and reduce the interest rates that you, the exporters, have to pay," she told the awardees.

Prior to his appointment, Coronel was Executive Director of the Dangerous Drugs Board and the National Drug Law Enforcement and Prevention Coordinating Center (DEP Center), which was created through Executive Order No. 61 issued on January 15, 1999.

DEP Center was specifically tasked to orchestrate and consolidate the drug law enforcement and prevention efforts of the national government agencies, local government units and non-government organizations for a more effective anti-drug campaign.

A native of Pampanga, Coronel earned his Bachelor of Science degree at the Philippine Military Academy and graduated No. 5 out of 65 graduates in 1970. He took up his Master of Arts in Economics at the University of the Philippines School of Economics in 1975 and Master of Arts in Political Science in 1972 also at the UP College of Arts and Sciences.

Among the awards he received include The Outstanding Young Men (TOYM) 1986 Award from Jaycees International and Gerry Roxas Foundation, PMA Cavalier Award for 1992 as an Outstanding Alumnus (Staff Function), Anvil Award from the Public Relations Society of the Philippines, and Kalayaan Award 1987.

Coronel is married to the former Winniefreda Robillos with whom he has two children.

GMA lauds accomplishments of exporters

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the accomplishments of Philippine exporters, saying they contribute immensely to the growth of the economy as well as project the good image of the Filipino workers to the world.

In her keynote speech at the 10th Golden Shell Awards and Top Export Performers Award at the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang, the President said the Filipino and Philippine-resident exporters deserve credit for an 8.8 percent growth in exports despite a fairly flat overall growth in exporters worldwide.

“Your accomplishment, I would say, is the triumph of Filipino expertise in management, design and production. Your expertise is the reason why our designs and products are in such demand abroad,” the President said.

The President noted that the 10th Golden Shell awardees were able to achieve their outstanding accomplishments despite of the long-drawn challenges the world is confronting.

“Their success in the face of adversity may be attributed not only to their resilience and versatility, but to their individual competence,” she said, adding that the market-friendly policies the national government is putting in place to cushion the impact of the current crisis also helped.

The President said these market friendly policies of the government include tariff and incentives rationalization, lowering of interest rates, relaxation of stringent requirements to access financing programs and loan restructuring.

She said the government would continue relaxing access to financing programs for small and medium enterprises (SMEs).

“We have given banks incentives and policy signals to fund the SMEs,” she said.

The President also said the government is committed to long-term structural reforms to ensure continued strength in domestic demand, bolstering the diversification of the Gross Domestic Product and enlivening the climate for investment – both for the investment for the domestic market and for exports.

The Chief Executive also said the passage of the Special Asset Management Company bill, now in the bicameral committee in Congress, will free up more bank resources for exports and other projects that the government is not in a fiscal position to fund.

“This bill is not meant to just bail out banks. It is meant, first and foremost, to liquefy their assets to ease up credit and help borrowers get back into business,” she said.

The President also noted another new bill, which would make agricultural land acceptable as bank collateral and remove the rigidity of the second round land transfers under the Agrarian Reform program.

She also assured that the government is committed to sustain economic and political measures to counter the effects of global recession and terrorism.

She noted that government continues to protect national interest by making common causes with foreign countries where those interests materially overlap.

“We don’t know when or where in the whole world terror will strike again but we are doing everything to thwart its attempts or mitigate its effects,” she said.

“These measures — economic, political, security — are all designed to make the Philippines a safe and desirable place for business, a safe and desirable place for exports. Let’s not forget that sound macroeconomic management go side by side with good governance practices including leadership by example, transparency and the integrity of transactions,” the President added.

Strong Republic is only weapon against foreign control, poverty, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today declared that our only weapon against the nation's overdue struggle against foreign control and poverty is a strong Republic, one which can shield the country and set the Filipinos free from the shackles of over a hundred years of want.

In a policy speech delivered before the newly-installed officials of the National Youth Commission in Malacañang and coinciding with today's celebration of the birth of Andres Bonifacio, the President stressed "a state is weak if dominant classes or sectors control it or shape its policies, especially those dealing with the economy."

"This is our decades-old fundamental weakness. From Bonifacio at Balintawak to Cory Aquino at EDSA, we have struggled to correct this weakness by bringing power to the people," the President said

Saying she does not and will not make policy on the basis of baseless fears, the President announced the following:

- Cabinet changes: Agri-businessman and Presidential Adviser on Jobs Creation in Agriculture Luis "Cito" Lorenzo replaces Department of Agriculture Secretary Leonardo Montemayor and Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) Secretary Heherson Alvarez is replaced by noted environment expert Elisea Gozun;
- PEA issue: "On the PEA issue, arising from another of its controversial projects began in the previous administration, let me make myself very clear: I'm abolishing the Public Estates Authority," the President said.
- PIATCO issue: "The Solicitor General has submitted to the Supreme Court the government position that all five agreements covering NAIA Terminal 3 are null and void."
- MERALCO refund: "If the Supreme Court orders with finality that the refund be implemented, I will make sure that you, the consumers, get your refund."
- Budget deficit: The President said the Bureau of Customs, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and the new Anti-Smuggling Intelligence and Investigation Commission, are tasked to work harder and bring to court tax cheats. On tax cheats, the President said: "...whether you are big business or small, forget the accounting tricks, just pay your taxes and duties-or see you in court."
- $2 Million Man: The President said if the charges are true everyone involved is going to jail at least for tax evasion, in addition to bribery. She advised Rep. Mark Jimenez to "show the evidence and file the case in court" and hurry up before he is extradited;
- Economic growth: The President said in the next six months, the following will become imminent:
  1. A group of government officials will be formed to spruce up tax collection;
  2. Banks will be tapped to finance housing, small and medium enterprises (SMEs), and agriculture;
  3. Substantive improvements to improve the quality of government workforce which will include affordable housing and establishments of new government centers;
  4. For the urban dwellers, a modern transport system connecting the metropolis with its suburbs and new government centers outside Metro Manila;

5. For the rural dwellers, the new transport system will greatly reduced transportation cost of their products from their farms to urban centers;

“Other initiatives, including a program for youth empowerment, will soon reveal themselves in their implementation. I know that people have become cynical and will believe only what they see,” the President said.

She said, “trust me, you will see what serious government can do as opposed to what a merely popular government just promises.”

GMA names Lorenzo, Gozon to DA, DENR

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the appointment of Presidential Adviser for Jobs Creation Luis Lorenzo, Jr. as the new Secretary of the Department of Agriculture.

The President likewise named noted environmentalist expert Elisea Gozon as Environment and Natural Resources Secretary in place of Heherson Alvarez.

The President said Alvarez, will be moving on and turning over the DENR to his successor in the next two weeks after firming up initiatives on environment, especially toxic and hazardous waste, watershed, and the social justice program of the Macapagal-Arroyo government to build a new Diwalwal.

The President thanked Secretary Leonardo Montemayor, who came from the ranks of non-governmental organizations, for having successfully raised the voices of the small farmers.

“Now, the new law on agricultural land as collateral will open up vast opportunities for the farmers to graduate from subsistence living advocates to modernizing business practitioners.

To initiate this transformation, the President said he is appointing agri-businessman Luis Lorenzo as the new Secretary of Agriculture.

As Presidential Adviser for Jobs Creation in Agriculture for the past 14 months, Lorenzo has brought government and the private sector movers together in viable agricultural activities throughout the country.

On the initiative of the President, Lorenzo spearheaded the one-million jobs program and wielded it under a two-pronged strategy on import substitution and export development.

Through collaboration with local government executives, farmer associations and industry leaders in the rural areas, thousands of additional jobs have been created especially in the major commodities of rice, corn and coffee. Most of the beneficiaries are marginal farmers who have experienced doubling their income after joining the hybrid rice program.

Lorenzo is also the chairman of the Philippine Rice Research Institute and Cabinet Officer for Regional Development (CORD) for Region X and Caraga.

GMA abolishes PEA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced today the permanent abolition of the controversial Public Estates Authority (PEA).

The President made the announcement in her keynote address during the 139th birth anniversary celebration of country’s Great Plebeian Andres Bonifacio, at Malacañang’s Ceremonial Hall this morning.

“Let me make myself very clear: I am abolishing the Public Estates Authority. I’m abolishing it through a bill I will submit to Congress next week,” President said.

She said all assets, mostly public lands, owned by PEA shall be transferred to the appropriate agencies, which hold strictly to account the officials concerned.

The President noted that she already accepted the resignation papers of all the current members of the PEA Board, including the general manager.

“(And) now I’m dismissing the deputy general managers, the assistant general manager, and the senior corporate attorneys,” President added referring to the PEA.

With regard to the latest controversy of the agency, President also said that the issue is now in the hands of the office of the Ombudsman “for filing of the appropriate charges against all officials involved, including the old PEA Board members.”

GMA to form body to intensify tax collection

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said she would form a group of government officials who will be tasked to increase the tariff and revenue collection of the government.

In a policy speech she delivered on the occasion of the celebration of the birth anniversary of Andres Bonifacio, the President said this is intended to increase government funds for her administration’s programs on housing, small and medium enterprises (SMEs) and agriculture.

“In this country, people don’t pay the right taxes, especially those who can afford it. The Customs, the BIR, and the new Anti-Smuggling Intelligence and Investigation Commission, now led by new commissioners, must work harder so that, whether you are big business or small, forget the accounting tricks. Just pay your taxes and duties — or see you in court,” the President stressed.

Explaining the budget deficit, the President said in her first year in office, her administration was able to arrest the decline in government revenues, sustaining the ratio of 15% in 2001. “However, the decline has resumed this year as terrorism added its toll to the global recession.”

Furthermore, the President noted that following the 1997 Asian currency crisis, public revenues steadily declined – from 19% in 1997 to 17% in 1998, to 16% in 1999 to 15% in 2000.

“This trend has robbed us of the resources to spend on important initiatives,” the President said.

GMA assures PIATCO stockholder: gov’t will honor legitimate claims

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo assures the stakeholders in the Philippine International Air Terminals Company (PIATCO) that all their legitimate claims would be honored and will not be affected by the ongoing inquiry to remove the objectionable, illegal and onerous provisions in the construction and operation of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport Terminal 3 (NAIA 3).

“Let me, however, assure the stakeholders in PIATCO: your legitimate claims will be honored to the last peso and the terminal will open early next year,” President said in her keynote speech during the 139th birth anniversary of Andres Bonifacio at Malacañang this morning.

In her remarks, President admitted that she already received the preliminary reports indicating a significant chunk of the airport cost of the $657-million NAIA 3 didn’t go to actual construction costs as the access tunnel that would connect to Terminal 3 and 2 is still missing.

“There’s not even a road,” President said, which convinced her to defer the soft opening of the airport on December 15 and order the full-blast investigation and review of the contract of PIATCO.

She said that as Chief Executive, her duty is to uphold the law and not to violate and counter it.

“I am sworn to uphold the law. How then can I honor contracts contrary to law? What I can do is to order a criminal investigation into the PIATCO project with a view to the prosecution of the parties responsible for the gross irregularities,” President said.

On Friday, President declared as null and void the five concession agreements with PIATCO and ordered the Department of Justice and the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission to prosecute those found culpable in giving the contracts to PIATCO.

The President said the PIATCO issue is not just a simple problem but a test-case of the integrity and efficiency of the Republic in building the infrastructure the nation requires.

She further noted that it is not only a matter of opening the new airport but making sure that it is a world-class airport that operates without any hitches at all and without the slightest risk to travelers.

GMA assures MERALCO customers: you will get refund if SC orders it with finality

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today reiterated her assurance that the more than three-million customers of the Manila Electric Company (MERALCO) will get their refund if the Supreme Court orders it with finality.

In a speech at a program commemorating the birth anniversary of Andres Bonifacio at the Ceremonial Hall of Malacañang, the President said her concern will be exclusively “justice through full restitution for MERALCO’s consumers as the Supreme Court rules.”

“But without undermining the stability of the nation’s leading energy company,” she added.

The President earlier ordered Energy Secretary Vicente S. Perez to immediately review the country’s power policies and programs, as well as the changing of legal frameworks to ensure that the energy sector would continue to attract private investments.

The order to Perez was aimed at ensuring that the energy requirements of the people would be served.

The President’s order to Perez came on the heels of the Supreme Court decision ordering MERALCO to refund its customers for overbilling dating back to 1994.

In her speech, the President said the passage of the Special Asset Management Company Bill, now in bicameral conference committee in Congress, should free up more bank resources for housing and other developmental projects that the government is not in a fiscal position to fund.

She also underscored the need to privatize TRANSCO, the operation of the National Power Corporation in the distribution of electricity, to use the money spent for the losses.

The President said government will be earning no less than $3 billion for the privatization of TRANSCO, and more than P100 billion for the effective electricity service.

The President expressed the hope that the Senate will pass the bill as expeditiously as the House did.

GMA sees improved urban, rural development in next 6 months

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said the next six months would show an improved rural and urban development particularly in the housing, small and medium enterprises (SMEs), and agriculture sector.

In a policy speech she delivered in Malacañang on the occasion of Gat Andres Bonifacio's birthday, the President said the passage of the Special Asset Management Company Bill, or SMAC, now in bicameral conference committee in Congress, should free up more bank resources for housing and other developmental projects that the government is not in a fiscal position to fund.

“At kailangan nating ipagbili and Transco, ang operayon ng NAPOCOR sa distribusyon ng kuryente, upang magamit ang salaping ginugugol ngayon sa pagkalugi nito. Kikita rin ang gobyerno ng hindi bababa sa tatlong bilyong dolyar sa pagbebenta ng TRANSCO, at mahigit sandaang bilyong piso sa paghusay ng serbisyo sa elektrisidad (We need to sell TRANSCO, NAPOCOR's power distribution company, so we could use the funds properly. Government can realize at least P3-billion in the sale of Transco and more than P100 billion in improved electric services),” the President said.

The President said an integrated modern transport system and newly-established government centers will bring progress to areas outside Metro Manila.

Affordable mass transport, according to the President, will be put in place. “Extensions of the North and South Expressways and the rail link to the North will be under way. And my dreams of a roll-on, roll-off port-linked archipelago has broken ground with funding from the Development Bank of the Philippines.”

“Para sa dagliang ikabubuti ng tagabukid, babawasan ng mga modernong system ng transportasyon ang gastos sa pagdadala ng mga produkto mula sa lalawigan patungo sa industriya at kalunsuran. Samantala, salamat sa batas tungkol sa pagsasangla ng lupang sinasaka, na pinasa sa Kamara noong Huwebes, maaalis ang isang malaking balakid sa pagpasok ng puhunan sa agrikultura (For the benefit of rural residents, this modern transport system will decrease transport cost of products which are brought to the industrial and urban centers. Meanwhile, thanks to Congress for passing this law last Thursday allowing agricultural lands to be used as loan collaterals because this will increase capitalization for agriculture),” the President said.

For government workers, the President said, “we shall have time for substantive improvements, first in affordable housing where the needs of teachers, soldiers, policemen and other government employees will be addressed in a specially packaged project.”

The President's Day: December 1, 2002

01 DECEMBER 2002

- GMA leaves for state visit to Japan tomorrow

GMA leaves for state visit to Japan tomorrow

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will leave tomorrow for Tokyo for a four-day state visit that will usher in a new era in Philippine-Japanese partnership focused on peace and prosperity.

It will be the first state visit by a Philippine President to Japan in the 21st century, the last being that of President Fidel V. Ramos in 1993.

One of the highlights of the President's visit to Japan will be her address before the Japanese Diet or Parliament on December 3, an event that signifies the importance the Japanese government and people attach to relations with the Philippines and its present leadership.

Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo L. Siazon pointed out that only selected world leaders have been invited to address the Diet. Previous speakers included United States Presidents George W. Bush and Bill Clinton, former German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Nobel Peace Prize laureate Nelson Mandela of South Africa, and our own President Carlos P. Garcia.

Siazon also said Japan only accommodates four to five state visits a year.

The Philippine envoy said Philippine-Japanese relations are entering a new phase where "we are also talking about peace, meaning security in the region, and prosperity, meaning not only our own economic development but contributing to the economic development in the region."

During her visit, the President will make a traditional call on the Emperor and Empress at the Imperial Palace. The Royal Couple will also host a state dinner in her honor.

The present Emperor and Empress visited the Philippines in 1962, when Diosdado Macapagal, the President's father, was president. At that time, President Macapagal-Arroyo was a teenager.

The visit of then Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko was a very difficult chapter in the Philippine-Japan relations, Siazon said.

He pointed out that the visit of the Crown Prince and Princess started a new phase of relations. "It was economic development, and Japan, from that time on, assisted the Philippines' various programs on economic development," he said.

This week's visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo also completes the cycle of relationship she has established with the present Emperor and the Empress

Also during her visit to Tokyo, the President will meet with Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi to discuss issues of mutual concern and interest.

Their discussions are expected to include the development of the consultations between Philippines and Japan on the establishment of an Economic Partnership Agreement, the commemoration of the centennial anniversary of Japanese migration to the Philippines, the two countries' partnership for Third Country Training Program for East Timor, and cross-border issues such as terrorism and piracy.

The bilateral talks are also expected to dwell on Japan's continued support and contribution of Japan Official Development Assistance (ODA) to Philippine Development, particularly to Mindanao. Japan is the biggest provider of ODA, averaging $800 million per year since 1992, to the Philippines.

The President will likewise deliver a speech before heads of the Keidanren or Japan Federation of Economic Organizations.

She will also hold a press conference with the prestigious Japan National Press Club and grant interviews to the Yomiuri Shimbun, NHK, Nikkei and Kyodo News.

While batting for Philippines' interest in Japan, the President will also check on the conditions of overseas Filipino workers when she meets with the Filipino community at the Hotel Mariners Court in Tokyo.

The community is composed of OFWs, students, professionals and spouses of Japanese nationals. There are 39 Filipino community organizations registered with the Philippine Embassy and 53 groups are registered with the Philippine Consulate in Osaka.

GMA off to Japan on 4-day state visit

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo departed shortly before 10 this morning for a four-day state visit to Japan upon the invitation of Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko to further strengthen the ties that bind the Philippines and Japan.

In her departure statement distributed to the media before she boarded a chartered Philippine Airlines flight to Tokyo, the President said: "As I embark on this journey, I am happy to note that this will be the first state visit by a Philippine President to Japan in this century. The last visit of a Philippine President was a decade ago."

She was accompanied on the trip by First Gentleman Attorney Jose Miguel Arroyo and a small group of Cabinet members, including Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople and Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye.

Among those who saw her off at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport were Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr., Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, newly-appointed Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo, House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez, Armed Forces of the Philippines Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Dionisio Santiago, Philippine National Police Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo and NAIA General Manager Edgar Manda.

The President said her visit "will be a good vehicle for me to invite investors that can help boost our economy."

The President said that during her scheduled meeting with Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi, she will discuss "matters on economic partnership as well as development cooperation to further enhance the Philippines and Japan conspicuous bilateral relations."

"I am optimistic that our two countries will arrive at measures, which will be beneficial to both our nations and pull in ways and mechanisms which will produce satisfactory results for our people," she said.

The President noted that the Philippines and Japan have had outstanding cordial ties since the establishment of bilateral relations in 1956. Japan has been the biggest Official Development Assistance (ODA) provider to the Philippines and is the second largest trading partner, second largest source of investment and second largest source of tourists, the President said.

One of the first activities of the President on her first day in Tokyo today is a meeting with the Filipino community in Japan.

"I will be meeting the Filipino community and other Filipino organizations to be able to know their needs," she said.

During her state visit, the President will also be renewing ties with the Emperor and Empress, who will receive her at the Imperial Palace tomorrow and then host a State Dinner for her in the evening.

She will also address the Japanese Diet or Parliament, a rare privilege accorded to a select group of world leaders.

RP, Japan determined to combat terrorism

TOKYO (Via PLDT) – Japan and the Philippines are determined to face the terrorist menace head on by focusing bilateral talks scheduled between President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and Japan Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi on security issues.

This was learned in an interview with Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo Siazon, Jr., who discussed the agenda for President Macapagal-Arroyo's state visit here.

Siazon said both leaders appeared determined "to do together" whatever security measures were necessary to combat international terrorism that threatens their respective nationals and territories.

"It has become quite clear that Japan and the Philippines must cooperate more closely in combating global terrorism, so in the meeting between the President and the Prime Minister, there will be talks about cross-border problems," Siazon said.

Mrs. Arroyo and Mr. Koizumi are scheduled to meet Wednesday. The Philippine President will arrive here for a four-day state visit at around 2 p.m., Manila time.

Siazon said the two leaders will also tackle other security issues including piracy, the need for cooperation in the Coast Guard sector and Japan's possible assistance to the Philippine National Police.

Siazon said the bilateral talks would also likely take up regional security issues as the Korean Peninsula.

But Siazon said the talks would also have to include the two countries' close economic ties, considering the fact that Japan is the biggest provider of Official Development Assistance (ODA) to the Philippines.

He likewise noted that Japan is the Philippines' second largest trading partner, second largest source of investment and the second largest source of tourists.

From enemies in WW2 to economic allies, RP and Japan further strengthen ties

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — From enemies in World War II to an economic allies from 1962 onwards, the relations between the Philippines and Japan strengthened over decades, as indicated in their balance of trade and their level of security cooperation.

The diplomatic relations between Japan and the Philippines officially began in July 1956 when the Treaty of Peace and the Reparations Agreement between the two countries were signed.

Two years later, Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo Siazon, Jr. noted that Philippine President Carlos P. Garcia visited Japan and in 1962, then Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko, who are now the Emperor and Empress of Japan, visited the Philippines.

"That visit of the Prince and the Princess at that time closed a very difficult period in our history with Japan," Siazon said.

Japan had invaded the Philippines from 1941 to 1943 until the United States retook control over the territory.

After being an aid receiver from Japan, Siazon said the Philippines has become an aid provider, not to its old ally, but to a new state, East Timor.

“We are now a partner of Japan, not a recipient, but also an ODA (official development assistance) provider to East Timor,” Siazon said.

“We will have the first mission to East Timor in 2003,” he said.

Japan has consistently been the biggest ODA provider for the Philippines, accounting for 61 percent of ODA granted since 1992.

Apart from their joint efforts to help boost the economic growth of East Timor, Siazon said Japan and the Philippines have also committed to jointly set up a network center that will accept and treat tuberculosis patients.

He said the two countries shall invite medical workers from member-countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) “to train in this center and the cost will be co-financed by Japan and the Philippines.”

“In that sense, we are no longer just a recipient but a partner for prosperity,” Siazon said.

Alongside economic initiatives, Siazon said the two countries shall also pursue joint efforts in the area of regional security and transnational crimes, including the problem of global terrorism.

He said the commitment of the two countries to jointly undertake programs to address security concerns is expected to be formalized during President Macapagal-Arroyo’s state visit to Japan from December 2 to 5.

GMA arrives in Tokyo for four-day state visit

TOKYO (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived here today for a four-day state visit aimed at forging a new partnership for peace and prosperity with Japan.

The President arrived on board a chartered Philippine Airlines flight at the Tokyo International (Haneda) Airport at around three (2 pm in Manila) in the afternoon.

Accompanied by First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel “Mike” Arroyo, the President was given a 21-gun salute as soon as she stepped down from of the plane.

Afterwards, the President was presented the Japan suite of honor during arrival ceremonies at the airport.

Among the members of the Philippine delegation are Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo Siazon, Jr., Sen. Aquilino Pimentel, Jr., Foreign Secretary Blas F. Ople, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, and Presidential Management Staff head Silvestre Afable, Jr.

In an interview here, Siazon said the President’s visit to Japan marks the beginning of a new phase of the two countries’ relationship.

Siazon also said this visit will also mark the very good relationship she has established with the Japan Imperial Couple.

“The President has personal linkages with the Emperor (Akihito) and the Empress (Michiko),” Siazon noted, adding that the Emperor visited the Philippines when he was still the Crown Prince during the time of President Diosdado Macapagal, when the President was 13 years old.

Siazon added that the visit will also highlight the 21st century cooperation between the two countries in security and economics.

He said the President will seek to intensify security measures against piracy, global terrorism and strengthen cooperation in anti-crime efforts.

“We are also talking about peace, meaning security in the region and prosperity, meaning not only our own economic development but contributing to the economic development in the region,” Siazon said.

During the visit, the President will pay the Imperial Couple the traditional state call at the Akasaka Palace.

The President will have a meeting with Japan Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi where she will push for closer cooperation between the two countries.

She will also speak before the Diet where she will underscore the importance of Japanese relations with the Philippines.

Only selected world leaders are invited to address the Diet. Previous speakers include President Carlos P. Garcia, Chancellor Helmut Kohl of Germany, South African President Nelson Mandela and United States Presidents Bill Clinton and George W. Bush.

The President will also speak before the “E-Services Philippines,” at the Information Technology Exhibition and Interactive Business Investment Seminar at the Jetro Business Support Center.

Siazon said the President will promote during the seminar the competitiveness of the Filipino IT professional in graphic design, animation and related computer skills.

The Chief Executive will also deliver addresses before the Nippon Keidanren, the Japan National Press Club and would conduct interviews with Japan media such as NHK, Nikkei, Kyodo News and Yomiuri Shimbun.

She will also take the opportunity to meet with Japanese businessmen such as Matsushita Corp. vice chairman Masayuki Matshushita, and officials of Friends of the Philippines, and Manila Club Ambassadors.

The President will also have a separate meeting with Japan Economy, Trade and Industry Minister Takeo Hiranuma and parliamentarian Hidenao Nakagawa.

And like her previous foreign visits, the President will also meet with the local Filipino community here, which is mostly composed of overseas Filipino workers, students, professionals and spouses of Japanese nationals.

Japan is the biggest overseas development assistance (ODA) provider to the Philippines, covering at most 61 percent of the total aid to the country every year.

Japan is the Philippines’ second largest trading partner, second largest source of investments and second largest source of tourists.

GMA to call tomorrow on Japanese Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko

TOKYO (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will renew her close ties with the Japan Imperial Couple when she meets with them tomorrow at the traditional state call at the Akasaka Palace.

The President, on a four-day state visit to Japan starting today, first met then Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko, during the time of President Diosdado Macapagal when the royals visited the Philippines in 1962.

The President, accompanied by First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel “Mike” Arroyo, will meet the Imperial Couple initially at the Akasaka Palace, the state guesthouse of Japan.

There, the Emperor will introduce the Imperial family and the Japan Prime Minister to the President and other Japanese officials.

She will also be presented for inspection the Japan Guard of Honor.

Afterward, the President and the First Gentleman, accompanied by the Royal Couple, will proceed to the Imperial Palace for the traditional exchange of decorations, gifts and signed photographs.

Aside from members of the Cabinet, the President and the First Gentleman will be accompanied by daughter Evangeline Lourdes "Luli" Arroyo.

In the evening, the Imperial Couple will host a state dinner in honor of the President and Atty. Arroyo.

From the time of the Emperor's visit to the Philippines in 1962, the President has remained in close contact with the Royal Couple as she constantly meets with them during her visits to Japan both on official and unofficial visits.

The President has related that during a trip arranged by Assumption School, where she was a student, the Royal Couple gave them the honor of their presence in a meeting that included her classmates and the Assumption nuns.

She has also noted that the Royal Couple also met her and her mother, the late Evangelina Macaraeg Macapagal, when they visited Japan shortly after her father passed away.

Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo Siazon, Jr. earlier noted that the President's visit "completes the cycle of relationship she has established with the Imperial Couple.

"Now, she is going on in her own right as head of state of the Philippines. It also marks the beginning of a new phase of relations between Japan and the Philippines wherein before we used to be recipient of mainly technical assistance from Japan."

The President's visit will be the first state visit by a Philippine President to Japan in the 21st century. Japan only accommodates four to five state visits a year. The President is making her state visit in just her second year in office.

Siazon also noted that the 1962 visit of the Imperial Couple to the Philippines closed a very difficult chapter in the Philippine-Japan relations and started a new phase of relations between the two countries.

"It was economic development and Japan from that time on, assisted the Philippines' various programs on economic development," Siazon said.

"Now, we are also talking about peace, meaning security in the region and prosperity, meaning not only our own economic development but contributing to the economic development in the region," he added.

GMA declares December 6 a special non-working day to commemorate Eid-ul-Fitre

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today issued Proclamation No. 298 declaring Friday, December 6, as a special non-working day throughout the country to commemorate Eid-ul-Fitre (Feast of Ramadan).

The Chief Executive, who signed Proclamation No.298, shortly before she left for a four-day state visit to Japan, said that Republic Act No. 9177 declared Eid-ul-Fitre as a regular holiday.

She said the date on which the Eid-ul-Fitre (Feast of Ramadan) falls varies from year to year, depending on the sighting of the new moon.

For the year 2002, the Eid-ul-Fitre has been determined to fall on Friday, December 6, 2002, the President said.

“To promote cultural understanding and integration, the entire Filipino nation should have the full opportunity to join our Muslim brothers and sisters in observing and celebrating this important day,” the President said in Proclamation No. 298.

The President said that it is necessary to declare Friday, December 6, as a special non-working day throughout the country without prejudice to public interest “in order to bring the religious and cultural significance of the Eid-ul-Fitre to the fore of national consciousness and upon the recommendation of the Office of Muslim Affairs.”

First Gentleman accepts appointment as OFW envoy

TOKYO (via PLDT). — First Gentleman lawyer Jose Miguel “Mike” Arroyo has wholeheartedly accepted the appointment of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as her special representative to the Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs).

In an interview right after the announcement of the President during her meeting with the Filipino community, Arroyo said he is accepting the assignment.

“Siempre, tinatanggap natin dahil sa pagmamahal (Of course, I am accepting it because of love),” Arroyo said.

He said he would start working right away. In fact, he said he already met with Foreign Secretary Blas Ople and is set to start a series of meetings with the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) on the details of the work.

In January, Arroyo said he would proceed to Rome, Italy to meet with the local OFWs there. The Italian capital is host to a large number of OFWs.

“Bibigyan natin ng benefits at iba-iba pa (We will give them benefits and other things),” he said.

These benefits include medicare insurance, as well as reintegration and retraining of OFWs.

Pampanga Vice-Governor Juan Miguel “Mikey” Arroyo, who is here with his wife Angela said he knew his father could very well handle his new assignment.

“Meron naman siyang touch sa mga kababayan natin sa labas ng bansa. Talagang mahilig naman siyang makipag-ugnayan sa ating mga kababayan outside the country (My father has a special touch in relating with our fellow Filipinos abroad),” the vice governor said.

“Hindi pa man VIP ang nanay ko, ginagawa na niya itong sakripisyo ng walang sweldo (He is used to doing this even when my mother was not yet a very important person),” he added.

Meanwhile, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, said the First Gentleman will surely do his best to help our countrymen abroad.

“Tayo’y naniniwala na pag siya ang nangako (We believe that once he makes a commitment), he will really do his best to fulfill it,” Bunye said.

Bunye added that there was no better person to represent the President to the OFWs than the First Gentleman.

Overseas Workers Welfare Administrator Virgilio Angelo also said Arroyo is fit to represent the President.

“He can go around and he can inform the President on how to improve programs for the OFWs,” Angelo said.

Angelo pointed out that Arroyo cannot impose on other government agencies as his job is mostly assistance work.

According to the President, her husband will be assisted by an inter-agency team led by the DFA, Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) and the Social Security System (SSS) that would bring the OFWs closer to the new government program called “KABAYANIHAN.”

OFWs to get easy access to integrated gov’t services

TOKYO (via PLDT). — Overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) will now have an ultimate identification card to enable them to avail themselves of integrated government services.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today that beginning January 2003, she would be launching the website of “Kabayanihan,” whereby OFWs could apprise her on how to improve government services to them.

In her speech before the Filipino community at the Mariners Court Hotel here, the President said the E-Card could be used as credit card, an automated teller machine (ATM) card for Philippine commercial banks and even for duty-free shop discounts

“The E-card is the ultimate ID card of OFWs. With the E-Card, it will no longer be necessary for an OFW to fall in line at the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) to obtain an overseas employment certificate for the purpose of exemption from the travel tax and the airport terminal fee,” the President said.

Mrs. Arroyo said by that simply presenting the E-Card, the OFW can have immediate access to welfare services of the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA), POEA, processing requirements and even duty-free shop discounts.

“It can also be used as a credit card and as an ATM card for Philippine commercial banks,” the President said.

The E-Card service is among the integrated basic services offered by the new government program called “Kabayanihan,” which the President launched during her meeting with the Filipino community.

GMA saddened by journalist Jose L. Guevarra’s demise

TOKYO (via PLDT).— President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo on Monday expressed her personal grief over the death of journalist Jose L. Guevara.

She learned of Guevara’s death as she arrived in Tokyo for her state visit to Japan.

The President extolled Guevara’s distinguished career in journalism that extended for over half a century.

She said he was a close friend and supporter of her father, the late President Diosdao Macapagal.

“He was a writer of wit and good humor, but also wrote very serious columns about vital foreign policy and economic development issues,” she added.

The President said Guevara’s death left a void in Philippine journalism that would not be easy to fill.

GMA announces gov’t program on OFW concerns

TOKYO (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo announced a new government program that would address the concerns of Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs).

Dubbed “Kabayanihan,” the President explained that the new program would seek to install an integrated delivery of basic services to OFWs at worksites abroad and at home in the Philippines.

The President made the announcement during her meeting with the Filipino community in Japan Monday night at the Mariners Court Hotel.

Mrs. Arroyo also announced her appointment of First Gentleman lawyer Jose Miguel “Mike” Arroyo as her special representative to the OFWs.

According to the President, her husband would be assisted by an inter-agency team that would be headed by the Department of Foreign Employment (DFA), Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) and Social Security System (SSS).

Under Kabayanihan, the OFWs will be able to avail themselves of the following services:

— Overseas Workers Welfare Administration On-Site Welfare Services that would include expanded/voluntary membership.

— DOLE/OWWA/Philippine Overseas Employment Administration Electronic Identification Card (E-Card) services.

— Health maintenance services through the OWWA Medicare program wherein the OFW and members of the family will be entitled to benefits over and above those granted by PhilHealth.

— Pag-IBIG Fund’s Housing services wherein the DOLE and the Pag-IBIG fund have already signed a memorandum of agreement for the joint implementation of the Pag-IBIG Overseas Housing Program (POP).

— The POP aims to expand Pag-IBIG membership among OFWs and provide them the opportunity to acquire their own homes at affordable means.

—SSS Provident Fund (Flexi-Fund) services, which will be solely for OFWs, is designed to enable workers to save hard-earned money while working abroad. By investing in the Flexi-Fund at a very affordable cost, workers are guaranteed continued earnings after retirement.

No better person to help OFWs than First Gentleman, says Bunye

TOKYO (via PLDT). — Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said there could not be a better person to represent President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to the Filipino Overseas Workers than First Gentleman lawyer Jose Miguel “Mike” Arroyo.

In an interview with Filipino reporters last night right after the President announced that she has appointed her husband as special representative to the OFWs before the local Filipino community gathering, Bunye said the First Gentleman would surely do his best to help our countrymen abroad.

“Tayo’y naniniwala na pag siya ang nangako (We believe that once he makes a commitment), he will really do his best to fulfill it,” Bunye said.

Bunye noted that under the set-up, the First Gentleman would not be using government funds or impose on other government agencies.

“In fact, Atty. Arroyo would not be getting a salary for the task,” he pointed out.

Meanwhile, Overseas Workers Welfare Administrator Virgilio Angelo said that with the new assignment, Arroyo “can go around and he can inform the President on how to improve programs for the OFWs.”

Angelo emphasized that Arroyo could not impose on other government agencies as his job is mostly assistance work.

The President announced the appointment of her husband as her OFW special envoy during her meeting with the local Filipino community.

According to the President, the First Gentleman would be assisted in his new assignment by an inter-agency team led by the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA), Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) and Social Security System (SSS) that would bring the OFWs closer to the new government program called “KABAYANIHAN.”

GMA treats OFWs in Japan to early Christmas party

TOKYO (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Monday made a lot of Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs) here happy when she treated them to a night of an early Christmas party.

The Filipino community, which represents the 39 organizations duly registered with the Philippine Embassy, sang Filipino Christmas carols and swayed to traditional Filipino dances before the President and the presidential delegation.

In her remarks, the President thanked the OFWs for remitting the much-needed American dollars to the country.

“Last year, the OFWs remitted $6 billion. Thank you so much for your support,” the President said.

The President noted that the country’s Gross Domestic Product (GDP) grew by 4.1 percent in the first three quarters of this year and the Gross National Product (GNP) improved by five percent, powered by the recovery of industry and continued strengthening of services.

“The difference between our GDP and GNP is the contribution of our OFWs like you. Your increasing remittances have boosted consumption growth in the Philippines,” she said.

The President noted that despite the global slowdown, the Philippine economy has delivered one of the highest growth rates in Asia.

The industry sector grew by 3.8 percent because exports grew by 5.9 percent and private construction is on the rebound, growing by 25 percent. Services grew by 5.1 percent because of the expansion of telecommunications, trade and private services, including tourism, whose October figures show a growth rate of 40 percent despite the bombing in Bali, Indonesia.

The President noted that the country's economic growth is surpassed only by the industrial giants China and Korea, and by Vietnam, which started from a much lower base.

"Our inflation is low at 2.7 percent. Rice for the masses is priced at P14 or P16 per kilo. Our interest rates are low, with the 91-day treasury bill steady at around five percent. These rates are at their lowest in 15 years," she said.

The President noted that her administration is taking steps to further strengthen macroeconomic fundamentals, saying the government could continue to be more vigilant in its efforts to reduce the budget deficit.

She said the Bureau of Customs (BOC), the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) and the new Anti-Smuggling Intelligence and Investigation Commission (ASIIC) would work to deliver on commitments.

"My message to tax cheats is clear. Whether you are big business or small, forget the accounting tricks. Just pay your taxes and duties, or see you in court," she said.

Noting that the OFWs are tax exempt, she enjoined them to urge their countrymen back home to pay the right taxes.

She also noted that her administration was sustaining a no-nonsense drive against corruption, insulating its procedures better from graft and putting graft busters in sensitive agencies.

She further noted that the peace and order situation has improved, with the latest police reports showing that kidnapping cases decreased by 35 percent.

"No President can build a strong republic single-handedly. I can do this well only if I can count on the support of the more than seven million Filipino overseas workers," Mrs. Arroyo said.

"You, the Filipinos in Japan, are part of the wellspring of support, the network of Filipinos all over the world that I am counting on," she said.

Among those who attended the gathering were Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo Siazon, Jr., Foreign Secretary Blas Ople, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, Presidential Management Staff Chief Silvestre Afable, Jr., Presidential Adviser Marita Magpili-Jimenez, OWWA Administrator Virgilio Angelo, Sen. Aquilino Pimentel, Jr., Reps. Josephine Sato, Jacinto Paras, and Antonino Roman, Governors Tomas Josen, Jose Caballero and Adolph Edward Plaza, Vice-Governor Juan Miguel Arroyo, and Mayor Marino Morales.

The Filipino community in and around the Tokyo area is composed of OFWs, students, professionals, religious and lay missionaries, spouses of Japanese nationals and other foreign nationals, and employees of international and non-governmental organizations.

GMA renews ties with Japanese emperor, empress

TOKYO (Via PLDT) – It may be wintry here in Tokyo, but it was a very warm meeting that ensued today between President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and Japanese Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko.

Amidst pomp and pageantry, the Emperor and Empress received the President this morning, renewing the close ties they established 40 years ago.

The Imperial Couple marched through the gilded doors of Akasaka Palace, the state guesthouse, at around 9:20 in the morning and were met by the President and the First Gentleman, Atty. Jose Miguel “Mike” Arroyo, at the Palace vestibule, exchanging pleasantries before proceeding to the terrace fronting the Palace’s front court.

After the dignitaries had taken position at the court, the Philippine National Anthem was played, followed by the National Anthem of Japan.

Thereafter the President, wearing a camel overcoat, and Attorney Arroyo, in a dark suit, accompanied by their Majesties, walked down the steps to the terrace where the Imperial Couple introduced Crown Prince Naruhito and Crown Princess Masako, Princess Sayako and Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi to the President.

The Emperor and the Empress were in their formal morning attire – he in a dark pinstripe suit and she in a green and black dress.

After the presentation, the President was led to the dais by Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo Siazon, Jr.

At the dais, the President received the salute by the Honor Guard. Afterwards, she inspected the troops and saluted with a slight bow to the Philippine and Japanese flags.

The other Japanese dignitaries present during the formal ceremony were then introduced to the President by the Japanese protocol officers while their Majesties walked alongside.

The President boarded the imperial car with the Emperor while Attorney Arroyo rode with Empress Michiko in the secondary imperial car.

The convoy proceeded to the Imperial Palace for the traditional state call on the Emperor and Empress.

In yet another formal ceremony, the Empress and Emperor viewed the decorations: the Philippine Legion of Honor, degree of Chief Commander, for the Emperor; the Order of Gabriela Silang for the Empress; the Order of Sikatuna with the rank of Rajah for Prince Naruhito; the Grand Cordon of the Supreme Order of the Chrysanthemum for the President; and the Grand Cordon of the Order of the Rising Sun, Paulownia Flowers, for the First Gentleman.

An exchange of gifts and signed photographs followed.

The President, who is on a four-day state visit to Japan that started Monday, first met Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko during the time of President Diosdado Macapagal when the royals visited the Philippines in 1962 as Crown Prince and Princess.

Aside from members of the Cabinet, daughter Evangeline Lourdes “Luli” Arroyo were with the President and Attorney Arroyo during the traditional call on the Imperial Couple.

In the evening, the Imperial Couple will host a state dinner in honor of the President and First Gentleman.

From the time of the then Crown Prince’s visit to the Philippines in 1962, the President has remained in close contact with the Royal Couple as she constantly met with them during her visits to Japan both on official and unofficial occasions.

The President related that during a trip arranged by Assumption School where she was a student, the Royal Couple honored her and her classmates and the Assumption nuns with their presence in a meeting.

She also recalled that the Royal Couple also met her and her mother, the late Evangelina Macaraeg Macapagal, when they visited Japan shortly after her father passed away.

Siazon earlier said that the President's visit completes the cycle of relationship she has established with the Imperial Couple.

GMA: RP, Japan must act as one force for regional security

TOKYO (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the need for the Philippines and Japan to act as “one force for regional security” to combat terrorism and other transnational threats to peace.

Addressing the joint session of the Japanese Diet House of Councilors, the President said the long history of cooperation between the two countries “is solid basis for further and more intense collaboration.”

“We both must be ready to act and operate, where needed and when necessary, as one force for regional security,” the President said.

“Apart from international terrorism, new transnational threats to peace, freedom and progress require our joint attention and action,” the President said.

The President outlined the “fields for urgent cooperation” that Japan and the Philippines must immediately attend to, as part of joint efforts in addressing the “new transnational threats to freedom and progress.”

Among them, the President said, are “the illicit trade in narcotics and weapons, trafficking in human beings, especially women and children, money laundering, and piracy in the high seas, as well as trans-boundary environmental threats.”

The President recognized that “all countries in our region, especially those for whom freedom is a matter of national honor, are without a doubt determined to do more to cooperate to the stability, security and peace in East Asia.”

But she admitted that “acting singly greatly limits their options for positive action.”

For so long, the President said, Japan has been able to contribute so much to the restoration of peace and development in the region, stressing its pivotal role in the stabilization in Cambodia, in the transition to nationhood of East Timor, in promoting peaceful dialogue as the medium for settling the thorny issues in Korean Peninsula, and in many more arenas.

“The long history of cooperation between our two countries – as partners, as friends, as allies – is solid basis for further and more intense collaboration,” she said.

The President also cited the common stand of Japan and the Philippines on the North Korea issue.

“The revelations about nuclear weapons development in the Korean Peninsula is a big issue to us. We oppose nuclear weapons proliferation and we will resist a nuclear arms race in East Asia,” she said.

While she stated that “there is no immediate danger of hostilities in East Asia,” the President said the September 11, 2001, terror attacks on the United States and the bombings in Bali, Indonesia in October this year, “have taught us... we sometimes do not know where the enemy lurks, much less where or when it will next strike.”

“When or how any of these fault lines will snap, no can tell for certain. All we can do is prepare and we can provide the safety vents to relieve the buildup of pressure and avoid sudden, massive explosion,” she said.

This reality, the President said, necessitates that “we in East Asia reinforce all elements of predictability, stability and balance in the security field.”

Leaders of Japan's Parliament cite GMA's efforts in fighting terrorism, poverty

TOKYO (via PLDT) – Leaders of Japan's Parliament today cited President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's effort in curbing poverty and in fighting international terrorism in her country, stressing that such moves contribute to regional security.

Kurata Hiroyuki, president of the Chamber of Councilors, and Watanuki Tamisuke, speaker of the Chamber of Representatives, took turns in paying tribute to the President, as the latter addressed the joint session of the Diet.

Hiroyuki said it was "profoundly meaningful" for Japan and its Parliament to have interacted with President Macapagal-Arroyo, saying her address before the joint session would help further strengthen the diplomatic ties between their two countries.

He noted "deep admiration" to President Macapagal-Arroyo for her anti-terrorism measures and policies in ensuring the national security of the Philippines.

Tamisuke, for his part, cited the progress made by the Macapagal-Arroyo administration in its fight against terrorism, noting that this "contributes to regional stability."

He supported President Macapagal-Arroyo's call for a strong partnership between Japan and the Philippines in the fight against terrorism and other threats to regional peace.

In her address during the joint session, the President stressed the need for the Philippines and Japan to act as "one force for regional security," and heighten their cooperation in combating international terrorism and other transnational threats to peace.

She cited the long history of cooperation between the two countries as the "solid basis for further and more intense collaboration."

"We both must be ready to act and operate, where needed and when necessary, as one force for regional security," the President said.

Ople slams Howard on sending Aussie troops

TOKYO – Secretary of Foreign Affairs Blas F. Ople today dubbed the proposal of Australian Prime Minister John Howard on UN charter change to allow Australian troops to hunt terrorists in Southeast Asia as "hasty, exuberant and almost bizarre."

Ople said Howard's idea would overturn the founding principle of the United Nations itself which is based on the equal sovereignty of all nations big or small.

"This proposal has no ghost of a chance to be supported in the UN General Assembly," the foreign secretary said.

Ople added, however, that the Philippines is open to a bilateral agreement with Australia which will stress cooperation in the fight against international terrorism. This agreement can consider joint training but not joint operations of security personnel.

Secretary Ople said he was assured by Australian Foreign Minister Alexander Downer that the Australian Embassy in Makati would continue to render essential services from the ambassador's residence and from a hotel room in Makati. The embassy will resume full operation in a few days.

Ople called on the Australian government to stop exacerbating the issue over its embassy in the Philippines with “more provocative statements at highest levels.”

He said that in threatening to send Australian troops to Southeast Asia without being asked, the Australian government may also be opening itself to the charge of harboring hegemonic ambitions in the region.

“This is not helpful in terms of promoting understanding and cooperation in the Asia-Pacific region,” Ople said.

GMA urges Japanese ICT companies to set up businesses in RP

TOKYO (via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged Japanese companies engaged in information and communications technology (ICT) to set up businesses in the Philippines as she formally opened the ICT seminar at the Akasaka twin towers here.

In her speech at the “e-Services Philippines: IT Exhibition and Interactive Business Investment Seminar,” the President said Japan and the Philippines should jointly develop their prospects in the ICT sector.

“Our economies’ respective strength complement each other very well. Japan’s leadership in various technological fields can be adequately supported by the Philippines’ large pool of quality human resources with high IT literacy rate,” the President said.

She noted that technology of Japan, backed up by the high IT literacy rate of Filipinos, could “boost our joint prospects and take them to uncharted heights.”

“In this regard, we wish to further intensify our mutual initiatives in e-services,” she said, as she outlined possible areas for cooperation between the Philippines and Japan.

Among them, she said, is the “acceleration of the promotion of Japanese investments and outsourcing projects involving IT and IT-enabled services.

She also said the two countries could work together for the “intensification of the conduct of training programs related to ICT innovation and technology advancement, workers skill upgrading and product management.”

At the same time, the President stressed the need for the two countries to continue and expand “the existing certification program” to allow Filipino workers to meet Japanese standards.

Another area for cooperation, the President said, is the “fast-tracking of information exchange between our two countries to further develop our respective ICT industries and market.”

GMA cites need for support of Japan, other groups for RP economy to grow

TOKYO—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the need for the support of Japan and other economic groupings in the region for the Philippine economy to grow.

In her speech before the joint session of the Japanese Diet, the President said that development is an enormous task and that in this globalized world, it is practically impossible to go it alone.

“Fortress economies wither, closed economies die. That is the reason why, since the EDSA Revolution that reinstalled democracy in my country in 1986, successive administrations have pursued a continuous path of engaging with the world,” the President said.

The President said that aside from Japan, the Philippines also needs the support of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC), and East Asia to sustain its economic growth.

According to the President, the continuing challenge in the region is to build, through joint efforts, the capacity to prevent the recurrence of economic shocks like the one that hit the region in 1997.

In Southeast Asia, the President said, the countries are girding for the full implementation of the ASEAN Free Trade Agreement (AFTA).

She said that barely a month ago, ASEAN and China signed a framework for the establishment of the ASEAN-China free trade area while ASEAN and Japan agreed on the framework for the establishment of a comprehensive economic partnership.

The President said that the emergence of China as a market economy is integral to the further growth and development of East Asia, adding that the Philippines regards it as a catalyst for more rapid expansion and greater stability in Asia.

But for now and in the foreseeable future, the President said, ASEAN's need for Japan and its continued cooperation "is far more essential."

The President said that the revival of the Japanese economy and the resumption of its traditional role as a growth engine are of utmost importance to the Philippines, to East Asia, and to the world.

She cited the need for a Philippines-Japan comprehensive partnership agreement that would maximize the many areas of complementarity between the economies of the two countries.

RP supports Japan advocacy of dialogues on vital issues, GMA says

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Tuesday night said the Philippines supports Japan's unflinching advocacy of dialogue on important initiatives, such as on issues of immediate concern in Northeast Asia.

In her remarks during the state dinner at the Imperial Palace here, the President noted that East Asia is the Philippines' and Japan's common home.

"In this house, dialogue provides the best avenue for resolving differences. It can be the only means to bring closure to a difficult past," she said.

"We saw this in 1999, when, in the course of the ASEAN Plus Three meetings, Manila hosted the first summit in half-a-century between the leaders of Japan, China and South Korea," the President said.

The Chief Executive noted that the Philippines and Japan are vital allies in building and maintaining peace and stability in the whole region and that this alliance can be further strengthened and expanded to reinforce the inexorable march towards regional integration.

"Japan's crucial contributions to greater East Asian integration is exemplified in its active support for the ASEAN Plus Three and the ASEAN Regional Forum processes, its comprehensive economic partnership initiatives with ASEAN and other East Asian countries, and its role in building the foundations for lasting peace, stability and progress in countries like Cambodia and East Timor," she said.

Emperor lauds GMA on war against poverty

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — Emperor Akihito of Japan Tuesday night expressed deep admiration for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for emerging to become the Philippines' leader.

"I would like to express my deep respect to you for the way you have earnestly taken to tackling many issues related to the lives of the people, including measures to reduce poverty," he said.

In his address at the state dinner in honor of the President and First Gentleman, Atty. Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo, the Emperor noted that during his visit to the Philippines 40 years ago during the time of President Diosdado Macapagal, the President was just in her teens and he and Empress Michiko (who were then the Crown Prince and Princess) were in their twenties.

“Now, 40 years later, I am deeply moved as we welcome Your Excellency to Japan on this state visit,” he said.

He said that exactly 40 years ago, he and the Empress visited the Philippines representing Emperor Showa. According to him, the visit was in return for the state visit made to Japan by former President Carlos P. Garcia.

“Although it was a time when feelings towards Japan were still severe, I vividly remember that your father, President Diosdado Macapagal, and your mother, Mrs. Macapagal, welcomed us with smiles at the airport as they stood close by the plane,” he said.

He noted that he also remembers with feeling that in addition to the banquet her parents hosted on the day of their arrival, the President and Mrs. Macapagal invited them for breakfast on the morning of their departure, where Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo was also present.

The Emperor further noted that he has many other good memories of that trip, including the visit they made to General and Mrs. Emilio Aguinaldo at their residence, where the Declaration of Independence of the Philippine Republic was proclaimed and the visit they made to Baguio City, which is located in a mountainous area lush with pine trees.

“But above all, what I cannot forget is the warm-heartedness shown to us by the people of your country. At the time, you were in your teens and we were in our twenties. Now, 40 years later, I am deeply moved as we welcome Your Excellency to Japan on this State Visit,” he said.

The Emperor further noted that it has been nearly two years since the President has assumed the presidency and that he can well imagine that she has spent very busy days since then.

The Emperor noted that Filipinos have been receptive to various cultures in the past and have striven to uphold democracy and freedom of speech.

He made special mention of the 38th meeting of the World Association of Newspapers held in Tokyo in 1985 where journalist Joaquin P. Roces received the “Golden Pen of Freedom Award,” for his noteworthy contributions to freedom of the press, “which left a lasting impression on the Empress and me who were in attendance at the meeting.”

“I am very pleased that the relations between our two nations which share the same values, have grown even closer together through active exchanges that have continued across a broad spectrum of areas spanning economic activities, cultures and exchange of people,” he said.

He added that the President has paid particular attention to strengthening friendly relations between the two nations and have visited Japan on many occasions.

“It is my heartfelt wish that this visit will be very fruitful and will contribute to further advancing mutual understanding and friendly relations between the two countries,” he added.

A night of elegance, culture

TOKYO (via PLDT) — It was a night of quiet elegance and Japanese culture at the state dinner hosted by His Majesty Emperor Akihito in honor of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo.

The state dinner, strictly a black tie and formal gown affair, took place Tuesday night at the spacious Banquet Hall of the Imperial Palace, the official residence of His Majesty and Empress Michiko.

The President, accompanied by First Gentleman Atty. Arroyo, arrived at the Palace and were met by the Imperial Couple at the entrance hall at 8 in the evening.

The President was wearing a white gown with white shawl while the Empress was wearing a black and white gown. The Emperor and Atty. Arroyo were in black tie.

In receiving the President and Atty. Arroyo, the Emperor was heard to have asked if she had a busy day.

The President remarked that she indeed had a very busy day, noting that she spoke before the Diet.

On the other hand, the Empress asked Atty. Arroyo how was his day to which the First Gentleman replied that he had a very nice day.

The Empress then endearingly kissed the President.

The four proceeded to the Banquet Hall as the band played "Leron, Leron, Sinta." They were followed by select Philippine government officials such as Foreign Secretary Blas Ople, Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo Siazon, Jr., Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Trade Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Dante Canlas, Bangko Sentral Gov. Rafael Buenaventura, Sen. Aquilino Pimentel, Representatives Josephine Sato, Jacinto Paras and Antonino Roman.

They were joined by Crown Prince Naruhito and Crown Princess Masako, who was wearing a white formal gown, and Princess Sayako, who was in a royal blue gown.

They were also joined by Prince and Princess Akishino for the first time.

Meanwhile, the Banquet Hall was slowly being filled by Japanese government officials and VIPs.

The First Couple was also accompanied by their daughter, Evangeline Lourdes "Luli" Arroyo, who was in a Filipiniana dress.

Red and white roses formed part of the elaborate dinner setting. Ushers in coattails were also on hand to assist the dignitaries.

After the President, Atty. Arroyo and Their Majesties were guided to their designated seats, the Emperor rose and delivered his welcome address in Japanese.

He subsequently proposed a toast. Afterwards, an orchestra at the side of the hall played an exquisite rendition of the Philippine National Anthem.

"I wish to extend a heartfelt welcome to Your Excellency Mrs. Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, President of the Republic of the Philippines and Atty. Arroyo. I am indeed happy to be able to spend this evening here together with you both," the Emperor said in Japanese.

The President, meanwhile, said it is a great honor and privilege to be in Japan upon His Majesty's kind invitation.

She said the friendly relations between the Philippines and Japan are blessed with a long history.

She noted that these friendly ties could be traced as far back as the exile of Lord Ukon Takayama, a great Christian samurai, and his family to Manila in 1614.

Three centuries after that, the Philippines began benefiting immensely from the important contributions of Japanese immigrants to the Philippines. Road construction in the Philippine summer capital of Baguio received a great boost from the first large wave of Japanese migration to the Philippines in 1903.

She noted that subsequent waves of sizable community of Japanese descent followed in Davao in the island of Mindanao, eventually becoming the catalyst for agricultural development in southern Philippines, which supplies as much as 90 percent of the bananas and the great bulk of pineapples enjoyed in Japan today.

The President noted that Their Majesties' visit to the Philippines in 1962 closed a difficult chapter in our common history and signaled the start of a new one – of true partnership, of close alliance and of genuine friendship.

The state dinner menu consisted of Consome a la Royal, "Amadai" au vin Blanc, Filet de Boeuf a la Mode en Gelee, Gigot d'Agneau Roti, Salade de Saison, Glace Mont Fuji while the wines served were Puligny Montrachet 1993, Chateau Margaux 1982 and Moet et Chandon, Dom Perignon 1992.

Nation marks Human Rights Week

Malacañang today issued Memorandum Circular No. 31 enjoining all government offices to undertake appropriate activities in the observance of "National Human Rights Week."

The "National Human Rights Week" celebration is being observed on December 3 to 10 every year in accordance with Proclamation No. 177, dated October 30, 1987.

By authority of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo signed M.C. No. 31.

"Pursuant to Proclamation No. 177 dated October 30, 1987 which declared the period December 3 to 10, 1987, and the same period of every year thereafter as "National Human Rights Week," all heads of departments, bureaus and agencies of the national government, including government-owned and/or controlled corporations, government financial institutions as well as state colleges and universities, are hereby enjoined to undertake appropriate activities during the week-long celebration," Romulo said.

He said that these activities should be aimed towards the promotion and enhancement of public awareness and understanding of human rights, in accordance with this year's theme "Karapatang Pantao: Likas sa Atin, Tungkulin Natin."

Exports up 2.6 percent in October

Merchandise export receipts rose 2.6 percent in October to $3.016 billion from $2.941 billion a year earlier, bringing the 10-month figure 8.1 percent up on the comparable period in 2001, the National Statistics Office (NSO) said today.

The NSO said exports in the first 10 months of the year climbed to $29.049 billion from $26.875 billion a year earlier.

The NSO said receipts from Electronic Components, accounting for 54.9 percent of the aggregate export revenue for the month, went up by 8.5 percent to $1.656 billion from $1.526 billion last year.

Articles of Apparel and Clothing Accessories remained as the country's second top earner with a combined share of 6.6 percent and an aggregate receipt of $198.17 million or 0.6 percent higher than $197 million a year earlier.

Petroleum Products, ranked third with a total revenue of $46.66 million, reflecting a 377.2 percent increase from $9.78 million last year.

The NSO also said Manufactured Goods, accounting for 88.8 percent of the total receipts, gained by 2.3 percent as sales reached $2.679 billion, from $2.618 billion during the same period in 2001.

Income from Agro-Based Products combined for $139.95 million or 4.6 percent of the total export revenue. Compared to last year, aggregate revenue for this commodity group grew by 10.5 percent from $126.64 million.

Accounting for 22.5 percent of the country's aggregate receipts for the month, exports to the United States, valued at $678.81 million, declined by 15.1 percent from last year's reported figure of $799.59 million.

Japan followed with a 14.3 percent share. Valued at $430.44 million, exports to Japan grew by 2.2 percent from $420.99 million.

First Gentleman's office swamped with calls for help from OFWs

A day after his appointment as special envoy to Overseas Filipino Workers (OFWs), the Office of the First Gentleman (OFG), Atty. Jose Miguel T. Arroyo, in Malacañang was swamped with calls asking for assistance.

Carmen Banzagales, a staff of the OFG, said she has received an avalanche of calls asking for Mr. Arroyo's help, particularly for their relatives abroad encountering problems.

One caller said that her sister working in Saudi Arabia has not received her salary and would like the First Gentleman to intervene. All the callers have similar problems about relatives working in the Middle East.

However, Banzagales told the callers that Arroyo is still in Japan with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

Prior to his appointment, Arroyo has been assisting OFWs who are having problems without fanfare.

One of those previously assisted by the First Gentleman was 20-year-old Mary Jane Ramos who needed P700,000 blood money after he was convicted of stabbing to death her employer who attempted to rape her in Dubai on Jan. 21, 1999.

The First Gentleman initiated the fund drive for the blood money. He personally donated from his own pocket P100,000 for Ms. Ramos' freedom.

Ramos was jailed for two years even after she paid DHs 150,000 or US$41,000 blood money.

Atty. Arroyo also assisted leukemia patient Eva Israel Crisostomo by facilitating her return trip to Manila after she was hospitalized at St. Mary's Church in Dubai last June 1 this year.

The First Gentleman also facilitated Delia Marquilencia's chartered domestic flight from Manila to Iloilo after her arrival from Cyprus where she suffered a brain damage as well as fractured ribs when she figured in a vehicular accident in Miniotis, Cyprus on January 20, 2000.

Arroyo also assisted Marcel Santos for her prolonged confinement and medical assistance at the Philippine General Hospital (PGH). Santos was confined in Hanyu General Hospital in Saitma, Japan for lupus erythematosus.

Several other OFWs were also extended help by Arroyo.

In his free legal assistance project, Atty. Arroyo has provided legal help for OFWs, particularly victims of illegal recruitment.

The other humanitarian projects of the First Gentleman are medical mission, cataract operation, Dialysis Center, Paluwal Pangkabuhayan ni President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo or livelihood assistance.

Atty. Arroyo's medical mission project has already benefited 21,439 patients from the various parts of the country.

For the past 10 months of 2002, a total of 1,449 kidney patients underwent free hemodialysis treatment in 2,320 sessions and 135 patients were provided with ambulatory peritoneal dialysis at the Dialysis Center in Malacañang Clinic.

More than 200 cataract patients underwent free operations at the Presidential Security Group (PSG) Hospital in Malacañang Park also under Arroyo's cataract mission. Aside from free surgery, patients were also provided free intra-ocular lenses, medicines and pre- and post-operative medical follow-up.

According to Atty. Arroyo, he has been doing these humanitarian activities for love of country and the Filipino people.

Fight against terrorism is responsibility of all nations, says GMA

TOKYO (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the fight against terrorism is the responsibility of all nations and not just any one country or region alone.

The President made this statement when asked to comment during a press conference at the Japan National Press Club on the remarks of Australian Prime Minister John Howard that his country has the right to defend itself from any attack, even if that meant taking pre-emptive military action overseas.

The President said such preemptive attack is hypothetical. "I don't think that is the time now to give a reaction one way or another to a hypothetical declaration," she said.

The Chief Executive, however, noted that what is important is that everyone should realize that terrorism is not the responsibility of one country or one region alone.

"It is a global threat and it is a global responsibility, and all countries in the world who value peace and freedom must help one another," she said.

The President added that "we must share intelligence, break the terrorist cells where we find them and break the terrorist network, and we must stop the flow of funds."

She noted that the Philippines has taken an aggressive position in the fight against terrorism.

"Rather than sit and wait for terrorism to hit us. what we should do is seek out the terrorist cells in the country where we might find them. It is important that we fight terrorism, that we be proactive before it destroys our way of life. . we must share intelligence with one another."

"That, in a war against terrorism as compared to conventional warfare, is what makes it different, the importance of intelligence," she added.

Make Philippines your regional hub in East Asia, GMA tells Japanese businessmen

TOKYO—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the Japanese business leaders to make the Philippines the hub of their operations in East Asia since the country is located in the center of the Asia Pacific region.

In her policy speech at a luncheon meeting at the Keidanren, the Japanese economic organization, the President said that the Philippines could be reached by major cities of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) in just three to four hours.

The President said the Philippines could become a regional hub not only by virtue of its proximity to most countries in the region but also because it can provide various services, particularly in information and communications technology (ICT) and the electronics sector.

As an English literate country, the President said, the Philippines could absorb high technology easily. “That is why world-class firms such as Intel, Texas Instruments and Amkor have a strong presence in the country,” she added.

According to the President, as regional hub, the Philippines is also best positioned to take advantage of the rapidly expanding market of China, adding that with its ascension to the World Trade Organization (WTO), China could be a lucrative market for the logistic services, manufacturing and commodity firms in the Philippines.

The President said that as the Philippines positions itself as a regional hub, her administration is also taking care of ensuring the proper macro-economic environment for foreign business firms to thrive in the country.

She said that her administration is putting together a “good new team” to increase tax collections, citing as member of this team Bureau of Internal Revenue Guillermo Parayno, who, she said, could meet the revenue target set for the rest of the medium-term plan period.

The President said her administration is committed to institute not only short-term but also long-term structural reforms, adding that the Special Asset Management Company bill, which has now passed both houses of Congress, would free more bank resources for export and other projects that would help speed up economic recovery in the Philippines.

Japan, the President said, will always be an important partner of the Philippines in its economic development and that the Japanese business community has a large role to play in realizing her administration’s vision of providing economic and human security to the Filipino people.

“So, I ask you, leaders of the Japanese business community, let us move forward together. Let us make AsEAN prosperous. Let us make the Philippines prosperous because that is what will make Japan prosperous, and, therefore, the rest of the region prosperous,” the President said.

GMA showcases RP economy’s strengths before Japanese businessmen

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today showcased the strengths of the Philippine economy as she invited Japanese businessmen to invest in the Philippines.

Speaking at the luncheon hosted by heads of Japanese economic organizations in Tokyo Kaikan, the President cited the steps taken by her administration in pushing for economic growth and the positive results registered since she assumed office.

“As we position ourselves to be a regional hub, we also take care of ensuring the proper macroeconomic environment for business firms to thrive,” the President said.

She stressed the growth of the Philippines’ gross domestic product in the first three quarters of the year, which averaged 4.1 percent, and the continued implementation of monetary, fiscal and supply-side policies that resulted in the lowest inflation and interest rates registered in more than a decade.

She also assured that “in seeking sustainable growth, my administration continues to focus unwaveringly on building a strong Philippine nation, similar to the strong Japanese nation.”

The President likewise noted that her administration continued to “focus on the essential services that concern firms that would invest in the Philippines.”

These involve the power sector, the workforce, stability of government and issues on peace and order, she said.

“The Philippines is positioning itself within East Asia—the region of highest growth in this century – as a regional hub,” the President said, citing the country’s ideal location, being at the center of the Asia-Pacific, making it accessible to all major Asian cities.

“But we intend to become a regional hub not only by virtue of proximity, but also by providing services,” she said.

She highlighted the attractiveness of the Philippines as an investment destination, given its international reputation for its edge in education, English proficiency, adaptability and expertise in e-commerce.

GMA says yen is mightier than sword

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — The yen is mightier than the sword.

So said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as she highlighted the role Japan has to play in helping economies of Asia fight poverty and, ultimately, terrorism.

“Japan’s aid is important as vital weapon for insuring regional stability and security,” the President said in a meeting with the members of the Japan National Press Club.

“Make no mistake: the yen is mightier than the sword,” the President said, pointing out that the yen loan packages extended by Japan to the Philippines and other developing economies in Asia help them fight poverty that breeds terrorism.

“Economic security is the greatest defense against political instability, poverty and terrorism,” said the President.

“Japanese leadership to sustain aid to the Philippine government in my efforts to reduce poverty and sustain economic recovery is every bit as important as military cooperation in insuring regional security,” she said.

She recognized that “the economic role Japan has to play in the region cannot be overstated,” as she noted that Tokyo is “an important development partner and donor for the Philippines and ASEAN.”

“We commend Japan’s efforts to further deepen its ties in the region through economic partnership agreements,” she said.

“It is only through economic partnership that as a region, we will chart the security of Asia and the prosperity of our people. With Japan leading the way,” the President said, “the region will flourish.”

Philippines to participate in peace process between Indonesia, rebels in Aceh

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the decision of the Philippines to participate in the peace process between Indonesia and the rebel group Free Aceh Movement or FAM.

The President made the announcement in a press conference with members of the Japan National Press Club.

“It’s an honor for the Philippines to participate in the peace process in Aceh. Indonesia asked us to participate,” the President said.

Playing a role in the peace process in Indonesia, Mrs. Arroyo said, is Manila's "way of reciprocating Indonesia, for Indonesia's support for the Philippines in our own peace process in the Southern Philippines."

Indonesia played a role in the forging of the peace agreement between the Philippine government and the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF).

The President also noted that providing assistance in the forging of peace agreements has become a tradition among members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

"It is one of the accomplishments in ASEAN, that we, as neighbors in ASEAN, help one another," she said.

She stressed that ASEAN "has been developing not only as a region for free trade, but also a region for settling disputes among neighbors and for neighbors helping one another in settling disputes within their own nation."

Review of Cabinet performance continuing, says GMA

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said she is continuously reviewing the performance of government officials to find out if they are up to their jobs or need to be replaced.

During a late coffee chat with media representatives at the Akasaka Palace, the state guesthouse, the President said she couldn't say if there's no revamp per se in the future.

"I won't say no, there wouldn't be no revamp. I won't say there would be. I will keep reviewing to see if a particular individual is still the appropriate person for the work," she said.

The Chief Executive said she is continuously reviewing the work of the Cabinet to see "if that specific person is still relevant to the needs of the time or with the program in which I'm in. I choose whom to change when I want."

GMA not inclined to declare Xmas truce

TOKYO (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said she is not inclined to declare a ceasefire this Yuletide season with the New People's Army.

Nevertheless, she said she would await the recommendation of the her security officers on what would be the most appropriate response on the issue.

"I will still wait for the recommendations of my security officers but I am not inclined," she said.

When asked why, the President said:

"Because I want to sustain the momentum in the campaign and momentum in fighting poverty and where poverty encourages people to be recruited, I would like to maintain this momentum," she added.

GMA, Koizumi witness signing of 2 agreements for Mindanao, Metro Manila

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and Japan Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi witnessed the signing of two major agreements, worth at least Y6.7 billion that would provide for socio-economic development and peace building in Mindanao and for the improvement of firefighting efforts in Metro Manila.

The signing ceremony yesterday, held at the Prime Ministers' Residence, was led by Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo Siazon and Japan's Ambassador to Manila Kojiro Takano.

The ceremony followed a bilateral meeting between the two leaders Wednesday evening.

The first agreement, worth Y1.5 billion, is a counter-value fund of Japan's non-project grant assistance.

This is set to be used for economic and social development for peace-building in Mindanao.

Japan has strongly supported the policy of the Arroyo administration to simultaneously promote both the fight against poverty and the fight against terrorism.

According to the Japanese Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the project is aimed at demonstrating Japan's active support for the Mindanao region and to contribute toward the escape from extreme poverty and the consolidation for peace in the region, which are among the most important policy objectives of the Arroyo administration.

The second agreement is the Metro Manila Fire Protection Enhancement Project which is worth at least 5.2 billion yen.

This project aims to develop and enhance the network of the fire protection system in Metro Manila through the construction of 30 new fire stations, and repair and renovation of 124 fire stations and 22 central fire stations.

Under this project, approximately P2.3 billion would be financed under Japan's special yen loan package.

The project will also provide for the acquisition of firefighting and communications equipment, including the provision of 81 firetrucks, 855 sets of radios and accessories to ensure the sustainable operation and service of the firefighting equipment.

Elective officials in GMA's trips not just her personal choice

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — If it were just up to her, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would take all the members of the Senate and the House of Representatives, both from the opposition and the administration, in all her foreign trips.

But the President said the choice is made by the leaders of both chambers of Congress, dismissing speculations she could be playing favorites among senators and congressmen.

In a late night meeting with members of the Philippine media covering her state visit here, the President explained Wednesday the process of selecting the members of the official delegation to her foreign visits, particularly those from elective posts.

“The delegation from the legislative is really something agreed upon by themselves,” the President said, explaining that those included in the list of senators and congressmen joining her delegation are nominated.

“So the Senate President sends me the nominees of the Senate, the Speaker sends me the nominees of the House. The president of the mayor's league sends me the nominees of the mayors; the president of the governors' league sends me the nominees of the governors,” she said.

In her state visit to Japan, the President was joined by opposition Sen. Aquilino Pimentel, Jr. from the Senate and by Reps. Jacinto Paras, Josephine Sato and Antonio Roman from the House of Representatives.

From the ranks of the governors, the President's official delegation includes Nueva Ecija Governor Eduardo Joson III, Compostela Valley Governor Jose Caballero, Agusan del Sur Governor Adolf Edward Plaza and Pampanga Vice-Governor Juan Miguel Arroyo, the President's son.

The mayors are represented by Mabalacat Mayor Marino Morales in the official delegation.

"So it's a process that they do among themselves. Well, I'd like all of them to come if I had my choice," the President said.

GMA stands firm in her decision to appoint First Gentleman as special envoy to OFWs

TOKYO (Via PLDT) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo feels her critics will always criticize her anyway, so she's standing pat on her decision to appoint First Gentleman Miguel "Mike" T. Arroyo as special envoy to overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

In a late Wednesday night coffee with members of the Philippine media covering her state visit to Japan, President Macapagal-Arroyo hinted that her critics will always find fault in all her actions, so she might as well just go ahead with her decisions.

"Some of my critics always find something to criticize," she said.

The President defended her husband from her critics, stressing that his appointment to a non-paying job was a clear indication of her administration's determination to address the concerns of OFWs.

"Our OFWs do need attention from our government because they're sending us $6 billion to $8 billion a year," she said.

She urged that her decision to ask "my husband to represent me in explaining to them our programs shows my personal concern for their welfare."

Concrete alliances required in fighting terrorism, says GMA

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — A concrete alliance among countries in Asia, not divisions and tensions between states, is what is required in addressing international terrorism.

This was stressed by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo in a late night coffee chat Wednesday with the members of Philippine media covering her state visit here.

There are "so many uncertainties, economic and security. It's very important that we cement alliances," the President said in the wake of the tension between Australia and countries in Southeast Asia triggered by the statement of the Australian Prime Minister John Howard that his country is prepared to take preemptive attacks overseas where there are terrorists believed to be targeting his country's interests.

Given the threat of international terrorism and the economic slowdown in many parts of the world, President Macapagal-Arroyo said, the presence of uncertainties require that each state solidify its alliance with its neighbors.

A stronger alliance with Japan, she said, is what she sought out to do in her state visit here, and this, she stressed, she accomplished.

The President said her main agenda is to remind Japan of its role, being the biggest economy in Asia, to lead the region in the fight against terrorism by helping its neighbors address the very root of the problem which is poverty.

“The important thing is that the Philippines and Japan have a good partnership at this time when the partnership is very, very much needed,” she said.

While she did not criticize any particular state in Asia, the President reiterated that the fight against terrorism cannot be won by any state acting alone, but through a collective effort of all countries in the region.

“In any case, I think the most important thing with regard to the terrorist threat is to remember that terrorism knows no boundaries. You don’t know when or where it will strike next in the whole world and we have to recognize that this is the fight not of one country,” she said.

“It is very important that we all cooperate and work together,” the President said, as she stressed that the work of gathering intelligence information on the movement of terrorist groups, as well as the flow of funds that support their illegal activities, requires the participation of other states.

“The most important thing is cutting the network, cutting the flow of funds, searching for the cells where we can find them,” she said.

The President said this is the reason she initiated the forging of the treaty among Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines on the exchange of intelligence information on terrorists, to which Thailand and Cambodia later acceded.

“This is the way to go,” she said, explaining that Japan has a very great influence on the fight against poverty in this region and its support for the fight against terrorism.”

Marubeni to bring in $100-M new investment to RP

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — Japanese conglomerate Marubeni Philippines has committed to bring in $100 million in fresh investment to the Philippines for the establishment of geothermal plants in Mindanao.

Marubeni president and chief executive officer Tohru Tusji informed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo about his company’s signing of a memorandum of understanding for the new energy project with the Philippine National Oil Co.-Energy Development Corp. (PNOC-EDC) during a call on the visiting Chief Executive at the Asahi Room of the Akasaka Palace late yesterday.

The MOU was for the establishment of a joint ownership of the 100-megawatt (MW) Mindanao Geothermal Power Plants, which will include the development of an additional capacity of up to 40-MW geothermal power at the Mt. Apo facilities.

The President expressed appreciation for Marubeni’s contributions to the Philippine economy and its continuing involvement in the development of the country’s power resources.

She also thanked the Japanese firm for its confidence in her administration by further expanding its projects in the Philippines.

Marubeni has built majority of the power plants owned by the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR).

Just recently, Marubeni completed the $1.4-billion San Roque Multi-Purpose Dam which was designed not only to provide electricity but also irrigation, flood control and water quality improvement for the northern provinces of Pangasinan, Tarlac and Nueva Ecija.

The President encouraged Marubeni to pour more investments into the Philippine market as she assured the Japanese conglomerate of the government’s commitment to extend necessary assistance and support to investments in the Philippines.

Also present during the call of the Marubeni CEO were Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo Siazon, Jr., Trade Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II, PNOCC chairman Sergio Apostol and Presidential Assistant for Northern Luzon Renato Diaz.

Tohru was accompanied by Marubeni Philippines Corp. president and CEO Ryukiohi Kawaguchi and Marubeni corporate vice-president and chief operating officer for utility and infrastructure Mamoro Sekiyama.

First Gentleman starts work as special envoy, helps distressed OFW in Tokyo

TOKYO (Via PLDT) — First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel “Mike” has barely warmed his seat as special envoy of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) but he is now busy attending to his first case.

The case involves Ma. Cristina Salvador, 33, a Filipino “overstayer” here who has been detained since April, at the Tokyo Immigration Bureau.

Cristina was discovered by the Japanese authorities as an “overstayer” following a complaint she filed at the Chichibu police station against her former boyfriend, a Thai, for taking away her three-year-old daughter Alliyah Salvador.

Apparently because of her complaint, her boyfriend Khajornsak Thawornpraset was detained for 10 days at the police station. Later, an arrangement was made where the child would stay with Cristina and her father alternately (one week each).

Hence, the child first stayed with Cristina for one week, and afterwards was taken by the mother of Cristina’s former boyfriend since he was still in detention.

A few days after the above arrangement was made, Cristina was arrested and detained by the police for “overstaying.” She was then transferred to the Tokyo Immigration Bureau last April 25 for immediate deportation, embassy officials said.

Cristina, fully aware of her options and their consequences, appealed to Philippine authorities for assistance in getting back her child.

She expressed her request not to be deported and to stay longer in the detention center so she could claim back her child. The request was approved by the Tokyo Immigration Bureau.

But she has to pay a considerable amount of fine to bring the case to the court. And this is where the First Gentleman’s assistance comes with an initial $2,000.

The amount, which comes from his own pocket, was handed over today to Cristina’s Japanese lawyer, Mikiko Otani, at Otani Hotel this morning.

“Hindi aalis si Cristina hanggat hindi niya makuha yung anak niya. Ganyan ang Filipina mother, talagang mahal na mahal nila ang mga anak nila (Cristina will not leave until she gets her daughter. That is how a Filipina mother is. They care deeply for their children),” Atty. Arroyo said.

The First Gentleman said the President recognizes the need to help our OFWs, especially in their personal problems.

The President has announced the appointment of the First Gentleman as special envoy to the OFWs during a meeting with the Filipino community here.

Atty. Arroyo is set to go to Hong Kong on December 12 to address the needs and provide assistance to Filipinos there. In January, he will visit Italy.

He said he already met with Foreign Secretary Blas Ople and is set to start a series of meetings with the DFA on the details of the work.

GMA ends highly successful four-day state visit to Japan

TOKYO (via PLDT) — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo brought to a close today a very successful four-day state visit to Japan.

The President, First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel “Mike” Arroyo and the rest of the official Philippine delegation boarded the presidential plane at the Narita International Airport shortly before 3 this afternoon (2 p.m. in Manila).

Before she left the Akasaka Palace, where she stayed during the four-day visit, the Imperial Couple, Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko, made a farewell call on her.

The President’s state visit is marked by the reinvigoration of the ties formed forty years ago between the President and the Imperial Couple.

It is also marked by the high esteem accorded by the Japanese government as the President spoke before House of Councilors, the National Diet of Japan, which is the Japanese parliament.

Philippine Ambassador to Japan Domingo Siazon, Jr., during a late coffee with Philippine media, said that based on the records which he was given, the President emerges to be the only woman speaker before the Diet.

“Historically, invitation to speak before the Parliament for the joint session is a very rare invitation,” he said.

The first Philippine president and the last one known to have addressed the Diet was President Carlos P. Garcia in 1958 and based on the records given, President Macapagal-Arroyo is the only lone woman speaker.

Siazon also noted that the standing ovation, like the one accorded to the President, is very rare.

Siazon also noted that it was rare that Japan Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi was present during an address.

“And this time, you didn’t only have the incumbent Prime Minister, you had Hashimoto Morihata. So at least, I saw three previous Prime Ministers and an opposition leader, who was having problems, who were there during the whole speech,” he added.

During the same late coffee with Philippine media delegation, the President said she came to Japan to emphasize that notwithstanding new players in the world economy or global cyclical conditions or recessions, Japan is still the most dominant economic and security influence in the region.

While China is an exciting new player in the world economy, Japan still commands more than one-half of the Gross Domestic Product of the region.

“This is the message that I’m giving in this state visit — to emphasize to Japan not to be discouraged by recession that they are undergoing, to remember that they are still the biggest economy by far in this region and to have confidence in that role, confidence that the rest of us continue to look to Japan for leadership in this region,” the President added.

In her bilateral meeting with the Prime Minister, two major agreements, worth at least Y6.7 billion, have been inked, providing for the socio-economic and peace building in Mindanao and for the improvement of firefighting efforts in Metro Manila.

The President and Koizumi also discussed the importance of ongoing efforts for the establishment of a Japan-Philippines Economic Partnership, ordering their concerned officials to work more closely in advancing the establishment of the JPEP.

At the e-Services Philippines: Information Technology Exhibition and Interactive Business Investment Seminar, sponsored by the Japan External Trade Organization, the President urged Japanese companies engaged in IT to set up businesses in the Philippines as she formally opened the seminar.

“Our economies’ respective strengths complement each other very well. Japan’s leadership in various technological fields can be adequately supported by the Philippines’ large pool of quality human resources with high IT literacy rate,” she said.

During the visit, the President also formally announced that she was designating the First Gentleman to be her special representative to overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

She also announced the launching of “Kabayanihan,” a new government program for OFWs that would provide an integrated delivery of basic services to them at worksites abroad and at home in the Philippines.

Under Kabayanihan, the OFWs will be able to avail themselves of the following services:

— Overseas Workers Welfare Administration On-Site Welfare Services that would include expanded/voluntary membership.

— DOLE/OWWA/Philippine Overseas Employment Administration Electronic Identification Card (e-Card) services.

— Health Maintenance services through the OWWA Medicare program wherein the OFW and members of the family will be entitled to benefits over and above those granted by PhilHealth.

— Pag-IBIG Fund’s Housing services wherein DOLE and the Pag-IBIG fund have already signed a memorandum of agreement for the joint implementation of the Pag-IBIG Overseas Housing Program (POP).

The POP aims to expand Pag-IBIG membership among OFWs and provide them the opportunity to acquire their own homes at affordable means.

— SSS Provident Fund (Flexi-Fund) services, which will be solely for OFWs, is designed to enable workers to save hard-earned money while working abroad. By investing in the Flexi-Fund at a very affordable cost, workers are guaranteed continued earnings after retirement.

Malacañang describes killing of Campos as ‘height of brutality’

Malacañang today described the well-planned and well-executed killing of Police Superintendent John Campos as the height of brutality as it expressed condolences to the families of the police officer and the cashier of an eatery where they were killed in the pre-dawn shooting in Parañaque, Metro Manila.

“It is really the height of brutality to have this kind of killings, particularly that kind of killing where it seemed to be well-planned and well-executed,” Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao said in a press briefing.

Tiglaio assured the public that police authorities are doing their work to solve the killing as soon as possible.

“They are finishing their sketches from the account of witnesses,” Tiglaio said, adding that even before the day is over, the police will be able to come out with a good description of the perpetrators.

Tiglaio said the Palace does not have a reason to conclude at this time that a senator was behind the brutal killing of Campos, a former anti-narcotics officer of the Philippine National Police.

Also killed in the Parañaque shooting was Emily Dumlao, cashier of the eatery, who had a gunshot wound in the stomach.

Palace reacts to Pulse Asia survey, says gov’t must have to work harder

Presidential Spokesperson Rigoberto Tiglaio today said that the Macapagal-Arroyo administration will just have to work harder so that the people can feel the efforts of the government to really help the poor.

“It is good there are such polls to remind us on what aspects we are weak,” Tiglaio said of the latest Pulse Asia.

Tiglaio, however, said that the Pulse Asia report released today indicated there were areas where the President has very high rating, citing the human rights and environmental issues. “She rates high on certain things, and peace and order has been improving a lot,” Tiglaio said.

“Essentially certain projects have to be accelerated. The conclusion here is that even if projects are being implemented continuously, they seemed not to be felt by the masses,” Tiglaio said.

“Secondly, of course, there is a need to communicate her decision as what happened during her November 30; her decisions were clear and it was well articulated, well expressed,” Tiglaio said.

Tiglaio said that all the internal surveys that the government has commissioned demonstrated a major rebound after the President clarified her decisions on certain critical issues and programs for next year.

The recent Pulse Asia survey showed that the President has slightly lagged behind other perceived candidates for the 2004 presidential election. The President has consistently said that she is focused on her job and is not thinking of 2004.

Tiglaio also said that it is too early to measure who would be winning or would be presidentiables at this point in time.

He said that even surveys conducted three months before the elections change, depending on circumstances.

GMA back, cites concrete gains in four-day state visit to Japan

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived tonight from a highly-successful four-day state visit to Japan bringing with her, in concrete terms, 5.2 billion yen (P2.2 billion) special loan for a Metro Manila fire protection enhancement project and a grant of 1.5 billion yen (P645 million) for economic and social development projects in Southern and Western Mindanao.

Her plane, Philippine Airlines Flight PR 433, touched down at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport at about 6:30 p.m.

Among those who welcomed her back from her successful state visit to Japan were Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr., Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr., Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita, Armed Forces of the Philippines Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Dionisio Santiago and Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo.

In an arrival statement, the President pointed out that the 5.2 billion yen loan will be used to build 30 substations and upgrade 124 substations and 22 central fire stations in Metro Manila.

The President said the 1.5 billion yen grant will be on top of the official development assistance (ODA) that the Philippines receives from Japan each year, stressing that Japan ODA accounts for 60 per cent of the total financial assistance that the country receives from abroad.

The President, however, said that more than the immediate financial results of her state visit is the bright outlook for the Philippines enhanced economic cooperation with Japan.

She emphasized that her talks with the Japanese Chamber of Commerce and Industry and the Nippon Keidanren, the Japanese organization of enterprises, allowed her to apprise them of the continuing great opportunities for investments in the Philippines.

“The Japanese businessmen were impressed by our continued growth despite a worldwide slowdown,” the President said.

The President said that her state visit to Japan gave her an opportunity to address the concerns of the Japanese businessmen already doing business in the Philippines.

“I apprised them of the efforts and facilities we have already put in place to ensure much better business climate,” she said.

The President told Japanese businessmen that the Philippines is working closely with international efforts in the fight against terrorism, at the same time eradicating kidnap gangs to ensure the security of investors.

“Our investment incentives are already well known, but we assured them that we are working towards even making our country the best target of opportunity for foreign equity and portfolio investment,” the President said, citing as the best encouragement the continuing improvement of the economy, particularly low inflation and rising growth.

The President also addressed the members of the Japanese Diet, the legislature of Japan, which met in a joint session.

President Macapagal-Arroyo was the first woman head of state to ever address the Diet. “An honor which I will always cherish,” the President said as she recounted her meeting with Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi as well as three former Japanese prime ministers.

Emphasizing the need for unity in ASEAN and in East Asia, and the Philippines’ unity with Japan, the President also detailed to the Diet her economic programs which she believed will make the country more competitive in the globalized market.

“I stressed to them the need to maximize more fully the many areas of complementarity between our two economies, one of them being in the area of human resource development,” the President said.

In a bilateral meeting, the President discussed with Koizumi the importance of ongoing efforts for the establishment of a Japan-Philippines Economic Partnership.

In this meeting, the two leaders underscored once again the need to strengthen the complementarities as well as the competitiveness of the two economies.

“We recognized that trade and investment liberalization and facilitation, along with enhanced cooperation in other related areas, would accelerate cross-border flow of resources and provide greater opportunities and larger economies of scale for Japanese and Philippine business,” the President said.

The President said that during her state visit, she was warmly welcomed by the Japanese people and by Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko, the symbols of the Japanese nation.

“The hospitality and sincerity with which they received us leave nothing to be desired,” the President said.

According to the President, she is looking forward to the first visit in the 21st century to the Philippines of the Emperor and Empress of Japan where the Philippines may return the warm hospitality and also further cement the two countries’ strengthening ties.

The President also met with the Filipino community wherein an early Christmas party was held for them.

“I assured them that we will do all we can to help them,” the President said, maintaining that the Great Filipino Workers continue to be a source of pride for the way they present a good image of the Filipino people abroad.

Complementary is way to go in foreign trade, GMA tells Filipino businessmen

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo told businessmen attending the Philippine Quality Awards this morning in Malacañang that in today's foreign trade, the best way to achieve competitiveness in the world market is through economic complementarities with trading partners.

Speaking at the 2002 Philippine Quality Awards at the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang, the President stressed that it is most fitting that upon her arrival from a successful state visit to Japan, a technologically advanced neighbor, she will be meeting with the country's businessmen who are involved in raising the quality of Philippine products.

The President said she is optimistic that her state visit to Japan will open more avenues for quality Filipino products, especially in the advent of a Philippine-Japan Economic Partnership Agreement.

"An ideal economic partnership agreement must take into consideration maximized complementarities between the two countries forging such agreement," the President said.

The President explained the essence of complementarity by showcasing how Japan, with its advance technology, and the Philippines, with its quality human resources, can work together to achieve greater heights of economic partnership.

She said Japan would provide the technology and extensive capital while the Philippines would provide the much-needed skilled and knowledgeable human resources which Filipinos are known for in many parts of the globe.

Complementarity, the President said, must also look into democratic realities like Japan's aging population and the Philippines' young and highly-skilled population, particularly in the field of health care. She said the Philippines could be a source for Japan's health caregivers.

Be assured that economic partnerships like the one the Philippines and Japan are working out will always be consistent with the welfare of our people, the President said.

The President exhorted the Filipino businessmen to help shape better economic ties with the country's trading partners, particularly in strengthening complementarities by providing quality products and services.

GMA lauds Philippine Quality Awards for vow to make RP products competitive

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today gave Filipino businessmen a pat on the back for their unrelenting efforts to make Philippine products competitive in the world market and giving due recognition to companies that excel in quality performance.

In ceremonies held at Malacañang this morning, the President congratulated PSI Technologies and ON Semiconductor for winning this year's Philippine Quality Awards (PQA).

The PQA is the country's counterpart to the prestigious Baldrige Award in the United States. Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II is this year's Award Manager.

The President, assisted by Budget and Management Secretary Emilia Boncodin and Acting Trade and Industry Secretary Adrian Cristobal, Jr., handed out trophies and medals to officials of the two firms.

The award for PSI Technologies was received by its chief executive officer, Arthur J. Young, while the award for ON Semiconductor was received by Ronnie Manubay.

During her keynote address, the President cited the success of the “e-Services Philippines: Information Technology Exhibition and Interactive Business Investment Seminar,” sponsored by the Japan External Trade Organization during her state visit to Japan from December 2-5.

The President said the country’s dedication to quality is paying off as shown by the overflowing crowd that attended the exhibit. She said at least 200 Japanese companies joined the exhibit.

To show you how overwhelming is the Japanese businessmen’s interest in the exhibit, Filipino participants had to vacate their seats and offer them to the Japanese, the President said.

The President, at the same time, thanked the Senate, particularly Senator Juan Flavier, for enhancing the Nursing Board and increasing its membership.

She said this is government’s part in seeing to it that the country produces quality health workers, especially caregivers.

The President noted that 40 new nursing schools have opened in response to the overwhelming need for health caregivers abroad.

She said government would see to it that these schools continue to give quality education and trainings for the Filipinos so the country could maintain its globally-recognized quality health caregivers.

GMA belies opposition claims that she okayed NAPOCOR-IMPISA contract early in her presidency

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today belied claims by the opposition that she approved the contract for the rehabilitation of the Caliraya-Botocan-Kalayaan hydroelectric plant just four days after she assumed the presidency in January 2001.

"It is not true," the President said, as she vehemently denied insinuations by the political opposition that a huge payoff was made in exchange for the approval of the contract.

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye said that it was most unfair for the political opposition to continue peddling this black propaganda and insinuating that administration officials benefited from the so-called anomalous transaction.

The fact is the Estrada administration had already signed the contract before President Arroyo assumed office, Bunye said.

Former President Estrada himself signed as a witness in that power agreement, something that no President, before or after him, has ever done.

All these loose talks about the alleged bribe are just aimed at eroding public confidence in the Arroyo administration, Bunye said.

The contract was signed by the state-owned National Power Corporation (Napocor) and the Argentina firm, Industrias Metalurgicas Pescarmona Sociedad Anonima (IMPISA).

Opposition senators have charged that the NAPOCOR-IMPISA contract was first offered but turned down by deposed President Joseph Estrada. It was reportedly approved by the Macapagal-Arroyo administration after an alleged payoff of $14 million.

The opposition said that it was Justice Secretary Hernando Perez who was the administration pointman in the alleged payola.

President's radio address to the nation

MAGANDANG ARAW PO MGA MAHAL KONG KABABAYAN.

Malugod kong ibinabalita sa inyo ang mga naging bunga ng katatapos kong State Visit sa Japan.

Walang duda na mahalaga ang kontribusyong pang-ekonomiya ng bansang Hapon para sa katatagan at katiwasayan ng Silangang Asya. Napatingkad pa ito ng mga bagong banta sa seguridad ng ating rehiyon. Ito ay sa dahilang ang paglaban sa terorismo ay pandaigdigang hindi pang-iisang bansa lamang. Japan as an important development partner for the Philippines and ASEAN is crucial in the regional fight against poverty, which is the recruiting ground for terrorism.

Ang pagkakaroon ng malakas na ekonomiya at masiglang demokrasya ang pinakamabisang pangontra sa kahirapan at terorismo. Malaki ang maitutulong sa hangaring ito ng kooperasyon sa pagitan ng Pilipinas at Hapon. Japan is our country's biggest provider of official development assistance and the second largest trading partner and source of investments. Kaya naman hinikayat natin ang Hapon na dagdagan pa ang kanilang tulong na pinansyal, gayundin ang puhunan o kapital, sa ating bansa.

Hindi naman tayo nabigo sapagka't tiniyak ng Japanese Government na bagama't nagbawas sila ng tulong sa ibang bansa sa ating rehiyon, tuloy pa rin ang ibinibigay nilang official development assistance sa Pilipinas.

Patunay nito ang dalawang aid packages na kanilang inaprubahan sa panahon ng aking pagdalaw.

Una rito ay ang Support Package for Peace and Stability in Mindanao na nagkakahalaga ng apat na bilyong yen o halos 1.72 billion pesos. Bukod sa pagpapakita ng aktibong pagtulong ng Hapon sa Mindanao, ito ay naghahangad rin na i-ahon sa matinding kahirapan at patibayin ang kapayapaan sa katimugan, lalung-lalo na sa Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao, o ARMM, na lubhang naapektuhan ng kaguluhan kung kaya't naging mabagal ang pag-unlad. Ang nasabing tulong ay gagamitin sa tatlong priority areas: pagbuo at pagpapatupad ng mga angkop na palakad; pagpapahusay ng mga serbisyo publiko, agrikultura at imprastruktura; at, suporta sa direktang pagtulong sa pagkakaroon ng kapayapaan at paglaban sa terorismo.

Ang pangalawang aid package ay ang Special Loan for the Enhancement of Firefighting Capabilities in Metro Manila na nagkakahalaga ng 5.2 billion yen o 2.2 billion pesos. Ito ay gagamitin para sa pagpapatayo ng tatlung (30) bagong substations at upgrading ng 124 substations at 22 fire stations sa pamamagitan ng pagbibigay sa kanila ng mga makabagong kagamitang pamatay-sunog.

Hindi matatawaran ang kahalagahan ng tulong na ito upang mabawasan ang pangambang masunugan ng mga naninirahan sa Kamaynilaan.

Bukod sa mga ito, hiniling ko rin sa pamahalaang Hapon na tanggalin na ang pagbabawal sa pagpasok ng mga Filipino health workers sa Japan, lalo na ang caregivers na mahigpit nilang kinakailangan. Nais ng ating pamahalaan na makilahok sa human resource market for caregivers sa Japan, kung saan inaasahang mabilis na darami ang mga matatandang nangangailangan ng pagkalinga. Sa isang banda, ang Pilipinas naman ay may nakababatang populasyon na nakahandang maghandog ng mahuhusay na tagapangalaga sa ibang dako ng mundo.

Sa isang pagtitipon naman, matindi kong hinimok ang mga Japanese businessmen na maglagak ng puhunan sa Pilipinas. Tiniyak ko sa kanila na magandang lugar pa rin ang ating bansa para sa kanilang negosyo.

Pinakamababa na rin ngayon ang bilang ng strikes ng manggagawang Pilipino sa loob ng dalawampung taon. At matatag at transparent din ang Pilipinas kung pagpapatupad ng batas ang pag-uusapan. Bumaba na rin ang ating presyo ng koryente nang mapagtibay ang Electric Power Industry Reform Act.

Sa ulat kong ito, sana ay maunawaan ng ating mga kababayan ang kahalagahan ng aking State Visits sa Japan. Patuloy nating kinikilala na isang mahalagang bahagi ng ating political security ay nakasalalay sa economic contribution ng bansang Hapon bilang isang matibay at malakas na pinang-gagalingan ng aid, trade and investment.

Maraming salamat at magandang araw po sa inyong lahat.

GMA warns squatting syndicates, says they destroy gov't housing program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) Chairman Michael Defensor and the Public Attorney's Office (PAO) to strengthen the campaign against squatting syndicates.

In a speech at a program commemorating the 16th anniversary of the Urban Poor Solidarity Week at the Quezon Memorial Circle in Quezon City, the President ordered the HUDCC to help the urban poor, with the help of the PAO to toughen the fight against those who are destroying the housing program of the government for the urban poor. “Iyong mga nagaangkin ng lupang hindi naman nila pag-aari tapos kumukubra sa inyo ng paupa at iyong nagnanakaw sa maliit na kinikita at pinagpawisang naipon ng mga maralita (Those who usurp others’ land and subsequently lease this and rob the urban poor of their hard earned meager income),” the President said.

The President informed Chief Public Attorney Persida Rueda-Acosta that there are volunteer lawyers such as the CLASP, founded by former Vice President Salvador Laurel and Iloilo Congressman Raul Gonzales, who are willing to help the Public Attorney’s Office in defending the rights of the urban poor.

The President likewise disclosed that she has asked the help of former Commission on Elections Chairman Harriet Demetriou to uphold the rights of the “maralitang taga lungsod (urban poor).”

On the problem of demolition, the President said that there is now an improved and effective process, more than one year after she said that “there should be a moratorium in demolition in government projects.”

“That’s a big work that should be brought to an end soon by Presidential Commission on the Urban Poor (PCUP) Chair Percival Chavez, with your help,” the President said to her audience composed mostly of urban poor from Quezon City and neighboring Marikina and Pateros.

“I said then, we should not treat the urban poor as a mere problem but part of the solution,” the President said.

“Bagama’t nagkakaisa tayo sa pagdiriwang na ito, hindi pa rin lubusan ang aking kasiyahan, Ito ay dahil sa kahirapang mangolekta ng buwis. At dahil sa kahirapan ng economiya sa buong mundo, humahabol pa rin tayo sa inyong pangangailangan (Though we are one in celebrating this occasion. I am unhappy because due to difficulties in tax collection and the global economic hardships, we could not satisfy all your needs),” the President said.

The President cited the many critics who, instead of helping the government, continue to criticize the government in its effort to fight poverty.

“But in spite of all of these, my determination is not diminished to do all I can to lighten the burden of the poor in the cities,” she said.

The President asked them to help her find the solution to the long and thunderous cry of the “masa” – house and lot, social services and protection of the rights of the small citizens.

“We are continuously lending an ear to your concerns,” the President said, stressing that if they are not being felt now, it is because the resources is not enough or the government is still finding the appropriate and effective solution.

“We are trying to find the solution to your problems for a better future, despite the difficulty being experienced not only in the Philippines but in the whole world,” the President said.

The President, assisted by PCUP Chair Chavez, and National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) Lead Convenor Teresita “Ging” Deles, awarded various checks from the different government agencies of government in charge of implementing programs and projects for the urban poor.

From Quedancor, the President, together with Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo, and Quedancor President Nelson Buenaflor, awarded checks for livelihood projects.

She also presented certificates of purchase commitment lines under the Community Mortgage Program to Ang Aguardiente Christ Faith Homeowners Association of Novaliches, Quezon City (beneficiaries, 53 families) and the Ang Maliliit na Samahang Pagkakaisa Homeowners Association sa Tagpos, Binagonan, Rizal (48 families).

She also gave checks for payments to the owners of lands under the Community Mortgage Programs.

The Urban Poor Solidarity Week is a yearly activity observed nationwide every December 2-8 by virtue of Presidential Proclamation 367.

Capping the 16th Urban Poor Week are various activities lined up in an activity dubbed as “Pabahay at Hanapbuhay para sa Maralitan Taga-Lungsod.

These activities include Livelihood Trainings and Job Fair, free medical mission and distribution of low-cost medicines, and a free legal clinic on land and housing concerns through the Public Attorney’s Office.

Palace ready to certify as urgent the bill creating Department of Information and Communication Technology

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assures the information and communication technology investors that her administration is now ready to certify the bill creating the Department of Information and Communication Technology (DICT) as urgent in order to promote and implement the information technology services (ITS) and information technology enable services (ITES) in the country.

In her remarks to the business communication leaders during the 14th Information Technology and E-Commerce Council (ITECC) meeting in Malacañang, the President said that she would issue an administrative order to strengthen the information and communication technology (ICT) group within the Department of Communication and Transportation (DOTC).

The President admitted that the House of Representatives have already fulfilled most of its obligations under her legislative agenda except the Special Purpose Asset Vehicle (SPAV) and for the amendment of the Anti-Money Laundering Act (AMLA), which are now in the bicameral conference committee.

“In the meantime because really I don’t want the SPAV and the AMLA bill to be delayed, we will issue administrative issuances to strengthen the ICT group within the DOTC because that’s the one which we envision to become the ICT Department”, the President said.

The President noted that the SPAV and AMLA should be prioritized by both House of Representatives and the Senate because these two bills are also very important to the business community.

And once these two bills are passed, the DICT bill is the next important assignment of the lawmakers that they need to attend to, she said.

The Chief Executive also announced that she’d like to draft an executive order transferring the National Computer Center (NCC) to DOTC under the undersecretary for communication.

The President explained that her move to transfer the NCC to DOTC is the best way for Congress to understand the monetary importance of having an ICT Department in the country.

She also informed the ICT investors about the good news on E-Procurement bill, saying the bill is now moving in Congress and has a better chance of getting pass into law even ahead of the DICT bill.

Aside from Roxas, the other officials who are present in the meeting were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Budget Secretary Emilia Boncodin, Secretary Estrella Alabastro of the Department of Science and Technology,

Secretary Edilberto de Jesus of the Department of Education, Chairperson Ester Garcia of the Commission on Higher Education, Undersecretary Gregory Domingo of the DTI and Undersecretary Manuel A. J. Teehankee of the Department of Justice.

Leading RP firms still see positive prospects in 4th Quarter, says BSP

Majority of the country's leading business firms continue to expect positive prospects in the fourth quarter, according to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP).

The BSP said that the Business Expectations Survey (BES) it conducted in October showed that the Business Outlook Index settled at 16.2 percent. However, business sentiment turned more cautious during the first quarter of next year, as the index declined to 6.3 percent, the BSP said.

The BSP said that anticipating increased consumer demand during the Christmas holidays, majority of the respondents projected higher volume of business activity for the fourth quarter.

According to the BSP, despite the generally cautious business outlook for the first quarter of 2003, the economy is still expected to grow during the period.

For instance, the BSP said, the financial conditions index had been showing a trend improvement over the past four quarters, and 18.7 percent of respondent firms plan to expand their businesses in the first quarter, from 10.7 percent in the previous quarter.

Confidence indicators of business performance showed mixed trends. Although the confidence index for some sectors have declined, the construction confidence index turned to positive 3.3 percent from negative 3.3 percent in the previous quarter, reflecting the upturn in the construction industry.

Starting the second quarter of 2001, the BSP has conducted the BES using the harmonized set of core questions for Asian countries suggested by the Asian Development Bank (ADB).

The survey covers 12 major industry groups (grouped into four major economic sectors), with firms drawn from the top 3,000 corporations in Metro Manila as listed by the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

The fourth quarter survey, which was conducted in October with 271 respondent firms, had a 45.2 percent response rate.

AFP, PNP making headway in campaign vs communist terrorists – Palace

The military and the police are making headway in the campaign against communist terrorists (CTs), Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye said today.

In his regular press briefing, Bunye said this is the general conclusion in today's 4th joint command conference in Malacañang of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP).

"There is a preponderance of AFP or PNP-initiated operations versus the CT-initiated operations. In other words there were more pro-active campaigns conducted by the government forces," Bunye said.

Bunye noted that based on the analysis of the kill-ratio, there were 4.5 CTs killed or wounded versus one AFP-PNP killed or wounded for the month of November.

He noted that indicators showed the government is succeeding in the campaign against the communist insurgents than the other way around. This is shown by the increase in the number of surrenderees and CTs captured and the number of firearms confiscated as a result of special operations conducted by government forces.

On the issue of Christmas truce with the New People's Army (NPA), Bunye said the general consensus is that this will still have to be studied carefully. "The government is looking for positive visible signs from the other side that a ceasefire would be respected," he said.

The joint command conference was attended, among others, by AFP chief Gen. Dionisio Santiago, PNP Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo and National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez.

Palace to respect Sandiganbayan ruling on Estrada house arrest issue

Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye today said Malacañang will honor the decision of the Sandiganbayan on the matter of whether former President Joseph Estrada could be put on house arrest this Christmas.

"The stand of Malacañang so far is that we have to respect the rule of law...we will follow whatever the decision of the Sandiganbayan," Bunye said in his regular press briefing this afternoon.

"Any house arrest or Christmas furlough will have to be approved by the Sandiganbayan," Bunye added.

Meanwhile, Chairman Michael Defensor of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) said today his visit to former President Estrada at the Veterans Memorial Hospital was personal and not an official one.

In a radio interview, Defensor said that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo had nothing to do with his private visit.

"Personal ho...wala hong kinalaman ang Presidente (This was a personal visit...the President has nothing to do with it)," Defensor said.

Defensor said he has visited the former President at the same hospital several times before and these were all on personal basis. He said they were able to discuss, among other topics, the former Chief Executive's request to be put on house arrest during the Christmas season.

"Ang madalas hong binabanggit ng dating Pangulong Estrada, unang-una sa lahat yun nga hong tuhod niya at binabanggit niya ho na talagang hindi ho siya nagloloko tungkol dito (What the former President is grumbling is his knee. He says that he is not kidding on this)," Defensor said.

GMA has sole say on any Cabinet change – Palace

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will conduct a revamp in her Cabinet whenever she sees it fit, Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye today said.

"Ang sinasabi ng ating Pangulo ay itong pagbalasa kapalit ng Cabinet officials ay gagawin kung kinakailangan pero wala siyang tinutukoy na panahon, wala siyang tinutukoy na official at itong pagbabalasa ay pinauubaya namin sa kanya (What the President is saying is that she will effect changes in her Cabinet if it is necessary but she is not saying when nor who are the officials to be affected)," Bunye said.

Bunye said a Cabinet revamp “is a complete prerogative” of the President.

The President has said during her state visit in Tokyo, Japan last week that she is continuously reviewing the performance of government officials to find out if they are up to their jobs or need to be replaced.

“I won’t say no, there wouldn’t be no revamp. I won’t say there would be. I will keep reviewing to see if a particular individual is still the appropriate person for the work,” the President said.

Statement of Office of the First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo

It was President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s concern for our fellow Filipinos working abroad that prodded her in good faith to ask me to be her special representative to overseas workers.

In good faith, I felt that being the President’s special representative, I can make a significant contribution to address a specific need of our people.

However, what was requested and accepted in good faith has been misunderstood, so that we are being distracted from the task of trying to improve the lives of the Filipino people in the midst of difficult times. I accepted the offer, the assignment out of love, out of concern for our countrymen working abroad.

I now withdraw from it out of prudence. But this should not be interpreted as giving up my desire to help our overseas countrymen in their problems in whatever way I can. I shall continue to be available to them whenever they need me.

Perhaps the silver lining here is that national attention has been drawn to the need to continuously find ways and means in helping Filipinos abroad. They have left their loved ones and friends to work in unfamiliar environments, which for some have been even proved to jeopardize their lives and liberty. They deserve all our help and support.

Finally, I would like to thank Sen. Aquilino Pimentel Jr., Cong. Prospero Pichay and the other people who went out of their way to defend my appointment without being asked.

Gov't to pursue probe of Southern Tagalog 10 human rights victims, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the relatives and families of the human rights victims of Southern Tagalog that the government would investigate the alleged military abuses even against them as she vowed that human rights violations during martial law would never happen again.

The President made the remarks during her one and a half hour breakfast dialogue with the relatives and families of the "Southern Tagalog 10," a group of activists representing the victims who were either salvaged or who disappeared mysteriously 25 years ago.

The meeting, held at Malacañang's State Dining Room, coincided with the culmination of the International Human Rights Week.

It was the President herself who initiated the unprecedented meeting with the families and relatives of the human rights victims to assure them that her administration has taken up the challenge to find ways and give justice to the victims of the martial law regime under the late strongman, President Ferdinand Marcos.

According to the victims' families, during the last week of July and the first half of August in 1977, 10 young men and women – all honor students, outstanding teachers and professionals – disappeared. They were never heard of ever since.

The 10, whom relatives and families call the Southern Tagalog 10, belong to a network of activists in Southern Tagalog who fought against Proclamation No. 1081.

The President told them that in response to their recommendation, she is now certifying as urgent a bill pertaining to salvaging and forced disappearances that the government will soon file in the House of Representatives.

She said that this would be in addition to the pending bill on the compensation of human rights victims.

The President said that the bill would define involuntary disappearance as a crime and those found responsible would be penalized.

She informed the group that the investigation of Southern Tagalog 10 human rights cases will be handled by the Presidential Committee on Human Rights (PCHR).

The President also ordered Secretary Angelo Reyes of the Department of National Defense (DND) and the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) to provide the PCHR all the necessary information and documents regarding the case of Southern Tagalog 10 human rights victims.

She said that in honor of the bravery of the activists who fought and died during martial law regime, the government, through the National Historical Institute (NHI), will be setting up a commemorative marker in Lucena City, adding that the target date for the inauguration is on February 22, 2003.

Aside from Reyes, those present during the dialogue were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Secretary Teresita Quintos-Deles of the National Anti-Poverty Commission, and Acting Justice Secretary Merceditas Gutierrez.

GMA okays modified tariffs on some 2,016 products

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today approved the proposal of the Committee on Tariff and Related Matters (CTRM) to modify the 2003 most favored nation (MFN) tariffs on an estimated 2,016 product lines.

Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, who presented to the Cabinet and the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) the proposed changes, responded to the requests of domestic producers for more time to become competitive, to lower the cost of imported raw materials and capital equipment and, in the case of agricultural and fishery products, allow for negotiating flexibility in the ongoing negotiations under the World Trade Organization (WTO) agreement on agriculture.

The changes which will be contained in a draft executive order, will implement the grant of zero duty on 41 information and communications technology (ICT) products beginning January 1, 2003.

“These products make up the first of the three tranches that will fulfill the Philippines commitment under the e-ASEAN framework agreement,” Roxas explained.

Roxas also said that this will provide support to the ICT sector by facilitating the entry to the country of ICT parts and components.

The zero duty on all 41 ICT products is expected to result in a foregone annual revenue of P39.5 million, Roxas said.

The draft EO will also implement the grant of zero duty on 79 products offerable under the ASEAN Integration System of Preferences (AISP), which requires that the 40 percent local content requirement comes solely from the preference-receiving country. The AISP rate shall apply only to imports from the preference receiving country.

The issuance of the EO will fulfill the Philippines commitment under the AISP to unilaterally extend tariff preferences to countries such as Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar and Vietnam (CLMV) on a voluntary and bilateral basis.

This will reduce the development gap between the ASEAN-6 and CMLV countries and at the same time allow local manufacturers to source raw materials from the latter at a lower cost, Roxas said.

Gov't to project RP as 'shopping capital' of Asia

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today approved the proposal of the Department of Tourism (DOT) projecting the Philippines as the shopping capital of Asia with Makati City as the shopping showcase.

The Chief Executive approved the proposal following the program presentation by Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon during the Cabinet Meeting this morning at the Social Hall of the Department of National Defense in Camp Aguinaldo, Quezon City.

The President said she approved Makati as the country's shopping showcase because “it is easy to secure the place from terrorists.”

In his presentation, Gordon said the program is designed to let the whole world know that the Philippines is the new shopping capital of Asia with its great malls that offer goods and services at competitive prices.

He said Hong Kong and Singapore used to be the bargain centers of Asia, but have now become too expensive.

Gordon also said the program is likewise aimed at attracting tour groups whose main interest is in shopping and to spur entrepreneurial and business activity where Filipinos can now sell their products to foreign visitors.

He told the President and members of the Cabinet that Makati was chosen as the shopping showcase from among other cities in the metropolis because “it is the Philippines’ premier business and financial center with state-of-the-art telecommunications facilities, high-rise buildings, modern road network, world-class malls and hotels, residential condominiums, restaurants and services.”

Gordon stressed that Makati is a well-planned urban center and relatively “blight-free” and will give a very good image of the Philippines.

He also cited other interesting amenities Makati can offer to both the Manila residents and tourists such as golf courses, museums, spas, entertainment centers, and its proximity to the airport as well as its accessibility to and from any point within the Metro Manila area.

According to Gordon, Makati is a “hub” and ideal jump-off point for leisure activities available in nearby areas such as Boracay, Subic, Tagaytay, Corregidor, Palawan, Cebu, Baguio and Banaue and Davao.

It can be recalled that the DOT and the city government of Makati under the leadership of Mayor Jejomar Binay, acting under the instructions of President Macapagal-Arroyo, organized the Makati Tourism Related Industries Congress (TRICON) on November 27, 2002 with 200 participants from the various sectors.

These sectors include the embassies and consulates, hotels/accommodation facilities, travel agencies/tour operators, Makati Tourism Foundation (Rustans, Rockwell, Shoe Mart, etc), Makati Jaycees, Ayala Land, media, other government agencies (Department of Trade and Industry, Department of the Interior and Local Government, and Metropolitan Manila Development Authority), business sector, the city government of Makati, and the DOT.

No water service interruption, Palace assures Metro Manila residents

Malacañang today assured residents of Metro Manila that despite the decision of the Maynilad Water Services, Inc. (Maynilad) to return its concession to the government, there will be no disruption in the supply of water to Maynilad’s thousands of customers.

In a press briefing at Camp Aguinaldo this afternoon after the Cabinet Meeting, Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao said that under the contract the Maynilad signed with the government, the notice of termination will have to be decided by the International Appeals Committee within 60 to 90 days.

“So, we would like to assure everybody that there would certainly be no disruption at all in water services. Even the Maynilad people have assured that there would be no disruption until the contract is settled,” Tiglao said.

In a separate press briefing, Public Works and Highways Secretary Simeon Datumanong also said that Metro Manilans being served by Maynilad have nothing to worry about. “Water services to them would continue as usual,” he said.

Datumanong said there is still the possibility that the kinks in the contract between the MWSI and the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System (MWSS) could be resolved within the 90-day period.

Datumanong, who is also chairman of the MWSS board, said the MWSS has 30 days to respond to the notice of early termination filed by Maynilad.

He said that if there will be no compromise settlement with Maynila, water distribution will revert to MWSS. "The MWSS would continue operating without prejudice to the delivery of the service to the people," Datumanong said.

Datumanong admitted that the government was "quite surprised" when it received the notice of early termination from Maynilad "because the MWSS has always been working with Maynilad to promote the partnership, the privatization of the operations of the water system."

In fact, according to Datumanong, the MWSS has been quite patient with Maynilad by allowing the firm to continue not paying yet the concession fees now totaling to almost P5 billion because, he said, the MWSS wants the privatization of the water service to be successful.

GMA orders Cabinet officials to include economic inputs from Speaker de Venecia in gov't program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today instructed some members of her Cabinet to hold a workshop on the microeconomic measures proposed by House Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. aimed at strengthening the Philippine economy.

The President directed concerned Cabinet secretaries to conduct the workshop before the end of this year, so that the programs that would be incorporated in the current economic program of the government could be implemented.

According to Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao, the economic program that was presented by the resident economist in the House, Romy Neri, was quite similar to the program of the President.

"Essentially it entails really working on some of the details, some of the red tape, some of the very small but not exciting reforms," Tiglao said, citing as example the reduction of steps in securing permits or clearances from the Philippine Ports Authority, among others.

"Very routine things that are not quite big, but these will, little by little, develop the economy of the nation," Tiglao added.

Makati City as the center or the focus of tourism was also presented by Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon, who said that the city could be the shopping capital of Asia for its cheap prices compared to those in other capitals of the world.

The President and the Cabinet also approved Secretary Gordon's "Visit Philippines 2003" program.

During a press briefing, Tiglao said the World Trade Organization (WTO) has tapped the Philippines as the visit country of the year, and Intramuros will be developed as a "history town."

"We will be developing a historical site where our history would be presented," Gordon said, adding that cultural presentations by the different regions will be offered both to domestic and foreign tourists.

The Cabinet meeting today was held at the Department of National Defense Social Hall in Camp Aguinaldo, the first ever to be held after the SONA of the President last July.

According to Tiglao, this will be the beginning of the holding of Cabinet meetings in different departments, "a chance for the President and her Cabinet to see the different offices of the line departments which are nerve centers of our government."

Tiglao said it will also be an opportunity for other government officials and employees to have a chance to see the President and the Cabinet as a team working together.

GMA won't interfere in Estrada's house arrest issue, Palace insists

Malacañang today clarified that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would not want to interfere in the reported snowballing move to allow a house arrest for her predecessor, former President Joseph Estrada, saying that this is a purely judicial matter.

"The matter Mr. Estrada's house arrest or even a Christmas furlough cannot be discussed by the President's executive branch in recognition of the separation of powers," Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao said today in a press briefing at Camp Aguinaldo after the Cabinet Meeting.

Tiglao said that the Sandiganbayan is the only entity that could decide on whether to allow a house arrest for Estrada instead of being held at the Veterans Medical Center (VMC) in Quezon City.

"There is a law. If you are following the law, you cannot just change it by consensus. It is the Sandiganbayan which would have to rule that the former President could be moved to a house arrest," Tiglao said.

He said that even if the President would want it, she could not meddle in the judicial branch since she represents the executive department.

Tiglao pointed out that Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) Chairman Michael Defensor visited Estrada at the VMC on his own personal capacity, apparently because former San Juan Mayor Jinggoy Estrada is a friend.

He said the visit was purely done on the initiative of Secretary Defensor and did not reflect the official stand of the President on the issue of house arrest.

"But you must remember that Mike Defensor was one of the firsts who filed the impeachment proceedings against Estrada," Tiglao said.

GMA expresses admiration for expansion of call center, skills of Filipino staff

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo yesterday expressed admiration over the new 300-seater call center facility of the Ambergris Solutions Inc. at the Ortigas Center, visibly pleased with the skills of the customer information representatives in speaking several accents of the English language fluently.

The President, who attended Tuesday night the expansion ceremonies at the Ambergris office, particularly took interest on the skills of Sugar Castence, a new college graduate who took on the job of customer information representative and has become very good in articulating the different accents of American English.

"You have a very good Texan accent," the President told her after listening to a demonstration.

Ambergris Solutions chairman and chief executive officer John Suits, who led the President on a short tour of the facility, explained that the firm has made it a point that its customer service representatives are very skilled in English-speaking as their "clients feel more at ease when they hear familiar accents."

Suits noted that Ambergris has grown from 25 to 300 employees in its first year of operations.

A provider of offshore customer care solutions to United States-based clients in the utilities, information technology, travel and hospitality, telecommunications and financial service industries, Ambergris is expected to boost the Philippines' drive to become the world's premier call center location.

Call centers, most of whose clients are American and British companies, are becoming one of the country's fastest-growing industries.

The Philippines' abundant supply of American-accented English-speaking college graduates, who are among the world's most highly-trained, articulate and customer-oriented, is attracting heads of overseas companies aiming to cut costs and improve service.

According to the company background distributed to the media, Ambergris has invested heavily on a reliable and flexible technology platform, featuring the latest in customer relationship management technology. It has partnered with marketing services giant Harte Hanks Inc. to offer a full range of customer care solutions.

"Through our expertise and our facilities, we want to provide the market with the high-tech backbone and full service focus needed to effectively compete on a global scale," Ambergris director Javier Infante said.

The Philippines ranks second, next to India, among Asian countries in making a bid for the global call center market. Despite the economic slowdown, the call center sector has proven to be a success in the country, generating thousands of jobs as well as foreign currency revenue.

The Contact Center Association of the Philippines projects revenue from this sector to increase from $173 million in 2002 to a whopping $864 million in 2004.

At present, the Philippines has a capacity of less than 15,000 call center seats, but the number grows daily. With rapid investment growth in the sector and the entry of new players such as Ambergris, India's call center with over 300,000 seats could be equaled or even surpassed by the Philippines.

Singapore Defense chief assures GMA of support for regional coalition against terrorism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and Deputy Prime Minister and Defense Minister Tony Tan Keng Yam of the Republic of Singapore today agreed that the Philippines and Singapore should widen and strengthen their intelligence cooperation to combat the terrorist menace strategically and globally.

"If we can move together, we can strengthen both our security and economic cooperation because the war against terrorism is another kind of war," the President told Tan during their 30-minute conversation held in Malacañang's Music Room this morning.

During the call, President informed Tan that the network of the international terrorists is now moving internationally and may be targeting Asia, particularly Singapore, as the next possible victim.

"The network is moving toward Southeast Asia so that's why we need to work together to prevent their possible attack," the President told Tan.

In response, Tan informed the President that Singapore is extending its support to the regional agreement initiated by the Philippines for unified efforts with Malaysia, Indonesia, Thailand and Cambodia in the fight against terrorism.

"We believe this is a long and difficult war. We believe that no country today is immune to the threat of terrorism," Tan said.

Tan pledged to the President that the Singaporean government would provide more information to the Philippines with regards to the Jemayah Islamiyah.

He also inform the President that Singapore has intensified measures to prevent a terrorist attack in the country because the Singapore government strongly believes that the September 11, 2001 terror attack in the United States "is an attack on the whole civilized world."

"It's a serious and present danger to all of us. During my fruitful meeting with President Macapagal-Arroyo, we agreed to intensify our efforts in the area of information and intelligence," Tan said during an interview by members of the Foreign Correspondent Association of the Philippines and Malacañang reporters after the meeting.

Tan met earlier with Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes on anti-terrorism and security cooperation and offered intelligence-gathering help, including information on terror suspects arrested in Singapore.

He also revealed that the Singaporean government had agreed to the proposal of Secretary Reyes that the defense departments of the Philippines and Singapore conduct defense studies, particularly in the National Safety College in the Philippines and the Defense School in Singapore.

Tan arrived in the country last Monday (December 2) for a three-day visit.

GMA to spend Christmas in Baguio, focus on housing, jobs in 2003

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she will spend Christmas in Baguio City together with members of her family.

“Well, even before I was President, we used to spend a lot of time in Baguio. So I think we will do that again,” the President told members of the Malacañang Press Corps during a luncheon meeting at the Palace’s State Dining Room.

She also said she will concentrate her efforts in the New Year to providing housing and jobs to the people, particularly the poor.

The President recalled that when her three children were still babies, they used to go to Baguio and then go down to the beach. “So, probably, we’ll do the same,” she added.

Last year, the President and her family also celebrated Christmas in the City of Pines.

According to the President, when her parents, former President Diosdado Macapagal and former First Lady Evangelina Macapagal, were alive, they spent the Christmas holidays in nearby places like Taiwan and Hong Kong.

However, since her parents died, “we have not done that anymore,” she added.

The President also said that she is trying to work out some Christmas and New Year messages for the Filipino people.

“I don’t want them to think of next year as a year of sitting and waiting,” she said.

The President said she wants to take the opportunity of spending her efforts and time in the year 2003 by providing housing and jobs to the Filipino people.

“If you remember, I said that my number one priority for the next six months is small and medium enterprises (SMEs) and then the second one is that I want to attend to is housing,” she said.

The President also said that she was gratified that about 500,000 housing units will be built over the next year and a half.

On the administration’s job generation efforts, the President said SMEs are very labor intensive and they are very useful users of capital.

In this connection, the President said her government “ may expand the SME program (and) we will put in more job-generating programs.”

GMA announces gov’t internship program for the youth

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced a government internship program for the youth so that they can inculcate from their own experience, such things as family values, rule of law, peace, moral standards and governance.

The Chief Executive made this announcement during a luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps this afternoon at Malacañang’s State Dining Room.

“Since I am going to speak before the business sector on Friday (December 13), we will ask the business community if they could help to create jobs through internship,” she said.

The President said the internship program may be held for a minimum of three months and will start in the Office of the President.

She said that in 2001 she also announced an internship program for the youth but added that she wants “to make it bigger this time.”

The President said she is allocating P5 million for this year’s internship program for the youth under the Office of the President alone. “That should be OP. But it is a program where I am encouraging other departments as well to have,” she said.

According to the President, an executive order will be issued soon to make the program operational.

The President stressed that the EO is simple and it will be called the Youth’s Program. It will be composed of the internship program (government wide) to start in the Office of the President and other programs for the youth as maybe recommended by the National Youth Commission or the Office of the President.

The Youth’s Program will have Presidential Management Staff (PMS) Head Silvestre Afafe, Jr. as adviser.

The President said there is going to be a secretariat within the PMS that will implement the internship program, adding that the PMS will draft the implementing rules.

“In the OP, there are already so many agencies, so they can really spread out to the extent that the others will also participate. Some may be there as media aides to help you make your job easier,” the President told Malacañang reporters.

GMA presents awards to 12 Child-Friendly Towns, Cities

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today presented awards to six towns and six cities for being child-friendly, protecting the children’s right to survival, development, protection and participation.

Alicia town in Isabela, which won for the third consecutive year this year, was also presented the Hall of Fame award during ceremonies held at Malacañang this afternoon for the Fourth Search for Child-Friendly Municipalities and Cities in the country.

The President presented a presidential citation and trophy to Alicia Mayor Napoleon S. Dy for being a Hall of Fame awardee and national winner for the First to Third-Class Municipalities category.

The President was assisted by Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose D. Lina, Jr. and Executive Director Lina B. Laigo of the Council for the Welfare of Children in presenting the trophies, plaques of recognition and cash awards to the winners.

In the Highly-Urbanized Cities category, the national winner was Olongapo City. The first runner-up award went to Butuan City and the second runner-up winner was Baguio City.

Tuguegarao City was cited as national winner in the Component Cities category while Surigao City and Naga City were adjudged as first and second runners-up.

For the First to Third-Class Municipalities category, the national winner was Alicia. First runner-up was to Jordan in Guimaras and the second runner-up was Balagtas, Bulacan.

The national winner in the Fourth to Sixth-Class Municipalities category was Dumingag, Zamboanga del Sur while the first runner-up was Calape, Bohol and the second runner-up Anao, Tarlac.

The child-friendly movement is a growing worldwide effort to operationalize the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC). It involves children themselves, families, communities, church groups and the government.

Launched in November 1998, the general objective of the search is to institutionalize a child-friendly environment in the promotion of the right of children to survival, development, protection and participation.

Specifically, it aims to:

- Give national recognition to municipalities and cities that are considered child-friendly;
- Encourage local government units (LGUs) to prioritize and address issues/concerns affecting the full realization of the rights of children;
- Heighten the awareness of LGUs on the rights of children; and,
- Monitor and evaluate the implementation of programs and services for children.

SC ruling on PIATCO case not a rebuff on GMA, says Palace

Malacañang today said the ruling by the Supreme Court calling for a cooling-off period of 30 days between the government and the Philippine International Air Terminals Co., Inc. (PIATCO) for them to resolve the PIATCO contracts was not a rebuff on President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as projected by some sectors.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Chief Presidential Legal Counsel Avelino Cruz said that all that the high court asked was for both parties to submit their respective legal positions within 30 days.

Cruz said that in response to a query from the lawyers of PIATCO, the Supreme Court said that within this 30-day period, the parties could talk to each other. "Like in all cases, while the case is being tried or heard by the court, the parties are free to talk to each other," he said.

According to Cruz, the high court will definitely decide on the merits of the case after the opposing parties file their respective memoranda within 30 days.

Cruz, however, insisted that the government has already taken the position that the five contracts on the construction of Terminal 3 of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) involving PIATCO are null and void.

This was the position taken by the Office of the Solicitor General during the hearing at the Supreme Court last Tuesday, Cruz said.

Although the final say on the matter would still come from the Supreme Court, the executive branch is not going to implement the "illegal contracts" with PIATCO, Cruz said.

Cruz also brushed aside reports that it was the intervention of business tycoon Lucio Tan that prompted the government to declare the contracts with PIATCO as null and void, saying that Tan has no claim to the terminal project anymore.

He explained that the Asia's Emerging Dragons Corp. (AEDC), with Tan as a major incorporator, has already withdrawn its petition in court. "That means the claim of the AEDC is already foreclosed," Cruz said.

Secondly, according to Cruz, Tan, being the owner of the Philippine Airlines, cannot run an airport terminal because there will be a conflict of interest.

In a related development, Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao today confirmed that Secretary Gloria Tan-Climaco, who headed a task force that reviewed the contracts with PIATCO, has asked to be relieved of her full-time job as presidential adviser, which is a Cabinet post.

Tiglao said that the President has agreed to Tan-Climaco's request to be just named as presidential senior consultant, so that she can still be involved in the private sector.

Let's leave Erap house arrest issue to the Sandiganbayan, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the issue on the call for the house arrest of former President Joseph Ejercito Estrada should be left to the courts because "that's the rule of law."

"Well, I leave it up to the courts," the Chief Executive said in response to a question raised by a journalist during her regular luncheon meeting with the members of the Malacañang Press Corps at the Palace's State Dining room.

The President said that since the plunder cases of Estrada are now with the Sandiganbayan, it is this court that should decide on whether to grant house arrest to Estrada.

She also defended Chairman Michael Defensor of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) on his recent visit to the Veterans Memorial Medical Center (VMMC) where Estrada and his son, former San Juan Mayor Jinggoy Estrada, are in detention.

"I don't think you can attribute ill motives to Mike. Because if you remember, Mike is the very, very first congressman to move for (Estrada's) impeachment," the President said.

The President recalled that when the "Spice Boys" were having lunch with her while she was still vice president, Defensor was already raising the impeachment issue against the former president.

"So Mike was the very first one. So I think therefore, whether or not we agree with what he does, I think we should respect that it is coming from somebody, who, in fact, has taken a moral stand very, very early in the previous administration," she said.

GMA welcomes charter change debates but says issue should not be tied with postponing polls

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today Congress' action on proposals to amend the Constitution should be allowed to take its course, reiterating her position that she is not against any debate on the issue.

She stressed, however, that the issue of charter change should not be tied with the issue of postponing the elections in 2004.

"I respect the sense of Congress," she told members of the Malacañang Press Corps during their regular luncheon meeting.

She recalled that during a meeting with various political parties recently, she made known her position that as far as constitutional change is concerned, "I am not against any discussion, I am not against a debate."

She said she even gave her contributions to the debate.

She said that for the parliamentary system to succeed, "we will need a law to strengthen political parties, we will need a law to strengthen mass movements."

On the other hand, she also said, for a federal system of government to succeed, there are prerequisites that must be in place. "A federal form of government is made up of entities that are economically and politically autonomous," she said.

She then said the worthiness of the various sides of the debate on proposals to amend the charter should not be distracted by tying it up with the 2004 elections.

In a press briefing later, Secretary Rigoberto Tiglao, Presidential Spokesman and Chief of Staff of the Office of the President, said: "There will be an election therefore in 2004. No force, no move, no action on anyone's part, legal or illegal, can stop the election in 2004."

Tiglao said the move for a charter change is a congressional initiative totally divorced from the question of election.

GMA creates Anti-Smuggling Investigation and Intelligence Center

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she had signed an Executive Order creating the Anti-Smuggling Investigation and Intelligence Center which is going to be headed by former Dangerous Drugs Board Executive Director Miguel Coronel.

The Chief Executive made the announcement during her regular luncheon meeting with the members of the Malacañang Press Corps at Malacañang's State Dining Room.

The President said that the Executive Order "will specially take care of the smuggling that goes on outside the Customs area because the Bureau of Customs jurisdiction is within the Customs area."

On vegetable smuggling, the President told the Malacañang reporters that Presidential Security Group Commander Brigadier General Hermogenes Esperon, Jr. will personally head the task force to address the smuggling of vegetables.

"Wherever they are coming from, that's part of his (Esperon's) job as task force head to trace," she stressed.

The President also said that she had already directed Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo to stop the Bureau of Plant Industry from issuing permits to import vegetables to protect the Benguet farmers.

She likewise said that she did not approve the proposed executive order to reduce vegetable tariffs.

Filipino deportees should be treated humanely, GMA tells RP envoy to U.S.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she has directed Philippine Ambassador to the United States Albert del Rosario to make sure that the 100 Filipinos expected to be deported to the Philippines within the next few days for illegally staying in the US "are treated humanely."

In her regular luncheon meeting with some members of the Malacañang Press Corp, the President said that the treatment after 63 Filipinos underwent when they were deported in June this year should not be repeated. On their trip back home those deported Filipinos were handcuffed.

"Precisely I protested against that treatment that time. So it will be much much more humane this time," the President said.

The new deportees, arrested in different parts of the US would be flown out of San Diego, California to Clark Field in Pampanga or the Subic Freeport in Zambales in the next eight days.

According to the Ambassador del Rosario, the deportees, four of them women, will be treated humanely and in a manner consistent with the dignity of each individual without compromising the security of the passengers and the aircraft.

He said that Consul Henry Bensurto will accompany the deportees on their flight home to ensure that they are treated properly.

No disruption in water service, GMA assures

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured that there will be no disruption in the supply of water in Metro Manila.

In her regular luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President stated: "The most important thing that I would like to convey is that the water service will continue uninterrupted."

The President said the government is trying to work out something with the concessionaires on what could be done to ensure that the water service will be uninterrupted and that prices will remain as stable as possible.

Public Works and Highways Secretary Simeon Datumanong, who is chairman of Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System (MWSS), said in a press briefing at Camp Aguinaldo yesterday, after meeting with the President there, that there is still the possibility that the kinks in the contract between Maynilad Water Services Inc. and the MWSS could be resolved within a 90-day period.

Datumanong said the MWSS has 30 days to respond to the notice of early termination filed by Maynilad.

He said that if there will be no compromise settlement with Maynilad, water distribution will revert back to the MWSS.

"The MWSS would continue operating without prejudice to the delivery of the service to the people," Datumanong said.

NAPOLCOM special action center organized to act on citizens' complaint against rascal cops

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. today announced the establishment of a special action center under the National Police Commission (NAPOLCOM) that would address the complaints of citizens against police rascals.

Lina, who made the announcement during an interview at Malacañang, said the move is in line with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's order to strengthen the police's response to private citizens' complaints against abusive men in uniform.

"Several hundreds of rascals in uniform have been relieved since President Macapagal-Arroyo took over. There will be no let-up and we will even heighten the campaign," Lina said.

Lina explained that under the set-up, a reaction team would be dispatched to the area where the complaint was made to investigate the alleged excesses of the police officer.

Lina said the NAPOLCOM would send the team to immediately arrest the alleged offender on the basis of "pre-charging investigation," while preventive and administrative suspension may soon follow, depending on the results of a thorough investigation.

Lina noted that under the law, there are six disciplining authorities as far as police rascals are concerned. These are the Mayor, the People's Law Enforcement Board, and Regional Director of the Philippine National Police, the PNP chief, Internal Affairs Service of the PNP and the NAPOLCOM.

Lina, however, said the NAPOLCOM emerges as the one that has a greater responsibility in making sure that the police act in accordance with the law.

"The buck stops with us as we are responsible for an immediate proper response," Lina said.

Cop linked to embassies' closure relieved

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. today said the Philippine National Police has relieved the police intelligence officer responsible for the closure of the embassies of Australia and Canada and the European Union office in the country.

Lina, in an interview at Malacañang, identified the officer as Police Superintendent George Gaddi of the Western Police District.

Lina said the relief is preliminary to the heavier disciplinary sanctions Gaddi may deserve after a thorough and complete investigation.

He said that while an investigation is still being undertaken, “preliminary reports point to his involvement.”

Lina also said the authorities are looking into the officer’s possible motives in coming out with intelligence reports that led to the temporary closure of the embassies in Makati, which is under the Southern Police District.

During a luncheon with Palace reporters last Wednesday, the President said she had ordered Director General Hermogenes Ebdane Jr., chief of the PNP, to throw the book at the officer and find out his motives.

“He did harm to our country,” the President said, adding, “we cannot allow such a lapse to go unsanctioned.”

Palace discounts military takeover, says country is stable

Press Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye today discounted the possibility of a military takeover as he assured the nation that the country is stable.

“We have sufficient stability in the country,” Bunye said in a radio interview.

In an interview with Malacañang reporters, Bunye said it is still uncertain if Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. was quoted correctly when he said that the nation has to accept charter changes now or face the possibility of a military takeover.

Newspapers reported the Speaker as saying that unless the country shifts to a unicameral parliamentary system soon, the inability of its leaders to solve its problems and destructive politics might lead to an authoritarian rule.

Bunye noted that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is not against proposals to amend the Constitution per se but the issue of charter change should not be tied with postponing the presidential elections in 2004.

The Press Secretary also noted that during a recent meeting with various parties, the President made known her position that as far as constitutional change is concerned, “I am not against any discussion, I am not against a debate.”

Lina directs LGUs to conduct regular inspections of business firms

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. today ordered local government units, to be assisted by the Bureau of Fire Protection (BFP), to conduct regular inspections of factories, warehouses and other business establishments in their localities for fire hazards and compliance with safety standards.

In an interview with Palace reporters, Lina said that in his memorandum, the BFP would head the regular inspection since it can easily enter such establishments and check if the businesses are complying with safety standards.

Lina also said that mayors may also conduct their own inspections as they have “visitorial powers” to call on business establishments and check if such places comply with the conditions of their business permits.

“Kailangang magtulongan tayo dito (We need to help each other in this concern),” Lina said.

The issuance of the memorandum stemmed from the recent discovery of the biggest narcotics laboratory in Valenzuela City.

After a 35-minute blaze that razed a warehouse in that city, firefighters discovered suspicious chemicals and substances inside the establishment. The chemicals were later discovered to be methamphetamine hydrochloride or shabu worth P2.2 billion.

House arrest issue not affecting nation's stability — Palace

Malacañang today disagreed with the reported assessment of the business sector that the issue of house arrest of deposed President Joseph Ejercito Estrada is affecting the peace and order situation of the country.

“It is totally irrelevant to our political stability, which is well established,” Presidential Spokesman Rigoberto Tiglao today said in a press briefing in Malacañang.

Tiglao, who is also Chief of Staff of the Office of the President, said that even in the last Pulse Asia survey, the concern about stability, peace and order, has moved downward.

Tiglao emphasized that the President is focusing on economic recovery. “The President is moving really towards two major centerpiece programs — housing and job generation,” he said.

He revealed that the President has started talking to two different groups on ways in which they could help out in pushing the administration’s job-generation program.

Saying it has not been finalized, Tiglao said the approach would be to ask the business sector, including the Philippine Chamber of Commerce and Industry (PCCI), to commit to a certain level of employment, even for six months, to stimulate the economy.

“But these are still plans being finalized by the President and we hope this could be finalized by the end of the year,” Tiglao added.

President's radio address to the nation

Magandang araw po sa inyong lahat.

Nais kong gamitin ang pagkakataong ito upang ipaabot sa inyo ang aking matibay na pananalig sa sambayanang Pilipino.

Malaki ang aking tiwala sa kakayahan ng ating mga kababayan na lampasan ang anumang problemang kanilang hinaharap.

Ang kailangan lamang ay mabigyan ang Pilipino ng kapangyarihang gumawa ng akmang desisyon at mapagkalooban ng tama at sapat na resources tungo sa makabuluhang pakikilahok sa mga mithiin at programa ng pamahalaan.

Hayaan n'yo ring ulitin ko sa inyo na ang lahat ng ating mga gagawin mula ngayon ay nonpartisan, o walang kinikilingang partido o samahan.

Ang aking mga desisyon ay bunsod ng aking responsibilidad sa ating bayan at walang anumang bahid ng pulitika.

Buuin natin ang isang government of national cooperation upang wakasan ang ating pagkawatak-watak.

Gagawin nating mga nasa pamahalaan ang lahat para isulong ang ating bansa, pero kailangan ko ang inyong suporta at pakiki-isa.

Bilang patunay nang tapat na hangarin, inihayag ko kamakailan ang mga detalyadong plano ng ating mga gagawin sa susunod na labimpitong buwan. Ito ay nakatuon lalung-lalo na tungkol sa micro-economic action agenda na ngayon ay mas mapag-uukulan natin ng pansin dahil sa desisyon kong huwag nang tumakbo sa 2004 elections.

Patuloy kong iisa-isahin ang ating mga programa sa mga darating na araw para mas mauunawaan nang lahat at tuloy malaman kung saan at papaano kayo maaaring tumulong o makinabang sa pagpapatupad nito.

Noong Huwebes ay binuksan ko ang Super Terminal sa Pier 15 ng South Harbor at doon ipinamahagi ko ang ating Roads and Roll on-Roll off Ferry Terminal System.

Ang proyektong ito ay inaasahang magpapababa sa presyo ng pagbibiyaheng cargo at pasahero mula sa Mindanao patungong Luzon.

Ang DBP ay naglaan na ng dalawampung bilyong piso (P20 B) para sa nasabing modernisasyon ng ating ferry system.. Hindi lamang nito pahuhusayin ang daloy ng kalakalan sa pagitan ng ating mga isla kundi hihimukin din ang mas maraming private sector investment.

Sa ngayon ay may dalawampu't-anim nang kompanya ang nagpahayag ng interes na lumahok sa programang ito.

As I've said before, Filipino business has great potential. We don't need to tap it; we just need to let it be. What we need is just to create the conditions for it to flourish.

Kaya naman, kailangan nating pabilisin ang implementasyon ng mga proyektong imprastruktura para magsilbi silang mahalagang daanan ng kalakalan.

Bukod sa RORO facilities, sisimulan na natin ang rehabilitasyon ng railway system sa Luzon sa tulong ng suportang pinansyal na manggagaling sa South Korea at Tsina.

Sa loob ng taong ito, aayusin natin ang mga linya ng tren na Balintawak-Malolos at Manila-Cabuyao. Ang Manila-Cabuyao ay tulong din ng Hapon.

Palalawakin natin ang North Expressway at pahahabain ang South Expressway hanggang umabot sa Batangas Port.

At magkakaroon din ng interconnection ang MRT at LRT para mabawasan ang siksikan sa trapiko sa Kamaynilaan.

Sa anibersaryo ng EDSA Dos sa darating na Lunes, ihahayag ko naman kung papaano natin titiyaking magiging malinis at maayos ang eleksiyon sa susunod na taon.

Gagawin natin itong computerized mula counting hanggang tabulation para siguruhing bawa't boto ng ating mga kababayan ay mabibilang nang tama.

Ang EDSA Dos ay nagluklok sa akin bilang Pangulo dahil sa malaking galit ng mga mamamayan sa nagaganap noong katiwalian.

Bilang pagkilala sa katotohanang ito, maglulunsad tayo ng isang kilusan laban sa corruption na mangangailangan ng pakikilahok ng sambayanan. Inuulit ko na matibay ang aking pananalig sa ating mga kababayan.

Malaki ang aking tiwala na, sa ating pagkakaisa at pagtutulungan, malalampasan natin ang anumang problema, kagaya nang ating ginawa sa EDSA. Kaya, hinihiling kong muli sa lahat na samahan ninyo ako at tulungan upang makamit ang ating pangarap na magandang bukas.

Maraming salamat at mabuhay ang Pilipino.

GMA says polls in 2004 to be computerized from counting to tabulation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she would see to it that the 2004 presidential and local elections would be computerized from counting to tabulation to insure that every vote will be counted correctly.

In a radio message, the President said she would announce her other plans to assure a clean and honest 2004 polls on Monday during the EDSA Dos anniversary.

The President also said that in recognition of the fact that EDSA Dos was a showing of the people's anger against corruption, she would be launching during the second anniversary a movement against corruption.

She said the movement would need the participation of the whole nation. “Inuulit ko na matibay ang aking pananalig sa ating mga kababayan (I reiterate my strong belief in our countrymen),” the President said.

“Ang kailangan lamang ay mabigyan ang Pilipino ng kapangyarihang gumawa ng akmang desisyon at mapagkalooban ng tama at sapat na resources tungo sa makabuluhang pakikilahok sa mga mithiin at programa ng pamahalaan (What is needed is to give every Filipino the power to make decisions for themselves and the right and enough resources so that they can meaningfully participate in the vision and programs of the government),” the President pointed out.

The President also reiterated that from hereon she would be non-partisan. “Ang aking mga desisyon ay bunsod ng aking responsibilidad sa ating bayan at walang anumang bahid ng pulitika (All my decisions would be borne out of my responsibility to the nation and not because of politics),” she said.

The President called on the people to join her in forming a government of national cooperation and to put an end to disunity.

GMA says she'll update people on all her programs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she would keep the nation informed on all her programs so that they would know where they can be of help or what will benefit them.

In a radio message, the President said her programs in the next 17 months would be focused on the micro-economic action agenda.

“Noong Huwebes ay binuksan ko ang Super Terminal sa Pier 15 ng South Harbor at doon ipinamahagi ko ang ating Roads and Roll on-Roll off Ferry Terminal System (Last Thursday I inaugurated the Super Terminal at Pier 15 of the South Harbor and there I announced our Roads and Roll on-Roll off Ferry Terminal System),” the President said.

The project, according to the President, would bring down the costs of cargo and passenger handling and transporting from Mindanao to Luzon. She said the Development Bank of the Philippines has put aside P20 billion for the modernization of the ferry system.

“Hindi lamang nito pahuhusayin ang daloy ng kalakalan sa pagitan ng ating mga isla kundi hihimukin din and mas maraming private sector investment (This would not only improve investment flow among the islands but also encourage more private sector investment),” the President said.

The President added that at present 26 companies have signified their interest in joining the program.

“As I've said before, Filipino business has great potential. We don't need to tap it; we just need to let it be. What we need is just to create the conditions for it to flourish,” the President said.

The President pointed out that there is a need to speed up the implementation of infrastructure projects to spruce up economic activities in the countryside.

The President also announced that the rehabilitation of the railway system in Luzon would soon be started. This includes the railways of Balintawak-Malolos and Manila-Cabuyao.

The North Expressway will be widened and the South Expressway will reach up to the Batangas Port. The MRT and LRT railways will also be interconnected to decongest traffic in the metropolis.

Statement by Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye

The President remains focused on growing the economy, stamping out corruption, pursuing electoral reforms and healing the nation

Her expression of preference for the constitutional convention as a mode for effecting charter change is by no means inconsistent with her declaration namely: that she is not running in 2004 and in fact elections would be held as scheduled in 2004.

Math and Science will be upgraded — GMA

San Fernando, Pampanga — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she would upgrade math and science teaching in basic education to prepare the youth to be the next generation knowledge workers.

“That’s why we have added more hours to the teaching of mathematics, the President said in a speech after her conferment of the degree of Doctor of Humanities, honoris causa, by the University of the Assumption of San Fernando, Pampanga.

The President has instructed Secretary Edilberto de Jesus of the Department of Education to add more laboratory hours to science.

The President added that the English language education be also upgraded to attract teachers to teach the subject.

The President recalled that last year, for the first time in the history of the Philippine government, she included public school teachers, the policemen and soldiers in the government employees’ extra Christmas bonus.

The Chief Executive said that these government workforce were not included because of the 1.2 million numbers of government employees, half a million are teachers, and a hundred thousand of them are soldiers.

“And they would say that if you include them in the Christmas bonus, we will have a very big financial problem,” the President explained.

However, the President said she felt that the molders of the minds and the protectors of peace should not be excluded in such benefits.

The President also disclosed that only yesterday, the Department of Education entered into an agreement with government financial institutions to buy the teachers’ debts so that they will be able to pay lower interest rates in their never ending loans.

The President also instructed Secretary de Jesus to institute school feeding programs for primary schools in the poorest school districts to increase the chances of Filipino children finishing school.

She asked Presidential Assistant for Education Mona Valisno to make sure that these instructions are carried out.

“This is part of what I said in my first State of the Nation’s Address that we should minimize the cost of going to school,” the President said.

This was started, the President pointed out, when the collection of miscellaneous fees were stopped in public schools on enrollment day.

“And we continue this also by making sure that there is a school building in every barangay by 2004, when I leave my office,” the President said.

The conferment of the degree of Doctor of Humanities, honoris causa, was a recognition by the University of Assumption of the countless achievements of the President to improve the quality of human life for the Filipino in general, and of the Kapampangan in particular.

The conferment ceremony was the climax of a year-long celebration commemorating the Ruby Jubilee or 40th year of the founding of the University.

The first ever awardee of the Doctor of Humanities, honoris causa, was the late President Diosdado Macapagal. His daughter, Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was only the second.

GMA to launch educational campaign on responsible parenthood

San Fernando, Pampanga — Reiterating that her population policy is based on the Christian and Constitutional principle of responsible parenthood, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said she is launching an educational campaign on responsible parenthood by next month.

The campaign would encourage couples towards birth spacing and make them aware that there are modern technologies that are consistent with Christian formation, the President said.

In a speech after her conferment of the degree of Doctor of Humanities, honoris causa, by the University of the Assumption in San Fernando, Pampanga, the President said that birth spacing is Christian and responsible.

“We will push this all the way until I pass on the policy, hopefully, to my successor,” the President said.

It can be recalled that the President said on July 26, last year, that her administration is pushing an “aggressive natural population plan” in an effort to address the growing population in the country.

The President said that the target of her administration is to bring up the use of the natural method by 20 percent through an aggressive education campaign for couples.

Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, on the other hand, said that it important to get in touch with couples and educate them, “sp that they may know essentially what might be good for them.”

Mt. Pinatubo victims hail GMA’s housing program

SAN FERNANDO CITY, Pampanga — Local government officials of Pampanga and hundreds of residents here hailed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for her sincere efforts to provide free house and lot units to all the victims of Mt. Pinatubo eruption.

The President visited the province of Pampanga today to distribute the 640 Certificates of Housing Allocation and 118 Certificates of Market Stalls Award to the residence of the Bulaon Resettlement Site.

The President arrived here at exactly 1:30 this afternoon and she received a warm welcome from the residents. They thanked her for the beautiful and spacious housing units that were built for them for free by the 51st Engineering Brigade of the Philippine Army.

Earlier, the President toured and inspected some of the housing units and the newly constructed market facilities that will provide settlers there resettlement-based livelihood opportunities.

She then personally distributed the Certificates of Housing Allocation and Certificates of Market Stalls Award to the beneficiaries at the newly built Resettlement Site.

Some 323 market stalls were built but for the meantime only 118 Certificates of Market Stalls were awarded by the President during her short visit here. The Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) schedules the awarding of the remaining 205 market stalls in the next few days.

Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, HUDCC Secretary Michael Defensor, Pampanga Governor Lito Lapid, Bacolor Mayor Romeo Dungca, Jr., Mabalacat Mayor Marino Morales, President of the Pampanga Mayors League and other local officials witnessed the distribution of certificates.

The President also witnessed the turnover of Bulaon Water System to San Fernando Water District, the awarding of lot of HUDCC-PMO (formerly Mt. Pinatubo Commission) to Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA) for the construction of the Diosdado Macapagal Technical School inside the resettlement site, and the awarding of P5,000 checks to 37 resident-beneficiaries under the HUDCC-PMO Balik Barangay Program.

Bulaon Resettlement Project was initiated in 1994 by the defunct Mt. Pinatubo Commission and the Provincial Government of Pampanga.

The community was built on a 79.9 hectare lot purchased by the MPC amounting P32 million and constructed the 4,049 housing units there.

The beneficiaries are from the municipalities of Bacolor, Minalin and San Fernando, who were directly affected by Mt. Pinatubo eruption and lahar flows.

In early 2002, the additional housing units were constructed at the Bulaon Resettlement Site by the Engineering Brigade of the Armed Forces of the Philippines to accommodate other victims cramped in evacuation centers particularly in Mexico, Pampanga.

Majority of the beneficiaries of the 640 housing units came from barangays Cabalantian, Cabambangan, San Antonio, Cabetican, San Vicente, Concepcion, Dolores, Duat, Maliwalu, Parulog and Balas of Bacolor.

GMA earmarks P5 billion for anti-poverty campaign

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced the launching of a P5-billion fund that would finance Kabalikat Laban Sa Kahirapan (Kalahi) for the next five years.

The President made the announcement during her keynote speech during the sectoral council meeting of the National Anti-Poverty Commission at the Rizal Park Open Air Auditorium.

The Kalahi program, an anti-poverty initiative of the President, assists the government in strengthening the capability of local government units (LGUs) to design, implement, and manage development activities. Such activities may include basic infrastructure like new or rehabilitated roads and bridges, barangay schools and clinics, and water supply and sanitation facilities.

“I am hereby announcing the launching of a P5 billion peso fund that will finance Kalahi for the next 5 years,” the President said.

The President said that this month, the government would be launching projects in 11 towns in 11 regions. Next week, she said she would be in Davao provinces to launch Kalahi projects.

She noted that in March, the government would be launching projects in 20 towns in the different regions. “Tuloy-tuloy ito dahil yung pondong 5 billion ay para sa limang taon (These projects would continue because the P5 billion fund is for five years),” she added.

The President said she wants the Kalahi project to be part of her legacy to the next administration. “Ako ang nagtanim, ang susunod na Pangulo ang mag-aani nitong mga programang ito (I planted the seeds but the next President would be the one who will reap the benefits),” she said.

The Chief Executive stressed that this is the attribute of a democracy.

She also noted that she has repeatedly said that she is not so ambitious as to want to become a great president. “I just want to be a good president.”

GMA announces release of P700 M coco levy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that on Monday, on the 2nd anniversary of Edsa 2, a check of P700 million from the coconut levy fund would be released.

The President made the announcement during the sectoral council of the National Anti-Poverty Commission at the Rizal Park Open air Auditorium.

“I hereby announce that this coming Monday, on the second anniversary of Edsa 2, a check of P700 million from the coconut levy fund would be released,” she said to the applause of the crowd.

The President’s announcement is a fulfillment of her first State of the Nation Address in 2001 that she will not stop efforts until the coconut farmers benefit from the coco levy fund.

“Hindi tayo hihinto habang hindi nakikinabang ang magniniyog sa Coco Levy Fund,” she said.

In her first SONA, the President said the government would be able to give more assistance to the coconut farmers once the case of the coconut levy fund is resolved.

“Kapag naresolba ito, magagamit ang pondo para sa modernisasyon ng mga niyugan. Pinawalang bisa ko ang kautusan sa Coco Levy mula sa dating administrasyon upang hindi madehado ang magsasaka (If the case is resolved, we would be able to use the funds for the modernization of the coconut industry),” the President has said.

BSP notes steady growth in commercial bank lending

Improvement in loans in vital economic sectors has spawned the steady growth of the volume of outstanding loans of commercial banks (KB) for the third straight month as of end-November 2002.

A report from the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) said the continued increase in KB lending was noted in the agriculture, fisheries and forestry sector, which grew by 27.1 percent, year-on-year; community, social and personal services, 11.2 percent; and financial institutions, real estate and business services, 9.3 percent.

The BSP said bank credits to the wholesale and retail trade sector and to the utilities (electricity, gas and water) sector also registered modest annual growth rates of 0.2 percent and 0.9 percent, respectively.

Altogether, these sectors accounted for about two-thirds of the total KB outstanding loans during the period in review.

Lending to manufacturing, however, continued to contract by 7.1 percent in November. Spare capacity in manufacturing could explain the weak lending activity to the sector.

The BSP said KB lending rose by 1.4 percent year-on-year to reach P1.43 trillion during the same period.

Bank lending in November last year also went up slightly compared to the 1.1-percent year-on-year growth registered in October 2002.

On a monthly basis, the growth in KB loans was faster at 0.6 percent compared to 0.3 percent in the previous month.

The modest growth in bank lending has been accompanied by some improvement in the asset quality of banks as the ratio of banks' non-performing loans (NPL) to the total loans outstanding declined to 16.36 percent as of October 2002 from 16.44 percent in the previous month.

The BSP noted that the recent enactment of the Special Purpose Vehicle (SPV) Act of 2002 is expected to hasten the disposition of non-performing assets of the banking system and invigorate bank lending activity.

There are increasing signs of stronger demand for goods and services as evident in the rise of passenger car sales by 2.7 percent in November, an encouraging turnaround from the 17.4-percent year-on-year decline in October.

Similarly, power consumption rose significantly by 6.4 percent in November compared to the 0.9 percent rise in the previous month.

Monetary authorities see a generally manageable inflation outlook despite foreseeable cost-side pressures emanating from the El Niño weather disturbance and volatility in world oil prices.

In addition, uncertainties regarding the strength of global economic recovery and the risks posed by geopolitical developments remained, making domestic demand conditions, including export growth, quite challenging in the near term.

But the BSP said it would ensure that monetary conditions supportive of non-inflationary growth would continue to be in place.

GMA calls for continued support for economic, reform projects

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today joined Malacañang employees, just as she did almost two year ago, during flag-raising rites in front of the Kalayaan (Freedom) Hall and thanked them for their support, particularly in bringing the government closer to the people.

Just as she did on January 21, 2001, she asked for their continued cooperation and support for the programs she will pursue more vigorously in her final 18 months in office.

Officials and employees of the different bureaus and offices under the Office of the President (OP) and Office of the Press Secretary (OPS), as well as the Presidential Security Group (PSG) were present during the flag ceremony.

"Thank you for your support and cooperation," the President said in her brief remarks after the raising of the Philippines colors.

Last Dec. 30, the 106th anniversary of the martyrdom of National Hero Dr. Jose P. Rizal, the President announced she would no longer seek the presidency in 2004, vowing to focus on improving the economy and on implementing her reform agenda until her term ends.

Accompanying the President at the ceremonies were First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo, Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo and other government officials.

After the ceremonies, the President administered the oath of office to new Press Secretary Hernani Braganza, Agrarian Reform Secretary Roberto Pagdanganan and Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye.

At noon today, the President will attend a Mass at the Edsa Shrine with other key players in the Edsa 2 People Power Revolution.

The President is expected to make some important announcements about her eight-point reform agenda during the Edsa Shrine event.

The President earlier announced that on the occasion of the second anniversary of Edsa 2, a check of P700 million from the coconut levy fund would be released to the coconut industry.

The President's announcement is a fulfillment of her first State of the Nation Address in 2001 that she will not stop efforts until the coconut farmers benefit from the coco levy fund. "Hindi tayo hihinto habang hindi nakikinabang ang magniniyog sa Coco Levy Fund," she said.

The President has also announced the launching of a P5-billion fund that would finance Kabalikat Laban Sa Kahirapan (Kalahi) for the next five years.

The Kalahi program, an anti-poverty initiative of the President, assists the government in strengthening the capability of local government units (LGUs) to design, implement, and manage development activities. Such activities may include basic infrastructure like new or rehabilitated roads and bridges, barangay schools and clinics, and water supply and sanitation facilities.

This month alone, the government would be launching projects in 11 towns in 11 regions. Next week, the President said she would be in the Davao provinces to launch Kalahi projects.

She noted that in March, the government would be launching projects in 20 towns in the different regions. "Tuloy-tuloy ito dahil yung pondong 5 billion ay para sa limang taon (These projects would continue because the P5-billion fund is for five years)," she added.

The President said she wants the Kalahi project to be part of her legacy to the next administration. "Ako ang nagtanim, ang susunod na Pangulo ang mag-aani nitong mga programang ito (I planted the seeds but the next President would be the one who will reap the benefits)," she said.

The Chief Executive stressed that this is the attribute of a democracy.

She also noted that she has repeatedly said that she is not so ambitious as to want to become a great president. "I just want to be a good president."

Braganza sworn in as new Press Secretary

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today swore into office new Press Secretary Hernani Braganza in simple ceremonies right after leading the flag ceremony at the Kalayaan Hall in Malacanang.

Secretary Braganza would be taking over the Press portfolio from Secretary Ignacio R. Bunye, who also took his oath as Presidential Spokesman during the rites.

Secretary Roberto Pagdanganan was also sworn in as Secretary of the Department of Agrarian Reform, which was vacated by Braganza.

In an interview after the ceremonies, Braganza assured that the OPS under his watch would be pro-active, transparent and accessible to the members of the media.

He was on his second term as congressman of the first district of Pangasinan when he was called upon by the President to serve in the national government and appointed Secretary of Agrarian Reform on February 5, 2001.

He began his political career in 1988 when he was elected municipal councilor of Alaminos, Pangasinan. He first ran for a seat in Congress in 1995.

During his first term, he was Vice Chairman of the House Committee on Youth and Sports as well as member of the Committees on Appropriations, Ecology, Labor and Employment, Trade and Industry, Women, Public Order and Security, Tourism, Special Committee on Law Enforcement and Special Committee on Reforestation.

From 1994 to 1995, Braganza was consultant for Political Affairs at the Office of Pangasinan Vice-Governor Ranjit Shahani. He was district coordinator of the Lakas-NUCD-UMDP party.

Braganza took up a Bachelor of Arts course at the De La Salle University where he was President of its Student Council.

An active student leader, Braganza founded the La Salle Students Democratic Alliance as well as the Sambisig Party in 1983.

He was president of the United Students for an Assimilated Philippines in DLSU in 1982.

In 1983, he became the National Chairman of the National Union of Students of the Philippines.

He was born on August 7, 1964 in Quezon City.

GMA's concern is that 2004 election should not be affected by charter change, says Bunye

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has not had a change of heart and as a matter of fact, has been very consistent on the issue of amending the Constitution, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said today.

In a briefing this morning at the Palace, Bunye said the President has been very consistent as far as the charter change issue is concerned.

"You will note that she said her only concern is that the elections in 2004 should not be affected by any discussions on charter change, so her expression of preference for constitutional convention is very much consistent with this," Bunye said.

Bunye noted that the election of the delegates to the constitutional convention is proposed to coincide with the 2004 elections. "So in other words, there would be elections in 2004 and that is consistent with the previous declaration of the President," Bunye added.

When asked to comment on the view of the Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. that it is better to have a constituent assembly as the mode for charter change, Bunye stressed that it is up to the legislature to resolve the matter.

"It's very difficult really to push one mode of amending the Constitution without the agreement of the other party. In this particular case, there is a divergence of opinion between the House of Representatives and the Senate and unless they come into an agreement as to the mode, then we might not even have a charter change at all. I don't think it's logical to assume that the President would get involved in any further discussion on this matter," Bunye said.

The President has said that a constitutional convention would be the least divisive way of bringing about fundamental changes in the political system and that "it is better to have a constitutional convention because I don't want my intention to be suspect."

She said the members of the constitutional convention that would consider changes in the charter may be elected in 2004.

"Considering the divisiveness in our country, perhaps the constitutional convention will be the least divisive way of bringing about fundamental changes in the political system," the President told the Japanese newsmen during an interview last week.

The President has maintained that she is not against any discussion or debate on proposals to amend the Constitution.

She has also declared that the issue of charter change should not be tied with the issue of postponing the 2004 elections.

The President said that during the last 18 months of her presidency, she will be focusing on the economy, healing the deep divisions within society and working for clean and honest elections in 2004.

She has also set down an eight-point work program that she will pursue with greater vigor during the next 18 months:

1. To strengthen small and medium enterprises;
2. Jumpstart housing;
3. Reduce cargo costs from Mindanao to Luzon;
4. Decongest Metro Manila;
5. Mark up the contributions of the Presidential Commission on Good Government to the fiscal resources;
6. Make Makati a specific urban tourist destination and the reclamation area on Roxas Boulevard as a tourism complex or the new Nayong Pilipino.
7. Stimulate private investment in agriculture; and
8. Address the deficit problem through both administrative and legislative measures.

GMA calls on Filipino people to rally behind her

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the Filipino people to rally behind her, saying that there will be no retreat in her solemn vow to be apolitical during the last one and a half years of her administration.

In her remarks at the second anniversary of EDSA II at the EDSA Shrine in Mandaluyong City, the President said that she had made the decision not to seek the presidency in next year's elections, and there will no turning back.

"For my part, I have made the sacrifice, I have sounded the advance—and there shall be no retreat," the President said.

The President also lamented that some of her critics have remain unconvinced that she is shedding off all political ambitions and would now focus all her attention to healing the nation and pushing the country's economic growth.

"I leave them to their self-imposed and self-serving ignorance. They can go on sounding the retreat—back to the vested interests that pay their way, back to the corruption that is for them the only way," the President said, referring to her incorrigible detractors.

She said that she had realized that effective reform boiled down to fighting entrenched vested interests "that have stood in the way of national progress and prosperity."

The President said that these vested interests have continued to block the way to better a standard of living for the vast majority rather than just the small elite.

According to the President, when she assumed the presidency it was a time when the nation and the world were facing a lot of challenges.

"But I was undaunted by the challenges because I know that our countrymen, including those at EDSA II, were prepared to support me in my efforts to speed up the country's development," the President said in Pilipino.

The President then renewed her call for unity among the Filipino people so that the country can move forward.

"Huwag na nating hintayin pa na maiwanan na naman tayo ng mundo. Ubos na ang oras natin (We should not wait for the other countries to overtake us again. We don't have the luxury of time)," the President said.

GMA okays release of P2.5 billion to ensure clean and honest polls in 2004

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the people's real choices must be ensured in the elections in 2004 as she announced the availability of P2.5 billion to computerize the quick and accurate counting and tabulation of votes in next year's polls.

"We must protect the votes of those who run on the strength of their public service rather than on the force of their private wealth," the President said after a Mass that commemorated the second anniversary of EDSA 2 at the Lady of Peace Church at the EDSA Shrine in Mandaluyong City.

In announcing last Dec. 30, 2002 that she would not run in next year's presidential elections, the President said she would concentrate on three main goals: healing the nation of the divisiveness caused by partisan politics; speeding up the country's economic development; and ensuring an honest, peaceful and orderly election in 2004.

The President pointed out that the computerized counting and tabulation of votes in 2004 will not only spare the teachers from tedious manual counting and the pressures of partisan politics but will also make sure that the votes will be counted correctly.

"High tech votes – this is the key for change," the President said.

The President said she intends to leave as her legacy to the nation the certainty that every Filipino will see that his vote is counted.

But the President said that although she will be out of the 2004 presidential derby, she is not a goner as some sectors would think. "Far from it," she said.

"A President without the baggage of reelection can move faster, hit harder and work to greater effect," she explained.

The President said her sole interest in the 2004 elections is to assure that it will take place and that it will be "utterly clean."

GMA declares people's war against graft, corruption

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today declared a non-nonsense people's war against graft and corruption, as she placed the full resources of government and enjoined the citizenry to get involved in the fight.

"There can be no exceptions whether made out of fear or favor, or because of family and business connections" in stopping graft and corruption that have victimized the people for so long, the President said in her speech during rites marking People Power II at the EDSA Shrine today.

She said it was imperative "to mobilize the real victims of corruption – the general public" who bear the brunt of the social malady.

"The ordinary Filipino is in the best position to complain" because corruption has spawned the deterioration of their standard of living, she added.

The President thus called for "a national draft of all good men and women who want to make a difference in your lives and in our country" by working closely with the government in exposing graft and corrupt practices committed by public officials and employees.

She asked the "idealistic youth and the silent majority to be our eyes and ears" in stopping graft and corrupt practices.

She ordered the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) to receive reports and follow these through until the perpetrators are put behind the bars of justice.

She also announced that she had doubled the budget of the PAGC so that it could put up an investigative unit to undertake intensive lifestyle checks on public officials. This would link the government and the people in the anti-graft thrust.

As the Chief Executive urged lawyers to volunteer their services to the Ombudsman and the Department of Justice to help expose fraud and prosecute errant public servants, she also called on Congress to pass the bill letting the Ombudsman get the help of private lawyers for free.

She ordered the Department of the Budget and Management (DBM) to allot P35 million for the Ombudsman to recruit 50 lawyers for its investigation and prosecution work.

Similar funds would also be provided to increase troop complement and to acquire state-of-the-art weaponry and information technology systems in the government's anti-graft drive.

The President likewise asked the Ombudsman to make available to the public the statements of assets and liabilities of all public officials, including presidential advisers, and to "pro-actively observe government procurement involving large amounts."

In another directive, the President ordered the DBM to also provide P700 million to step up the modernization of the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR), particularly for its information and communication technology department that had been able to track down tax evaders.

She cited the BIR and the Bureau of Customs for "quietly working" and starting to be showcases in the fight against graft and corruption.

The BIR, for one, was able to make major companies to agree to pay an aggregate of over P3 billion after a tax investigation of an arrested customs official.

The President also ordered the abolition of the bonded trading warehouse system, after crackdowns resulted in the closure of more than 300 customs bonded warehouses that have become notorious for smuggling.

"In due time, you will see more results," she stressed.

She also called on Congress "to create the National Authority for Revenue Administration, changing the BIR from a populous and ponderous bureaucracy to a lean and mean corruption fighting machine."

She said she launched the anti-corruption campaign "to raise the moral standards in politics and the economy."

"Corruption is the worst enemy of progress and social justice because it robs the state of the resources to prosecute the war against poverty," she added.

GMA gets support of civil society in war against grafters, corrupt officials

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today received cheers and an almost one minute round of applause from representatives of civil society which noted the administration's effort in seriously waging a war against graft and corruption.

The applause came after the President reported that the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission and the newly created Anti-Smuggling Task Force had major accomplishments in their campaign to go after tax evaders and smuggling syndicates.

In her speech during rites marking the second anniversary of People Power II at the EDSA Shrine, she admitted that she became a President because of EDSA II, particularly in the midst of a national outcry against corruption.

The President got a total of nine rounds of applause.

After her speech, the President administered the oath of office of the newly elected officers and members of EDSA People Power Commission

Among the officers who took their oath were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo as chairperson, former Presidential Management Staff chief Victoria Garchitorena as co-chairperson, Rafael Lopa as executive director, and members Alexander Magno, Guillermo Luz, Regina Jimenez-David, Danilo Songco, Ricardo Samaniego, Loreta Atienza-Lina and Atty. Gavino Mapando.

Meanwhile, in accepting the challenge of the President, members of the civil society vowed to participate in achieving the goals of her remaining 18-month reform agenda.

In a letter of support distributed to media, the civil society from Kilusan 12.30 has promised to give their “full support to the computerization of the electoral process.”

The Kilusan 12.30 said they would undertake all necessary and legitimate actions to pressure the Commission on Elections to speed up the move in the coming months.

“Simultaneous with this, Kilusan 12.30 will lobby relentlessly for the enactment of the law on absentee voting. We will closely monitor the developments in the release and proper utilization of the coco levy fund and the assets of the Marcos ill-gotten wealth,” the group said.

Kilusan 12.30 has set up four working committees to address the issues of affordable medicine, decent housing, lifestyle audits of government officials and the charter change through a Constitutional Convention.

The group would also assist the government in its campaign for asset reform in urban and regional settings, in tapping small and medium enterprises, microfinancing, enactment of the NARA bill and voter’s education.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has released a check of P700 million from the coco levy fund that would benefit some of the 3.5 million coconut farmers and farm workers nationwide.

The check was released to UCPB Finance and Development Corporation (UFDC) Chairman Noel Cabrera at the EDSA Shrine Monday during the rites commemorating the 2nd anniversary of People Power II.

One of those who witnessed the check turnover was Presidential Adviser and Special Resource Person to the UFDC Board Secretary Dodi Limcaoco.

Also on the UFDC Board are Bayombong, Nueva Viscaya Bishop Ramon Villena and two representatives from major farmers' organizations.

The check represents the first significant amount released for the benefit of the coconut farmers and farm workers from the accrued interests of the coconut levy fund. The levy was collected from the farmers over thirty years ago.

This first major release from the coco levy fund is a major milestone in President Macapagal-Arroyo's pro-poor and poverty alleviation reform agenda.

The levy has been an issue spanning five Philippine Presidents but major strides were made only during the Macapagal-Arroyo presidency.

More benefits from the levy are expected soon after the Sandiganbayan ruling that says the fund is public in nature. The sale of the 27% uncontested levy shares in San Miguel Corporation, now estimated in the billions, is also expected to further benefit coconut farmers and farm workers.

The P700 million that has been released will directly benefit an estimated 164,000 cocount farmers or their wives in programs and projects identified by the UFDC.

An estimated 18,000 wives of coconut farmers would will be provided with 'Grameen-type' micro-finance loans for livelihood projects.

About 60,000 farmers will also benefit from increased income because of a 'farm diversification' program, which will result in increased prices for their copra and livestock.

At least 56,000 farmers will get additional income since they can sell their copra directly to oil mills cutting off traders and middle men. And roughly 30,000 farmers will benefit from loans extended to their cooperatives, non-government organizations (NGOs) and peoples' organizations.

Release of the funds directly to project beneficiaries is expected by 1st week February as processing of applications is now ongoing. The money will be released as soft loans at 9.75% interest to cover processing, training, administrative, and collection costs which will allow the funds to be 'cycled' to benefit even more farmers.

Unite to ensure victory in 2004, GMA asks partymates in Lakas-NUCD

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has called on the members of the ruling Lakas-NUCD Party which, she chairs, to unite and stay together in order to ensure the party's victory in the 2004 national elections.

“As your party chairman, I ask you to stay with me and stay together,” the Chief Executive said in her speech Monday night before members of the Lakas-NUCD Party during a meeting in Malacañang.

The President said that while in the past, she was “not exacting or demanding of your demeanor as Lakas members, but now I ask for one common response: loyalty to our party.”

She stressed that loyalty to Lakas, particularly at this crucial time in the country’s history “is loyalty to the needs and aspirations of our country.”

“That sense of loyalty dictates upon each one of us to exercise organizational discipline and cohesion. While I am a non-candidate President, I will not prejudice our right and our need to have a winning standard bearer in 2004,” the President said.

The President said there is no paucity or shortage of materials for the presidency, adding that within the Lakas-NUCD, “there are several members whose brilliance and track record of service to our people make them deserving of the “party’s attention and excitement.”

During the meeting, the President also asked all her partymates to band themselves together and choose the party’s “standard bearers at the appropriate time, perhaps at the end of the year.”

“We must choose as one, move as one, and win as one,” the President stressed.

The President likewise asked the Lakas members to have faith in the party as well as its leadership and the process by which “we will not only ensure victory in 2004, but assure the nation of a new presidency capable and determined to pursue the reforms needed by our people.”

“Let the sincerity of our plans and intentions of our people be our politics. Let us, with renewed unity and hope, dedicate our energies to the deliverance of our people out of the abyss of poverty and lethargy and into the sunlight of prosperity,” she said, adding that in the end, “this is our surest road to victory, for ourselves, for our party, and for our country.”

GMA asks Lakas partymates to support her vision of governance until 2004

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo urged her Lakas partymates to support her vision for economic recovery, national healing and a clean and honest 2004 elections and to put the people’s welfare over and above personal agenda.

During a meeting with Lakas party leaders in Malacañang Monday night, the President said the tasks that remain to be done in her remaining days in office are not easy and at stakes are 80 million Filipinos who look up to the Macapagal-Arroyo administration for deliverance from conditions of inequity, deprivation and poverty.

“You are the backbone of the biggest and most powerful political party today. As incumbent officials or chapter chairmen of the party, you wield considerable political ascendancy in your respective provinces, districts and cities as well as in Congress,” the President said.

The President specifically asked her partymates in Congress and the Senate to pass the measures that make up the structural reforms of her administration.

“These include strengthening the anti-money laundering reforms; making land reform serve our farmers better by allowing them to use farmlands as bank collateral; the revenue measures on sin products and automobiles to finance the gigantic development requirements; the reform of the BIR into a lean and mean corruption fighting corporate machine; the Transco franchise which will mobilize private capital into our power sector so as to avoid massive brownouts by the year 2007; and the absentee voting bill,” the President said.

For her partymates from the local governments, the President urged them to support the administration's micro-economic programs to increase productivity and build up domestic demand.

The President said that these programs include the massive promotion of small and medium enterprises which are the most efficient users of capital; the accelerated jump-start of housing which has the biggest multiplier effect on the economy; reducing transport costs from Mindanao through the Visayas to Luzon by building a nautical highway made of roll-on-roll-off ferry terminals; decongestion of Metro Manila; and, promotion of premier tourist destinations.

She exhorted her partymates to make Lakas a powerful structure to ensure the success of her administration's initiatives. "Help me reach out to the people. Communicate to them the urgency of these programs," the President said.

"Help me enlist the support of local officials and barangays under your influence – so that our reforms can take root and bare fruit in all our communities," she added.

The President said she could only do her remaining tasks if politics is set aside from the time being. "I ask you this even as I assure you that I know only too well your anxieties about 2004. I know that most if not all of you are direct stakeholders in the elections to be held next year," she said.

The President said she knew fully well that "there are those who wish that a rift will grow between us over the means for charter change."

"I am not about to surrender to such wishful thinking of our enemies. For I will still be your President, more than ever your strong President, until June 30, 2004," the President pointed out.

The President said she can exercise her authority fully until the last minute of her tenure, and she intends to do so.

"I do not ask you to engage in political abnegation as I did, but I do ask you to engage in the politics of performance in support of my reform program – and our administration's reform program," the President said.

The President stressed that she will help those who help her leave a good legacy of change for the country.

"I will help those who make governance work well for the good of our people. I am sure the people will be just as discerning. They, too, will take care of you," the President said.

Palace belittles impeach move vs. GMA

Malacañang today belittled the move by some key opposition and non-government organization personalities to impeach President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

In a press briefing this morning in Malacañang, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio "Toting" Bunye said that the impeachment move "is a premature launching of the senatorial campaign of some of the gentlemen included among the complainants."

A group of opposition and civil society personalities has moved to impeach President Macapagal-Arroyo for alleged culpable violation of the Constitution, bribery, graft and corruption, and betrayal of public trust.

The group is spearheaded by former Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile, and People's Consultative Assembly secretary general Linda Montayre, along with former Sen. Franciso Tatad.

“It looks like they have started their campaign very early. And I am referring to Mr. Enrile and Mr. Tatad. It looks like this is the start of their election period,” Bunye said.

Bunye noted that based on what he heard over the radio and what he read in the newspapers, the complaint that they are supposed to file is a rehash of all their allegations that have remained unsubstantiated.

“A number of them have been the subject of investigation by the Senate and nothing has come out of this investigation,” Bunye said, referring to the allegations.

He expressed the belief that the group “is just craving for attention.”

GMA pushes agri-industrial growth in Maguindanao

COTABATO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today released P1 million in fund aid to initially bankroll and spur the growth of small and medium enterprises (SME) engaged in agricultural production in Mamasapano town, Maguindanao.

The President, in a visit and ocular inspection of possible agri-industrial sites in newly-created Mamasapano town, sought to raise the interest of domestic and foreign investors to put up labor-intensive agri-industrial projects in the area.

Mamasapano is southeast to the towns of Datu Piang and Sharif Aguak.

Mamasapano Mayor Datu Acmad Ampatuan received the P1 million check, representing the town’s allotment under the President’s “One Town-One Product-One Million Peso” project.

The project aims to help SMEs in all towns of the country develop and market its main product. The President had released a number of similar checks nationwide since last year when the project was launched.

The promotion and enhancement of SMEs nationwide is one of the eight thrusts in the President’s reform agenda for the remaining 18 months of her administration.

In a short program during the visit, the President also released P1 million to Mayor Ervin Luntao of Sto. Niño town, South Cotabato for the same project.

The President and Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman likewise witnessed the turnover of some P50,000 worth of medicines given by the Philippine Charity Sweepstakes Office (PCSO) to Mamasapano town.

The President arrived in Mamasapano by helicopter. She was welcomed by Maguindanao Governor Andal Ampatuan, Police Regional Director Amerodin Hamdag, 6th Infantry Division Assistant Commander Triponio Salazar, and 301st Brigade Commander Col. Agustin Demaala.

GMA visits Maguindanao to award medals to military personnel and assess gov’t projects

CAMP SIONGCO, Maguindanao — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo arrived here today at 11:00 a.m. to inspect government projects and award medals to some deserving military personnel.

The presidential helicopter landed at the adjacent Awang Airport.

Earlier, the President flew to Mamasapano town in Maguindanao to assess several ongoing government projects in the area.

Immediately after her arrival, the President held a close-door meeting with the town mayors of Maguindanao inside this camp's conference room.

The President later led in the awarding of medals to 14 officers and men of the Army's 6th Infantry Division (6ID) under Maj. Gen. Generoso Senga for gallantry in combat against rebels and other lawless groups operating in the Cotabato-Maguindanao area.

The Chief Executive is expected to proceed to Davao City later this afternoon.

GMA awards medals to Filipino soldiers for gallantry in the Battle of Colombio

COTABATO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the gallantry of at least 16 army officers and enlisted men who figured in operations against kidnap-for-ransom groups and helped improve the peace and order condition in Central Mindanao.

The President, who visited Camp Siongco – headquarters of the Army's 6th Infantry Division – in Awang, Datu Odin Sinsuat town, Maguindanao, said the bravery of Filipino soldiers had kept criminality, banditry and terrorism at bay in the provinces of Cotabato, Sultan Kudarat and Sarangani.

The President mentioned the ongoing Battle of Colombio (a town in Sultan Kudarat) where some of the soldier-awardees bravely fought it out and the others are still going after and exchanging fire with a band of bandits who ran to President Roxas town in North Cotabato.

“Gusto kong bigyang pansin ang Battle of Colombio. Beinte otso na sa mga kalaban ang nasawi, kahit isang sundalo ay wala pang namamatay (I want to take note of the Battle of Colombio where our soldiers killed 28 of the enemy, without having any fatality),” she said.

The President explained that some of the soldier-awardees could not make it to the rites as they are still in the field, completing their mission.

She called the Colombio battle as “the biggest victory of my administration,” a reason why she did away with red tape and personally saw to the immediate formal awarding of medals to the hero-soldiers today.

The President quoted Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes who earlier said that the soldier-awardees “are the future of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.”

“Malaki ang galang ng sambayanang Pilipino sa kawal na Pilipino (The nation has high respects for the Filipino soldier),” she added.

The Military Merit Medal awardees included Lt. Col. Eduardo Andres of the 27th Infantry Battalion (IB), Capt. Reymundo Panaguitan of the Tactical Operations Group 12, 2Lt. Generoy Boado and 2Lt. Romeo Delgado Jr. of the 1st Marine Brigade, and Technical Sergeant Anastacio Camporedondo.

Those who received the Gold Cross Medal were 1Lt. Leather Leviste, SSgt. Alexander Alibangbang and SSgt. Leonilo Ortega, all of the 3rd IB; SSgt. Abner Gonzales, 57th IB; Sgt. Crispin Ventura, 27th IB; Cpl. Merson Lisondra and Cpl. Armand Aquino, both of the HHS Battalion; Cpl. Henry Masion of the ECC; Cpl. Antonio Felizarte of the 6th DAR; and PFC Melphy Lamson.

- Issuance of gun licenses, permits suspended
- File complaints with PAGC if you have proof against corrupt officials, Palace tells public
- Palace appeals to house, Senate to pass AMLA amendments soonest
- GMA hopes successor will continue anti-poverty war

Issuance of gun licenses, permits suspended

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. announced today the suspension of the licensing of firearms of private individuals and the issuance of permits to carry guns outside residence.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Lina said Philippine National Police Chief Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. is organizing a tracker team to run after those in possession of unlicensed firearms.

Lina said the PNP, which is mandated by law to regulate the licensing of firearms and the issuance of permit to carry, will undertake a thorough review of existing guidelines on gun licenses and permits to reduce the volume of firearms now in the hands of civilians.

According to Lina, there are 328,000 loose firearms in the country. Some 190,000 of these guns were previously registered but for one reason or another, the owners had failed to re-register them or to renew their license.

“We are now running after those individuals because those previously registered firearms are now considered loose firearms,” he said.

These individuals will also be included in the list of individuals whose firearms will be confiscated, Lina warned.

Lina, however, said that the so-called loose firearms that have no record in the PNP will be the first target of the tracker team.

“At least those previously registered firearms which were not re-registered already have records in the PNP,” Lina said.

There were 7,000 previously registered firearms that were confiscated last year. “Some of them cannot be destroyed because they are still being used as evidence in cases where these firearms were used,” Lina said.

“So we are gathering now all the firearms that were confiscated last year and in previous years which are no longer being used as evidence in court,” Lina added.

Right now, there are 1,000 firearms that can already be destroyed, Lina said.

The DILG chief said he has asked the Firearms and Explosives Unit of the PNP to gather all these confiscated firearms and have them destroyed next week.

Eighty-five percent of gun-related crimes were committed through the use of unlicensed firearms, he further said.

In the last 10 years, he said, 12,233 firearms were involved in the commission of crimes.

File complaints with PAGC if you have proof against corrupt officials, Palace tells public

Malacañang today called on the general public to file complaints with the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission (PAGC) if they have proof against government officials that they perceived have committed graft and corruption.

“The invitation of the President is for the general public to submit their complaints before the PAGC and other appropriate agencies, if they have direct knowledge of anomalies involving public officials,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said in his regular press briefing in Malacañang.

Bunye said that since President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has said that fighting graft and corruption is one of her goals during the last 18 months of her administration, the PAGC is expected to be getting a number of complaints in the next few days.

On the PAGC initiated complaint against General Manager Edgardo Manda of the Manila International Airport Authority (MIAA) and six others, Bunye said that the investigation is still on its initial stage.

As a matter of procedure, Bunye said, Manda and the other respondents would be given the chance to reply to the charges within a specific period of time.

“At this point, it is premature to make any judgment on the complaint filed. I think it’s best to allow General Manager Manda to file his reply first,” Bunye said.

The PAGC, an agency under the Office of the President, earlier named Manda and six others as respondents in an administrative case arising from their participation in the contract to build Terminal 3 of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport.

Palace appeals to House, Senate to pass AMLA amendments soonest

Malacañang today appealed to both houses of Congress to immediately pass the amendment to the Anti-Money Laundering Law (AMLA) in order to help facilitate the remittances of thousands of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

“We appeal to our legislators that this matter be given immediate attention,” Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said in a press briefing this morning in Malacañang.

Bunye said that a good number OFWs would be adversely affected by the non-passage of the amendment to the AMLA.

“It is on their behalf that I think our legislators should really take immediate action on this proposal. Because you know, two days or may be a one-week delay in the remittances of the overseas Filipino workers to their families will really result in hardship among the Filipino families,” Bunye said.

Earlier, Bunye expressed the hope that should there be no major objection to the amendment to AMLA, Congress should be able to pass it before the February 12 deadline set by the Paris-based Financial Action Task Force (FATF).

Reports said that currency traders warned that the peso could depreciate to as much as P60 to $1 if Congress fails to pass the amendment to the AMLA as demanded by the FATF.

The Anti-Money Laundering Council (AMLC) headed by Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas Governor Rafael Buenaventura said the sanctions could range from tedious requirements for clearing dollar remittances of OFWs to more drastic measures, such as prohibiting foreign banks from dealing with Philippine banks.

The FATF's proposed amendments involve allowing the AMLC to investigate suspicious transactions, even without a court order, lowering the threshold to P500,000, and making the AMLA retroactive, at least just to establish the paper trail of transactions made after the passage of the law.

GMA hopes successor will continue anti-poverty war

JABONGA, Agusan del Norte — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed hope that her successor in 2004 would continue to lead the Filipino people in winning the war against poverty within the decade.

In a message during the launching of the Kabalikat Laban sa Kahirapan (KALAHI) program here, the President said she had obtained the necessary funds that would pave the way for the implementation of an ambitious anti-poverty program nationwide.

She said the KALAHI program was one of the main aims of her visit to Washington, DC in December 2001, when she succeeded in getting the nod of the World Bank to allot P5.1 billion to help bankroll the P9.3 billion social services program in the next five years.

To the applause of her mainly Cebuano-speaking audience, the Chief Executive said the fund aid that would be given to Jabonga would be as comprehensive as possible.

Speaking in Cebuano interspersed with English, she noted that the people of Jabonga would soon see the day when "land will be distributed where possible; more education, public works, health and sanitation services will be made available; more jobs will be encouraged, as we encourage the growth of micro small and medium enterprises."

She said Jabonga, a rice-producing town 59.7 kilometers from Butuan City, stood to get P3.5 million per year for three years for its KALAHI project.

Well-spent KALAHI funds would mean "a positive transformation when the children can be given nourishment, the household will have the sanitary facilities, gravel roads and drainage will make the community less prone to flooding," she added.

Immediately after Jabonga, the KALAHI program would be launched in 10 other towns in 10 other regions. This year alone, the program is expected to cover 70 towns with 1,670 barangays. Next year, it would spread to another 66 towns.

"After that, my successor will take over, but I have already obtained the funding from the World Bank for its continuity," ensuring that the program would "last long beyond my term as president," the Chief Executive said.

"This will be a legacy that I will bequeath to my successor in the hope that he or she will further lead the victory against poverty within the decade," she stressed.

She reiterated her vow not to run in the 2004 presidential elections, but stressed that she would pursue her programs to uplift the quality of life of the people with a vigorous anti-poverty campaign in the remaining 16 months of her administration.

She brushed off insinuations of politicking made by her detractors and critics.

She said her decision not to engage herself in the 2004 presidential polls had given her all the time to lead the Filipino in the collective goal of bringing down, if not eliminating, the incidence of poverty nationwide.

She said the lack of social and economic opportunities in Jabonga also prevailed in so many depressed areas in the country, needing the quick delivery of government services in these areas.

Earlier in her message, the President said her heart belonged to Mindanao and its people, narrating her childhood days in Iligan City.

She said she considered herself a Mindanaon, having imbibed the culture of Mindanao.

But she noted that something must be done quickly to make Mindanao the Land of Fulfillment, as she sought peace and development in the area.

“Peace and development must always go together,” she said. “Our work to bring about peace and development in Mindanao must always be founded on constitutionality, national sovereignty, territorial integrity.”

The President also enjoined everyone to “institutionalize the accommodation of ethnic traditions” as the Philippine society is a multi-ethnic one founded on social justice for all.

“Let us respect each other’s laws and religion that have become our tradition and culture,” she said in Cebuano.

She stressed her commitment to fight terrorism, as she called on the people to join her wage a battle to ward off terrorism in the country, particularly in Mindanao.

Before her speech, the President and Agusan del Norte Governor Ma. Angelica Rosedette Amante witnessed the signing of a memorandum of agreement between Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) Regional Director Jim Rebutillo and Jabonga Mayor Glicerio Monton, Jr. to implement the KALAHI program.

During the visit, the President was joined by DSWD Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman and Robert Vance Pulley, Philippines country director of the World Bank’s office for East Asia and the Pacific Region.

GMA appeals to transport sector not to seek fare hike, unwraps package of benefits for its members

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today appealed to the transport sector to defer requests for a fare increase as she assured them that the crisis arising from the Middle East events will be short and temporary and that oil prices should return to pre-crisis levels soon.

"A fare hike petition now may add to instability and social unrest," the President said in a prepared statement.

The President said that an increase in transport fares is usually followed by a demand for an increase in wages and this would usually result in an increase in the prices of basic commodities.

She admitted that the unfolding events in the Middle East would affect all Filipinos and that the crisis calls for all of us to come together to achieve true and lasting peace.

"The coming weeks will call for sacrifice, fortitude and cooperation from all of us," the President said.

The President also thanked the transport group, represented by the Confederation of Land Transportation Organizations of the Philippines, for their support to her as the country faces the Middle East crisis.

"In this critical time, I thank the transport sector for being Filipinos first and foremost, before being representatives from any sector," the President said.

She said that if all sectors, including those from the transport industry, would come together as a nation, the "storm ahead will pass quickly."

According to the President, among the sectors that could be heavily affected by the artificial rise in the cost of imported oil brought about by the Middle East crisis are the tricycle drivers, jeepney drivers, FX and taxi drivers, bus operators and drivers, truckers and cargo haulers.

She said that artificial pressures brought on by the Middle East crisis, not the real supply side shortage, have caused the prices of crude oil to rise temporarily.

Realizing that in a global crisis, the transport sector is having a difficult time, she has ordered a package of benefits for those in the sector.

This package of benefits include the following:

- For the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) headed by Secretary Michael Defensor to allocate more housing units for the transport sector in addition to the 50 units per organization already awarded in Montalban, Rizal
- For the Philippine National Construction Corporation (PNCC) to immediately roll back to the January 2002 rates, the Southern Luzon Expressway toll fees for provincial buses;
- For Energy Secretary Vicente Perez to study the possibility of putting gas and diesel pumps in the terminals of the transport operators which should decrease pump prices;
- For Chairman Bayani Fernando of the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority (MMDA) to build two terminals—one in the North and one in the South—for the convenience of provincial buses to connect with the MRT stations so that they will not find the need to enter the inner city of Metro Manila; and
- At the end of the color coding experiment on February 25, for the MMDA to come up with a scheme that will reduce the inconvenience to the riding public as well as the transport group

On the construction of bus terminals, the President directed Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II to work for their initial financing, adding that these terminals would be privatized at the soonest time possible.

The President said she has directed Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza and the agencies under him, like the Land Transportation Office (LTO) and the Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board (LTFRB), to coordinate closely with the MMDA in attending to the issues affecting the transport sector.

“Let us continue to work together. I will continue to count on your support,” the President said.

GMA seeks to transform Buliok complex into peaceful agricultural beehive

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today proposed the conversion of the captured Buliok complex in the Liguasan Marsh – nestled in the provinces of Maguindanao and Cotabato – into a “peaceful and bustling agricultural community.”

The President named Secretary Eduardo Ermita, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process, to work out a comprehensive peace and development program in Buliok, which is part of Liguasan Marsh.

She said Ermita had been instructed to “accelerate talks with investors from the Middle East who are keen in helping develop this fertile area.”

During her luncheon with the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said Cotabato Governor Emmanuel Pinol and other officials have started discussing the development plan for Pikit town where Buliok is situated.

She said the establishment of a palm oil plantation in Buliok was in order, to be bankrolled by the Khaddafi Foundation. “They have been looking for a consolidated area.”

She added that the foundation’s local partner is the National Development Corporation.

Very soon, an investment decision might be concluded, she said as she noted government’s readiness to put up the initial seed fund for the palm oil project.

Government troops have retaken the Buliok complex from armed criminal groups who used the marsh as their hiding grounds and launching pad for despicable activities in the past several years.

The President, in a statement, said the erstwhile criminals’ lair in the Liguasan Marsh area had been cleaned up and “we are going full steam ahead in the relief and rehabilitation of the affected communities.”

She said she had ordered Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman and National Anti-Poverty Commission Secretary Teresita Deles to visit the area and “make sure that the needs of the residents of the area, especially the evacuees, are met.”

“They will recommend to me short and long-term plans that will assure the well-being and livelihood of residents of the area,” she added.

The President said she was “saddened by the displacement of peaceful families from their area, but sometimes this is the price we have to pay for long-term peace and order.”

She also commended the Armed Forces of the Philippines for its “short and swift operation in capturing and occupying the Buliok sanctuary.”

Palace to facilitate dialogue between ‘doubting’ Senators, FATF on AMLA impasse

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that Malacañang will facilitate a dialogue between some “doubting” senators and officials of the Paris-based Financial Action Task Force (FATF) so that the impasse on the Anti-Money Laundering Act (AMLA) could be resolved.

In a luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said that an FATF delegation would be coming to Manila to talk with some of the senators who are opposed the needed amendments to AMLA that would conform to FATF requirements.

“Suffice it to say that we will just facilitate dialogue with FATF and the doubting senators. Then, let’s just proceed from there,” the President said.

The President said that with this dialogue, she is hoping that the senators and the FATF people can exchange ideas and come up with a solution that would be good for the Filipino people.

The FATF has given the Philippines up to March 15 of this year to come up with amendments to AMLA that would conform to its requirements.

The President also said that if the amendments to the AMLA can be resolved, she believes the Philippine peso can recover.

She also brushed aside suggestions that Malacañang should now intervene to arrest the plunging of the peso.

“The Bangko Sentral is the one that determines whether a movement (of the peso) is speculative or is a realistic response to objective market conditions. So, it should be a Bangko Sentral judgment,” the President said.

Statement of Presidential Spokesperson Ignacio R. Bunye

Re: Acsa Ramirez:

We will allow the NBI to follow the legal process in this regard. A decision as to whether or not an apology will be extended to Ms. Ramirez will be made as soon as the process is completed.

GMA to attend Non-Aligned Movement summit in KL

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is expected to call for expanded cooperation in various regional and global concerns of mutual interest and benefit between and among the Philippines and 113 other member-countries of the Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) when she attends the XIII NAM Summit in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia from February 23 to 25.

The President is slated to be the 11th speaker during the NAM plenary session and general debate at the Putrajaya World Trade Center on February 24 (Monday), when the summit opens.

In a luncheon with the Malacañang Press Corps, she said that she would be having bilateral talks with Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammad.

“Malaysia has been very helpful to us in the peace process in the South. There are many developments taking place, so we will exchange talks,” she said.

She referred to government victories in flushing out criminal elements out of and retaking the Buliok complex in Liguasan Marsh, said to be the lair of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) with whom the government is negotiating for peace in formal talks in Kuala Lumpur.

She said she also sent Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales to initiate talks “regarding the peace process” with the MILF peace panel in Kuala Lumpur.

Oil supply adequate even if Middle East war erupts, GMA assures nation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the nation that there will be an adequate supply of oil from the foreign sources in the event that the crisis in the Middle East would escalate into a full-blown conflict.

In a luncheon meeting with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said, "as far as the supply of oil is concerned, it will be there."

The President also said that the government's stand on the US-Iraq standoff has not changed.

"The Philippine position is calling on (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein. He has it in his power right now to avert war. That will be the main message," the President said.

The President said that what the government is watching right now is the price of oil products that could go up because of artificial pressures brought about by the Middle East crisis. But she added that this will only be temporary.

In a separate statement, the President appealed to the transport sector not to press for fare hikes at this stage as she stressed the need for cooperation and fortitude among all sectors in a time of crisis.

"That's is why we have to really ask the transport sector to continue the patriotism that they have been showing all these past two years," the President said.

To compensate for their expected difficulties, the President unwrapped a package of benefits for those in the transport sector that would be adversely affected by the oil price increases.

On oil supply, the President said that right now, the country has a 70-day supply of crude oil. "That's a very comfortable inventory," the President said.

The President recalled that as early as September last year, she had asked Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. to go to Russia to work out a new supply of oil for the country.

She said that this is significant since Russia's oil fields are in the Pacific side and would not pass through the Middle East.

According to the President, Saudi Aramco, which has a sizeable investment in Petron, has also assured her that it will continue to supply oil to the Philippines.

In an earlier interview, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez said the Philippines is in a very good shape compared to its neighbors in the region in terms of oil supply inventory in case war erupts in Iraq.

Perez said the Philippines has now 70 days of oil supply inventory while Thailand has 50 days of inventory.

Out of February's 70 days inventory, 47 days inventory is in-country, to last until end-March 2003. This consists of crude and other finished products.

Perez said there is still an additional seven million barrels loading next week, equivalent to 23 days, the total inventory to last beyond April 2003, while another 11 million barrels, equivalent to 38 days to be loaded in March, to extend inventory until May 2003.

Perez said that this came about when the President signed Executive Order 134 last October, mandating all oil companies to set a minimum oil inventory.

According to Perez, he has been quietly talking to the oil companies, telling them to advance import loadings and schedules this week or next week, rather than at the end February.

Perez also said that oil exporting countries friendly to the Philippines, such as Indonesia, Saudi Arabia, Russia, Iran and other Middle East countries, will provide the Philippines as much oil as the country needs, in case a Middle East war erupts.

Perez likewise enumerated other oil supply security initiatives of the energy sector, among them:

- Maximize national storage capacity for stockpiling of diesel and other products;
- Extension of the Pandacan oil depot business permit;

Feb. 25 declared as special national holiday

Malacañang today declared Tuesday, February 25, 2003, as a special national holiday in observance of the 17th anniversary of the EDSA People Power Revolution.

By order of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Executive Secretary Alberto G. Romulo issued Proclamation No. 331 declaring a holiday to give the citizens the opportunity to celebrate the first People Power revolution in 1986 with appropriate ceremonies.

In issuing the proclamation, Malacañang stressed the need to commemorate the EDSA People Power Revolution because it restored "our democratic institutions and ushered in meaningful political, social and economic reforms in the country."

During a luncheon conference with members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said that upon her return on February 25 from her trip to Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, where she will attend the summit conference of the Non-Aligned Movement, she and former President Corazon C. Aquino will be joining the people in attending a Holy Mass on the last day of the celebration of the EDSA revolution.

She also said that after the Mass, she and Mrs. Aquino will go to Fort Magsaysay in Laro, Nueva Ecija where former Senators Benigno Aquino, Jr. and Jose W. Diokno were incarcerated during the martial law years.

The President added that while in Fort Magsaysay, she would declare the incarceration cell of Ninoy and Diokno as a national shrine. "It is an important place to commemorate an important part of our history," President said.

GMA inducts new P.W.U. president

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today swore in Dr. Amelou Benitez-Reyes as the eighth president of the Philippine Women's University (PWU) System and its Affiliate Schools for Men and Women.

The President, garbed in academic gown, administered the oath of office to Reyes during simple investiture rites at the Plenary Hall of the Philippine International Convention Center.

Reyes's academic achievements included masteral and doctoral degrees in Development Education from Stanford University, major in Political Sociology.

Her intensive training in development education, coupled with her socialization of feminist values derived from home and women's school environment, had a direct bearing on the programs and projects organized for the active participation of women in the Philippine centennial celebration (from 1996-1999).

Reyes is the fourth PWU alumna to assume the post as university president.

In her inaugural speech, Reyes thanked President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for "accord[ing] me the singular honor of administering my oath of office."

She said the President's late mother, Evangeline Macaraeg Macapagal, graduated from the PWU high school and moved on to being the First Lady.

"The University accorded her in 1990 the highest citation: the Francisca Tirona Benitez Medal of Merit for being instrumental in strengthening public trust in the dignity and incorruptibility of the Philippine presidency," Reyes told the President.

"The President's father, the former President Diosdado Macapagal received the Conrado Benitez Centenary Heritage Award" for "being the shining exemplar of the finest values and the noblest tasks that make a man and president of his people, a truly great Filipino," she added.

Reyes also said that President Macapagal-Arroyo likewise received the highest honor by the PWU when she was conferred the "Hiyas ng Pamantasan."

She also expressed her profound gratitude to former President Fidel V. Ramos, who greeted her on her installation as PWU president.

Reyes vowed to do her best as the new president of the PWU.

"The responsibility of a university president encompasses much more than ensuring quality education, better faculty, good facilities and effective administration," she said.

She said the leadership of a university is crucial to the role of the academe in producing leaders and achievers equipped with the values and competence to ensure a brighter future for our nation.

GMA unveils plan to develop SMEs as potent force in fight against poverty

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today unveiled before members of the media and the Management Association of the Philippines her administration's National Small and Medium Enterprises (SME) Development Plan, which she described as "my No. 1 priority."

In making a new presentation of the SME development plan in Malacañang, the President described small and medium enterprises as a potent force in the war against poverty that will contribute to the equitable distribution of income and disperse economic activities to the countryside.

Earlier the other day at the Metropolis Mall in Alabang, Muntinlupa, the President launched the plan to develop SMEs into a sector that will provide a strong domestic supply base (manufacturing and services) for globally competitive industries.

The President cited the two objectives of the plan:

- expansion of the enterprise by graduating micro and small enterprise to higher levels of business undertakings, and;
- upgrading of their productivity and value-added capabilities.

"We have our short term-goal for six months and our medium-term goal which I hope to bequeath to my successor," the President said.

The six-month objective is to make 12,000 micro firms graduate to small firms by increasing the share of small and medium segments from 8.7 percent to 10 percent, strengthening 20 accessible SME centers nationwide.

"At the end of six months, what I'd like is that people will say in general 'Maraming pera sa SME ngayon. Maraming tulong sa SME ngayon.' I'd like to see that strong perception six months from now," the President said.

The President likewise expressed the hope that three years from now, her successor will be able, from the foundation her administration will build, to start from the 40 percent increase in the share of small and medium segment and that they will be able to increase their productivity in terms of gross value added to 40 percent.

The basic strategies of the SME development plan, the President said, will be a comprehensive approach to SME development, seamless access to government services, virtual organization, supply side push through non-government directed projects and localization of the plan.

The elements of the plan include training and human resource development, market development, product development and technology intervention, advocacy for enabling environment and financing.

The President said the training and human resource development will consist of a compendium of training programs of all government training institutes, streamlined training programs and standardized fees, deployment of 50 SME business counselors nationwide, and review of the academic curricula to promote entrepreneurship.

For market development, the President said she wants to promote both domestic and foreign markets (trade fairs and missions), display corner, buyer-supplier matching services, opportunities caravan and the consolidation of production inputs for SMEs.

The President explained that the Barangay Micro Business Enterprise Law exempts firms with an asset of P3 million and below from the minimum wage.

"The President said that P10 billion will be made available in the next 10 months. "And hopefully depending on the absorption capacity, P20 billion to P30 billion will be made available annually," the President.

The SMEs shall be serviced in their loans by their neighborhood banks – the thrift banks and the rural banks – by a standardized 12-point accreditation.

Exploratory peace talks in Netherlands halted as NDF demands delisting from terrorist rolls

Exploratory talks towards resuming the GRP-NDF peace negotiations ended abruptly yesterday in Utrecht, the Netherlands as the NDF demanded a delisting of the CPP/NPA and NDF Chief Political Consultant Jose Ma. Sison from the terrorist rolls of the United States and the European Union.

"We can't move forward at the moment; the NDF wants the CPP/NPA and Mr. Sison out of the list and the government is not inclined to change its position, which has important implications on the national interests," Secretary Silvestre Afable, Jr. head of the GRP Exploratory Team, said.

Afable was in Utrecht with GRP Panel Chair Silvestre Bello III and Panel Executive Director Ma. Carla Munsayac-Villarta. The GRP team met with NDF Panel Chair Luis Jalandoni and member Fidel Agcaoili and their staff.

"We gave them a 7-point proposal to restart the formal peace talks but the NDF does not want to proceed, claiming that they are under duress because of the terrorist list," Afable added.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo dispatched Afable's team to the Netherlands to propose a fast-tracked negotiation leading to one comprehensive agreement, backed by a unilateral suspension of offensive military operations (SOMO) by both sides for the duration of the formal talks.

Afable said he would immediately inform the President, the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security and the Norwegian government, which has agreed to host projected formal negotiations, of the results of the exploratory talks.

"We have reached an impasse but this is not the end of the road; the peace process will continue in other paths," he said.

My successor should also be reform-oriented, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has said that she will see to it that her successor in Malacañang would continue the reforms that she has started, especially in building a strong Republic and in freeing the country from the politics of patronage.

In an interview with Reuters, the British news agency, the President said that in due time she will endorse a successor who is also reform-minded.

The President said that because of her desire to institutionalize her reform agenda, she has asked Congress to pass legislation on these reforms.

“When reforms are legislated, they are, in effect, irreversible for a very long time,” the President said.

When asked if there is anything that would change her mind in not running in 2004, the President said that when she announced her decision last December 30, 2002, “it was already the final decision.”

The President said that it took her a “long time” to make her announcement although the decision has already been an option from the beginning.

According to the President, during the next 17 months of her term, she would like to continue strengthening the economy in order to create jobs and to promote an investment atmosphere that is as much as possible free of corruption and red tape.

She also said that the other two major goals that she envisioned to accomplish before relinquishing the presidency next year is to heal the divisions within the society caused by too much politics and to work for clean and honest elections in 2004.

The President stressed that from her own experience in governance, there is really a need to strengthen the country’s institutions.

“We must strengthen our bureaucracy and we must work toward freeing the policy making from the control of vested interests,” the President said.

The control of vested groups in the economy, the President said, can be seen in the large gap between the rich and the poor, who have been exploited for political ends.

“This control is manifested in the politics of patronage and, at the extreme, corruption to finance that patronage. It has been manifested in the use, lately, of black propaganda and destabilization as tools of political contest,” the President said.

She said that the common denominator of all these is too much politics.

“When you have strong institutions, when you have a governance that is free from the influence or control of vested interest, then that’s when you can deliver essential services, that’s when you can execute good policy, and that’s when you will be able to have faster economic growth,” the President said.

GMA confident AFP fully supportive of gov’t

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) is fully supportive of her government as she debunked insinuations that the military defied her order to stop the offensive against the Pentagon kidnap-for-ransom gang in the Liguasan Marsh in Central Mindanao last week.

In an interview with Reuters, the British news agency, the President said that she was very confident that the AFP is behind her and would comply with her instructions.

“I know of many occasions when they would have wished I gave another instruction, but when I gave it, they followed it very diligently,” the President said.

When asked why there was no cessation of fighting when she gave the order on February 11, the President said that when she issued the order effective at 4:00 p.m. on that day, there was a cessation of fighting on the part of the military but there were some violations from the other side.

“To begin with, I cannot tell the Pentagon or the MILF to stop fighting. As I understand it, there were two specific firefights that were initiated by the other side. And our soldiers, of course, defended themselves,” the President said.

The President said that she ordered a cessation of hostilities in deference to the request of our Muslim brothers to observe a Muslim holiday.

She said that except for the two skirmishes from 4:00 p.m. of that day to 2:00 p.m. the following day, when she ordered the resumption of the offensive in the Buliok Complex, it was generally quiet on that day.

The President stressed that the campaign in Mindanao is not against the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

“We are going after any group that breaks the law. To our mind, the Pentagon gang has been breaking the law. And we are going after any group that harbors them,” the President said.

The President reiterated that her government is still willing to talk peace with the MILF or the communist insurgents.

GMA allays fears of ‘backlash effect’ on RP if U.S. attacks Iraq

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has allayed fears that a United States attack on Iraq could result in retaliatory acts against the government by Muslim rebels as she stressed that terrorism can strike anywhere even without the US attack on Iraq.

In an interview with Reuters, the British news agency, the President said she does not subscribe to the “backlash theory” because terrorism can strike anywhere, anytime.

The President said that she is clamping down on terrorists in the Philippines or rebels suspected of harboring criminals not because of pressures from Washington, D.C.

“It is because it is in our national interest. We want to have peace and order in our country. So, we have to enforce the law,” the President said.

The President explained that even if the government is enforcing the law against the rebels or lawless elements, it will still negotiate with those who are willing to talk peace.

She said that there is actually no contradiction in going after the rebels and in talking peace. “If you look at the history of the world, the talk and peace mode has always been there,” the President said, citing the talks between the Tamil Tigers and the Sri Lankan government, and the Israeli-Palestinian talks now being revived in Israel.

“So, you don’t need a ceasefire before you talk. In fact, the laying down of arms is supposed to be the end state of the talks,” the President said.

The most important thing, the President said, is that the government must show that for those who do not want peace, the military is capable of doing its job. “But for those who want peace, we are willing to talk peace with them,” she added.

GMA lauds NBN for launching worldwide services

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night lauded the National Broadcasting Network (NBN) for its unprecedented move in expanding their broadcast services worldwide and providing accessible lines where Filipinos can interact, by means of communication with their counterparts in other parts of the world to the million Filipinos living and working abroad.

In her one-minute message during the launching of NBN World at the Hotel Intercontinental Manila in Makati City, the President cited the government-controlled network for its important role in delivering the good message about the Filipino throughout the world.

“Ngayong gabi natupad ang isang pangarap. Ngayong gabi, isinilang ang ating sandaigdigang pamayanan. Nagkakaisa nang tunay ang sambayanang Pilipino (Tonight, a dream becomes a reality. Tonight, a world community is born. The Filipino people are really united with each other),” the President said.

In her message, the President said NBN World is now opening new windows of opportunity for Filipinos.

The President congratulated the officials and employees of NBN for the timely launching of their broadcast services all over the world.

“Binabati ko ang NBN sa dakilang pangarap na isinakatuparan natin ngayon – isang lahi, isang bayan, isang pananaw, isang daigdig – isang Republika ng Pilipinas (I would like to congratulate the NBN for making the dream come true – one nation, one vision, one world – one Philippine Republic),” she said.

She also expressed her congratulations to all the members of Congress, who worked for the passage of the Absentee Voting Law.

The President stressed that the launching of NBN World was timely because a few weeks ago the absentee voting bill was finally passed into law by the two chambers of Congress.

Before delivering her message, the President led the formal launching by switching on the facilities for global telecast followed by a short dialogue with overseas Filipino workers in Sydney, Australia through satellite.

Among the overseas Filipino workers who interacted with the President were Philippine basketball legend Carlos “Caloy” Loyzaga, Kate Andres, Leo Seneza, and Kim Campos.

For his part, Loyzaga expressed his thanks to the President because after so many years of stay in Australia, he can now watch the live telecast of Philippine basketball game through NBN World entertainment and TARBS World TV.

The President answered the questions raised by Kate Andres about the security measures being undertaken by the government.

She also inform Leo Seneza that the Philippine government is ready to implement the contingency plans to ensure the safety of 1.5-million overseas Filipinos working in the Middle East in case of an outbreak of the war in Iraq.

She also answered the question by Kim Campos about the dual citizenship bill pending in the Senate.

NBN will start its global service on Monday, February 24, the government network has been on the air almost 30 years.

Statement of Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today named Rear Admiral Ernesto H. de Leon, presently AFP Deputy Chief for Plans (J5), to the position of Flag Officer in Command of the Philippine Navy.

The designation was made by the President upon the recommendation of Defense Secretary Angelo T. Reyes and the Board of Generals.

Radm. de Leon will replace Vice Admiral Victorino S. Hingco, who is scheduled to retire on March 6.

GMA launches campaign against street crimes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo launched today a nationwide campaign against street crimes in the wake of what she called the ordinary citizens' dissatisfaction, displeasure and disappointment with the vigor of police response to crimes affecting the masses.

“Sad to say, there are even widespread perceptions that the police is ineffective, that the government is unable to protect people’s lives and property from thieves, robbers, rapists and other bad guys,” the President told the nation’s top police commanders during an expanded Command Conference in Malacañang this morning.

The President then issued a series of directives to all the police generals and colonels to “show the people what you have been organized, trained and equipped to do: fight crimes and stop criminals.”

She ordered police officials to “spend 50 percent of their working hours in the streets, not in the offices.”

She reiterated her order to the police commanders to channel more resources directly to the police station levels.

She demanded accountability for performance, particularly from the station commanders, including responsibility for the rascals in uniform.

She ordered the training of barangay tanods in basic police functions and ordered the release of P10 million to jumpstart the institutionalization of the barangay tanods as part of the para-police force.

She directed all the police officers and men to carry out “an effective and vigorous response to crime not only in media but also in the streets and in the perception of the people.”

The President also gave the police commanders of Metro Manila and Central Visayas marching orders to bring down the crime rate by at least 20 percent.

“To all the participants in this command conference, you are all leaders, so I expect you to show your leadership by example in this thrust of hitting the streets,” the President said.

“It is not just putting more people proportionately where the crime rate is extra high but police officials, from the commander down to the precinct and station levels, should go out of their offices to the streets and to the barangays,” the President said.

The President likewise said that even those in the top police hierarchy must adopt a barangay as his own case of preventing crime, but involving the community.

“So I would expect 700 barangays to be especially taken care of by the generals and colonels who are attending this conference,” the President said.

The President also directed the PNP leadership to come up with a detailed plan, specially for Metro Manila, for increasing the number of barangay tanods that will institutionally become part of their para-police machinery.

She demanded the monthly submission to her office of a detailed report of the implementation of this “heightened” anti-crime campaign and a proposal on how the police are going to use the initial P10-million fund.

Pikit, Raja Muda, Buliok cleared of armed elements, says Ermita

Secretary Eduardo Ermita, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process who was designated recently to oversee the rehabilitation of the Liguasan Marsh, reported from Pikit, Cotabato today as per assessment of Gen. Generoso Senga (6th Division) and Col. Cardoso Luna (602nd Brigade), that the towns of Pikit, Raja Muda and the Buliok Complex have been cleared of armed elements.

All evacuees may now return to their homes, Secretary Ermita said.

Secretary Ermita is on an inspection tour of the area together with Secretaries Dinky Soliman, Ging Deles, Jesus Dureza and Agriculture Undersecretary Ed Sana.

Ermita’s group met with North Cotabato Governor Emmanuel Piñol and Pikit Mayor Faridah Malinco to assess the situation and determine the immediate relief and rehabilitation work needed to restore the town to normalcy.

Ermita said he would recommend the immediate construction of farm-to-market roads linking the Kabankalan and Buliok areas, provision of adequate drinking water and upgrade of health facilities in the area.

The 54th Engineering Brigade is now standing by to undertake these projects as soon as provisions are available.

Fifteen barangays of Pikit (out of 42) were affected by the recent conflict.

Affected families of Pikit totaled 6,583 (39,786 individuals). They were accommodated in 16 evacuation centers.

Exactly 383 families (2,586 individuals) have since returned home, resulting in the closure of six centers.

Peace-order in RP better than in other countries, says President

The peace and order in the country is much better than in other countries and is continuously improving, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said.

The President made this remark during a meeting with the alumni of the Philippine College of Commerce High School Class of 1962 wherein she was asked if it is safe to bring their loved ones here in the Philippines.

“Actually, the peace and order in the country is not that bad,” the President stressed.

The President noted that there are no sniper incidents in the cities or such thing as the September 11 attack in the country, eliciting concurrence from the crowd.

Most of the alumni who came to see the President are based in the United States and Canada.

The President further noted that a cruise ship from Taiwan carrying hundreds of tourists recently made Manila one of their destinations and no incident occurred.

The President noted that tourism is steadily growing at 16 percent.

The top tourists in the country, the President said, are from Japan, South Korea, and China.

“Filipino balikbayans in the United States only place fourth,” the President said.

The President said Japan figured at the top place as there is now a $165 tourism package for the foreign nationals for four days and three nights where they can shop and dine in Makati City with one out-of-town trip. The President said Japanese females, who are very fond of shopping, couldn't resist the very reasonable package.

She noted that when she went to see the Banaue Rice Terraces last December, she came across Korean school children who were on a school field trip abroad.

She said that according to Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon, the Koreans are even going to Zamboanga City for golfing tours.

The Chief Executive further noted that Malamawi, the home barangay of Abu Sayyaf group spokesperson Abu Sabaya in Basilan, is now free of the bandit group. “Even Basilan is safe now,” she said.

Among the members of the High School Class of 1962 of the Philippine College of Commerce are Social Welfare and Development Assistant Secretary Celia Capadocia Yangco, Professional Regulatory Commissioner Antonietta Fortuna Ibe, and Class Chairman of the Steering Committee Adeluisa Lu Burgos and Class International Coordinator Leticia Javier Romasanta.

Restructuring in fiscal management now paying off, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has said that the restructuring that she has ordered in the government's fiscal management is paying off with the budget deficit so far this year now below the projected level.

In a recent interview with Reuters, the British news agency, the President said that so far, the performance of the two top revenue agencies, the Bureau of Internal Revenue and the Bureau of Customs, has shown that "we are closing the budget gap."

The President attributed these improvements to the restructuring measures, which have been diligently implemented by her economic managers.

"We've modernized our way of tracking tax evasion, and also, we're strengthening the fight against graft and corruption, making BIR and the Customs as our showcases in the fight against graft and corruption," the President said.

The President also said that she has put together a team under the Office of the President to do lifestyle checks on government officials and other kinds of operational method in order to enhance this fight against graft and corruption. "I think it's going to work well," she emphasized.

The President also confirmed that her administration may also consider suspending its treasury bond and treasury bill auctions because the government has been able to exercise fiscal discipline.

She recalled that last year, the Philippines was getting very good rates on our bonds. "So our finance officials were looking at that as the main way of closing the gap," the President said.

But even last year, the President stressed that she had been instructing her finance and economic managers to do other things.

"Maybe its serendipity that they didn't do those other things because now they can do them. That's why we still have weapons in our arsenal to be able to close that gap outside of borrowing from the bond market," the President said, adding that this is a good development because "then we will be relying more on our own resources."

Drug syndicates pose biggest threat, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said yesterday that the single biggest threat to law and order now are the drug syndicates.

During a Command Conference on Street Crimes involving the nation's police commanders from regional and district directors down to the station and precinct commanders, the President also said that the National Capital Region (Metro Manila) and Region 7 (Central Visayas) registered the highest number of street crimes last year.

The most common street crimes are drug-pushing, snatching of cell phones, jewelry and purse, pickpocketing, swindling, mugging and rape, and robbery of small establishments, according to Chief Superintendent Vidal Querol, deputy director for operations of the Philippine National Police.

The President said that while the PNP has made progress in the pursuit of big-time crime syndicates, “the response to street crimes, in the minds of the people, has not been satisfactory.”

Ordinary crime cases, whose victims are mostly ordinary citizens, demand police attention, the President said. “Therefore, we must focus on police performance at the station and precinct levels,” she added.

In his report during the command conference at Malacañang, Director General Anselmo Avenido, Jr. of the Philippine Drug Enforcement Agency said the drug problem in the country has reached alarming proportions.

Avenido informed the President and other PNP commanders that official statistics from the Dangerous Drugs Board indicate that there are around 1.8 million regular users and 1.6 million occasional users of drugs in the country.

He said the main drug of abuse today is shabu.

Avenido also said that last year, the number of drug-affected barangays totalled 3,489 or 8 percent of the country’s 42,000 barangays.

He said that as a result of the intelligence workshop conducted by the PDEA on the Aug. 30 and 31 last year, 11 transnational drug syndicates and 215 local organized drug groups were identified to be operating in the country.

The PDEA chief said the increase in production capacity, the ease in world travel, modern communications and globalization have led shabu-source countries to look for new markets.

The Philippines, just like the other countries in the Asian region, is one of the main targets for this expansion, he added.

Avenido said shabu is smuggled into the country through four major avenues: the seaports, the international airports, the mail and parcel services, and the vast expanse of the Philippine coastlines.

Shabu from China is smuggled into the country mainly through the shorelines of Northern and Central Luzon and Southern Tagalog, specifically Batangas, Cagayan, Ilocos Sur, Zambales, Aurora, Quezon and the Mindoro provinces, Avenido added.

Other probable landing sites are Masbate, Palawan, Sorsogon, South Cotabato, Davao, Sulu and Tawi-tawi.

Avenido said the involvement of foreign nationals from China and Hong Kong is very apparent in almost all of the visible seizures of drugs by government law-enforcement authorities.

He said that from 1998 to 2002, a total of 298 foreign nationals were arrested in the Philippines for violation of the Dangerous Drugs Act. Of this total, 206 were Chinese while the remaining 92 were of various nationalities.

GMA orders PNP commanders to link up with barangay leaders, tanods to fight street crimes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ordered Philippine National Police (PNP) officers to link up with the barangay chairmen and tanods and mobilize them for crime prevention.

Giving her guidance to the nation's top police officers at the end of the special command conference in Malacañang on the campaign against street crimes, the President also directed PNP officials "to spend 50 percent of their working hours in the streets, not in the offices."

She directed that each precinct set up a unit consisting of at least two police officers who will be solely in charge of mobilizing the barangay leadership in the prevention of crimes, particularly street crimes like cell phone snatching, mugging, rape and drug-pushing.

"One of the specific things that you have to do at the station level – and this will be the essence of the (PNP) initiative – is to tap the active involvement of the community to the barangays and not just civil and non-government organizations," the President said.

The President likewise ordered the mobilization of more policemen where the population is bigger, and in the neighborhood which she said is essentially the barangay.

The President, however, pointed out that this requires not just putting more people proportionately where the crime rate is extra high.

"Police officials, from the provincial commander down to the precinct and station commanders, should go out of their offices to the streets, and to the barangays," the President said.

The President said she expects the PNP leadership to come up with a detailed plan, especially in Metro Manila, for increasing the number of barangay tanods that are part of their para-police machinery.

To jumpstart this, the President said she will release P10 million for the mobilization of barangay tanods against street crimes.

Ordering the close monitoring of the success of the anti-crime campaign in the problem areas, the President said she will be closely watching the anti-crime drive in Metro Manila and also in Region 7, where the crime rate is highest.

"So here I will need a monthly report on the anti-crime campaign with a monthly crime rate statistics," the President.

In the case of the National Capital Region (Metro Manila) where the crime rate is highest, the President said she needs monthly crime statistics at the city level.

"We have already the baseline and your marching order is to bring down the crime rate by at least 20 percent in these two regions – NCR and Region 7 (Central Visayas) — and in the most crime-prone NCR districts," the President said.

The President said she will summon the PNP officials to another command conference on March 7 where she expects to get a report on the implementation of her instructions.

"Then I can make a judgment whether the campaign against crime is progressing well or the people are still dissatisfied," the President said.

"You are all leaders," the President told the PNP commanders, "so I expect you to show your leadership by example in this thrust of hitting the streets."

GMA announces fuel price discounts, refueling stops for public transport groups

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that the government is set to adopt a number of packages that would greatly benefit public transport operators and workers.

The President made the announcement during a luncheon meeting with some 15 officials of various Metro Manila and provincial transport groups in Malacañang's Heroes Hall, where she also acknowledged the latter's promise to postpone their request for a fare increase.

She reiterated the government's commitment to help the public transport sector find ways to ease the impact of recent increases in the price of world crude.

To this effect, she said the Department of Energy (DoE), in two weeks, would implement a set of beneficial packages.

The packages include a P0.40 to P0.50 discount on diesel and gasoline and the setting up of re-fuelling facilities with discounted prices on diesel and gasoline products in bus and jeepney terminals in Metro Manila.

The DoE, the President said, would give out discount cards.

Three gasoline stations – along EDSA-Shaw Boulevard in Mandaluyong City and in Guadalupe and near the Philippine Refining Company, both in Makati City – would offer automatic refuel discounts.

During the meeting, the transport sector leaders assured the President they would not ask for any fare increment, to help mitigate problems similarly facing other economies worldwide because of the series of world oil price increases.

“We're trying to hold on to it. We do not want a fare increase at this point in time,” Engineer Albert Suansing, secretary general of the Confederation of Land Transportation of the Philippines, told the President.

Claire de la Fuente, president of the Integrated Metro Bus Operators Association (IMBOA), said her group is one with the President in looking for ways to solve any public transportation problem that might arise.

De la Fuente said the oil price increases would be temporary, a spin-off of an impending US-led attack on Iraq whose President, Saddam Hussein, has continued to defy calls to disarm his weapons of mass destruction.

“We know that this is temporary. What we can promise is that we are really 100 percent behind this government. We want to help the government in easing the problem. If we are going to ask for a fare hike, that would be a start of another major problem,” she said.

She added that a fare hike could have a domino effect and raise the prices of basic goods, bring about petitions for wage increases and others.

Aside from De la Fuente and Suansing, the transport leaders in the meeting included Eleonor Santos of the North East Metro Manila Bus Operators Group; Ramon Castillo, Metro Manila Bus Operators Association; Aladin Simundac, Intercity Bus Operators Association; Alejandro Yague, Provincial Bus Operators Association of the Philippines; Michael Potenciano, Southern Luzon Bus Operators Association of the Philippines; Leonardo Naval, Association of Taxi Operators of Metro Manila; Zenaida Maranan, Federation of Jeepney Operators and Drivers Association of the Philippines; Efren De Luna, Philippine Confederation of Drivers Organization Alliance of Concerned Transport Organization; Melencio Vargas, Federation of Rizal-Cubao Operators Drivers Alliance; Roberto Martin, Pangkalahatang Sanggunian ng mga Suburban Drivers Association Nationwide Inc.; Orlando Marquez, Makati Jeepney Operators and Drivers Association; Ariel Lim, National Confederation of Tricycle Operators and Drivers; and Luther Estrada, Tricycle Operators and Drivers Association Pilipinas.

Also in the meeting were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, National Security Adviser Roilo Golez, Transportation and Communication Secretary Leandro Mendoza, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez, Media and Ecclesiastical Affairs Secretary Conrado Limcaoco, and Dante Lantin, Chairman of the Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board.

Balikatan

This will be a joint training exercise. American soldiers will not engage in offensive combat operations against the Abu Sayaff. They will only fire back in self-defense. They will operate under the overall command of the AFP. The training activities will be coordinated with the provincial government of Sulu so that the communities involved will be properly informed. These training exercises will not displace peaceful civilian communities. Civic action will be conducted to support social services in the area. This will be a peace and development initiative as much as a training exercise.

CBCP on Anti-Money Laundering

We share the CBCP's desire to flush out dirty money, but we can't make this a mud-slinging debate. The important thing is for FATF representatives to explain their standards right before our lawmakers so they can get the answers from the horse's mouth. We need to resolve this issue with sobriety and we also need to act fast.

Mindanao Conflict

The President has a vision that the conflict can be transformed into something beneficial for the people Mindanao, whether Christian, Muslim or Lumad. The ball is in the MILF's hands. It should not lose this opportunity to show that it is also sincere in seeking peace.

Iraq Situation

Let us not jump the gun on war if it is not imminent. Saddam has still time to respond to the call to disarm and avoid war. We are for peace and we pray for a peaceful resolution of this issue. We will eventually act by taking into consideration the US position as an ally against terrorism, the UN position and the position of the world at large and most importantly, the security of Filipinos here and abroad.

GMA orders marshals on buses, jeepneys to catch 'kotong cops' in the act

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered Chief Superintendent Reynaldo Velasco, director of the Philippine National Police-National Capital Regional Police Office (PNP-NCRPO), to field traffic police marshals aboard buses and jeepneys plying Metro Manila to pounce on so-called "kotong cops" extorting money from drivers.

The President's order came after leaders of various transportation groups, with whom she met at Malacañang for lunch, complained about the activities of traffic policemen and traffic enforcers who continue to mulct them for money.

"Maglagay na tayong espia sa mga bus (Let's put 'spies' on buses)," President told Chief Superintendent Velasco.

She also directed Velasco to meet with the bus and jeepney operators to work out the mechanics on the deployment of marshals on public vehicles, adding that she expects him to conduct regular monthly meetings with the operators.

The President said she wants to put an end to the illegal activities of scalawags in uniforms, particularly those from the Traffic Management Group of the Philippine National Police (PNP) and the traffic enforcers of the Metro Manila Development Authority (MMDA).

The traffic marshals are not only expected to secure public vehicles against mulcters. The President said she expects them to file cases against scalawags in uniform caught extorting money from drivers.

The President also ordered Chief Superintendent Pedro Bulaong of the Western Police District to designate jeepney parking and passenger loading zones along major thoroughfares in Manila.

The President orders came just a day after she directed the nation's police commanders, particularly those in Metro Manila, to take more assertive action against street crimes.

During a command conference in Malacañang, the President also ordered the police commanders, from the regional and district levels down to the station and precinct levels, to spend more time in the streets, "not in offices," fighting crime.

She directed them to carry out "an effective and vigorous response to crime, not only in media but also in the streets and in the perception of the people."

Thousands of OFWs assisted on site, DOLE reports

On-site medical and counseling services to overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) have gained ground following the deployment of doctors and social workers to various OFW host countries, according to the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE).

In a report, DOLE Secretary Patricia A. Sto. Tomas said that 2,677 OFWs were given medical assistance in the different Philippine Overseas Labor Offices (POLOs), while 3,738 more were given assistance by social workers for various cases.

The DOLE's International Labor Affairs Service (ILAS) said that under the Overseas Comprehensive Social Services Package (OCSSP) for OFWs, medical doctors and social workers would provide basic medical and counseling services to OFWs in identified posts for a period of one year.

The doctors and social workers were deployed in October last year, Sto. Tomas said.

"The deployment of these doctors and social workers demonstrates the Macapagal-Arroyo administration's concrete and continuing efforts to protect and enhance the safety and welfare of our overseas Filipino workers," Sto. Tomas said.

Sto. Tomas said medical officers provided medical assistance to about 987 OFWs in Kuwait, 520 in Riyadh, 219 in Jeddah, 208 in Bahrain, 125 in Abu Dhabi, 303 in Hong Kong, 242 in Singapore, and 73 in Korea.

The medical officers also visited 65 OFWs in different jails and hospitals in the said countries, she added.

In Korea, the doctors attended to 60 distressed OFWs. Filipino doctors posted in Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Bahrain, Jeddah, Riyadh and Kuwait have also provided medical treatment to more than 500 OFWs suffering from ailments such as hypertension, respiratory track infection, bronchitis, and common colds.

Sto. Tomas also reported that social workers assigned in seven POLO posts handled various cases of OFWs with Kuwait having the most number of cases handled at 1,165 and about 1,584 more cases in Abu Dhabi, Singapore, Taichung, Hong Kong, Jeddah and Dubai.

A total of 124 OFWs also benefited from jail and hospital visits made by the social workers, Sto. Tomas said.

The social worker detailed in Singapore counseled 136 OFWs, while in Hong Kong, 63 OFWs were assisted in settling their small claims, labor cases, and unpaid salaries and wages, the DOLE chief said.

No combat operations for U.S. troops in Sulu, Palace restates position

Malacañang today restated its firm position that American soldiers will not be allowed to engage in combat operations against the Abu Sayyaf bandits in Mindanao.

In an interview, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said that reports about the go-signal for American troops to join in the fight against the Abu Sayyaf in Sulu were based on a supposed interview with an unnamed source in the Pentagon.

Bunye said that this source, who obviously was misinformed, wanted to make it appear that he was knowledgeable, and that what he was saying was factual. Unfortunately, the CNN, the New York Times and other American media outlets picked up his claim without checking its veracity, he added.

“Kaya, nakuryente rin sila,” Bunye said, meaning that they (media outlets) were burned out because they carried erroneous information.

He also bewailed the propensity of some of our officials to immediately comment on something that has not been verified. “Huwag na man sanang sakay ng sakay ang ating mga legislators (We wish that our legislators would not just ride on this wrong information),” Bunye said.

Bunye reiterated that the Balikatan 03-1, scheduled in Sulu and Zamboanga City, is a joint training activity by Philippine and American military forces, and is basically similar to Balikatan 02-1 which was held in Basilan last year.

Like in Basilan, the Sulu Balikatan will also have a development or civic action component. “This will be a peace and development initiative as much as a training exercise,” Bunye said.

Bunye said that Balikatan 03-1 will be conducted in accordance with the Philippine Constitution and all existing laws, and since the Constitution and existing laws prohibit foreign forces from engaging in combat duties in the country, hence the American soldiers would not be allowed to join in the actual military operations against the Abu Sayyaf.

He also assured the nation that all US forces in the Balikatan would be under the direct supervision of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, and all their operations and activities will be coordinated with the local officials in Sulu.

“The bottom line here is that there will be no aggressive combat role for American troops in Sulu,” Bunye stressed.

GMA unveils marker of new Municipal Hall of Binalonan, Pangasinan

BINALONAN, Pangasinan—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today unveiled the marker of the newly renovated Binalonan Municipal Hall on the occasion of the town’s fiesta.

In her remarks after the unveiling ceremony, the President said she expects that the municipal hall can help make Binalonan, her mother’s hometown, a strong and progressive municipality.

The President expressed the belief that the effective implementation of her administration’s program would help build a strong Republic.

A strong Republic needs effective local governments, the President said, as she expressed elation that the president of the League of Municipalities of the Philippines is none other than Mayor Ramon Guico, Jr. of this town.

The construction of the Binalonan Municipal Hall started during the administration of former President Diosdado Macapagal.

However, its construction was stopped when President Ferdinand Marcos assumed the presidency in 1965. At that time, the municipal hall was already 75 percent complete.

Unable to acquire the remaining funds to complete the project from then President Marcos, then Binalonan Mayor Ramon Guico, Sr. decided to infuse his personal money to finally build the municipal hall.

In 2002, Binalonan officials led by Mayor Guico, Jr. appropriated the amount of P3.1 million to finally put the finishing touches on the long overdue Binalonan Municipal Hall.

Earlier, the President inaugurated the newly concreted Manila North Road-Binalonan-Asingan Road, a portion of which is near the Binalonan Municipal Hall.

After her speech at a program in front of the municipal hall, the President went to the Guico ancestral residence to have a reunion with some 3,000 members of the Macaraeg clan who attended the Binalonan town fiesta here.

The President also took the opportunity to talk to the newly elected officers of the Pangasinan Radio and Press Club, after their oath taking which she administered.

GMA opens MNR-Binalonan-Asingan Road

BINALONAN, Pangasinan—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today inaugurated the Manila North Road-Binalonan-Asingan Road here, which she said will strengthen commerce not only in this town, the hometown of her mother, but also of the neighboring areas.

Speaking at a program in front of the municipal hall of Binalonan, the President said this road is a very important diversion that will make the traffic through Urdaneta town much more convenient.

The President expressed elation that the Urdaneta Road, which is the cause of heavy traffic for those travelling to and from Baguio City and the Ilocos Region, will soon be widened.

This road, the President pointed out, will make the transport of products from the Ilocos Region and other regions for Manila faster.

The President stressed that her administration is doing everything possible to strengthen the economy, and one of the components of her economic blueprint is the construction of more vital roads and bridges not only in Pangasinan but throughout the country.

“We are doing all these to give jobs and livelihood to the people,” the President said.

The President said despite the comfortable growth rate during the past year, there are still thousands of Filipinos who are out of work.

She said that is the reason why she had launched the small and medium enterprise (SMEs) development program to expand the domestic market and generate more jobs, especially in the countryside.

Early this week, the President announced that the government would allocate P10 billion for SMEs for the next 10 months, adding that depending on the absorption capacity of SMEs, some P20 billion to P30 billion would be made available to them annually.

With the President during the drive-through ceremony of the newly-concreted MNR-Binalonan-Asingan Road, were Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Public Works and Highways Secretary Bayani Fernando, Congressman Mark

Cojuanco of the 5th District of Pangasinan, local officials of Pangasinan led by Gov. Victor Agbayani, and Binalonan Mayor Raqmon Guico, Jr.

President's radio address to the nation

Magandang araw po sa inyong lahat.

Pinulong ko kahapon ng tanghali ang mga kinatawan at lider ng transport sector na siyang nagbunga ng maraming magandang kasunduan at plano pagkatapos ng halos dalawang oras ng tapat at malayang talakayan.

Nung isang araw, bago kami nagpulong, hiniling ko sa kanila na ipagpaliban muna ang paghingi ng pahintulot na itaas ang pasahe dala ng pagtaas ng presyo ng langis sa pandaigdigang merkado. Hiniling ko sa kanila na tumulong sa bansa mga kritikal na araw na ito. Sinabi ko, na sa tingin ko madaling lilipas ang krisis at babalik sa normal ang presyo ng langis. Nangako ako na hahanap ako ng mga paraan na sila ay tulungan kapalit ng kanilang pagmamalasaakit sa akin at sa bayan at para maibsan ang kanilang mahirap na kalagayan.

Nais ko sanang ibalita sa inyo ang ilan sa aming napagkasunduan.

Iniutos ko kay Vince Perez at sa DOE na agarang buksan sa loob ng dalawang linggo ang mga bomba ng krudo o filling pumps sa tatlong terminal ng pampasaherong sasakyan sa Kamaynilaan: sa EDSA – kanto ng Shaw Boulevard, sa EDSA – kanto ng Guadalupe, at sa Philippine Racing Club sa Makati. Si Ginoong Martinez ng Eastern Petroleum ay nangako na itatayo niya ang tatlong filling pumps na ito. Ang mga samahan ng transport sector na nasa mga lugar na ito ang siyang magsisilbing dealer at ang mangangasiwa sa mga filling pumps na ito. Tinataya na malaki ang mura ng diesel dito kaysa sa mga ibang gasolinahan. Pinapahanap ko pa kay Dante Lantin ng LTRFB ang ibang lugar na pwedeng lagyan ng mga filling pumps.

Iniutos ko din Kay Vince Perez na kausapin ang ilan sa mga dealer at may-ari ng gasolinahan upang magbigay ng diskuwento sa mga pampublikong sasakyan. Ilalabas natin sa mga pahayagan ang mga makabayang dealer na ito na magbibigay ng diskuwento sa mga pampublikong sasakyan para alam ng mga drayber kung saan sila maaring magpakarga ng diesel at gasolina na mura.

Lahat ng ito ay mangyayari sa loob ng dalawang linggo. Walang tawad. Dalawang linggo. Dadaluhan ko mismo ang pagbukas ng filling pumps sa tatlong terminal. Dadalawin ko din ang ilan sa mga gasolinahang pumayag magbenta ng diesel at gasolina na mas mura para sa mga pampublikong sasakyan.

Kapag lumala o tumagal ang krisis, pinapag-aralan ko ang ibang paraan na pagbigay ng tulong sa transport sector tulad ng mga kupong pang-diskuwento na pwedeng gamitin sa pagbayad ng buwis ng gasolina.

Ang problema ng mga kotong cops at traffic enforcers ay tinalakay din. Inutusan ko ang PNP, si General Velasco, hepe ng pulis sa kalakhang Maynila, at si General Bulaong, Hepe ng pulis sa Maynila na maglunsad ng kampanya laban sa lahat ng mga mangongotong. Tutulungan sila ng mga transport sector na tukuyin ang mga mangongotong. Walang patawad ngayon ang mahuhuling nangongotong. Iniutos ko na huwag nang ibalik o ilipat lamang ang mahuhuling nangongotong. Iniutos ko na kasuhan, ikalaboso, tanggalin sa serbisyo, o ipadala sa mga liblib at mahirap na labanan. Sa loob ng isang linggo ay aasahan ko ang unang report mula sa PNP tungkol sa kampanyang ito. Gawin nila ang lahat ng kailangan tulad ng mga pagtatalaga ng mga secret marshals para hulihin ang mga ito. Lubos na pinahihirapan ng mga nangongotong, di lang ang transport sector, pati din ang mga pangkaraniwang motorista. Kung may kilala kayong nangongotong, itawag niyo kay General Velasco sa loob ng tatlong araw ay kailangan niyang aksiyunan.

Pina-alala ko kay Rollie Macasaet ng PNCC na ibalik sa dating halaga bago magtaas noong Enero 2002 ang toll para sa mga pampasaherong bus na gumagamit ng Southern Luzon Expressway.

Pinakausap ko kay General Bulaong at General Velasco ang mayor ng Maynila na hanapan ng paraan kung papaano bigyan ng titigilan para magsakay ng pasahero ang mga pampublikong sasakyan ng hindi na sila paikot-ikot sa paghahanap ng pasahero. Magastos sa diesel ang paikot-ikot. Inaasahan ko ang kooperasyon ng pamahalaang lokal sa panahon ng krisis tungkol dito.

Inuutusan ko naman si DILG Sec. Joey Lina na makipag-ugnay sa mga mayor ng mga bayan at munisipyo na nagpapataw ng mga terminal at toll fees sa mga pampublikong sasakyan. Lubos na nakakabigat ito sa kanila. Ang kuwento sa akin ng isang transport sector leader ay higit sa tatlong daan piso ang binabayad nila sa terminal at toll fees sa mga bayan-bayan mula Davao hanggang Surigao. Kakausapin ni Joey Lina ang mga mayors na ibaba o tanggalin ang mga terminal at toll fees na ito.

Binuo ko ngayon ang isang Task Force laban sa colorum at out of line vehicles, at laban sa illegal terminals ng mga ito. Ito ay pamumunuan ni Larry Mendoza ng DOTC. Binibigyan ko ang Task Force na ito ng isang buwan para itigil ang lahat ng colorum at out of line na sasakyan sa Kamaynilaan, kasama na ang jeep, bus, FX at mga van. Bubuwagin din nila ang lahat ng terminal nitong mga illegal na sasakyang ito sa loob ng isang buwan. Aasahan ko ang unang report ni Larry Mendoza in two weeks time.

Iniutos ko na kay MMDA Chairman Bayani Fernando na itigil na ang eksperimento sa number o color coding para sa mga pampublikong sasakyan.

Iniutos ko din na ipalaganap ang paggamit ng coco-diesel na kapag dinagdag sa diesel ay ginagawang mas malinis ang binubugang usok nito. Ang gagamit ng coco-diesel ay malamang papasa sa mga reglamento ng bagong batas na Clean Air Act.

Pinaaaral ko kung pwedeng gamitin ang coco levy funds para pondohan ito. Pinautos ko sa DBP na magpadaan ng pondo sa Postal Bank na siyang magpapatang sa mga bus operators para ma-convert ang mga sasakyan nila mula sa diesel o gas tungo sa compressed natural gas o CNG. Ang CNG ay gawa na natin ngayon sa Malampaya at hindi inaangkat. Ang CNG ay kalahati lamang ng presyo ng diesel. Si Vince Perez at si Dodi Limcaoco ay magtutulungan para gawin ito.

Yung ibang daing at mungkahi ng transport sector ay pag-aaralan ko.

Iniutos ko sa lahat ng ahensiya na may kinalaman sa transport sector na mag-dayalogo at kumunsulta sa kanila sa palagian. Isumbong niyo sa akin pag may mga opisyal ng pamahalaan ko na ayaw makipag-usap o makipagkita sa inyo.

Doon sa NCRPO, sinabi ko kay General Velasco, buwan-buwan na makikipag-dayalogo sa transport sectors.

Gusto ko sanang magpasalamat sa mga lider ng transport sector na muling nakinig sa aking pakikiusap na huwag munang humingi ng fare increase. Kayo ay mga tunay na makabayang Pilipino.

Mga kababayan ko, may krisis tayong hinaharap sa mga darating na linggo. Hindi natin gusto ito. Hindi natin gawa ito. Gayunpaman, handa po ang inyong gobyerno. Sapat ang imbentaryo natin ng langis, may padating pa. Ang Crisis Committee ni Roy Golez ay may mga plano na tutugon sa anumang pangyayari.

Magka-isa tayo, magtulungan tayo, madaling lilipas ang bagyong ito kung tayo ay magkapit-bisig muli.

Maraming salamat po at magandang araw.

GMA to PNP: 'give no quarters to 'kotong' cops'

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Philippine National Police (PNP) to give no quarters to mulcting or "kotong" policemen as part of her package of benefits for the members of the transport sector.

In her radio message this morning, the President also exhorted the public to immediately pass on to Director Reynaldo Velasco, chief of the National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO), any information about the activities of these mulcting policemen.

“Walang patawad ngayon ang mahuhuling nangongotong (We will not forgive cops who will be found mulcting),” the President said.

The President told the PNP hierarchy that cops found guilty of mulcting should not only be transferred to minor posts but should also be charged in courts, jailed, or dismissed from the service.

She said that it is not only the transport sector but also the general public that suffers because of the activities of these mulcting policemen.

The problem of mulcting cops was one of the topics that were discussed during the meeting held in Malacañang Friday, which was attended by the leaders of the country’s transport groups.

During the meeting, the transport groups assured the President that they will not seek an increase in transport fares.

In return, the President unwrapped a package of benefits for them that include fuel price discounts and the setting up of refueling facilities with discounted prices on diesel and gasoline products in bus and jeepney terminals in Metro Manila.

GMA joins other heads of state in NAM Summit

KUALA LUMPUR – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today joined at least 83 heads of state and other ranking officials of the 114-member Non-Aligned Movement in the opening rites of the grouping's 13TH summit at the Putrajaya World Trade Center (PWTC) here.

The President, attired in orange formal business dress designed by half-Japanese half-Filipino Ito Curata, entered the NAM session halls shortly before 9:00 a.m.

She was the third female head-of-state who arrived at the PWTC. She came after Indonesian President Megawati Sukarnoputri.

Upon her arrival, President Macapagal-Arroyo was met by the Malaysian Deputy Minister-In-Attendance and was escorted to the holding lounge of the Tun Razak Hall 4 at Level 4 of the PWTC.

At the entrance of the lounge, the President was welcomed by Prime Minister Datuk Seri Dr. Mahathir bin Mohammad.

Before the start of the opening program at 10 a.m., the President joined the third group of NAM leaders to be ushered inside the plenary session hall.

The President was seated at the front row. She will be the fifth speaker during the plenary session and general debate this afternoon.

She is expected to speak at about 2:30 p.m. on the NAM's Agenda No. 8 focused on a review of the international political and economic situation and the role of the NAM in the 21st century.

The President arrived at the Kuala Lumpur International Airport in Sepang, about 70 kilometers from here, shortly before midnight Sunday.

She came from Villamor Air Base in Pasay City and flew aboard a Hawker 800XP private aircraft that cruised for about three hours and 45 minutes to this Malaysian capital.

Received by Philippine foreign ministry officials and Malaysian officials, the President was immediately escorted by car to her suite at the Ritz Carlton Hotel.

ASEAN oil producers vow to help Philippines in case of oil crisis

KUALA LUMPUR – Oil producers Malaysia, Indonesia and Brunei Darussalam are committed to supply oil to the Philippines in any case of an acute oil shortage in the world.

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople said the three fellow members in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) would not hesitate to help the Philippines weather any oil crisis that might break out because of a possible US-led attack on Iraq.

“There is an agreement to that,” he said.

Ople noted that the ASEAN Petroleum Supply Agreement (APSA) signed by the region's energy ministers committed the supply of crude by oil-exporting ASEAN members to non-oil producing ASEAN neighbors.

Philippine-based oil firms have been sourcing some of their crude and petroleum requirements from Malaysia, Indonesia, Singapore and Thailand.

Ople said Russia and Iran have also pledged to supply crude to the Philippines.

However, the volume of oil to be supplied had not yet been specified, he said.

He said additional oil would further increase the country's oil inventory level which has already reached 77 days of supply.

He noted a recent report of Energy Secretary Vicente Perez that “we still have a 77-day supply, which is the highest in the region.”

Ople lauds Malaysian role in Mindanao peace initiatives

KUALA LUMPUR – A generous enough contribution.

This was how Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople described the support and help Malaysia has been giving the Philippines in the latter's peace initiatives in its southern islands.

Ople, in an interview late Sunday at the Ritz Carlton Hotel here, said the Malaysian government has continued "to lend its good offices" to help resolve the issue on the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) and the three-decade-old Mindanao Problem.

Ople said Malaysia, historically, has been hosting the Philippines-MILF peace talks.

He also noted the initiatives of Malaysia and neighbor Indonesia in pushing for and supporting "our bid for an observer status in the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC)."

The powerful 49-member OIC, composed of Islamic nations, has been taking up the problem in Southern Philippines since 1994, since the grouping's meeting here.

"(The OIC had) emphasized respect on the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Republic of the Philippines" in resolutions on the Mindanao problem they approved year after year, Ople said.

He noted that the next Ministerial Conference of the OIC would be conducted in Tehran with Iran as host.

He also assured that the OIC would not misread recent developments in Mindanao.

"We do not allow any communications gap to develop" between the government and the OIC, he said.

Before he left to attend the Non-Aligned Movement Summit that opened here this morning, Ople said he met with all Manila-based OIC ambassadors and "gave them a detailed briefing on the latest developments concerning the MILF in Mindanao, including the battle in Pikit, Cotabato."

Ople also stressed that the government had "resisted attempts to list the MILF as a foreign terrorist organization "because we want to give way to the peace process in full."

He said the MILF peace panel based here, speaking through its head Al Haj Murad Ibrahim, "has expressed its willingness to participate in the peace talks under Malaysian auspices."

The matter, he noted, is being handled by Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita and Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last week sent Gonzales here to initiate contact with the MILF after the latter refused to go back to the negotiating table following a military offensive on a major MILF camp in Liguasan Marsh, Pikit, Cotabato.

The military was after a notorious kidnap-for-ransom gang and other criminal elements said to have sought refuge at the Buliok complex in the marsh. Reports said the MILF harbored the criminal groups.

The ceasefire pact specifically provided that the MILF would not harbor criminal and lawless elements.

Ople said Gonzales will report to the President the progress of his back-channel talks with the MILF.

He hinted that the President and Gonzales would likely meet here to discuss the peace initiatives with the MILF.

Ople to NDF: Return to negotiating table, accept final peace pact draft of gov't

KUALA LUMPUR – To be stricken out of the list of foreign terrorist groups, the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) and its political and military arms must return to the negotiating table and accept the final peace pact prepared by the Philippine government.

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople asserted this, saying he was willing to “humble myself and go back to Europe and say ‘Please delist these gentlemen because they are no longer terrorists’.”

Ople, in an interview in his room at the Ritz Carlton Hotel late Sunday, said he was willing to ask for a review of the sanctions imposed by the European Union on the Netherlands-based top CPP leader, Jose Ma. Sison, and the communist group.

Sison is also facing murder charges in Philippine courts for the cold-blooded killing of former Cagayan Congressman and Governor Rodolfo Aguinaldo.

“It is up to them,” Ople said, referring to the CPP, the National Democratic Front (NDF) and the New People’s Army (NPA).

“If they want peace, they should come back to the peace table without so many pre-conditions,” he stressed.

The CPP-NDF-NPA, whose leaders are holed out with Sison in the Netherlands, demanded to be freed of the terrorist tag before they talk peace with government.

Brushing aside this snag to the peace talks, Ople said the demand of the communist group “is unlikely to happen.”

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo recently sent a team, composed mostly of the members of the Philippine peace panel, to Utrecht in the Netherlands for exploratory talks aimed at resuming the peace negotiations. Keeping all options open in the search for ways to peacefully resolve the 30-year insurgency problem in the Philippines, the President cited the benefits of social, economic and political growth under an atmosphere of security.

Government officials have recently asked the NDF to give the government draft final peace agreement a chance.

U.S. won’t use Mindanao as jump-off point in war against terrorism

KUALA LUMPUR – The use of Mindanao as a staging area and launching pad of the United States in a possible attack against Iraq is “very, very remote.”

The US would not even consider using the Philippines’ second largest island as a jump-off point in its campaign against global terrorism.

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople allayed fears of the people of Mindanao that they might get caught in the crossfire of a conflict not of their own making.

In an interview in his room at the Ritz Carlton hotel here late Sunday, Ople said the US had only considered Turkey and Kuwait as their immediate reference points in an American-led invasion of Iraq.

But a possible war in the Persian Gulf could be averted if Iraqi President Saddam Hussein accedes to the provisions of United Nations Resolution 1441 on the disarmament of weapons of mass destruction.

Ople said the 114-member Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) meeting here on February 24 and 25 is set to categorically reject the current threat of war in the Middle East.

The NAM, mainly composed of the world's developing nations, is also expected to call on Iraq to surrender any weapons of mass destruction said to be in its arsenal.

Ople added that the US would not use their men to be stationed in Sulu in launching anti-terrorist campaigns, particularly against the Jemaah Islamiyah (JI) in neighboring Southeast Asian nations.

The US soldiers going to Sulu would be joined by Filipino troops in a military training exercise dubbed as Balikatan 03-1.

He said "the US is relying on governments in the Southeast Asian region to deal with terrorism in their areas."

He noted that Malaysia, Indonesia and the Philippines have been dealing with terrorism "quite effectively."

He cited the arrest of the JI leader and the indictment of those responsible for the Bali bomb blasts.

GMA asks Saddam to assuage fears of war in NAM Summit

KUALA LUMPUR – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to initiate moves that would allay the world's collective fears of a possible war in the Persian Gulf.

In a seven-minute speech before fellow heads of state and other state ministers during the plenary session of the 13th Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) Summit here, the President said Saddam should "urgently negotiate a win-win settlement that will spare the heroic Iraqi people the agonies of a devastating war."

"Perhaps President Saddam might now wish to take the initiative and invite the UN Secretary General, the UN inspectors, representatives of doubting countries and of the international media to see for themselves if Iraq really possessed weapons of mass destruction," she said.

This, the President noted, was in accordance with the call of UN Secretary General Kofi Annan made this morning in a speech read before the NAM by his representative.

"Perhaps, he may wish to show them all they want to see, so that the fears of the world can be assuaged, so that we can have peace," she added.

The President believed the Iraqi people, Iraq's friends, the non-aligned nations and the world's inhabitants of all faiths and persuasions would recognize the move as a "judicious act" and an "act of the highest statesmanship that will avoid war and save thousands of lives."

At the same time, "the Philippines joins the call of the international community for the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) to return to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty," the President said.

She cited the NAM's consistent view that "security should be sought through nuclear disarmament, the elimination of weapons of mass destruction, as well as balanced and progressive conventional disarmament."

But the President stressed that "in our movement's stand against terrorism and, more broadly, in our movement's search for global security, we are not against any community of faith."

She called on both Iraq and the DPRK to go beyond the disarmament crisis and "beyond a strategic accommodation with the UN demands."

There would be a great future for an outward-looking and pluralistic Iraqi and the North Korean peoples, she said.

By being so, they could make friends with their neighbors – Kuwait, Iran and other protagonists for Iraq and the Republic of Korea for the DPRK, she explained.

Further, an “outward-looking and pluralistic Iraq and DPRK “can lead their people to peace and prosperity, and perpetuate the names of their leaders in history,” she said.

She called on Iraqi and DPRK leaders to “take the pragmatic path and seek ways to integrate their rich cultural heritage with the modern world.”

The President looked forward to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein ably turning Iraq “into an example of the continuing relevance of Islam in modernizing a nation for peace and development,” so exemplified in Asia by Malaysia’s Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammad.

The Chief Executive also cited the NAM for consistently being around as the “largest international bulwark of peace,” next to the UN.

“It is a movement that has chosen to temper conflict ... a movement that has offered its influential offices not only to stop the firing of weapons, but also to steward peace towards the welfare and benefit of the poor,” she stressed.

The President said the NAM could “continue to be revitalized if we harness our unity towards promoting global peace and development in this new century ... where global challenges have multiplied or deepened ... where hundreds of millions still go hungry and unschooled against their will ... where we awaken to the fact that no country is immune to tragedies inflicted by agents of discord and terror.”

She called for mutual respect for sovereignty of states and a democratic system of international relations.

The President was the fifth speaker during the plenary session and general debate.

Malacañang assures Mindanao officials it will consult them on Balikatan exercises

Malacañang today assured Mindanao political leaders that it would confer with them on the issue of joint Philippine and United States military exercises in Sulu at the proper time.

In a phone patch interview from Kuala Lumpur where President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is attending the 13th summit of the Non-Aligned Movement, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said the government would definitely hear the side of the local officials once the terms of reference (TOR) on the planned exercises is worked out.

“In due time, as soon as TOR are worked out, the process for consultation will take place. That is the framework within which we are working,” Bunye said.

The Palace Spokesman also reiterated that the plan is to have American troops “not as combatants but to train and assist Filipino soldiers.”

“And they’ll be going there to bring civic and humanitarian projects. And we hope that as in the case in Basilan, the assistance in this regard, especially the civic and humanitarian project, will be able to provide development assistance to the area,” Bunye said.

Balikatan 02-1, the joint military exercises between Philippine and U.S. troops staged in Basilan last year, has been very successful as it brought civic and humanitarian programs as well as infrastructure projects in the province.

Gov’t to pursue peace process with MILF with the help of NAM, says GMA

KUALA LUMPUR — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that despite some setbacks, her government would pursue the peace process in Mindanao with the help of its friends in the Non-Alignment Movement (NAM).

Speaking at the plenary session of the 13th NAM Summit this afternoon, the President said that in 2002, her government resumed peace negotiations with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) through the efforts of Malaysia and Libya.

“Although we have encountered some setbacks, we hope to move forward soon by the generous participation of our allies in the Non-Aligned Movement,” the President said.

The President recalled that in 1996, the Philippine government also forged a peace agreement with the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) after four years of negotiations participated in by the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC).

She said that the NAM could continue to be revitalized on the basis of the first principles of Bandung, Indonesia where NAM was born.

“These are the ramparts of peace and development and this is the path the Philippines has taken,” the President said.

The President was the fifth speaker on the summit’s Agenda Item 8, which calls for a review of the international of political and economic situation and the role of NAM in the 21st century.

She said that the NAM can continue to revitalize “if we could harness our unity towards promoting global peace and development in the new century.”

Mahathir to GMA: Malaysia to go on helping push peace talks with MILF

KUALA LUMPUR – Malaysia will continue to play the role of a benevolent host and mediator when the Philippine government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) continue peace negotiations.

Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammad made this commitment in bilateral talks with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, part of the latter’s working visit to Malaysia and attendance in the 13th Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) Summit here.

In a separate bilateral, Libyan Foreign Minister Abdelrahman Mohamed Shalghem also promised the President of Libya’s full support and cooperation in enhancing the peace talks with the MILF.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye today told Filipino reporters at the Putrajaya World Trade Center here that the President met with Mahathir for 15 minutes, from 3:20 to 3:35 p.m.

Bunye said the bilateral focused on what Malaysia could do to help push and complete the peace process with the MILF, seen to eventually solve the three-decade-old Mindanao problem.

Malaysia would play the pivotal role of go-between to hasten the peace process, he said.

They also had the chance to talk about the welfare of Filipino expatriates in Sabah, he added.

During the bilateral with Shalghem, the President was informed of the keen interest of the Khadaffi Foundation, headed by the son of Libyan leader Moammar Khadaffi, to establish a palm oil plantation in Liguasan Marsh, North Cotabato.

Bunye said the plantation will be put up in joint venture with the National Development Corporation.

The government, in an unrelenting military offensive, recently retook the marsh area from criminal elements and secessionist rebels.

The Presidential Spokesman said the President likewise had the chance to have a bilateral meeting with Shaikh Khalifa bin Salman Al-Khalifa, Prime Minister of Bahrain.

They talked about the welfare of Filipino expatriates in Bahrain and the Middle East and what Bahrain could do to help in the event that a war erupts in the Persian Gulf.

The Bahrain premier also told the President of his plans to visit Manila on February 26 on his way home, Bunye said.

He added that following the President's speech before the NAM delegates, leaders from the Islamic countries of Brunei Darussalam, Pakistan, Libya and Qatar stood to congratulate the President.

The Islamic leaders expressed their belief that what the President said in her speech would be helpful in finding a peaceful solution to the Middle East crisis, he noted.

- GMA joins People Power 1 personalities in Thanksgiving Mass at EDSA Shrine
- GMA inaugurates Ninoy-Diokno National Shrine

GMA leads EDSA 1 celebration, inaugurates Aquino-Diokno Memorial as national shrine

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will lead today the 17th anniversary celebration of EDSA People Power 1 by joining the masses for the traditional Eucharistic celebration at the EDSA Shrine and then motoring to Nueva Ecija for the inauguration of the Aquino-Diokno Memorial.

The President arrived early this morning from Kuala Lumpur, where she attended the 13th summit of the Non-Aligned Movement.

After presiding over the executive committee meeting of the National Economic and Development Authority in Malacañang, the President will proceed to the EDSA Shrine for Mass.

Afterwards, she will fly to Fort Magsaysay to preside over the inauguration of the Aquino-Diokno Memorial as a National Shrine.

The memorial is to the former detention site of the late Senators Benigno "Ninoy" S. Aquino, Jr. and Jose "Pepe" W. Diokno, who were imprisoned in Fort Magsaysay during the early months of Martial Law.

The President ordered the rehabilitation of the detention cells following a visit last December 17 to the Aquino Center at the Hacienda Luisita complex in Tarlac City.

Inspired by what she saw at the Aquino Center museum, where photos and memorabilia of the late senator were on exhibit, the President instructed Maj. Gen. Alberto Braganza to improve the site.

Braganza is the President's former Senior Military Aide and is now Commanding General of the Philippine Army's 7th Infantry Division based in Fort Magsaysay in Palayan City (formerly Laur).

Reconstructing the site and transforming it into a memorial in time for this year's EDSA 1 commemoration proved to be a challenging task. The 51st Engineer Brigade of the Philippine Army provided the skilled labor for the construction while the Seventh Infantry troops provided the labor force.

The detention facility was actually the former headquarters of the First Military Security Detachment of the Military Security Unit of the Philippine Army. It was converted into a detention facility for political prisoners during the early months of Martial Law.

From March 12 to April 11 1973, Ninoy Aquino (codenamed "Alpha) and Pepe Diokno (codenamed "Delta) endured a month of isolation, indignity and uncertainty in separate small stuffy and nearly bare rooms. With the windows nailed shut, only fluorescent bulbs lighted the rooms 24 hours a day.

Left with only few pieces of clothing, the two opposition leaders were not allowed to wear wristwatches, or to see and talk to each other. They kept track of one another by alternately singing "Lupang Hinirang" and "Bayan Ko."

Christmas tunes were played in the summer to further disorient the detainees. Ninoy kept track of time by observing the shadow of a barely visible fence post and marked the passing of each day on a window jamb.

Similarly, Diokno used tobacco residue from his pipe to count the days on a soapbox. Later, he would tie knots in his mosquito net to keep trace of the days that passed.

In solitary confinement, Ninoy found comfort in knowing that the “jail warden” was his godson, First Lieutenant and now Ambassador Voltaire T. Gazmin. He was also touched by the compassion shown by Capt. Diosdado Garcia, the medical officer on duty and Miss Basilica Tolentino (now Mrs. Ollero).

Upon his release in 1974, Pepe Diokno organized the Free Legal Assistance Group for the benefit of small farmers, fisherfolks, workers, students and urban poor, many of who had been detained unjustly like him.

GMA joins People Power 1 personalities in Thanksgiving Mass at EDSA Shrine

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today joined the people and some of the principal personalities in the 1986 People Power Revolution during a Thanksgiving Mass celebrated at the Our Lady of Peace Church at the EDSA Shrine in Ortigas, Pasig City in commemoration of the 17th anniversary of the popular uprising that toppled a dictatorship and restored democracy to the country.

With Jaime Cardinal Sin as the main celebrant, the Mass was also attended by former Presidents Corazon Aquino and Fidel Ramos, Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr., Senate President Franklin Drilon and some members of the Cabinet led by Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo.

During his homily, Cardinal Sin urged Filipinos to “rekindle the dream” of the first people power revolution.

“Now is the time to act,” said the Cardinal. “There is so much to be done.

Former President Aquino, described as the inspiration of the first EDSA revolution, said that people power is about assuming responsibility for ourselves and for others.

“Let us not just concentrate on our rights but also on our responsibilities,” said the widow of former Sen. Benigno S. Aquino, Jr.

Former President Fidel Ramos, one of the main characters in People Power I, said: “We Filipinos must never allow our political processes and institutions ever to fail again.”

Ramos pointed out that the only true path to sustainable development and enduring nationhood should be through the strengthening of ethical values, political institutions and social cohesion as a united and capable people and as a competitive national team performing competently in the globalized world of the 21st century.

Epifanio de los Santos Avenue was the center of the world’s attention for four days in February 1986 when people from all walks of life converged on EDSA and pulled a miracle: a bloodless uprising that toppled President Ferdinand Marcos.

In January 2001, a second people power revolution or EDSA II became necessary because of the nationwide outrage over a corrupt and inept leadership that almost brought down the economy.

The outcome of that revolution was the assumption into office of President Macapagal-Arroyo.

After the midday Mass, the President and Ms. Aquino flew by helicopter to Fort Magsaysay, in Laur, Nueva Ecija to declare the incarceration cell of former Senators Aquino and Jose W. Diokno as a National Shrine.

The President flew in early today from Malaysia where she attended the 13th summit conference of the Non-Aligned Movement in Kuala Lumpur.

GMA inaugurates Ninoy-Diokno National Shrine

FORT MAGSAYSAY, Palayan City — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo inaugurated here today the Aquino-Diokno Memorial commemorating the sacrifice and strength of spirit of the late Senators Benigno “Ninoy” S. Aquino, Jr. and Jose “Pepe” W. Diokno.

After attending the eucharistic celebration at the EDSA Shrine on the 17th anniversary of EDSA People Power 1, the President flew here to witness the launching of the memorial.

Along with former President Corazon Aquino and Carmen Diokno, the widows of the two senators, and the other members of the Aquino, Cojuangco and Diokno clans, the President unveiled the marker at the former detention facility.

The cells were the former Army Intelligence Headquarters of the First Military Security Detachment.

The President then viewed a 20-minute video presentation on the history of the two senators’ incarceration. Afterwards, the President toured the detention facility with the families of the two senators.

In a short program, the President witnessed the signing of a memorandum of agreement between the Department of National Defense and Department of Tourism, making Fort Magsaysay a tourist destination in Central Luzon.

The area would also offer adventure trips for tourists who want to experience mountain-trekking, rappelling and water sports.

The MOA was signed by Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon and Defense Undersecretary Edgardo Batenga.

The President ordered the rehabilitation of the detention cells following a visit last December 17 to the Aquino Center at the Hacienda Luisita complex in Tarlac City.

Inspired by what she saw at the Aquino Center museum where photos and memorabilia of the late senator were on exhibit, the President instructed Maj. Gen. Alberto Braganza to improve the site.

Braganza is the President’s former Senior Military Aide and is now Commanding General of the Philippine Army’s 7th Infantry Division based in Fort Magsaysay in Palayan City (formerly Laur).

In brief remarks, Mrs. Aquino thanked the President and Maj. Gen. Braganza for putting up the memorial. She admitted that when the proposal was raised by the President last December 17 in Tarlac City, she was not initially fully convinced that it could be done.

She noted that Ninoy’s detention here was “one of the most traumatic experience of our lives.” The former president said, however, that the experience paved the way for the strengthening of Ninoy’s spirituality. “It was the start of his being prayerful,” Mrs. Aquino said.

The former President said Aquino and Diokno’s detention was part of their supposed punishment for smuggling an article to the Bangkok Post. But she noted that “poor” Diokno had nothing to do with such and that actually, it was Ninoy, and their daughter Ballsy, who did the act.

She noted, however, that it made her feel much better that Diokno was with Ninoy at that time. From March 12 to April 11, 1973, Ninoy (codenamed “Alpha”) and Pepe (codenamed “Delta”) endured a month of isolation, indignity and uncertainty in separate small, stuffy and nearly bare rooms. With the windows nailed shut, only fluorescent bulbs lighted the rooms 24 hours a day.

Left with only a few pieces of clothing, the two opposition leaders were not allowed to wear wristwatches, or to see and talk to each other. They kept track of each another by alternately singing “Lupang Hinirang” and “Bayan Ko.”

Christmas tunes were played in the summer to further disorient the detainees. Ninoy kept track of time by observing the shadow of a barely visible fence post and marked the passing of each day on a window jamb.

Similarly, Diokno used tobacco residue from his pipe to count the days on a soapbox. Later, he would tie knots on his mosquito net to keep track of the days that passed.

In solitary confinement, Ninoy found comfort in knowing that the “jail warden” was his godson, then first lieutenant and now Ambassador to Cambodia Voltaire T. Gazmin. He was also touched by the compassion shown by Capt. Diosdado Garcia, the medical officer on duty, and Miss Basilica Tolentino (now Mrs. Ollera).

The two detainees were later transferred to Fort Bonifacio.

Reconstructing the site and transforming it into a memorial in time for this year’s EDSA 1 commemoration proved to be a challenging task. The 51st engineer Brigade of the Philippine Army provided the skilled labor for the construction while the Seventh Infantry troops provided the labor force.

Gov't to bring development to Buliok, GMA says

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the government would bring development immediately to the Buliok Complex in Pikit, Cotabato so that the evacuees can resume their normal lives.

“What we want to do now, precisely, is when the evacuees go back to Buliok, we want them to go back not again to another no man’s land. We want them to go back to a land of development now,” the President told the members of the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) during an en banc meeting in Malacañang.

Responding to a letter from the Sectoral Representatives Council of the NAPC appealing for immediate cessation of hostilities to enable the evacuees to return to their homes and rebuild their lives, the President said that North Cotabato Governor Emmanuel Pinol has already drawn a development program for Pikit, using mainly local government funds.

The President said she has already released P5 million from the national government to assist in the development plan.

According to the President, part of the development fund will be used for planting corn and part of it will be for planting palm oil.

The Chief Executive said that Malaysia, after her talks with Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammed in her last visit to Kuala Lumpur, will be providing the planting materials for palm oil.

The President said the evacuees, who are abandoning the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), should be given a chance to live peacefully and to prosper.

The President assured the NAPC sectoral representatives that she has ordered a halt to hostilities in the area. The reason why there are still skirmishes there is that soldiers undertaking demining activities in some areas are being attacked by elements of the MILF, the President said.

The President cited several surveys that say they don’t want the Philippines to be involved in the war in Iraq, but they want the government to finish off the Abu Sayyaf and other lawless elements in Mindanao.

“Now, I don’t want to finish the MILF,” the President said, stressing that the government has already drafted a peace agreement with the MILF. “I want peace,” the President pointed out, saying she has told the MILF that the Philippine government is willing to back to the negotiating table.

She said the military was forced to engage in combat operations in Buliok because the kidnappers were there. The President recalled that the MILF, in an agreement in Kuala Lumpur, assured the government that it will help catch the kidnappers.

“Instead of helping us catch the kidnapers, they kept them there. We have to enforce the law,” the President said.

Statement of Presidential Spokesperson Igancio R. Bunye

Re MILF

In the past, several calls for so-called “jihad” have been aired but our Muslim brethren have largely ignored these extremist gestures. The majority of Filipino Muslims are already in the mainstream of peace and democracy. Calls for them to engage in war will be futile and will fall on deaf ears.

Four points are important: First, the government shall continue its operations against criminal elements in Mindanao; second, we are calling the MILF back to the negotiating table; third, we are calling on our neighbors to mediate in the peace talks; and fourth, our peace and development programs in the region will be unrelenting.

Re Drug Problem

The administration has already swooped down on a number of drug laboratories in the countries, busted drug syndicates and hauled drug lords into jail, and this administration will continue to address that problem. But there are credible reports that the Philippines continues to be a transit point for drugs being brought to other countries. This is one of the reasons why we need to have more stringent financial controls such as those proposed in the AMLA. We must work with the international community in battling this global menace.

Re Agile

The interest and welfare of the Filipino people, nothing more, nothing less, comes first in every major government decision. AGILE has no power to either influence or subvert this principle. Let us not raise smokescreens to cover up for inaction on the AMLA. The March 15 FATF deadline is ticking like a time bomb threatening our people and our economy.

Re Non-Aligned Movement

Far from being isolated in the NAM conference, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo became the center of attention. Her speech was warmly applauded especially by the OIC delegates. She was elected vice chair of the conference and she presided over the most of the afternoon session during the opening day. She also stole the show for her fashion statement. The Malay Mail wrote: “Resplendent in her red attire, the Philippines President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was a sure fire standout in the crowd of somber-coloured clothes preferred by the other heads of state.”

“Great dressing” chorused five out of seven male observers in the NAM conference.

GMA thanks Khalifa for assurance of help to OFWs in the event of a Gulf war

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today thanked Prime Minister Sheikh Khalifa bin Salman Al-Khalifa of the Kingdom of Bahrain for his assurance that Bahrain will help in securing the welfare of some 3,000 overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in the kingdom in the event that war erupts in the Persian Gulf.

The President made the remarks during the luncheon she hosted for the visiting dignitary at the Malacañang State Dining Room.

“His Highness assured me of the continued protection and welfare of our countrymen during the current crisis in the region,” the President said in her remarks, referring to her bilateral meeting Monday with the Prime Minister in Kuala Lumpur during the 13th Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) Summit.

The Chief Executive and the Prime Minister were among the 63 heads of state and government who attended the summit.

In her remarks before offering a toast, the President also thanked Khalifa for the financial support extended by the Kingdom of Bahrain to finance development projects in Mindanao.

“Your support to finance government projects in Mindanao is highly appreciated by the Philippine government and the Filipino people,” the President told Khalifa.

The President recalled that the visit of Khalifa, as well as his previous visit last November 2001, has greatly enhanced the close relations between the Philippines and Bahrain.

She said that these visits, as well as the dialogues between officials of the two countries, have resulted in the signing of agreements that would benefit the people of the Philippines and the Kingdom of Bahrain.

For his part, Khalifa thanked the President for the warm hospitality extended to him and his delegation.

“It’s a great pleasure to thank you for your hospitality. I hope my friends in the Gulf will follow my steps to visit the Philippines,” Khalifa said in his response.

Before the luncheon, the President received Khalifa and his delegation at the Palace Music Room for the courtesy call.

Among those present at the luncheon were former President Fidel Ramos and members of the Cabinet, that included Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita, Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza, and Acting Foreign Affairs Secretary Jose Brillantes.

Making a difference in the Kuala Lumpur summit

KUALA LUMPUR – She stood tall and made a difference.

As fiery as her seven-minute speech urging Iraq and the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea to help avert a global crisis was President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s resplendent but respectable formal business suit that literally lit the halls of the Putrajaya World Trade Center here last Monday.

As soon as she disembarked from the official car to march into welcoming arms and smiles of Malaysian officials, heads of other delegates to the 13th Non-Aligned Movement Summit turned to take a long look at the President of the Republic of the Philippines.

The President arrived shortly before 9:00 a.m., an hour early for the summit’s opening ceremonies at 10:00 a.m.

Her outfit: an orange formal business attire designed by Filipino-Japanese Ito Curata.

People at the hall, used to seeing the men in dark suits and the women in formal light-shaded business attires, could not but noticed and expressed awe over the lady wearing the orange suit.

She was the third lady head of state who arrived at the PWTC, coming after Indonesian President Megawati Sukarnoputri.

Many of the mediemen in the spacious and well-equipped International Media Center (IMC) inside the PWTC momentarily stopped badgering on their computer keypads to stare at the numerous television screens spread strategically in the hall.

For some 20 seconds, they watched the President walked towards Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammad who stood at the end of the hall to welcome his guests, some 63 heads of state and a big number of other government ministers and representatives of NAM guest-and observer-nations.

A reporter from India remarked that the President was “different,” and he surely wanted to see and hear her deliver her short speech during the summit’s plenary session and general debate scheduled in the afternoon.

The President was the fifth speaker in Monday’s afternoon session. At the rostrum, her orange suit flared anew to get the attention of the people inside the plenary hall and the IMC who attentively listened as she spoke of NAM as the “largest international bulwark of peace” next to the United Nations.

The NAM, she said, is a movement that has “chosen to temper conflict . . . a movement that has offered its influential offices not only to stop the firing of weapons, but also to steward peace towards the welfare and benefit of the poor.”

Her speech was well applauded, particularly by members of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC), a grouping of Islamic nations that had been helping the Philippines resolve the conflict in Mindanao.

“(The OIC had) emphasized respect on the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Republic of the Philippines” in resolutions on the Mindanao problem they approved year after year, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople earlier said.

Among those who stood up from their seats to congratulate the President after her speech were Qatar Prime Minister Sheikh Abdulla bin Khalifa Al-Thani, Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf, Libya Foreign Affairs Minister Abdurrahman Mohamed Shalghem and Brunei Darussalam Sultan Haji Hassanal Bolkiah, according to Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye.

The President’s orange suit stood out again during the official photo session.

Reporters learned that she was initially assigned to the left outermost position in the second row after the seated officials of the NAM headed by Prime Minister Mahathir. But organizers immediately corrected the situation and she was escorted to the middle of her row as her peers gave way for her change of position.

Amid a sea of black and dark blue suits, the President in her orange dress stood out again.

The telltale images in thousands of photographs taken and immediately sent worldwide through the Internet showed the difference she made.

To cap it all, the attention to the head of state in a bright suit practically grew when the President presided for about an hour at the plenary session.

It was about 5:00 p.m. and she took over the chores, as acting chairman, of three-year NAM Chairman Prime Minister Mahathir.

She introduced and thanked speakers, all of whom were heads of state and ranking government ministers in their respective countries.

From the opening ceremonies until the end of the plenary session, the President enjoyed the warmth of fellow-delegates, sharing photo sessions with them and giving an ear to what they have to say while exchanging diplomatic notes on cordial relations between countries.

Lastly, the President's personality drew raves the next day by Malaysia's leading newspapers.

The respected Malay Mail said that resplendent in her red attire, the President was "a surefire stand-out in the crowd of sombre-coloured clothes preferred by other heads of state."

Give priority to remote areas in micro-finance scheme, GMA orders NAPC

Making microfinance a cornerstone in her fight against poverty, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed the National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) to give priority to remote areas in their innovative microfinance scheme called "credit plus five."

The "credit plus five" refers to credit plus training, product development, market access, new technologies and social insurance.

In the 6th NAPC en banc meeting in Malacañang, NAPC Lead Convenor Teresita Deles informed the President that as of January 31, 2003, the People's Credit Finance Corporation (PCFC), through its microfinance institutions, has already served 79 provinces, 113 out of 114 cities (Cotabato City still unserved) and 1,083 out of 1,496 towns, or 72 percent.

In her 2002 State of the Nation Address (SONA), the President made a personal commitment to reach out to one million poor women or 300,000 new borrowers a year from 2002 to 2004.

What has been accomplished so far, Deles said, was a total of 595,899 new borrowers, or an increase of 160 percent from the 372,349 borrowers in 2001.

The President approved the NAPC recommendation to set up a mechanism to serve remote and conflict areas, and basic sectors such as the elderly, disaster victims, and the disabled.

On the issues of sustainability of micro-financing institutions and clients, the President directed the continued rationalization of credit programs in geographic coverage and client targeting.

At the same time, she directed that the NAPC continue to be the champion for micro-enterprise development and open access to markets for the poor.

GMA makes surprise visit to Tondo police station to check on campaign against street crimes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today made a surprise visit to Police Station 2 in Moriones, Tondo, to personally check on the nationwide campaign against street crimes that she had ordered the Philippine National Police (PNP) to implement.

The Chief Executive, accompanied by Western Police District director Chief Superintendent Pedro Bulaong, motored to the police station in Tondo, which, she said, is number one in crime incidents in Manila.

Upon her arrival in the area, she immediately conferred with Police Station 2 Commander Superintendent Elmer Jamias on the crime situation in the area and what the police have been doing.

On drug-related problems in the area, Jamias reported that out of the 76 barangays under his jurisdiction, 13 are affected by drugs.

Bulaong also told the President that for 2002, "we made 3,700 arrests on drug-related cases citywide."

Later in a media briefing, the President said that it was her responsibility to see to it that her instructions are followed. “Ultimately, the supervision and controls is mine,” she said.

The President said that the next step will be a meeting with the mayors of the National Capital Region and Regions 3 and 4, as part of her plan to personally oversee the fight against street crimes.

She said that the crime rate in Metro Manila is still high and she would like to find out how to bring it down.

Bulaong pledged to reduce criminality in his jurisdiction by 30 percent.

The President also clarified that those who can carry guns are only police officers and soldiers when they are on duty.

“Basically its police officers when they are on duty and the soldiers when they are also on duty,” the President said when asked who can carry guns.

She noted that those who are off-duty can not carry guns “unless they are specifically under threat.”

“Sad to say, many crimes are committed when a policeman involved is ... carrying his gun off duty,” the President said.

GMA witnesses signing of M.O.A. on internet-based education program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today witnessed the signing of a memorandum of agreement (MOA) between Coca-Cola Co. and the Foundation for Information Technology Education and Development (FIT-ED), a non-governmental organization responsible for implementing the so-called "Coca-Cola ed.venture" program in the Philippines.

Coca-Cola Philippine Division president James Harting and FIT-ED Chairman and Senior Adviser on International Competitiveness Secretary Roberto Romulo led the signing ceremonies, held at the Ceremonial Hall in Malacañang.

Aside from the President, those who witnessed the event were Education Secretary Edilberto de Jesus, Coca-Cola Phils. Foundation president Cecile Alcantara, and hundreds of Coca-Cola employees.

The memorandum of agreement pushes forward the President's program to bring educational opportunities to more children, prepare them further for a more fruitful life ahead and empower them for the Information Age.

Coca-Cola ed.venture is part of a pan-Asian initiative aimed to contribute to local efforts to bridge the digital divide, bringing a new world of information technology (IT) learning to tens of thousands of young people across Asia through Internet-based educational resources.

Under the MOA, the Coca-Cola Co. is contributing further $650,000 towards the second phase of the ed.venture program, building on its initial $350,000 commitment towards the first phase.

"We are proud to continue supporting this national effort to empower and prepare the young people of the Philippines for the Information Age," Harting said.

He said the new phase of ed.venture is an exciting extension of our commitment to youth development and education in the Philippines."

"We know that ICT education continues to be a national developmental priority and we're looking forward to building our partnership with the Department of Education and FIT-ED as we bring the promise of e-learning to thousands more students and teachers in the years to come," he added.

According to Harting, the second phase, though it is only an extension of what has been achieved in the first program, includes a significantly deepened training component for public school students, teachers and administrators.

The ed.venture program has already built 15 fully equipped, Internet-connected and fully air-conditioned computer laboratories in public school selected by FIT-ED in coordination with the Department of Education.

These Coca-Cola ed.venture centers are located in the Quirino High School in Quezon City, Rizal School Sagad Annex in Pasig City, Negros Oriental National High School in Dumaguete City, Camanjac National High School in Negros Oriental, Manga National Manga National High School in Tagbilaran City, San Roque High School in Bohol, Bitoon National Vocational School in Cebu, Ipil National High School in Ormoc City, Hilongos National Vocational High School in Leyte, Guimbal National High School in Iloilo, Passi National High School in Iloilo, Bais City High School in Negros Oriental and Parang High School in Marikina City.

Harting added that the ed.venture program also equips teachers with the knowledge and skills that will allow them to leverage ICT in the teaching process.

Over 600 public high school teachers and administrators have already participated in ongoing workshops designed to introduce them to “educational telecollaboration,” a learning device that allows people in different locations to use Internet tools and resources to work together.

The centers deliver Information and Communications Technology (ICT) access, connectivity, training and educational resources to more than 15,000 students and public schoolteachers and administrators. The program is rolled out with active participation of local communities and local school boards.

FIT-ED, which aims to elevate IT awareness and capability in the Philippines, provided the technical expertise for the program’s infrastructure requirements and facilitates the program’s training component for schoolteachers.

“Educational quality and relevance in today’s world mean, among other things, ensuring that students know how to use ICT appropriately and responsibly,” FIT-ED chairman Secretary Roberto Romulo said.

“With Coca-Cola ed.venture, FIT-ED is doing its part in helping build an effective and sustainable model for ICT-enhanced high schools in the country,” Romulo added.

Harting also informed the President that the Philippine division is the sixth largest operation of Coca-Cola in the world. Manila, he added, is also the site of the first bottling operation of Coca-Cola outside of the United States.

Statement of Presidential Spokesperson Ignacio R. Bunye

In its meeting today, the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security, chaired by Executive Secretary Alberto G. Romulo, discussed with ARMM leaders the planned Balikatan 03-1 exercise which will be held in Sulu. Balikatan 03-1 is designed to assist out troops in dealing with Abu Sayyaf terrorist and kidnapping group.

It was emphasized that Balikatan 03-1 builds on the successes of Balikatan 02-1 in Basilan. US troops will not be involved in offensive combat nor in any unilateral operations. US military personnel will undertake counter-terrorism training assistance and support for AFP troops and will at all times be under the supervision of AFP officers.

The program will involve a major socio-economic component, which the Philippine government hopes and expects will help in the economic growth of Sulu, as a similar exercise had done in Basilan.

ARMM leaders, led by Gov. Parouk Hussin and Sulu Gov. Yusop Jikiri, expressed concerns that there might be resistance among Sulu residents against the presence of US military personnel, owing to the area’s history of struggle against US troops at the start of the last century.

ARMM leaders, however, agreed to undertake talks with their constituents to explain the purpose and nature of Balikatan 03-1.

Malacañang disowns Mindanao memo

Malacañang today disowned a supposed memorandum of instruction from President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordering the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) to capture Hashim Salamat dead or alive.

Emerging from the meeting of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COCIS), Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye categorically denied that the document came from the Palace.

“We’d like to state that this document is spurious. It is not true. This document is fake and it’s been circulated probably to agitate the Muslim population in Mindanao,” Bunye said during his regular press briefing.

Bunye said it is very difficult to pinpoint the source of these documents. “Obviously it emanated from a group that doesn’t want peace between MILF (Moro Islamic Liberation Front) and the government,” Bunye said.

The spokesman said Presidential Assistant on Mindanao Jesus Dureza presented during the COCIS the fake document, which has been widely circulated in the region.

“We don’t know and we don’t want to point any fingers at any particular group. It’s enough that we belie this statement, that we correct the impression that this emanated from Malacañang,” Bunye said.

The false memo, dated February 11, orders the AFP to undertake a so-called Operation Greenbase, whereby the Armed Forces must also “capture and occupy” simultaneously within one week the Buliok Complex fronting the Liguasan Marsh area comprising Kabalsalan Island Complex, Rajamuda Complex and Buliok Complex where Hashim Salamat’s headquarters or Islamic Center is located.

The so-called memo from the President further orders the AFP to serve the warrants of arrest against Salamat, Samier Hashim, Al Haj Murad and Eid Kabalu by various courts two years ago.

“The AFP must bear in mind that the high-value target of the plan is to capture Salamat Hashim dead or alive,” the fake memo said.

Nazario named Sandigan Presiding Justice

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has appointed Minita Chico-Nazario as presiding justice of the Sandiganbayan.

Prior to her appointment, Nazario was acting Presiding Justice of the Sandiganbayan, a designation made by the Supreme Court in a resolution promulgated last November 28, 2001.

Nazario, 64, has served for 40 long years in the judiciary in various capacities without having been charged criminally or administratively by any party-litigant or lawyer in connection with her performance.

She was the chairperson of the Special Division constituted by the Supreme Court to try the Joseph Estrada cases per resolution promulgated last January 21, 2002.

She also served as Regional Trial Court Judge in Biñan, Laguna, was the first woman Justice of the Sandiganbayan, and Chairperson of the Sandiganbayan’s Fifth Division.

A native of San Miguel, Bulacan, Nazario earned her Associate in Arts degree at the University of the Philippines from 1956 to 1958.

She obtained her Bachelor of Laws degree from the University of the Philippines in 1962 and passed the Bar Examinations in November of that same year with a rating of 78.1 percent.

Nazario is married to Rodolfo Nazario with whom she has three children.

GMA cites Vietnam for key role in defusing tension in South China Sea

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the important role played by the Socialist Republic of Vietnam in the forging of the Declaration of the Regional Code of Conduct in the South China Sea, which has defused tension in the contested area.

“We are very grateful that you have the same position which made the position of the Philippines very strong,” the President said in her remarks during the courtesy call in Malacañang of Vietnam’s Minister of Foreign Affairs Nguyen Dy Nien.

The President said the landmark agreement, which was signed before her state visit to Vietnam in November last year, identified the areas of cooperation the two countries will explore in the future, further strengthening the two countries’ economic and diplomatic ties.

In that framework, Vietnam and the Philippines declared their determination to continue with the process of confidence-building despite territorial disputes among various claimant countries.

Aside from the Philippines and Vietnam, the Spratlys, the string of islands and islets that straddle the South China Sea, are also being claimed partly or wholly by China, Malaysia, Taiwan and Brunei Darussalam.

The President also expressed the hope that the trade imbalance between the Philippines and Vietnam will be resolved soon. The trade imbalance is in favor of Vietnam.

“We have many investments in Vietnam,” the President said, pointing out that the Philippines has one of the biggest investments in Vietnam, which include the food and beverage conglomerate, San Miguel Corporation.

“And we buy a lot of rice from Vietnam too,” the President said.

The Vietnamese Foreign Minister was accompanied to Malacañang by Vietnamese Ambassador to Manila Dinh Tich.

The President said that the Foreign Minister’s visit to Manila would further strengthen the already strong relations between Manila and Hanoi.

She congratulated Vietnam for its 7 percent growth rate, the second highest growth rate in Asia, next only to China. The Philippines, with the third highest growth rate in the region, trails behind Vietnam, the President said.

The President likewise congratulated the leaders of Vietnam for what they have done in Vietnam, for “the reunification and healing of the deep division that existed after the Americans left in the 70s.”

“I hope I will be able to do that in the Philippines as well,” the President said, referring to her vision of healing the divisiveness in the country caused by partisan politics.

The President reiterated her offer to continue hosting Vietnamese refugees in Palawan who fled their homeland when the Americans left some two decades ago.

Some 1,500 Vietnamese “boat people” are still stranded in resettlement areas in Palawan, after they failed to be repatriated to host countries in the West where they applied for political asylum.

“For humanitarian reasons, we will just keep them where they are,” she said.

There is no truth to a report that PAGC Chair Dario Rama has been replaced by Chief of Staff Rigoberto Tiglao.

There is no plan to remove Chair Rama. In fact, Chair Rama is doing a good job.

The report must have arisen from instructions by the President for Secretary Tiglao to review the proposed system or process for conducting lifestyle checks on presidential appointees.

Secretary Tiglao has been tasked to study if the proposed unit which would conduct lifestyle checks would be directly under the PAGC or would be a monitoring unit separate from, but coordinating with, PACG.

GMA orders AFP to wipe out Abu Sayyaf in 90 days

TANAY, Rizal – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) to wipe out the notorious Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG) within 90 days to reinstate normalcy in Mindanao.

“I’ve given the military a deadline for the ASG, 90 days,” the President said.

The President issued the directive to AFP Chief of Staff Gen. Dionisio Santiago during an interview with Malacañang reporters in Camp General Mateo Capinpin this morning, right after the baptism of Sheena Rose Cocoy, the daughter of rebel returnee Rosalinda P. Cocoy, at St. Martin of Tours Parish here.

During the interview, the President said she strongly believes in the capability of the military to follow the deadlines that she has been giving them. When she told them to capture the Buliok complex in three days, the Armed Forces completed their mission before her deadline.

“So I suppose they’ll be able (to meet the deadline), if they do the proper allocation of resources. They’ll be able also to finish Abu Sayyaf in 90 days,” she said.

The President denied reports that the presence of US troops in Zamboanga was aimed at going after the Abu Sayyaf. She clarified that the ongoing training here was part of a $25-million training program approved by the US government during her visit to Washington in November 2001.

She explained that the ongoing training in Zamboanga was not the Balikatan 03-1, as the newspaper reports claimed.

“The training in Zamboanga is not the Balikatan that people are writing about because the Balikatan 03-1 is still under consultation, negotiation. But the one in Zamboanga is training of two light reaction companies and it’s a $25-million training. It’s a very, very valuable training. That’s different from the other one which is still under consultation,” President said.

On the continued military operation against the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), the President said that her directive has not yet changed and she wanted the military to enforce the law and pursue the peace process with the Moro rebels.

“We want peace but they have to enforce the law. We have a call to the MILF to come to the peace table. We have given them the draft of the peace agreement and we have to run after those who break the law,” the President added.

She also said Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammad has been helping the Philippine government to pursue the peace talks with the MILF and details of this are being worked out by Presidential Adviser for Special Concern Secretary Norberto Gonzales.

The President clarified that she was very hopeful that the MILF would return to the negotiation table and continue the peace talks with government negotiators.

GMA calls anew on CPP-NPA to lay down their arms

TANAY, Rizal – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the leaders and members of the Communist Party of the Philippines-New Peoples Army (CPP-NPA) to return to the fold of the law and the government is willing to accept them wholeheartedly and provide them with means to live a decent life.

“Nananawagan tayo sa kanila na kapag kapayapaan pipiliin nila na hakbang, pag-aalaga at pagkalinga at kaunlaran ang aabutan nila (I’m appealing to them that if they choose peace, we will take care of them and the government will help them improve their lives),” President said during the interview at Camp General Tomas Capinpin here.

The President said that she hopes CPP-NPA will end their armed struggle and give way to peace.

The President assured them that once a peaceful solution is reached in the decades-old conflict between the government and the communist rebels, the government will implement development projects in the rural areas.

“Peace and development is very important, if we’re going to fight terrorism. We also need to root out the cause of poverty,” the President said.

She explained that because of poverty, it would be easy to brainwash people and lure them to join the rebels fighting the government.

But on the same vein, the President also warned that if the CPP-NPA continues to fight the government, the military will go after them and implement the law.

The President motored here to fulfill her promise to be the godmother of 22-day old Sheena Rose Cocoy, a daughter of rebel returnee Rosalinda P. Cocoy. The child was baptized at the St. Martin of Tours Parish here in Camp Capinpin.

On February 7, the President visited Rosalinda at the AFP Medical Center in V. Luna, Quezon City, when she learned that the former rebel amazon gave birth to Sheena Rose, her second child.

After the baptismal rites, the President joined the sponsors and relatives of Rosalinda in a “merienda.”

As a gift to her new godchild, the President gave a scholarship and some other little things to Sheena Rose as well as financial assistance to Rosalinda.

“My wish to Sheena Rose is that I want her to live in a society with peace and development,” the President said.

Among the sponsors were Armed Forces Chief of Staff Gen. Dionisio Santiago, Rizal Governor Rebecca “Nini” Ynares, General Efren Abu, commander of the 2nd Infantry Division; Brig. General Dante Bonifacio, also of the 2nd Infantry Division; General Ronald Kempis of the AFP Medical Center; Lieutenant Don Villanuevo of the 1st Infantry Battalion; Benilda Cuerpo; Lorna Abu; Colonel Melba Bonifacio, chief nurse of the Philippine Army; and Evelyn Galinato.

Rosalinda, alyas Ka Rose and Ka Lorena in the underground movement, is from Sitio Makaingalan, Barangay Puray, Rodriguez, Rizal and was born on June 27, 1980. She is the youngest of the 11 children of Abundio and Paulina Cocoy.

Before she joined the underground movement in 1996, Rosalinda was 2nd year at the Geronimo High School in Rodriguez, Rizal. During her five years stay in the movement, Rosalinda became an organizer and instructor of the communist rebels.

Rosalinda was one of the 150 former members and sympathizers of the NPA who surrendered to the 1st Infantry Battalion based in Cavinti, Laguna. She was presented to the President last Nov. 15, 2002 in surrender rites at Barangay Pinugay, Rizal.

RP mulls lodging a protest on Hong Kong wage cut with the I.L.O.

The Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) will consider lodging a protest with the International Labor Organization (ILO) after it has studied the implications of Hong Kong’s new wage policy on its international commitments under the ILO and other pertinent covenants and instruments.

“The wage policy is unfair and unjust and, therefore, I am not foreclosing the possibility of protesting the decision to the ILO,” DOLE Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas said in a statement.

She said the DOLE will also appeal to the sense of fairness of Hong Kong employers to maintain the present salaries of Filipino domestic helpers in consideration of their long service and quality performance.

“We are not really out of options and we continue to review them,” Sto. Tomas said.

Sto. Tomas has directed the governing board of the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) to immediately convene and discuss its options regarding the Hong Kong government’s new minimum wage policy for overseas domestic helpers.

She said that the meeting will also explore new policy directions and strategies that will mitigate the impact of the wage policy on the welfare of Filipinos working as domestic helpers in Hong Kong.

The DOLE chief bared these responses after she received the report of the Philippine Consulate on the decision of the Hong Kong government to reduce the minimum allowable wage for foreign domestic helpers by HK$400 per month effective April 1, 2003.

At the same time, Sto. Tomas warned against the indiscriminate layoffs or termination of employment without just cause of Filipino domestic helpers, to which employers may resort as a result of the wage cut decision.

She said the Department is not entirely helpless and may not be inclined in approving new contracts for employers who resort to this kind of practice.

DOLE, Sto. Tomas said, is presently reviewing the full implication of the Report of the Task Force on Population Policy which was made the basis of the wage cut decision and other measures affecting Filipino domestic helpers.

There are some 240,000 foreign domestic helpers in Hong Kong, 153,000 of them Filipinos, who will be affected by the wage cut.

DFA moves to resolve problems on absentee voting

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) has formed a group to resolve problems in the implementation of the Absentee Voting Law, especially in areas abroad where there are large concentrations of Filipinos but far from Philippine embassies.

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople said the group has been reviewing reports from various posts and is due to release their findings soon.

Ople said a case in point is the situation of some half a million Filipinos in Sabah, Malaysia.

"There is a problem of the Filipino population in Malaysia. Most of them are in Sabah," Ople said.

Sabah, located at the northeastern tip of Borneo in East Malaysia and practically near the Philippines' group of southern islands off the Sulu Sea, is about two hours by plane from Kuala Lumpur.

Ople said the law on absentee voting "requires physical presence of voters for registration and voting."

"If there are half a million Filipinos in Sabah, do you expect them to travel to Kuala Lumpur because we have no consulate in Sabah?" he asked.

But Ople disclosed that there have been suggestions that "we allow (Filipinos in Sabah) to register and vote in Brunei Darussalam which is closer."

The DFA had been deputized by the Commission on Elections to implement the absentee voting law abroad, including in areas with large concentration of Filipinos like the United States, the Middle East, and some countries in the Asia-Pacific.

NAPC cites gains in GMA's nationwide micro-finance program for poor women

A total of 595,899 poor women availed themselves of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's loan program for micro-business enterprises in 2002.

National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) Lead Convenor Teresita Deles said this represented an increase of 160 percent from 372,349 women-borrowers registered in 2001.

In a report to the President, Deles said the growth in the micro-finance program reflected the people's acceptance of the President's commitment to implement activities that would spur national social growth and economic development.

The President, in her State of the Nation Address in July 2002, said her administration intended to reach out to about one million poor women or more than 300,000 new borrowers yearly from 2002 to 2004.

Deles informed the President that as of January 31, 2003, the People's Credit Finance Corporation, through its micro-finance institutions, had served 79 provinces, 113 out of 114 cities (Cotabato City still unserved) and 1,083 out of 1,496 towns, or 72 percent.

During an en banc meeting in Malacañang last Wednesday (February 26), the President directed the NAPC to give priority to remote areas in their innovative micro-finance scheme called "credit plus five."

The "credit plus five" refers to credit plus training, product development, market access, new technologies and social insurance.

The President instructed the NAPC to set up a mechanism to serve remote and conflict areas, and the basic sectors such as the elderly, disaster victims, and the disabled.

On the issues of sustainability of micro-financing institutions and clients, the President directed the continued rationalization of credit programs in geographic coverage and client targeting.

She urged the NAPC to continue to be the champion for micro-enterprise development and open access to markets for the poor as the Department of Trade and Industry will focus on the small and medium enterprises program of the government.

Pagmuni-munihan din natin ang mga karanasang matimbang at mga hamong kaharap ngayon sa pagtataguyod ng kapayapaan at pagkakasundo. Dapat ipagdiwang din natin ang mga munting tagumpay at magkaisa sa pag-asang mapalaganap ang kultura ng kapayapaan sa buong bansa.

Sa ngayon, kung saan saan naririnig ang mga masigabong panawagan para sa kapayapaan mula sa iba't-ibang sektor at pangkat. Bagaman iba't iba ang paraan upang mapalaganap ito.

Tunay nga habang nagiging mas masalimuot ang tunggalian at karahasan sa lipunan, lalong mahirap mahuli ang kapayapaan. Mismong ang kayamanan natin sa iba't ibang kalinangan at pananampalataya ay nagiging dahilan ng pagwawatak-watak.

Panahon na upang maliwanagan natin at tanggapin ng lubos na walang mas mabuting daan tungo sa kapayapaan kaysa sa maglakbay at kumilos bilang isang bayan.

Bagaman iba't ibang kultura ang bumubuo sa atin, hindi dapat natin makaligtaan ang magkakatulad na pangarap, diwa, at paniniwalang nagbubuklod sa atin at nagbibigay ng inspirasyon at lakas sa pagtugon sa mabibigat na usaping sumasalang sa kanya-kanyang pangkat sa lipunan.

Samakatuwid, iwaksi natin ang pangungutya sa kapwa at sa halip, tanggaping kailangan natin ang isa't isa. Palawakin natin ang pagkaka-isa ng pamayanan nang higit sa sari-sariling bukluran ayon sa kanya-kanyang wika, relihiyon, kultura at pulitika. Namumuhay tayong lahat sa iisang lupain kaya dapat tayong magsikap at kumilos ng may iisang pangarap at tungo sa iisang kinabukasan bilang mga Pilipino kapayapaan ang hangad.

Kung positibo at bukas ang pananaw, haharapin natin ang mga alitan at krisis bilang mga pagkakataon upang lalong pagandahin ang pagsasama.

Buong loob akong umaasa na sa pagdiriwang ngayong taon ng Linggo ng Pagkamulat sa Pambansang Kapayapaan, lalong lalalim ang pagpapahalaga nating lahat sa pagkakaisa ng bayan at titindi ang paninindigan ng bawat isa sa atin na isulong ang pagbabago bilang mga mamamayang may pananagutan sa kapwa at sa Republika.

Mabuhay.

GMA appeals anew for unity to attain peace

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today renewed her appeal for unity for the Filipino people to attain peace, overcome any crisis, and push the socio-economic growth of the country.

In a radio message, the President noted the imperative need for peace and security in the homeland.

She enjoined the people to creatively demonstrate their thoughts and beliefs on achieving peace while reflecting on their experiences and challenges in waging the call for peace and unity.

“Ito ang panahon upang sama-samang ihayag ng lahat ng mamamayan sa malikhaing paraan ang ating damdamin at paniniwala sa kapayapaan. Pagmuni-munihin din natin ang mga karanasang matimbang at mga hamong kaharap ngayon sa pagtataguyod ng kapayapaan at pagkakasundo,” she said.

The President, in Proclamation No. 161, last year set February 28 to March 6 of every year as National Peace Consciousness Week.

In her message, the Chief Executive said it was high time for all Filipinos to accept the truth that the best way to achieve peace was to join hands and effect national destiny as one people, one nation.

“Panahon na upang maliwanagan natin at tanggapin ng lubos na walang mas mabuting daan tungo sa kapayapaan kaysa sa maglakbay at kumilos bilang isang bayan,” she added.

The President called on everyone to bring about national unity that would go beyond parochial groupings according to dialect, religion, culture and politics.

She stressed that the Filipino people live in one nation and must therefore move with a collective dream for a better and peaceful future.

“Kung positibo at bukas and pananaw, haharapin natin ang mga alitan at krisis bilang mga pagkakataong upang lalong pagandahin ang pagsasama (With a positive outlook, the people will likely see any crisis as an opportunity to further strengthen the collective will to achieve peace and growth),” she said.

Reyes: Rumsfeld vows to respect RP charter in conduct of RP-US joint bilateral exercise

Defense Secretary Angelo T. Reyes today said the United States Defense Department has committed to give its “maximum support within the context of respecting all provisions included in the Philippine Constitution” in the conduct of RP-US joint military training exercises.

Reyes said “we appreciate the commitment made by US Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld.”

In a report to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Reyes said the respective military officials of both countries would be ironing out “the details of the implementation of this initiative taking into consideration the unique situation of both countries, including provisions contained in the Philippine Constitution.”

He said he was sent to Washington to discuss the “enhancement and continued cooperation of the Philippines and the United States on issues pertaining to terrorism.”

“These meetings have served to strengthen the strategic alliance between our two countries, an alliance based on deep friendship and historic ties, as well as shared values and common threats,” he said.

Among the issues Reyes discussed with Secretary Rumsfeld were the basic principles and general terms of the exercises.

In a statement, Rumsfeld said the arrangements for the exercises are being discussed and he did not know what the formula would be.

“Whatever our role is, it has to be consistent with their Constitution and their circumstance. We want to be helpful,” the US Defense Secretary said.

“We will have something like a Balikatan 03, that will be related to terrorism, and it very likely will have an intelligence component, a command-and-control component, a training component, some exercises,” he added.

Rumsfeld did not put a timetable on setting up the Blikatan 03-1, adding that the shape and size of the exercise remained to be worked out in a plan acceptable to both countries.

He said the US looked forward to working closely with the Philippines, which is a long-term ally of the US and is a stalwart foe of terrorism worldwide and within its borders.

The Philippines and the US share a common goal in the bilateral military exercises: to enhance the capability of the Armed Forces of the Philippines to effectively meet various threats to the country.

COCIS proposes 4 talking points to get MILF back to peace table

Malacañang today presented four talking points designed to bring the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) closer to the negotiating table.

The talking points, presented at a meeting of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COCIS) in Malacañang, proposed “the setting up of an acceptable monitoring team which will effectively monitor ceasefire mechanisms on the ground.”

It also called for “the establishment of a proposed area of temporary stay to avoid mistake encounters while negotiations are ongoing.”

It likewise stressed the need to “reaffirm the commitment of both sides to observe the commitments in the joint communiqué of May 6, 2002 in Kuala Lumpur on how to address the issue of criminal elements seeking refuge in known MILF occupied areas.”

Lastly, the talking points also emphasized the “need to pinpoint responsibility for the spate of bombings in urban areas and the toppling of National Power Corporation’s transmission lines.”

The talking points, approved in principle by the COCIS chaired by Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, would still be submitted to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for approval, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye said.

According to Secretary Eduardo Ermita, presidential adviser on the peace process, these talking points would be conveyed to the MILF through the usual back channels.

Ermita said the government hoped that the MILF would “respond positively” to the talking points.

He explained that the proposed “area of temporary stay” is to ensure that there would “be no spillover of armed groups in the concerned areas.”

“We will lessen the probability of skirmishes,” Ermita added.

Asked about the possibility of meeting the six-month deadline set by the President at the start of the year for a peace pact with the MILF, Ermita said the government is exerting its best efforts.

“Six months would still be a very reasonable time to discuss the substance of the peace agreement as approved by the President,” Ermita said.

Meanwhile, Bunye said the COCIS recommended the convening of the government peace panel headed by Presidential Assistant for Mindanao Jesus Dureza and co-chaired by Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong, a Maguindanaon.

Bunye also reported that in after-operations reports, Armed Forces Chief of Staff General Dionisio Santiago clarified that the President ordered the Buliok operations to flush out elements of the Pentagon kidnap-for-ransom group and deprive them of a refuge in the MILF area in Pikit, Cotabato.

Santiago, Bunye added, said that the Buliok operations ended on February 20. Armed Forces troops are now holding their positions and conducting an active defense of the area.

GMA leads Inaugural rites of Sun Cellular

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the launching of Sun Cellular, the latest GSM service of the Gokongwei-owned Digitel Philippines, assuring that the entry would further promote competition in the industry and further lower telecommunications costs.

The President launched the latest cellular service provider at the Manila Midtown Hotel with an inaugural call to Joel Pacarro, an overseas Filipino worker based in Kuwait. Joel has been in Kuwait with his wife Arlene and two children since 1992.

In brief remarks during a toast, the President said she expects that telecommunications costs would further decrease with the entry of the latest player.

“Please join me to a toast for the success of interconnectivity at low cost,” the President said.

National Telecommunications Commissioner Armi Jane Borje, in brief remarks, congratulated Sun Cellular for “daring” to enter the very competitive wireless industry.

She stressed that real competition is always good for the Filipino consuming public. “And for Sun Cellular to attempt to offer Filipinos value phone service without a high price tag associated with wireless technology, this is indeed a very much welcome development,” she added.

The President noted that NTC, with the full support of the Department of Transportation and Communications (DOTC), has vigorously pursued a one-stop public assistance center to specially attend to the numerous complaints of cellular phone snatching and theft, problems associated with a very high demand for very low priced although regrettably at times stolen cellular phones.

She said that hopefully, the government would continue to see the unity among the players in the telecom industry with the signing of all interconnection agreements.

“This will enable not only Sun Cellular to interconnect its voice and SMS networks with other operators but to finally achieve full interconnection of all existing telecom companies even, specially, in far-flung areas in the Philippines,” she added.

Aside from the President, on hand to talk to Joel during the inaugural call were his mother Patricia Pacarro, sister-in-law Mrs. Editha Pacarro and cousin Melissa Soler.

Joel expressed appreciation for the President recent visit to Kuwait to check on the conditions of OFWs there.

Joel assured the Chief Executive and his mother that things are still normal in Kuwait, despite the tension brought by the impending conflict in neighboring countries.

“Huwag kayong mag-alala. Tahimik naman dito (Don’t worry. Everything is fine here),” Joel said.

Sun Cellular offers P2 per minute of Sun to Sun calls and 50 centavos for Sun to Sun texts.

Among those in attendance were tycoon John Gokongwei, JG Summit executive Lance Gokongwei and Charles Lim, Chief Executive Officer of Digitel GSM.

Plan to Decongest Metro Manila

Presidential Adviser Lito Osmeña today sought approval from the President to go ahead with a proposal to develop Clark and environs as a possible relocation site of two key national government offices. The proposal aims to decongest Metro Manila which is now bursting at the seams with a daytime population of 12 million. The proposal calls for paying off national government debts to GSIS in the form of land in Clark and other proposed sites. GSIS in turn will provide P15 billion over the next five years to develop the land and put up buildings and support facilities which will house DPWH and DOTC. Counterpart funds for the development of residential, commercial and support infrastructure are proposed to be provided in partnership with the private sector.

President GMA endorsed the proposal to Secretary Alberto G. Romulo and Chief of Staff Rigoberto D. Tiglao for further evaluation.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo

The President is suffering from minor eye irritation.

Deadline to Neutralize Abu Sayyaf

The President’s call for the neutralization of the Abu Sayyaf in 90 days underlies her firm belief in the ability of the Filipino soldier to finish the job. This will, of course, entail asking our troops to “double time.” Our troops have proven their mettle in the past and the President is confident they can do so again. This will not stretch our forces too far, because the PNP is there to conduct holding actions in the Mindanao mainland, while the AFP moves elsewhere for the tactical offensive. At any rate, the limited AFP offensive to take the Buliok complex is finished. The PNP and CAFGUs can secure the areas already cleared of lawless elements by the AFP. The important thing is to make sure our forces always stay alert and not leave themselves vulnerable to surprise counter-attacks from the MILF. Kaya ng ating sundalo ang deadline na ito.

Joint training exercise and technological support from the US will help in an important way, but only the Filipino soldier can finish the job. He has proven this in Basilan and in Central Mindanao.

Balikatan

The Balikatan exercises will be conducted under absolute Constitutional standards. The people of the place-wherever it will be held in the future-will be consulted. Terms of Reference (TOR) will be drawn up and will be made public. Human rights will be protected and ethnic sensibilities will be respected.

Peace with MILF

The Government has not signed any peace agreements violative of the Constitution. The intention has always been to bring about peace, but not peace at any cost.

FATF

We are hoping that the senators and the FATF representatives can come up with a solution that would facilitate the passage of the AMLA. We ask the public to focus on this rather than allowing themselves to be distracted by extraneous issues.

IRAQ

We have faith that the UN will ultimately make a decision for the good of mankind. We abhor the idea of war and continue to hope and pray for peace.

Arrest of AL Qaeda Leader

Terrorism is a global threat and the only way to address it effectively is through global cooperation. No country is ever safe from terrorist groups that recognize no boundaries and have no respect for human life. We laud the cooperation of nations in facing this threat and will do our share to eradicate terrorism and its proponents within our country.

DSWD steps up relief, rehab in Buliok complex

The Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) has stepped up its relief, rehabilitation, medical and civic work in and around the conflict-torn Buliok complex in Liguasan Marsh, Pikit, Cotabato.

Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman said the agency is coordinating with the Task Force Liguasan Marsh under Presidential Assistant on the Peace Process Secretary Eduardo Ermita.

In a report to Malacañang, Soliman said the task force has identified the most urgent needs of communities affected by the armed conflict in the area and has speedily responded to such needs.

Coordination in fast-tracking the implementation of high-impact programs and projects is also being made with the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC), she said.

In its report, the DSWD Disaster Response Operations Monitoring and Information Center said relief and rehabilitation activities continued in 89 of 101 evacuation areas earlier set up in parts of Central Mindanao region and the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao.

Most of the still existing 89 evacuation centers are located in Cotabato and Maguindanao provinces where effects of the military's recapture of a major rebel camp in the Buliok complex spilled out.

Soliman said the Municipal Disaster Coordinating Council (MDCC) has stood as the coordinating body to ensure the smooth implementation of the relief operations.

"Through this arrangement, issues and concerns of concerned agencies and the affected families are discussed and resolved immediately," she said.

She added that the Municipal Disaster Operation Center was created, with Ariel Cabanog of the Pikit municipal government as coordinator and Roberto Leyson of the Pikit Parish assisting.

Soliman said the DSWD had centralized the receipt and stockpiling of donations had been centralized while the distribution of relief goods was coursed through the different evacuation centers.

She said DSWD regional workers have been posted in major evacuation centers on a shifting basis since February 13 to address the psycho-social needs of displaced families, notably women and children.

To ensure health and sanitation in Pikit, the following were also undertaken:

- The 54th Engineering Brigade made 60 compartments with toilet bowls and drums in the different evacuation centers;
- Water tanks were put up in the evacuation centers and six fire trucks provided water rations to families in the different evacuation centers;
- The Department of Health (DOH) provided immunization to 1,648 children inside the evacuation centers; and
- The DOH/RHU medical team for emergency purposes was operationalized to serve the evacuees on a 24-hour basis.

Soliman said she has prepared a detailed report on the relief and rehabilitation work in Mindanao for presentation to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during the Cabinet Meeting Tuesday (March 4).

Spanish Queen arriving tomorrow for visit

Queen Sofia of Spain will arrive tomorrow night (March 4) for a two-day private trip to the country which will see her visit Spanish development aid projects and inaugurate the Spanish overseas cultural program exhibit at the National Museum.

She will be accompanied in her trip by Spain's state secretary for international cooperation, Miguel Angel Cortes, and other Spanish officials involved in development aid and cultural affairs. Philippine officials will be on hand to meet the Queen and her delegation.

Highlight of the Queen's Manila visit will be the turnover of the third set of funds worth $1.6 million for the Filipinas Eye Center Foundation of the Philippine General Hospital and the groundbreaking of the Jose Rizal Eye Referral Center. A total of $3.2 million has already been donated to the Foundation.

She will also visit the Makabata Foundation or the Center for Education for Street Children of Metro Manila and meet with Spanish development workers in the country.

The Spanish royalty is scheduled to tour Intramuros, the site of future cultural and tourism cooperation projects between Spain and the Philippines. While in Intramuros, she will visit San Agustin church and will have a calesa tour of the Walled City with Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon.

She will later inaugurate the exhibit of the Spanish overseas cultural program at the National Museum.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will host a dinner for the Queen on Wednesday night prior to her departure the following day.

Mrs. Arroyo will be the guest of the Royal family when she makes a state visit to Spain late this month.

The Spanish Queen last visited the country three years ago to similarly oversee Spanish development aid projects. She was also here in 1998 with King Juan Carlos to co-celebrate the Centennial of Philippine independence.

Central Mindanao on path to normalcy

The path to normalcy is now under way in Central Mindanao as displaced residents affected by the armed conflict have returned to their respective homes after staying for a time in various evacuation centers.

Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman said that as of March 2, 2003, twelve (12) evacuation centers in Region X, XII and ARMM have been closed from the original number of 101 during the outbreak of the armed conflict.

To date, a total of 36,160 families or 195,090 persons have been served both inside and outside evacuation centers. The cost of assistance reached P15.1 million of which P12M came from DSWD; P1.35M from the local government units (LGUs); and P1.74M from the combined resources of NGOs and other Gos.

Meanwhile, as the situation in Central Mindanao improves, the DSWD Field Office XII in coordination with the local governments of Central Mindanao, continues to monitor the evacuation centers to fast-track the provision of augmentation assistance and other social services to enable residents to regain normal lives.

Japan gives green light for a projects worth P6-B

The National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) has announced that Japan has agreed to fund three infrastructure projects in the country worth P6.04 billion, with another peace and development project soon to get its nod.

NEDA Director General Romulo Neri said that with the approval of the three projects by Japan, the Philippine government expects some P26.7 billion worth of Japan official development assistance (ODA) loan under the 26th yen loan package (YLP) to be concluded within the 2002 Japanese fiscal year that ends on March 2003.

These projects are the Central Mindanao Road Project, P2.06 billion; Arterial Road Bypass Project Phase 1, P3.45 billion; and the Subic Bay Freeport Environmental Management Project Phase 2, P538 million.

A fourth project, the Social Fund for Peace and Development Project for the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) worth P1.26 billion is now in its final stage of negotiation, Neri said.

In addition, Neri said, four projects worth P19.4 billion are up for further discussions between the Philippine and Japanese governments.

Three out of the four projects are included under the highly concessional Special Term for Economic Partnership (STEP) financing scheme of the 26th YLP.

These include the Pasig-Marikina River Channel Improvement Project, P4.46 billion; Philippine Ports Development Project, P5.1 billion; and the Mindanao Container (Bulk Cargo) Terminal Phase II, P2.94 billion.

The fourth project, the Agno River Integrated Irrigation Project worth P6.89 billion, is proposed to be financed under the regular soft loan financing scheme, also under the 26th YLP, Neri said.

RP's war on terror antedates 9/11 attacks in U.S.

Like a Pandora's box that opened intriguing revelations, the remains of the fire that gutted a sixth floor apartment in the Josefa Building on President Quirino Avenue some eight years ago could have been the trigger that actually pushed the Philippines into the global war on terrorism, way ahead of the events leading to the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks on the World Trade Center.

What police found at 3 a.m. on Jan. 7, 1995 in the one-bedroom flat that was later learned to be a cell occupied by Islamic militants out to kill Pope John Paul II during his visit here were not the remains of a typical kitchen fire, according to the book The Age of Sacred Terror by Daniel Benjamin and Steven Simon.

There, in the kitchen, the police found a large cauldron by the sink and an assortment of bottles and jugs while in the bedroom was a table covered with an assortment of bibles, crucifixes, vestments, pictures of the Holy Father and Casio timers, including wristwatches with wires attached to them and a soldering iron.

The whole place, police learned, was a typical bomb factory, sitting a few hundred yards away from where the Pope would stay at the Papal Nuncio's Residence along Taft Avenue. They then swept up documents, papers and a laptop computer, summoned the experts to look at the makeshift lab, then called Washington.

A piece of paper with a series of numbers, when finally put together by American counter-terrorism officials, revealed a sequence of airline flights while encrypted files on the laptop showed a broad outline of a terrorist plot called Bojinka, calling for the blowing up of as many as 12 Boeing 747 jumbo jets out of the skies over the Pacific.

For Benjamin and Simon who sifted through a series of terrorist attacks and are now serving as directors for White House's counter-terrorism program, the plan was staggering and the shock was magnified by the revelation that the laptop belonged to Ramzi Yousef who is now serving a life term in a US prison for masterminding the 1993 bombing of the World Trade Center in New York which killed six people and wounded 1,000.

Yousef is a nephew of Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, suspected mastermind of the September 11 attacks now in US custody who is believed to be the architect of another plot, still part of Bojinka, designed to crash a plane packed with explosives into the headquarters of the US Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) in Virginia.

It was not immediately known, however, whether Mohammed, a Kuwaiti who spent time in Manila in 1994-95, was involved in the plot to send a suicide bomber to assassinate the Pope. The plot was foiled by police when the room they were occupying at the Josefa apartments caught fire.

American officials hailed the arrest of Mohammed in Rawalpindi, near Pakistan's capital of Islamabad, last Saturday as the biggest catch so far in the global war on terror. Washington branded Mohammed as one of Osama Bin Laden's most senior lieutenants at Al Qaeda and mastermind of the 9/11 attacks that killed around 3,000 people.

The Philippines, led by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, was among the first members of the world community to respond positively to the US call for a global war on terrorism when Washington linked the Abu Sayyaf, one of four radical groups seeking an Islamic state in the South, to Bin Laden's Al Qaeda.

It was learned that the group dispatched equipment and trainers to the Philippines to work with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front and helped found the Abu Sayyaf which would eventually distinguish itself with its penchant for beheading its victims.

Balikatan

We are not married to the idea of holding the Balikatan 03-1 in Sulu. The search is on for other possible venues for Balikatan 03-1 that would add value to the joint training effort and be of greater benefit to our people.

AMLA

We heard that there was a breakthrough in the meeting between our legislators and the FATF representatives. That is very welcome. The economy of our country is a stake and so is the welfare of our OFWs and the families they help support here.

Al Qaeda

Our intelligence community has long confirmed the presence of extremist cells in the country and their links to Al Qaeda. We are not discounting the possibility that some of Khalid's cohorts are seeking refuge here. We must be aware of the transnational nature of terrorism and the need for allied and global action to fight this threat.

Peace in Mindanao

The decision to end this conflict lies on the hands of the MILF command through simple adherence to joint accords earlier reached with the government. President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has gone farther by approving the draft of a comprehensive proposal which, if accepted by the MILF, will contribute to a just peace in the area.

AIG official cites better business climate in RP

Government moves to provide a healthy business climate for big-ticket domestic and foreign industrial ventures are bearing fruit.

This was stressed in a letter to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo from American International Group (AIG) American General president and chief executive officer Rodney O. Martin, Jr. who cited the President and several Cabinet members for their "support and cooperation" in facilitating the location of the firm's joint venture project in Muntinlupa City.

In his letter, Martin said the President's signing of the proclamation declaring the Madrigal Business Park in Barangay Ayala-Alabang, Muntinlupa City as an Information Technology Zone "further solidified our belief in your government's support."

He also extended his appreciation, on behalf of his colleagues, “for your consideration of our application and continued support.”

The AIG Business Processing Services Inc., a joint venture of AIG American General and Philamlife, has located in the business park.

Martin also lauded Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II, Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo and the staff of the Department of Trade and Industry, the Board of Investments and the Philippine Economic Zone Authority for their help in the selection of the venture’s site.

“We are deeply grateful for this action and the benefits it provides,” Martin said.

He said the company “is operational and processes are already being transitioned to the Philippines.”

He added that over 75 local jobs have been created since October “with many more to follow.”

Gov’t declares Pikit, Buliok Complex as ‘zones of peace’

The government has declared the former conflict areas in Pikit the Buliok Complex in North Cotabato as “zones of peace” where massive development efforts will be undertaken so that the thousands of displaced civilians could return and start rebuilding their lives.

In a joint press conference in Malacañang, Presidential Adviser for Mindanao Jesus Dureza said there is now a convergence of the efforts of all government agencies to attend to the total rehabilitation of the areas that have been the scene of recent fighting between government troops and elements of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

Dureza said that things have already stabilized in the two areas and all efforts are now concentrated on how the evacuees can be brought back to their former places of abode.

The Buliok Complex, part of the huge Liguasan Marsh, has been the sanctuary of the notorious Pentagon kidnap gang and other lawless elements in Central Mindanao. It used to be an armed base of the MILF where its elusive chairman, Hashim Salamat, was reported to be hiding.

Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman reported that the Department of Social Welfare and Development (DSWD) has already spent a total of P15.2 million for relief and rehabilitation efforts in the affected areas, in coordination with local government units (LGUs) and other donors.

Soliman said that of the total amount spent, P12 million came from the DSWD, P1.35 million from LGUs and P1.7 million from non-government organizations (NGOs) and other donors.

According to Soliman, the DSWD has already served a total of 40,163 displaced families, or 214,072 individuals. The DSWD used to operate a total of 101 evacuation centers but 12 of them have already been closed, leaving a total of 89 centers still in operations.

Soliman said that the DSWD is now closely coordinating with other government agencies, the LGUs, the military, and the evacuees themselves so that efforts in bringing back the “zones of peace” into normalcy can be speeded up.

She said the management of the evacuation centers is being done by the evacuees themselves where they are organized into committees. These committees handle the food distribution and sanitation within the centers, Soliman added.

The Department of Health has provided the medical services for the evacuees while the 54th Engineering Brigade of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) constructed 60 compartments complete with toilet bowls and drums for water, Soliman said.

National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) Lead Convenor Teresita Deles said that the government is now determined not just to work for relief but for the overall rehabilitation of those affected by the fighting.

“It is important that this time around in these zones of peace we move into the long-term development of the areas so that hopefully, we will now be able to finally address the roots of the conflict,” Deles said.

According to Deles, what the evacuees immediately need right now are houses and means of livelihood to start a new life.

She said that it is now a season for plowing and planting in the Liguasan Marsh and the government would assist the evacuees in their agricultural activities.

Deles said that the National Disaster Coordinating Council (NDCC) has already allocated P3.5 million for the “food or cash for work” scheme. This would mean that the evacuees would already be paid everyday as they work in their farms so that they do not have to wait for the harvests, she added.

Earlier, the President had released the initial amount of P5 million as the national government’s share in the implementation of the development plan for Pikit and Buliok Complex as presented by North Cotabato Governor Emmanuel Pinol.

Deles said that the President has also released another P1 million from the Presidential Social Fund for the establishment of a training center in the area.

GMA orders AFP, PNP to secure power transmission lines in Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) to coordinate with the Philippine National Police (PNP) and the local government units (LGUs) to ensure power lines and facilities in Mindanao are secured.

In a joint press briefing in Malacañang, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes said that the President’s order was aimed at preventing the recurrence of blackouts in Mindanao.

The presidential order was issued in the wake of the toppling of transmission towers in some areas in Mindanao by elements of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

“We would like to assure everybody that the armed forces, the police, and local officials will work closely towards this objective,” Reyes said.

In the same briefing, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez said the National Transmission Corp. (TRANSCO), of which he is the vice chairman, is determined to ensure that their transmission lines would be protected in cooperation with the AFP and the PNP and the local officials.

“We abhor this deliberate attempt at destroying our transmission lines because it affects the lives of 18-million innocent residents in Mindanao and disrupts business,” Perez said.

Eastern Petroleum, Pasang Masda ink pact on filling stations, discounted gasoline

Energy Secretary Vicente Perez today announced that Eastern Petroleum Corporation has signed a supply agreement with Pasang Masda, a national association of jeepney drivers, to put up filling stations at terminals in Mandaluyong and in Pantranco, Quezon City.

The Pantranco filling station will be opened on March 11.

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Perez said jeepney drivers could avail themselves of a 60-centavo per liter discount against prevailing market prices in the filling stations.

Perez said this was the first concrete free market initiative between an oil player and the transport group that aimed to help mitigate world oil price increases brought by tensions in the Middle East.

He said officials of the Department of Energy (DOE) and the Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board witnessed the signing of the agreement Monday.

“We hope that other gasoline players will follow the lead of Eastern Petroleum in providing the special discount to the public transport group,” he added.

Perez said the DOE had identified five major jeepney routes in Metro Manila and the major gasoline stations located along the routes, hoping that the station operators could also give discounts to jeepney drivers.

He said they are encouraging agreements on volume discounts between oil players and transport groups in Makati, Malabon, Novaliches and other areas.

“It is a power of choice as to where (the drivers) buy their gasoline from,” he said, but adding that jeepney drivers could use their big number to buy collectively and get volume discounts.

“This is our way of mitigating oil price increases,” he said, pointing out that the oil price increase was inevitable.

“We cannot stop it, we can only try to mitigate it through initiatives such as this,” he said.

Besides continuing dialogues with the transport sector, Perez said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has instructed the DOE to come up with other measures to avert public transport rate increases and avoid its rippling effect on labor wages and the prices of prime goods.

Other proposed oil price mitigation initiatives include the implementation of efficient traffic control, a rollback on toll fees at superhighways, the suspension of the import duty on petroleum products and specific tax exemptions.

Perez reiterated that the country has 70 days inventory as of the end of February, with a 43-day in-country inventory to last until mid-April 2003.

“With additional 11 million barrels loading this month, equivalent to 36 days, the total inventory will last up to mid-May,” Perez said.

Another 7 million barrels equivalent to 23 days have been tabled for April to extend the petroleum inventory beyond the first week of July.

DOJ Ladies' Circle homes to aid of women prisoners

Prisoners at the Correctional Institution for Women (CIW) are having their day out of court.

For them, serving terms will no longer be as punitive as it appears as they engage in a livelihood program that will earn for them hard cash while affording them a more productive role inside their rehabilitation home.

The Department of Justice (DOJ) Ladies' Circle and the CIW have recently signed a memorandum of agreement for the implementation of a livelihood program.

The agreement provides assistance to the women prisoners in the production of bed sheets, pillows and pillowcases, among other things.

Already, the DOJ Ladies' Circle has turned over to the CIW 12 sewing machines with motors, 900 pieces of bed sheets, 450 pieces of mats, 83 dozens of face towels, 400 kilos of open fiber pillows, 120 yards of cloth for hospital uniforms, 960 yards for pillows, pillowcases and rolls of threads.

The DOJ Ladies' Circle noted that the program would give the beneficiaries a source of income, enable them to spend productive hours while in prison, and prepare them for their eventual reintegration into society's mainstream.

The circle is mandated to undertake and promote social welfare programs and activities for the less privileged members of the community particularly prisoners in national penitentiaries.

The members of the DOJ Ladies' Circle include undersecretaries, wives of undersecretaries, assistant secretaries, division chiefs, heads and assistant heads of bureaus, commissions, administrations and offices under the DOJ.

Gov't assures safety of evacuees when they return to homes in former conflict areas

Defense officials today assured the safety of displaced families in Pikit and the Buliok Complex in North Cotabato when they return to their former homes now that the former conflict areas are being declared by the government as a "zone of peace."

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes said that the declaration of a "zone of peace" is a step that the government has taken to facilitate and encourage the evacuees to return to their former homes and live normal lives.

"Of course, we will secure them and we will try, as much as possible, to let them live their normal lives," Reyes said.

Reyes, however, said that there is no airtight guarantee that the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) as well as other lawless elements would not harass them.

But Reyes said that the military and the police will go after these lawless elements if they will harass or harm the residents.

In the same briefing, Gen. Dionisio Santiago, chief of staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP), said that when an area is declared a zone of peace, the military would move out from the population centers and will be just in the periphery.

Santiago said the police and the military will make sure that criminal elements would not enter the zone to ensure the security of the returning evacuees.

In case there will be criminal activities inside the populated areas, the police and the military will have to go there and make sure that the perpetrators of these criminal acts would be apprehended and prosecuted.

"That is as simple as that. We will sort of box the area. And we will just be in the periphery," Santiago said.

Presidential Adviser for Mindanao Jesus Dureza said that the cooperation of the MILF in the setting up these zones of peace in Mindanao would be most welcomed.

“The government is determined to take the initiative in pushing for this because we feel that this is the right thing to do for the people in the affected areas,” Dureza said.

Dureza, who is also the chairman of the government panel in the peace talks with the MILF, said that the government has taken these efforts to preserve the gains of the peace and to put back on track again the peace process that has been disrupted by the recent fighting in Central Mindanao.

The President strongly condemns the Davao bombing as a brazen act of terrorism, which will not go unpunished. She’s calling an emergency meeting of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security at 7 p.m. tonight.

Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo

The Davao City bombing early this evening is a brazen act of terrorism that will not go unpunished. The killing is a cowardly crime not only against the Filipino people but against humanity itself. I assure you justice will be done.

I will mobilize the full powers of the Presidency to identify and capture not only the inhuman perpetrators of this crime but their co-conspirators as well.

The Philippine National Police has responded quickly to the bombing, and I have been informed that their men have already several men in custody being interrogated for committing these murders

I have ordered the PNP and the AFP to set up a joint command center in Davao City that would undertake a massive operation to hunt down the bombers and their accomplices. I have ordered the PNP to expand their security perimeters around critical and heavily-populated centers, and the AFP to clear suspected lairs of terrorists around Davao City.

I am directing DILG Secretary Joey Lina and Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes to proceed immediately to Davao City to make sure on the ground that my orders are implemented. I am directing Secretary Lina to make sure that local government units are mobilized in preventing future such acts of brazen terrorism. I have appointed Davao City Mayor Rudy Duterte as crisis manager to oversee operations against the terrorists responsible for the bombing and to ensure the security of Davao City.

I extend my sincerest condolences to the loved ones and relatives of the Davao victims of such a heinous crime. I am vowing to you: Justice will be done.

Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo

The decision of the government of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region (HK-SAR) to slash the minimum wage for foreign domestic workers in the territory is unfair and unjust.

On the very night that this new policy was announced, the Philippine government, through our Consulate General in Hong Kong, immediately moved for the reconsideration and the deferment of its implementation.

It will be recalled that I sent HK-SAR Chief Executive Tung Chee Hwa my personal appeal on this matter last year yet. The DFA and DOLE in the persons of no less than Secretaries Blas Ople and Patricia Sto. Tomas, assiduously pleaded our case with the Hong Kong government. Even Senate President Franklin Drilon and Speaker Jose de Venecia gallantly threw the weight of their respective offices behind this cause.

Today, I have directed the POEA Board to temporarily suspend the processing of all contracts for domestic helpers in Hong Kong. I have also instructed the Secretary of Labor to review existing policies on the deployment of Filipino domestic helpers in other problems areas around the world.

I have likewise ordered the DFA to forge a coalition with other labor source countries in order to protest unfair levies or wage cut.

Even the Hong Kong Equal Employment Opportunities Commission has ruled that a levy imposed on foreign domestic helpers discriminates against those workers.

Accordingly, the Philippine government fully supports our workers in Hong Kong who are availing themselves of available mechanisms to contest the levy or wage cut even as government itself is exploring all means possible in calling upon the sense of fair play of the Hong Kong SAR, for it to reconsider the implementation of his discriminatory policy.

Davao Blasts

We call on the public to stay calm. We must show these terrorists that we cannot be cowed into fear. The government is on top of the situation. All concerned government agencies have been deployed to get the culprits and to thwart similar incidents anywhere in the country. Mayor Duterte has been designated crisis manager and the people of Davao City can count on the full backing of the national government in resolving this crisis.

The enemy has hurled its worst challenge. We shall respond resolutely and comprehensively. Commercial traffic in the Davao airport shall be restored immediately. Normalcy must be pursued even as we share condolences over the departed and care for the wounded.

We call upon the Filipino people to wage a total war against terrorism. We call on the public to raise its level of awareness and vigilance.

AMLA

We are grateful that agreement has been reached on the AMLA. Let us not dwell anymore on recrimination or blame tossing.

Zone of Peace

Peace means everything to the residents of this war-torn town. We hope this will be the start of a new life in the community and the rest of Mindanao.

SEAMEO's 38th Council Conference opens today at Shangri-la Plaza Hotel

The Southeast Asian Ministers of Education Organization (SEAMEO) opened its 38th Council Conference at the Shangri-la Plaza Hotel in Makati City today hoping to achieve a more viable educational policy for member countries, including the Philippines.

Ten education ministers and 140 delegates from Southeast Asia and six associate member-states of SEAMEO are attending the three-day meeting which will introduce the policy forum on the theme, "Engaging Communities in Delivering Quality Education."

Discussions aimed at introducing reforms that each member country could utilize to alleviate the education system in their respective countries will be led by Dr. Pratima Kale, president of the International Institute of Rural Reconstruction (IRR).

The Department of Education (DepEd) said, however, that no agreement will be made after the forum which is intended to just get the consensus and ideas from the ministers that will guide the activities of SEAMEO next year, particularly in the field of engaging communities in education.

Education Secretary Dr. Edilberto de Jesus said the Philippine education sector is taking the initiative in developing the country's capability to meet the future needs of learning in line with SEAMEO's goals of empowering regional understanding and cooperation in education, science and culture.

"This translates into continuously improving education quality even as we carry on with expanding access to education services through formal and non-formal streams," de Jesus said.

With the Philippine basic education sector servicing over 18.6 million schoolchildren enrolled in elementary and secondary schools throughout the country, de Jesus further stressed that "preparing our students for productive citizenship is a major challenge and demands every bit of effort."

Established 30 years ago as an organization to meet the needs of education ministers as purveyors of a complete and meaningful education for its citizens, SEAMEO serves to spur and sustain synergy in confronting education issues throughout the region.

Its member countries include Brunei Darussalam, Cambodia, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar, Singapore, Thailand, Vietnam and the Philippines. The associate member states are Australia, Canada, France, Germany, The Netherlands and New Zealand.

Since the Philippines joined the organization in 1968, it has witnessed the growing tangible presence of SEAMEO through its centers such as INNOTECH, the Regional Tropical Medicine and Public Health Network (TROPMED) and the Regional Center for Graduate Study and Research in Agriculture (SEARCA).

GMA assures justice for victims of Davao airport blast

DAVAO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the families of Tuesday afternoon’s bomb blast victims at the international airport here that the perpetrators of the cowardly crime would be made to account for their terrorist act.

The President said the government would do everything to get those responsible for the powerful airport bomb explosion that claimed at least 21 lives and scores injured.

Citing reports, she said several suspects have been arrested and detained.

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, who arrived with the President, said five persons, said to belong to the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), were taken in for questioning.

The President arrived here at about 10:40 a.m. and immediately inspected the bombing site, the Davao City International Airport’s public waiting area just outside the passenger terminal.

At the site, she lit and planted a candle and said a silent prayer for those killed and wounded in the bomb blast, which she earlier said was “a brazen act of terrorism that will not go unpunished.”

From the airport where normal operations have resumed, the President preceeded to the Davao Medical Center (DMC) where most of the bombing victims were brought.

At the DMC, about three kilometers from the airport, she visited the wounded and conferred with them.

She also dropped by the hospital chapel and condoled with the families of those killed in the bombing.

The President reiterated to them her vow to mobilize the full powers of her office to identify and capture the perpetrators and their co-conspirators in the airport blast.

“I extend my sincerest condolences to the loved ones and relatives of the Davao victims of such a heinous crime. I am vowing to you: Justice will be done,” she said.

From the hospital, the President returned to the airport, where she took off for a visit to evacuation centers in Pikit, Cotabato.

Pikit had been the site of a military offensive to flush out criminals hiding in Liguasan Marsh, also known as a lair of the MILF.

Meanwhile, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye today called on the public to stay calm amid the Mindanao bombings.

“We must show these terrorists that we cannot be cowed into fear,” Bunye said in a statement.

He said the government was on top of the situation as concerned government agencies “have been deployed to get the culprits and thwart similar incidents anywhere in the country.”

“The enemy has hurled its worst challenge. We shall respond resolutely and comprehensively,” he added.

Bunye said normalcy must be pursued even as “we share condolences over the departed and care for the wounded.”

He enjoined the people to wage a total war against terrorism and to raise the public’s level of awareness and vigilance against threats to national security and development.

DOH has enough medicines for victims in twin blasts in Davao City and Tagum City

The Department of Health (DOH) today assured the victims and relatives of the twin bombings in Davao City and Tagum City that there are sufficient medical, surgical and other emergency supplies in government hospitals to cope with their medical needs.

Health Secretary Manuel M. Dayrit said that the Davao Medical Center (DMC), where most of the victims were brought, has abundant stocks of medicines.

“They (DMC) has enough resources,” Dayrit said, even as the DOH central office in Manila has readied more medical supplies for immediate shipment to Davao City.

Dr. Gerardo Cunanan, DMC director, said that of the initial patients rushed to the hospital 17 were dead on arrival.

Of the 39 patients brought to the DMC four more died Wednesday night while undergoing treatment.

Cunanan said that 20 of the patients, who had less serious injuries, were sent home after treatment.

The bombing victims in Tagum City were brought to the Davao Regional Hospital in the city. One died in the blast in Tagum City.

GMA welcomes renewed U.S. aid in fight vs. terrorism

DAVAO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she welcomes the assistance being offered by United States President George W. Bush in the Philippine government’s all-out fight against terrorists.

In a press conference at the Davao City International Airport here, President Macapagal-Arroyo said that “as a matter of policy, I just draw the line at ground combat, where I want our soldiers to do the fighting, and not their soldiers.”

“We have drawn the line there from the very beginning,” she said, recalling the 2001 Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit when she first spoke to President Bush about the war against terrorism.

Earlier, a statement from Washington quoted President Bush as condemning the Tuesday bomb attack that killed at least 21 people and wounded scores at the airport waiting area here.

The terrorist Abu Sayyaf Group claimed responsibility for the bombing.

White House spokesman Ari Fleischer today said President Bush has condemned the wanton terrorist act and has pledged cooperation and assistance to ensure that those responsible are brought to justice.

Fleischer said the blast underscores the seriousness of the terrorist threat in Mindanao.

“The president knows that we will continue to work closely with President Arroyo to assist her and her government’s campaign to defeat the terrorists, and we will continue to do so,” he added.

GMA inspects relief, rehab area in Cotabato

COTABATO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today flew to the Buliok Complex in Pikit, North Cotabato to inspect the ongoing relief and rehabilitation in the area following the skirmishes between the military and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) that displaced over 100,000 evacuees.

The Chief Executive, accompanied by some members of her Cabinet, arrived here this afternoon after her visit to Davao City where she personally commiserated with the victims of the bomb explosion Tuesday afternoon at the passenger terminal of the Davao City Airport.

Some P5 million worth of funds would be poured for the conversion and development of the Buliok Complex in Pikit into a zone of peace and development.

The allocation came about after the President ordered the transformation of the former MILF stronghold into a peaceful, productive and bustling agricultural community.

North Cotabato Governor Emmanuel Pinol, who was with the President during her visit, said the P5 million would be coursed through the Social, Economic Enhancement and Development Program in Pikit (SEED-Pikit).

Pinol pointed out that the money would specifically be used for the procurement of farm inputs and equipment for the farmers in the area which, he said, would be converted into corn and banana plantations under the SEED-Pikit project.

The Cotabato provincial government has identified 3,500 farmers, most of them relatives of MILF fighters, to work on the farmlands.

Under the SEED-Pikit scheme, both local government and provincial government will procure hybrid seeds to be distributed by the Department of Agriculture to farmer beneficiaries.

Pinol stressed that the Buliok Complex will become a model farming community in the province of Cotabato.

“It will become a model farming community in Cotabato province and the rebels would realize it would be better to be armed with plows and agricultural equipment than carrying firearms,” he said.

Under the SEED-Pikit program, various cornfield and banana plantations will be merged into integrated production areas where all the farmers will work together for a take-home pay of P100 per day. Other hand, the Agriculture Department will provide the technical assistance.

Gov't still willing to extend the 'hand of peace' to those who will renounce violence — GMA

DAVAO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that despite Tuesday's deadly bombing incident in this city, the government would continue to extend the “hand of peace” to those who will renounce violence.

But in a press conference here after she visited the bombing site at the Davao International Airport and commiserated with the victims and their relatives, the President also vowed to use the full force of the law in going after the perpetrators and to those who will continue to resort to violence in furthering their goals.

“There is always the hand of peace for those who renounce violence but for those who will continue to use violence as a means to carry out their messages, then there is also the long arm of the law,” the President said.

The President also called on Mindanaons not to be distracted by the tragic incident but to continue working for the economic growth of Mindanao.

“What we have to do is to really move on. This is the message that I would like to give to everyone. These are unfortunate and tragic incidents. But these should not deter us from proceeding and pushing for the development of Mindanao,” the President said.

In the same press conference, the President also reiterated her position that any assistance from the United States in the fight against terrorism in the Philippines should be in the form of equipment, training, surveillance and civic action work.

“As a matter of policy, there is only one parameter. In the ground combat, I want our soldiers to do the fighting, and not theirs,” the President stressed.

GMA hosts a dinner tonight for visiting Queen Sofia of Spain

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will host a dinner tonight for visiting Queen Sofia of Spain at the Metropolitan Museum at the Bangko Sentral Complex, along Roxas Boulevard, capping the Queen’s two-day private visit to Manila.

Queen Sofia, who arrived yesterday, had a hectic schedule the whole day today where she inaugurated development and charitable projects funded by the Spanish government. She will leave tomorrow.

The highlight of the Queen’s visit was the turnover of the third set of funds worth $1.6 million for the Filipinas Eye Center Foundation of the Philippine General Hospital and the groundbreaking of the Jose Rizal Eye Referral Center.

The Spanish government has already donated a total of $3.2 million to the foundation.

The Queen also visited the Makabata Foundation or the Center for Education for Street Children of Metro Manila and met with Spanish development workers in the country.

The Spanish Queen also toured Intramuros, where she pledged to support future cultural and tourism projects to be jointly undertaken by the Spanish and Philippine governments.

While in Intramuros, the Queen visited the San Agustin Church accompanied by Tourism Secretary Richard Gordon.

Later in the day, the Queen inaugurated the exhibit of the Spanish overseas cultural program at the National Museum.

The Queen was accompanied in her trip by Spain’s state secretary for international cooperation, Miguel Angel Cortes, and other Spanish officials involved in development aid and cultural affairs.

Mrs. Arroyo will be the guest of the Royal family when she makes a state visit to Spain late this month.

The Spanish Queen last visited the country three years ago to similarly oversee Spanish development aid projects. She was also here in 1998 with King Juan Carlos to co-celebrate the Centennial of Philippine independence.

MIMAROPA governors appeal to GMA to hold Balikatan in Occidental Mindoro

The governors of the two Mindoro provinces, Marinduque, Romblon and Palawan (MIMAROPA) have appealed to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to hold the "Balikatan" exercises in the MIMAROPA region to be hosted by the province of Occidental Mindoro.

In a resolution dated March 5, 2003, the MIMAROPA governors said the holding of the Balikatan exercises in their region would minimize if not totally eradicate the peace and order problem in the area and reduce the threats and dangers posted by unwanted groups to the region and to the country as whole.

The resolution was signed by Governors Eleandro Jesus Madrona of Romblon, Bartolome Marasigan of Oriental Mindoro, Jose Villarosa of Occidental Mindoro, Carmencita Reyes of Marinduque and Joel Reyes of Palawan.

The five governors pointed out that the gains in the exercise of the Balikatan in Mindoro could be replicated and utilized in the other provinces in the Southern Tagalog region experiencing the same peace and order problem and this would ultimately impact on the overall pursuit of lasting peace and development.

"The island of Mindoro, particularly Occidental Mindoro, has been the haven of insurgents and their continued presence in the province does not only pose danger to the people but also adversely affects their socio-economic activities," the resolution said.

According to the governors, the Balikatan exercise was successfully undertaken in Basilan and seen to have a notable impact not only on the peace and order situation but also on the economic activities in area.

Davao Bombing

The military and police have been ordered to integrate all intelligence and investigative findings so that our people can be fully apprised of the situation. We are happy to report that the PNP has accepted the offer of Australia and the US FBI to provide forensic assistance to local probers.

Diplomatic initiatives must reinforce our efforts. We are working closely with the Islamic countries to isolate all terrorist cells in Mindanao and deprive them of legitimacy or clandestine foreign support. For our legislators, it is time to refocus their sights on a tough anti-terrorism law.

AMLA

Our lawmakers did a very good job. It is a credit to the leadership of both Senate President Franklin Drilon and Speaker Jose de Venecia. The President will sign the enrolled bill incorporating the amendments at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

But the job doesn't stop there. We must now refocus on vital transnational concerns that affect our national interest foremost of which are the growing terrorism and a possible conflict in the Middle East.

The President feels it is time to work doubly hard to reinforce our weakened economy. She urges our legislators to move on to other priorities in our legislative agenda that will improve our economic productivity and shore up investment.

Freeze on Processing of OFW Application for HK

The President's order is a form of diplomatic protest. She represents the people, and the people cannot stand aside while Filipinos are being discriminated upon or treated unfairly in a foreign country. Our domestic workers are the best in the world. We deserve respect and dignified treatment.

Economy

Our economy is being temporarily battered by Middle East tension and the series of bombings in Mindanao. The President is hoping for an early resolution of the standoff in Iraq while we consolidate all efforts to stabilize the peace and order situation in Mindanao. The President feels that this is just a temporary setback. The country's economic fundamentals are sound. When temporary instabilities retreat, we will be back on the road to a quick recovery.

IMF says RP economic situation comfortable

"The situation in the Philippines is pretty comfortable," according to the International Monetary Fund.

David Burton, IMF director for Asia-Pacific, told a news conference in Singapore yesterday that the IMF has been encouraged by the Philippines' recent robust economic performance.

The IMF official told members of the Foreign Correspondents Association of Singapore and the Singapore Press Club that he was also encouraged by recent signs of improving tax revenues in the Philippines.

Reviewing the entire region, Burton said most Asian economies were well placed to ride out any turbulence caused by a global economic slowdown.

"The immediate outlook is for continued solid growth in the Asian region, although sizeable downside risks related to uncertainties about the strength of the global recovery and to Iraq exist," the IMF official said.

Burton added, however, that Asian governments must be prepared to ease monetary and fiscal policies if a potential war in Iraq does more damage to the global economy than expected.

The Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU) also said the Asia-Pacific region offers the greatest opportunities for growth in the next three years.

The EIU said that in a survey of the world's top corporate executives, 66 percent chose the region as offering the biggest growth prospects for their businesses, followed by Eastern Europe, which was chosen by 40 percent.

The Middle East was voted as the region posing the biggest risks to business in the next three years.

The survey, titled CEO Agenda, was carried out in the last three months of 2002 and covered 681 chief executives, board chairmen, chief financial officers and regional managers.

Palace renews commitment to work for lasting peace in Mindanao

Malacañang today renewed its commitment to work for a lasting peace in Mindanao as it appealed to unscrupulous groups to stop resorting to black propaganda and dirty tactics in furthering their evil designs.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye earlier disowned a supposed memorandum of instruction from President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordering the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) to capture Hashim Salamat dead or alive.

Bunye categorically denied that the document came from the Palace, adding that it could be the handiwork of people who want to sabotage government efforts in reviving talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

“We’d like to state that this document is spurious. It is not true. This document is fake and it’s been circulated probably to agitate the Muslim population in Mindanao,” Bunye said in his regular press briefing.

Bunye said it is very difficult to pinpoint the source of these documents. “Obviously it emanated from a group that doesn’t want peace between MILF and the government,” Bunye said.

The spokesman said Presidential Assistant on Mindanao Jesus Dureza presented the fake document, which has been widely circulated in the region, during last week’s meeting in Malacañang of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COCIS).

“We don’t know and we don’t want to point any fingers at any particular group. It’s enough that we belie this statement, that we correct the impression that this emanated from Malacañang,” Bunye said.

The false memo, dated February 11, orders the AFP to undertake a so-called Operation Greenbase, whereby the Armed Forces must also “capture and occupy” simultaneously within one week the Buliok Complex fronting the Liguasan Marsh area comprising Kabalsalan Island Complex, Rajamuda Complex and Buliok Complex where Hashim Salamat’s headquarters or Islamic Center is located.

The so-called memo from the President further orders the AFP to serve the warrants of arrest against Salamat, Samier Hashim, Al Haj Murad and Eid Kabalu by various courts two years ago.

“The AFP must bear in mind that the high-value target of the plan is to capture Salamat Hashim dead or alive,” the fake memo said.

GMA names new MTRCB chair, vice chair, executive director, board member

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo appointed today former board member Ma. Consoliza P. Laguardia as the new chairman of the Movie and Television Review and Classification Board (MTRCB) replacing Mari-Len Y. Dinglasan for a term expiring Sept. 30 this year.

Mrs. Arroyo also appointed a new vice chairman, executive director and board member.

Named to replace June Keithley-Castro as vice chair was Jacqueline Suzanne Aquino-Gavino for a term also expiring on Sept. 30.

Appointed executive director was Editha G. Demetria vice Gabriel Ma. J. Lopez while Orlando S. Olgado was named member to fill up the slot vacated by Laguardia at the board.

Demetria and Olgado will likewise serve the unexpired terms of their predecessors.

Laguardia, whose duty as board member from March 2001 to March 2002 was to review and classify films, is a Commerce graduate, major in economics, from the College of the Holy Spirit in 1981.

She once served as supervisor in the billing division of Aboitiz-One (Air) and administrative assistant/executive secretary to the administrator of the Arcadian Retirement Hotel in California.

Prior to these, she served the Philippine National Bank in various capacities from 1983 to 1999.

Her tour of duty in the bank included stints as senior trader, senior management specialist, assistant trader, and EDP teller.

GMA okays creation of 'Maralitang Tagamasid' to help railway youths get jobs, be productive

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today approved the creation of Maralitang Tagamasid, a group of social workers who will help out-of-school youth living along railways find jobs and eventually lead productive and socially relevant lives.

The President issued her approval during a meeting with several urban poor groups at the State Dining Room in Malacanang. Among those the President met were urban poor groups from Caloocan, Taguig, Navotas, Payatas and Tala Leprosarium.

The proposal to set up a group to transform indolent youths into hardworking citizens was made by Secretary Michael Defensor, chairman of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council.

“Marami kasing tigas-ulo na kailangan magkaroon ng trabaho (there are many idle youths who should be working instead of just looking bored),” Defensor said.

Defensor also reported to the President that the relocation and resettlement programs of the government are now under way for those living along the railways.

He noted that the program beneficiaries along the North Railway have been relocated to medium-rise resettlement areas in Camarin in Caloocan City, while those along the South Railway have been offered resettlement areas in Tanay, Batangas and Montalban, Rizal.

Aside from Defensor, among the officials who attended the meeting were National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) lead convenor Teresita Quintos-Deles and Metro Manila Development Authority and Public Works Secretary Bayani Fernando and Commission on the Urban Poor Chairman Percy Chavez.

Meanwhile, the President ordered the immediate sale of 12 hectares of idle government land to long-time settlers in Taguig.

The President issued the order after being informed that the government is not inclined to sell its land because it is considered prime property with P30,000 per square meter. This, despite an earlier law declaring the long-time residents as priority beneficiaries.

“What’s 12 hectares compared to 120 hectares. The issue here is socialized housing...I am telling you, sell it to them,” the President said.

GMA asks beneficiaries of housing programs to report abusive, illegal occupants

The government today asked rightful state housing beneficiaries to immediately report to proper authorities abusive occupants and squatter syndicates who illegally occupy lands set for presidential proclamation.

The appeal was made by government officials, led by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, during a meeting with urban poor groups at the State Dining Room in Malacañang.

At the same time, the President approved the appointment of Percy Chavez, the chairman of the Commission on the Urban Poor, as the head of the Presidential Task Force Payatas. The task force has been assigned the task of identifying the proper government land recipients in the Payatas area.

The task force will also provide rightful beneficiaries with an ad-interim relocation site while the Supreme Court is tackling the land title dispute in the said area.

Secretary Michael Defensor, chairman of the Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council, who also attended the meeting, noted the problems that arise in an area set for presidential proclamation.

“Once a presidential proclamation is announced, the number of residents always increase, even multiply,” Defensor said. “Nilulusob ng mga tao (People come in droves),” he added.

“We are asking your cooperation and vigilance to watch over the property because it is your land that is getting smaller because of these illegal occupants,” Defensor said.

Defensor noted the case of long-time settlers in Sitio Masagana in Bicutan, Taguig who are entitled to their land but have to contend now with occupants who only settled in the area after 1992, the cut-off year set by the government.

GMA lauds members of Congress for passage of AMLA amendments

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the members of the two houses of Congress for their wisdom, patience, perseverance and patriotic sense of duty in finally approving vital amendments to the Anti-Money Laundering Act (AMLA).

In her remarks at the signing of Republic Act No. 9194, which is an amendment to Republic Act 9160, the President said that what Congress has done was to balance the country's legal, psychological, cultural and political biases with the need to comply with the rules of the international community.

"Many of our legislators refer to this piece of legislation as probably one of the most difficult we have had to pass," the President said.

She said that the debates, even the blame-tossing that attended the passage of the AMLA amendments, were fierce and as emotional as any discussion on a national issue could get.

The President said she understood the anxiety of some of our leaders who feared that some of the country's fundamental democratic precepts were being threatened by international prescriptions on anti-money laundering.

But the President said she also realized the resolute convergence of will, resources and laws among the civilized nations in combating domestic and transnational criminality.

The President said that with the enactment of RA No. 9194, the nation had a collective sigh of relief, obviously referring to the passionate debate between the proponents and oppositionists to the proposed changes in AMLA.

"The anti-money laundering legislation is about reform and the strengthening of democracy. And getting hard earned money seamlessly into the hands of Filipino families at home," the President said.

According to the President, the issue of anti-money laundering was a potent one. But the Philippines had to take control of its destiny and do the right thing, she added.

"The issue here is one of progress, modernization, the protection of our overseas Filipino workers and their families. In summary, the anti-money laundering legislation is central to reform," the President said.

With the amended AMLA, the President said, the country can now move closer to a banking regime that will inspire greater confidence, trustworthiness and reliability and, therefore, greater economic activity, investment and resiliency.

“In this sense, we shouldn’t consider the passage of AMLA II, if I might call it, as a passive and begrudging compliance of the rules of the global financial system, but rather as an active pursuit of our national interest,” the President said.

Among those who attended the signing ceremony from the Senate were Senate President Franklin Drilon; Sen. Ramon Magsaysay, Jr., principal author and chairman of the Senate committee on banks, financial institutions and currencies; Sen. Edgardo Angara, also a principal author and chairman of the Senate committee on constitutional amendments; Sen. Panfilo Lacson, another principal author; Sen. Ralph Recto, chairman of the Senate committee on ways and means; and Sen. Robert Jaworski.

The House contingent, headed by Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., included Deputy Speaker Raul Gonzales; House Majority Leader Neptali Gonzales III; House Deputy Majority Leader Francis Escudero; Congressman Jaime Lopez, chairman of the House committee on banks and financial intermediaries, and principal author in the House version; and Makati Congressman Teodoro Locsin.

Also present at the signing rites were Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho, Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas Gov. Rafael Buenaventura, and representatives from the business community, insurance sector, financing and investment sector, and OFWs.

GMA orders new tack in anti-terror war

With the advent of a new, bolder form of terrorism, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called for a paradigm shift in the way the country conceptualizes and approaches the problem, saying it is not insurmountable.

Saying that national government measures are no longer sufficient, she asked the cooperation and vigilance of the entire community and all local government units to keep the country safe for both citizens and tourists.

In her speech during the signing into law of the amendments to the Anti-Money Laundering Act (AMLA), the President issued immediate and specific measures for the entire community and all local government units to address the problem of terrorism by formulating and undertaking both preventive and remedial measures: to prepare, prevent, mitigate and rehabilitate.

She directed the Department of the Interior and Local Governments, the Armed Forces of the Philippines, the Philippine National Police and the Department of Tourism to formulate security measures to monitor security threats and prevent terrorist attacks.

She asked all government units, down to the barangay level to organize and conduct comprehensive neighborhood watches to monitor suspicious persons, actions and materials.

Mrs. Arroyo also directed the PNP to organize and deploy nationwide community-based reaction units and, in partnership with LGUs, enhance communication and coordination in order to effectively mobilize and fully utilize all community resources.

Hand in hand with these directives, the President asked the concerned government units to institute an effective reward system and extend security vigilance not just to major, but all public places.

In her speech, President Arroyo cited Davao’s effective local leadership and indispensable community cooperation in the face of the most recent terrorist attack that saw a number of innocent civilians killed in the bombing that rocked the Davao international airport.

“Davao’s example of overcoming its past problems is a model to meet the bolder face of terrorism — an active local government unit, a vigilant citizenry, and cooperation and coordination between the local government unit and the local community,” the President said.

GMA calls on Congress to pass more anti-poverty, anti-terrorism laws

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on members of the two houses of Congress to pass the anti-terrorism act, the judicial reform bill and the legislation on the use of farmlands as collateral.

The President issued her appeal before she signed Republic Act (RA) 9194, also known as an act amending RA 9160 or the Anti-Money Laundering Act (AMLA) of 2001.

In a speech during simple signing rites at Malacañang's Ceremonial Hall this morning, the President lauded Congress for its good work, as she batted for more laws that would provide social justice, uplift the lives of the poor and stop terrorism in the country.

"I ask Congress to help me achieve justice and stop terrorism. I ask Congress to help me now to pass the anti-terrorism act. And to achieve justice, I ask Congress to help me in passing the judicial reforms bill," she said.

"And because there is a close relationship between fighting terrorism and fighting poverty, I ask Congress to help me by passing the use of farmlands as collateral," she added.

The President noted that the country's executive and the legislative departments have done a great deal of work by passing landmark legislative measures.

But she admitted that the two government branches have still a lot of work to be done for the sake of the Filipino people.

"And if we continue and even improve on the unity we finally achieved, we would be able to make this Congress remembered as a Congress of great recall," President said.

BSP taking measures to ensure RP's financial system won't be affected by U.S.-Iraq crisis

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) today assured the public that it has taken appropriate measures to ensure that the country's financial institutions would not be affected by the heightening of tension in the Middle East.

In a briefing in Malacañang this afternoon, BSP Deputy Governor Armando Tetangco, Jr. said these measures are being taken to insulate the country's financial system from pressures emanating from a US-Iraq war.

Tetangco said that in cooperation with other government agencies, the BSP has adopted a comprehensive and detailed plan on how to deal with any emergency and to preserve the stability of our financial markets.

One element of this plan is the availability of standby liquidity facilities to assist banks that may encounter liquidity problems arising from a sudden rush of withdrawals through the BSP's Standby Liquidity Facility.

Tetangco said that this will allow eligible banks to avail themselves of liquidity assistance of up to 50 percent of their outstanding deposit liabilities, fully collateralized by government securities or real estate mortgages.

He said that in order to safeguard the interest of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) based in the Middle East, the BSP would open a rediscounting window for personal loans granted by qualified banks to OFWs or their immediate families.

The BSP will also accept currencies of Kuwait, Iraq, Israel and Turkey for conversion into pesos from OFWs returning from these countries to the Philippines, Tetangco said.

According to Tetangco, the BSP has an adequate level of gross international reserves and a healthy balance of payments to cover the country's external obligations.

On top of that, the BSP is also capable of tapping official and commercial external sources of financing to boost reserves, such as several bilateral repurchase agreements with other Asian central banks, Tetangco said.

He said that the BSP is also closely monitoring inflation levels to ensure that the inflation target of 4.5 percent to 5.5 percent for this year is met.

Tetangco said that inflation, which is now averaging close to 3 percent, suggests that the economy can take in price pressures, including the successive oil price increases and the depreciation of the peso.

The BSP is keeping a close watch on domestic liquidity and currency volatility, while other government agencies like the Department of Trade and Industry, are closely watching price levels and supply inventories of basic commodities.

On the interest rates, both the BSP and the Department of Finance, in coordination with the Bureau of Treasury, are implementing a "strategic" borrowing program that would ensure that government borrowing is carried without prejudicing the private sector.

GMA bats for Asean curriculum on religious studies

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today emphasized the need to have a regional curriculum on religious studies that would be distinctly appropriate to the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) member-countries.

The President made the emphasis during a meeting at the Music Conference Room with ASEAN education ministers, who just capped a congress sponsored by the Department of Education. Education Secretary Edilberto de Jesus accompanied the ASEAN ministers during their call on the President.

"We should develop an ASEAN curriculum," the President told the ministers as she noted the need to continue to develop the Philippine Madrasah (Arabic School) system by sending the Filipino Ustadz (Islamic scholars) to Islamic ASEAN neighbors for further studies.

The President told the education ministers that Islam in Southeast Asia is much more modern, unlike in other regions. "These are our neighbors. This is where we should send our teachers," she said.

The President has pushed for the integration of the madrasah into the country's national educational system.

The madrasah (plural, madaris) is the Arabic term for a privately-owned but community-based school that teaches Arabic and the teachings of Islam.

The President earlier said "one of the keys to the future of Mindanao, especially among the youth, is their education." She also said the focus on the madaris would definitely address the root causes of poverty and conflict in predominantly-Muslim areas in Southern Philippines.

During the meeting with the education ministers, the President said she would like to see the Philippine Madrasah to similarly develop like the common Catholic Grade School where not only religious studies, but also the academics, are accentuated.

The President noted that she has always called for inter-faith understanding and the unity of society.

She further noted that it would be much better to have a common curriculum for Asean members as “we have been able to come together and have become successful by reaching consensus in all issues.”

“Our countries have been very close in almost all aspects of governance. We’ve come to think alike,” she said.

Among those who called on the President were Southeast Asian Ministers of Education Organization (SEAMEO) Director Dr. Arief Sadiman, SEAMEO Deputy Director Dr. Rujay Abhakorn, Education Ministers George Molloy (Canada), Armindo Maia (East Timor), Teo Chee Hean (Singapore), Musa Mohamad (Malaysia), San Min (Myanmar), Nguyen Minh Hiem (Vietnam), Patrick Cremen (Australia), Patrick Quides (France), Abdul Malik Fajar (Indonesia), Im Sethy (Cambodia), Pongpol Andireksarn (Thailand), Pehim Dato Haji Abdul Aziz Uman (Brunei) and Bosengkham Vongdara (Lao People’s Democratic Republic).

The President earlier inaugurated the Education for Peace and Development in Mindanao (EPDM) program, which, she said, “will ensure that the Madrasah education will become part of the country’s national education system.”

The EPDM is designed and targeted to radically uplift the lives of Mindanaons mired in poverty and trapped by armed conflict, terrorism and criminality.

The program has a five-point agenda: information and communications technology, madrasah education, peace education, Mindanao culture and history and teacher training. It will be implemented by the Office of the President, the Presidential Assistant for Education, the Commission on Higher Education, the Department of Education and the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority.

Gov’t assures adequate supply of rice, vital commodities

The government today assured the timely importation of rice and other key commodities as part of its contingency measures to mitigate the negative impact of an expanded conflict in Iraq.

In a press briefing, the country’s economic czars revealed that the National Food Authority (NFA) has a 95-day buffer stock of rice and is seeking authorization from President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo for an additional importation of 400 metric tons of the commodity.

Importation of non-NFA rice amounting to 150,000 metric tons will come in starting next month, according Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel A. Roxas II, speaking on behalf of the economic managers.

The government, Roxas said, is also prioritizing the rehabilitation of existing and the building of new irrigation facilities, extension of agriculture credit and post-harvest support to mitigate the adverse effects of El Niño, one that is already affecting many countries in the world with severe weather conditions.

Aside from ensuring adequate food supply, the government is also implementing an effective monitoring of prices of staple commodities through the National Price Coordinating Council.

Special monitoring teams, Roxas said, will be fielded nationwide in addition to the weekly price monitoring of basic goods and commodities.

“These teams will not only monitor prices and supplies,” said Roxas,” but will also strictly enforce the Price Act against traders and retailers who will try to take advantage of an emergency situation.”

Roxas also issued a stern warning, saying “We are on the lookout for and will crush those that will promote nervousness, speculation, and hoarding – activities that deeply hurt our economy during times of crisis.”

Gov’t assures oil security in event of Gulf war

Advanced import loadings for April and May will boost the country's oil inventory levels and will assure adequate supply of the commodity up to mid-June.

As this developed, the government had also initiated negotiations for bilateral supply agreements with oil-producing countries such as Iran and Russia.

This the Department of Energy (DOE) today assured to assuage fears of a domestic oil crisis in the event that a US-Iraq war breaks out.

In a press briefing, Energy Secretary Vicente Perez said the government had always been ready to meet head-on the far-reaching effects on the Philippines of a conflict in the Persian Gulf.

Perez said that at present, the country has maintained an oil inventory level of 70 days.

He said the agency had also implemented the Minimum Inventory Requirement provided under Executive Order 134.

The order mandated inventory levels of crude end-products of 30 days for oil refineries, 50 days for oil companies with no oil refineries, and seven days for liquefied petroleum gas.

The negotiations for oil from Russia and Iran would serve as additional supply security.

Perez said this was in consonance with an earlier agreement signed under the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Petroleum Supply Agreement (APSA).

The DOE had also adopted several efforts to mitigate the effects of a global oil price surge, even as a US-led attack on Iraq looms.

In an earlier briefing, Perez said President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered the DOE and the Department of Transportation and Communication to come up with measures to avert public transport fare rate increases and avoid its ripple effect on labor wages, prices of basic goods and others.

The government has also activated the Energy Contingency Task Force that has drawn up plans of action to ensure the continuous supply of power.

GMA to lead women's day rites tomorrow

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will lead the celebration of the National Women's Day tomorrow, March 8, at the Marikina Sports Complex.

This year's celebration revolves around the women's agenda of the Macapagal-Arroyo administration embodied in the Framework Plan for Women: human rights, economic empowerment, and gender-responsive governance.

This year's theme is "Babae, May Karapatan Ka."

Aside from women government employees, women advocates from non-government organizations, the academe, and other participants will join the President in commemorating the event in Marikina City.

While the President is expected to spell out her administration's program for women, the occasion will also be an avenue for government entities and other institutions to identify how they can contribute to the women's agenda of the President.

The President will also view the “Woman-ity Affair” that will showcase both government and non-government efforts to support women’s needs, and a bazaar of locally-made women’s products.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas has a number of options to influence or address any unusual movement in the peso-dollar exchange rate.

This includes provision of liquidity, adjustment in interest rates and/or reserve requirements as well as moral suasion.

At the end of the day, it is the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas which will make the decision as it is an independent institution.

DENR, ARMM enforce stiff measures on forest products transport

The Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) and the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM) have agreed to strictly enforce shipment schemes for forest products coming from the ARMM to put a lid on the lucrative illegal logging trade.

Environment and Natural Resources Secretary Elisea G. Gozun and DENR-ARMM Regional Cabinet Secretary Kabuntalan P. Emblawa, Al-haj signed last February 26 a memorandum of agreement (MOA) that would stringently monitor transport routes of forest products such as logs, lumber, and plywood from the ARMM to other regions in the country.

In a report to Malacañang, Gozun said the MOA hoped to effectively monitor forest products being transported all over the country, and the ARMM has supported the bid to combat the illegal transport at the source.

“As the agency that implements measures to preserve our natural resources, we must set the tone to seriously regulate the growing number of forest crimes, such as illegal forest products transport, trade, and industrial processing,” she said.

Concern for the environment transcends boundaries and regions. It must not be just a mere resolve but a call to action,” she added.

Secretary Emblawa said “this is a significant start of a more meaningful collaboration between ARMM and the national government in protecting the environment and natural resources.”

“While we need this forestry monitoring agreement, we also hope to have cooperation in other programs such as good environmental governance, technical training of DENR-ARMM personnel and provisions for technical assistance to DENR-ARMM,” Emblawa stressed.

Under the MOA, authorized shipping routes as well as loading and off-loading ports were identified in the National Capital Region (NCR), and Regions 6 to 12.

Guidelines were also issued on shipment procedures, including the submission of a Notice of Shipment and Confirmation, wherein prior communication from DENR-ARMM will be formally sent to DENR-national regional official-recipients at least two days before the actual shipping.

In addition, DENR-ARMM will also require strict compliance on transport documents used for shipment timber in whatever form such as Log or Lumber Supply Contacts, Certificate of Timber/Lumber Origin, Auxiliary Invoice, Sales Invoice, Tally/Scale Sheets, Purchase Orders and Official Receipts.

Most of the documents, Gozun explained, will now be printed on security paper by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP), under the DENR-ARMM letterhead.

The MOA also outlined the procedure of transporting forest products. It calls on the DENR-ARMM to provide all DENR-national office regional directors in other regions with a list of commercial carriers/shippers, their voyage number, schedules, container van identification/serial numbers and the corresponding timber volume it carries.

DENR-ARMM will also furnish DENR-national a list of legitimate wood processing plants/sawmill operators/lumber dealers in ARMM who are authorized to ship out forest products from ARMM, including the location of their processing plants.

Meanwhile, DENR-national regional officials who will be the recipients of the shipments from ARMM will submit to the DENR-ARMM monthly recapitulation reports of all shipments of forest products from ARMM entering their respective regions, which will then be counter-validated for accuracy by DENR-ARMM.

Forestry figures of DENR's Forest Management Bureau (FMB) in 2001 estimated Philippine forest area at around 5.4 million hectares. Production of forest resources such as logs was placed at around 570,890 cubic meters annually, most of which are coming from the logging areas within ARMM.

RP economic performance impresses IMF

A ranking official of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in the Asia-Pacific region this week cited the Philippines as one of the nations in Southeast Asia that has weathered domestic and global financial uncertainties to emerge economically strong.

David Burton, IMF director for Asia-Pacific, told a news conference in Singapore Wednesday that the Philippines' recent robust economic performance has encouraged the IMF.

The Philippines gross domestic product (GDP), the amount of goods and services produced at a given period in the country, rose 4.6 percent while its gross national product (GNP), or GDP plus income from abroad, went up 5.2 percent in 2002.

Socio-economic planning secretary Romulo Neri said the 2002 performance, the strongest recorded since the 1997 Asian financial crisis, exceeded the high end of official forecasts.

Burton said "the situation in the Philippines is pretty comfortable."

He told members of the Foreign Correspondents Association of Singapore and the Singapore Press Club that he was also encouraged by recent signs of improving tax revenues in the Philippines.

Reviewing the entire region, Burton said most Asian economies were well placed to ride out any turbulence caused by a global economic slowdown.

“The immediate outlook is for continued solid growth in the Asian region, although sizeable downside risks related to uncertainties about the strength of the global recovery and to Iraq exist,” the IMF official said.

Burton added, however, that Asian governments must be prepared to ease monetary and fiscal policies if a potential war in Iraq does more damage to the global economy than expected.

The Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU) also said the Asia-Pacific region offers the greatest opportunities for growth in the next three years.

The EIU said that in a survey of the world’s top corporate executives, 66 percent chose the region as offering the biggest growth prospects for their businesses, followed by Eastern Europe, which was chosen by 40 percent.

The Middle East was voted as the region posing the biggest risks to business in the next three years.

The survey, titled CEO Agenda, was carried out in the last three months of 2002 and covered 681 chief executives, board chairmen, chief financial officers and regional managers.

Gov’t lauds private sector for initiatives in mitigating adverse effects of oil price hikes

Energy Secretary Vicente Perez has lauded the private sector for helping the government alleviate the plight of public transport groups in the face of rising fuel prices brought about by the growing tension in the Middle East.

Earlier, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered the Department of Energy (DOE) and the Department of Transportation and Communications (DOTC) to come up with measures to avert public transport fare rate increases and avoid its ripple effect on wages and the prices of basic goods.

In a press briefing in Malacañang Friday, Perez said that early this week, he witnessed the signing of a memorandum of agreement (MOA) between Eastern Petroleum and Pasang Masda for the construction of two terminals in Mandaluyong and in Pantranco in Quezon City.

Under the agreement, Pasang Masda members will get volume discounts from these terminals when they load diesel fuel for their jeepneys.

The volume discount agreement between Pasang Masda and Eastern Petroleum has a lifespan of five years, Perez said.

“Another jeepney transport operator is discussing a similar arrangement with a new player somewhere in a Makati terminal. Two other jeepney operators are identifying a similar terminal in Manila and Antipolo,” Perez said.

Perez said new players like Seoil, Unioil, Flying V and Total are discussing similar arrangements with public utility associations. “So we are creating a free market initiative for oil players to give volume discounts to the public transportation group, he said.

The special arrangement allows for up to 60-centavo discount to the prevailing pump price for diesel, Perez said.

Perez also assured the public that the government had always been ready to meet head-on the far-reaching effects on the Philippines of a US-Iraq war.

He said that at present, the country has maintained an oil inventory level of 70 days.

The DOE, he said, had also implemented the Minimum Inventory Requirement provided under Executive Order 134.

The order mandated inventory levels of crude end products of 30 days for oil refineries, 50 days for oil companies with no oil refineries, and seven days for liquefied petroleum gas.

The negotiations for oil from Russia and Iran would serve as additional supply security in consonance with an earlier agreement signed under the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Petroleum Supply Agreement (APSA), Perez said.

The government has also activated the Energy Contingency Task Force that has drawn up plans of action to ensure the continuous supply of power, Perez said.

GMA asks for understanding, more time to work on better treatment of domestic helpers in Hong Kong

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stood up for the welfare of Filipina domestic helpers and said she would not take sitting down a perceived unjust slash in the minimum pay of foreign workers in Hong Kong.

The President sought for more time to work on countless positive ways to decide on the issues besetting the welfare of domestic helpers in the former British colony.

In her speech on the occasion of International Women's Day at the jampacked Marikina City Sports Complex gym, the President cited reports that neighboring Asian nations and government groups in Hong Kong have been pushing for the suspension of a Hong Kong Special Administrative Region (SAR) decision to slash the minimum wage for foreign workers.

She asked her critics to better understand the issues before opposing government moves to temporarily suspend the processing of all contracts for domestic helpers bound for Hong Kong and review existing policies on the deployment of OFWs in other problem areas abroad.

"Many of our domestic helpers in Hong Kong expressed support for this move. But many have also asked to lift the suspension of the deployment of domestic helpers to Hong Kong. Kaya malaking desisyon ang kailangan ko (I need to work on a major decision on the matter)," she stressed.

She noted that even Indonesia, which also deploys domestic workers to the former crown colony, had opposed the move of the Hong Kong SAR to impose a levy on new foreign labor.

"At sa Abril, baka ang Sri Lanka ay sasama sa boykot (And by April, Sri Lanka might stop deploying their workers to Hong Kong)," she added.

The President also informed her all-female audience that "employers in Hong Kong are giving in and joining the domestic helpers" and they are organizing a signature campaign in favor of maintaining the present level of wages.

"The People's Opportunities Commission is speaking against the levy, a recognition that a levy, however disguised, is unfair and discriminatory," she said.

“Kaya duon sa mga tumututol sa suspension, bigyan pa ninyo ako ng kaunti pang pisi, dahil baka umubra ito (I am asking those against our moves to temporarily stop the deployment of domestic helpers to Hong Kong to give me more room to decide on the matter. The boycott might still work),” she added.

The Philippines has Indonesia and Sri Lanka on its side. Foreign domestic helpers also have the sympathy of Hong Kong employers and non-government groups.

“But even if I should need to lift the suspension, and that is still something that I have to make a decision about, I can assure you that we will intensify our lobby to protect the rights of our overseas Filipinas,” the President said.

She said the Philippine government would bring its case before the International Labor Organization, which incidentally is being chaired by Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas.

She added that the same case would be brought before the Hong Kong courts. “After all, Hong Kong is a democracy.”

In the domestic front, the President also ordered Secretary Sto. Tomas “to study how to reduce what our overseas domestic helpers pay their recruiters to make up, at least partially, for the levy that will be imposed for those who will be hired (in Hong Kong) this April.”

GMA calls for responsible parenthood among Filipinos

Presidential Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on mothers to promote responsible parenthood, saying it was not a matter of having unlimited children, but being better prepared for the coming of each child.

Speaking at a program celebrating National Women’s Day at the Marikina City Sports Center, the President explained that responsible parenthood entailed the right spacing between children to allow the mother to recover her health and for her to take care of her newborn.

She said responsible parenthood called for a regular assessment of the couple’s capacity or readiness to have a child.

Citing the economic, psychological, physical, social and other valid reasons for postponing pregnancy, the President said family planning enjoins couples to decide when it is best to have a child.

She stressed that family planning and responsible parenthood were deeply rooted values acceptable to the Catholic Church, to which most Filipinos belong.

The government has also pursued the natural family planning method being practiced by the Church. “Kaya hindi kailangang maghiwalay ang simbahan at (ang gobyerno) sa family planning,” she said.

She added that natural family planning referred to the method and planning for child spacing by observing the fertile and infertile phases of the mother’s monthly cycle, with abstinence if pregnancy is to be avoided.

She emphasized that the natural family planning involved very little or no cost.

“You only need to buy a thermometer and recording chart,” she said, adding that natural family planning has been internationally known, scientific, practical and 99 percent effective.

The Chief Executive said that this method is being taught by the Department of Health, in cooperation with non-government organizations, in seven regions in the country, and is expected to reach all the regions on May 11, 2003.

GMA cites women’s involvement in micro-financing

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said micro-financing, being the cornerstone in the fight against poverty, has greatly enhanced the economic rights of women with about 600,000 benefiting from the micro-finance program of the government as of 2002.

Speaking before women delegates attending the “Araw ng Kababaihan” program at the Marikina Sports Complex in Marikina City, the President said this has led women to contribute largely to national progress.

“Nanawagan ako sa kababaihan na lalong ipairal ang ating mga responsibilidad sa ating bansa sa ating pamayanan, sa ating sarili (I call on all women to do their responsibilities towards the nation and to themselves),” the President said.

Earlier, National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) Lead Convenor Teresita Deles said about 600,000 poor women have availed themselves of the President’s loan program for micro-business enterprises in 2002.

This, according to Deles, represented an increase of 160 percent from 372,349 women-borrowers registered in 2001.

Deles said the growth in the micro-finance program reflected the people’s acceptance of the President’s commitment to implement activities that would spur national social growth and economic development.

Deles informed the President that as of January 31, 2003, the People’s Credit Finance Corporation, through its micro-finance institutions, had served 79 provinces, 113 out of 114 cities (Cotabato City still unserved) and 1,083 out of 1,496 towns, or 72 percent.

During an en banc meeting in Malacañang last Wednesday (February 26), the President directed the NAPC to give priority to remote areas in their innovative micro-finance scheme called “credit plus five.”

The “credit plus five” refers to credit plus training, product development, market access, new technologies and social insurance.

The President has also instructed the NAPC to set up a mechanism to serve remote and conflict areas, and the basic sectors such as the elderly, disaster victims, and the disabled.

The President also directed the continued rationalization of credit programs in geographic coverage and client targeting to help sustain micro-financing institutions and clients.

The President said the NAPC must continue to be the champion for micro-enterprise development and open access to markets for the poor as the Department of Trade and Industry will focus on the small and medium enterprise program of the government.

GMA approves P30 M coco diesel facility in Quezon

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has set aside some P30 million for the construction of an integrated coconut oil mill that would produce the two-stroke coconut oil or motor oil for the country's tricycle industry.

"We must build the first plant this month," the President said, after listening to a proposal-presentation on multi-coconut product processing conducted by Presidential Adviser on Food Security and Job Creation Jose Cojuangco.

She said the two-stroke coco oil (motor oil) would help the tricycle industry nationwide comply with the strict requirements of the Clean Air Act.

The plant would be funded from the P20-billion 2003 Agriculture and Fisheries Modernization Fund. When completed, it would be capable of processing 3,000 nuts a day, producing 22,700 liters of coconut oil.

The President approved Cojuangco's recommendation that the plant be established in an Agrarian Reform Community (ARC), next to a coconut plantation, in Tiaong, Quezon.

"We can put this plant in the ARC and make this plant owned by the farmers themselves, and it would really add to their income," she said.

In his presentation, Cojuangco said the two-stroke coconut base motor oil would be an ideal mix with gasoline fuel.

This would reduce deposits on valve heads and seats of motor engines, improve seating and heat dissipation, lessen carbon formation, prevent corrosion and metal wastage, and lubricate at high or low temperature.

"As a result air pollution is lessened," Cojuangco explained.

Cojuangco said the Couples for Christ, together with De La Salle University, agreed to tie up with the government and train management staffs for such projects.

"Managing these plants in different localities can be at least safely supervised by trained managers who will be paid," he said.

Cojuangco said at least 80 integrated coconut oil mills have been projected to be established in different provinces, thus creating job opportunities in the countryside.

"Once it is ongoing, we feel that there will be investors that will be interested to put up plants, because we intend to price the oil at P20 per liter," he added.

While decreasing the country's dependency on imported petroleum, the completion of the plants would stabilize coconut farm-gate prices by giving farmers with a direct alternative market.

CIDA commits CDN$17M for RP socio-economic priorities

The Philippines stands to get some Cdn $17 million in official development assistance (ODA) from the Government of Canada through the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA).

In a report to Malacañang, the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA) said the ODA was committed during the recent Seventh Annual Bilateral Consultations between Canada and the Philippines.

NEDA Assistant Director-General Rolando Tungpalan said the Canadian ODA would support ongoing and pipeline projects in good governance, private sector growth and social development, among others.

Tungpalan represented the government in the bilateral talks

He said the pipeline projects included the E-Governance for Efficiency and Effectiveness Program; the Social Fund for Peace and Development in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao; Observer Mission to Canada on the Survey of Regulatory Practices in the Infrastructure Sector; Business Advisory Project Phase II; and Access to Small and Medium Enterprise Financing.

Among the ongoing projects are the Policy Training and Technical Assistance Facility; Justice Reform Initiative Support Project; and the Private Enterprise Accelerated Resource Linkages.

Tungpalan said that during the consultations, both sides agreed to review the Country Development Policy Framework (CDPF) within the development context defined by the Philippines in its national development plan and poverty reduction strategy.

He said the review would coincide with the preparations of NEDA for the next medium-term plan.

Director-General Sajjad Rahman led the CIDA delegation.

Rahman expressed great satisfaction with the results of the CIDA's partnership with its Filipino counterparts.

Having had a first hand view of CIDA-funded livelihood projects in Cagayan de Oro and Bukidnon, he said the partnership would promote regional development.

Earlier, the CIDA delegation paid a courtesy visit to Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri who emphasized the need to focus on results to achieve sustainable benefits for the CIDA program.

Datumanong to DOJ staff: Shun namedroppers

The days of namedroppers are over in the Department of Justice (DOJ).

Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong has ordered DOJ officials and employees to refrain from giving special favors to anyone claiming to be his relative while transacting business with the agency.

Datumanong, in a one-page memorandum, said the same treatment should also be made with the relatives of DOJ officials and workers.

Anyone who deals with the DOJ must pass through the legal and standard procedures, he stressed.

He called on undersecretaries, assistant secretaries and heads of bureaus and agencies under the DOJ to immediately report any unscrupulous person trying to get special consideration on a transaction.

Datumanong said he issued the memorandum in line with the call of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to institute good governance and transparency in public offices.

GMA leads nation in paying tribute to OFWs, families at EDSA Shrine rites

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today led the nation in paying tribute to the more than 8 million overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) and their families in the commemoration of the 17th National Migrants Sunday at the EDSA Shrine.

The President also witnessed the signing of a memorandum of agreement (MOA) between the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) and the Episcopal Commission for the Pastoral Care of Migrants and Itinerant People of the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines (ECMI-CBCP), reaffirming commitment to further enhance services and assistance to better promote the well-being of the OFWs and their families.

OWWA Administrator Virgilio Angelo and CMI-CBCP chairman Bishop Ramon Arguelles signed the MOA.

Under the MOA, the two parties agree to jointly conduct intensive research and services geared towards enriching OFW family life.

They also resolved to provide programs in the areas of OFW community organization, counseling services, crisis preparedness and information dissemination to these families.

They would likewise enhance cooperation in support of reintegration programs for them.

The MOA likewise stipulates that a special action team, composed of volunteers from both the OWWA and the ECMI, will be formed initially in key cities and towns whose main tasks are to respond to every crisis situations involving OFW families.

The special action team is also envisioned to provide counseling and attend to public inquiries and other welfare services to OFWs.

The theme of this year's celebration of National Migrants Sunday is "Reaching Out." Bishop Arguelles, Manila Auxiliary Bishop Socrates Villegas and Father Paulo Prigol, executive secretary of the ECMI-CBCP, concelebrated the Eucharistic Mass at the EDSA Shrine.

Aside from the President, those who attended the observance of the Annual Day of Prayer and Solidarity with the OFWs and their Families were Labor Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas, OWWA Administrator Angelo, Administrator Rosalinda Baldoz of the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration, Foreign Undersecretary for Migrant Workers Jose Brillantes, and Presidential Adviser on Media and Ecclesiastical Affairs Conrado Limcaoco.

The rites were put together by OWWA and the Episcopal Commission for the Pastoral Care of Migrants and Itinerant People (ECMI) of the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines.

Bishop Arguelles, in his homily, said the Catholic has valid reasons to be concerned as 70 percent of Filipino families have OFWs in their members.

"Our OFWs are living examples of self-denial. They are admired for thinking first of others," Arguelles said.

The President has declared the period from March 2003 to February 2004 as the year of the Families of OFWs in recognition of the need to manage the effects of migration on family relations, particularly between couples or between parents and their children.

Following the Mass at the EDSA Shrine, the President listened to song “Let There Be Peace on Earth,” rendered by 25 children, who held flags of countries where most OFWs are based.

GMA bats for yearlong programs to keep OFWs, families intact

In recognition of the need to uphold and strengthen the ties between overseas Filipino workers (OFW) and their families, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has declared March 2003 to February 2004 as the Year of the Families of OFWs.

The President, in signing Proclamation No. 338, has ordered the Department of Labor and Employment, through the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA), to spearhead yearlong activities that would give substance to the proclamation.

She said the activities should be coordinated with other government institutions, the private sector, church-based organizations and non-government groups.

The President said that while the Philippines is one of the major sources of migrant labor in the international market, the Filipino family remains the basic unit of the society, and “thus, any effect of labor migration on the Filipino family will affect the Filipino society.”

She noted that the present migration phenomenon may involve one or both parents and that the government is concerned with managing the effects of migration on family relations, particularly between couples or between parents and their children.

Acknowledging that migration decisions always take place in the Filipino households, she said the temporary separation of family members should not break family ties but, instead, strengthen it in view of the sacrifices each member has to make for the common good.

“It is a national responsibility to help provide the external support needed by both migrants and the families they leave behind to cope with temporary separation,” she said.

Meanwhile, the President led the nation today in paying tribute to the more than 8 million OFWs and their families in the commemoration of the 17th National Migrants Sunday at the EDSA Shrine.

The President also witnessed the signing of a memorandum of agreement (MOA) between the OWWA and the Episcopal Commission for the Pastoral Care of Migrants and Itinerant People (ECMI) of the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines.

The MOA reaffirmed the commitment of government and the Church to further enhance services and assistance to better promote the well-being of OFWs and their families.

Statement of Presidential Ignacio R. Bunye

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as Commander-in-Chief takes full responsibility for the conduct of military operations in Mindanao and all over the country.

The President would like to dispel the notion reflected in news and editorial reports that the Department of National Defense or the Armed Forces of the Philippines has made tactical decisions outside the purview of established national policy.

All actions of the DND-AFP have been above board in terms of strict adherence to policy and the President sees no need either to curtail any existing lines of authority within the AFP chain of command, or to sanction any commanders for violations of policy.

The standing policy for the Mindanao situation is to give full rein to the imperatives of peace, development and justice. This means that:

- Peace negotiations shall be pursued with the facilitation and assistance of third-party nations in order to achieve a comprehensive and durable settlement of the conflict in line with the Constitution.
- Development will be pursued in line with overall national economic plans, with priority on programs and projects that have a close bearing to the peace process and the alleviation of poverty—cutting across all communities of Muslims, Christians and Lumads.
- Justice will be pursued against those engaged in terrorism and organized crime, separate from the pursuit of peace and development processes. The law will spare no one, but due process will be observed at all times without resort to vigilantism against any community or religious group.

The AFP and the PNP are well aware of these policy thrusts. All police and military commanders have been apprised of the need to be sensitive to the socio-economic, political and cultural implications of their actions; and to enforce the law with equal force against anyone, regardless of creed, political persuasion or social station.

The Cabinet is behind the President on all policy decisions impinging upon the Mindanao situation. In this regard, the perceived division between hawks and doves in the Cabinet is a matter of individual sentiment, and does not reflect irreconcilable disagreements on any fundamental issue of governance, leadership and authority.

Statement of Presidential Spokesperson Ignacio R. Bunye on AMLA

The AMLA needs no further amendments. The amendments, which were signed into law recently by the President, are deemed sufficient as they were the result of consultations between our legislators and representatives of the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) countries who visited the Philippines. The amendments also conform to the standards of FATF as set forth in the letter of the FATF president dated February 27.

Note that even President George W. Bush has already congratulated the Philippine government for its sincere efforts to address the concern of the international financial community.

Just to clarify: What needs to be done by way of fine-tuning the process leading to our eventual removal from the list of non-complying countries is the formulation by the Anti-Money Laundering Council of implementing rules and regulations (IRR). Thereafter, FATF will be monitoring our compliance thereto and if satisfactory, the Philippines will be delisted. The process for delisting could take a little time.

The timely passage of the AMLA amendments has spared the Philippines from sanctions which would have taken effect on March 15.

Gov't to talk peace with any group that renounces violence, terrorism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that the government will continue to talk peace with anybody or any group that would reject violence and terrorism.

“On the national level, the hand of peace is there for anybody who wants and who is willing to renounce violence and terrorism,” the President said in a press conference in Malacañang.

The President said the government has already presented a draft peace agreement to both the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People's Army (CPP-NPA) and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

“So, to anybody who wants to renounce terrorism and violence, there is the peace agreement for them to consider,” the President said.

She also said she has authorized individual governors and mayors to do their own peace initiatives with the MILF in their areas.

But the President also warned those who continue to engage in violence and terror activities, the government will apply the full force of the law.

“The important thing is that the military and the police are ready to enforce the law as they have been enforcing the law,” the President said.

The President also said that the government’s policy on armed groups is intended to have the demobilization of forces or the willingness to lay down arms as the end-state of any negotiations or armed confrontation with rebel groups.

“That is always the final aim of how we deal with them (rebels) whether it’s through peace talks or through armed conflict or a combination of both,” the President said.

Aside from the demobilization of forces, another end result of any settlement in an armed struggle is fighting the root causes of the conflict that includes economic exclusion, the President said.

She said that the government has been successful in the economic development in Camp Abubakar, the erstwhile headquarters of the MILF, and now in the Buliok Complex in North Cotabato, which the government has turned into a zone of peace.

The President said that thousands of evacuees have now returned to Buliok and some P100 million worth of construction equipment are now in the former conflict area.

AFP, police to respond to any criminal acts of MILF, other armed groups in Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the people of Mindanao that the police and the military will swiftly respond to thwart any criminal action by the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) or any other armed group.

The President made the assurance in the wake of recent MILF attacks and harassment against civilians following the bombing of the Davao International Airport which killed 23 people and wounded more than a hundred.

She then called on the MILF leadership to stop such attacks and harassment, saying such actions, including the sabotage of transmission lines, only bolster the argument that the MILF is not a political organization but a terrorist group.

In an informal conference at the state dining room of Malacañang, the President said that all leads in the Davao bombing will be pursued to a definitive conclusion and that the investigation will be thorough and fair.

“It will be transparent in the sense that nobody will fool anybody,” she assured. “But transparent doesn’t mean that you have to be told about the investigation while it is ongoing. It means it will be done honestly and in accordance with law. “

She said she had ordered the police and military not to telegraph preliminary results of their investigations. But she assured that the results of the thorough and fair investigation will be made public in the end.

“Those who will be found responsible will be prosecuted and put behind bars for murder which is a non-bailable crime,” the President said.

The President then warned against any attempt to turn these events into a religious war, saying it must always be resisted and instead every opportunity must be exhausted to enhance inter-faith understanding.

She also thanked the support of the Filipino Muslim leaders the Ulama when the country joined the international coalition against terrorism.

“They have been very supportive and we will still continue to hope for interfaith understanding as we go through all these difficult times,” she said.

“We, however should not fall into the trap that some would want us to fall, which is to turn this into a religious war, which it is not. It is law enforcement, it is fighting terrorism,” the President said.

Gov’t asks for vigilance in fight vs professional squatters

The days of the professional squatters may soon be over.

This, after the government, over the weekend, asked rightful state housing beneficiaries to immediately report to authorities abusive occupants and squatter syndicates who illegally occupy lands set for presidential proclamation.

President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo made the appeal in behalf of government officials during a meeting with urban poor groups where she noted a report made by Housing and Urban Development Coordinating Council (HUDCC) Chairman Michael Defensor.

In his report, Defensor cited the problems that arise in an area set for presidential proclamation.

“Once a presidential proclamation is announced, the number of residents always increase, even multiply,” Defensor said. “Nilulusob ng mga tao (People come in droves),” he added.

He asked legitimate urban poor settlers to cooperate and be vigilant in watching over the property “because it is your land that is getting smaller because of the illegal occupants.”

Defensor noted the case of rightful long-time settlers in Sitio Masagana in Bicutan, Taguig but have to contend now with occupants who only settled in the area after 1992, the cut-off year set by the government.

Relocation of squatters living along the railways is now underway under the resettlement program of the HUDCC.

Those in the North railway, according to Defensor, have been relocated to medium-rise settlement areas in Camarin in Caloocan City while those along the South railway have been offered resettlement areas in Tanay, Rizal, Batangas, and Montalban, Rizal.

During the same meeting, the President approved the appointment of Percy Chavez, chairman of the Commission on Urban Poor, as the new head of the Presidential Task Force Payatas which would identify the proper government land recipients in the Payatas area in Quezon City.

She also approved, upon the recommendation of Defensor, the creation of Maralitang Tagamasid, a group of social workers who will help out-of-school youth living along railways to find jobs and eventually lead productive and socially relevant lives.

GMA to meet with Duterte, Muslim leaders

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is slated to meet with Davao Mayor Rodrigo Duterte and Muslim leaders of Mindanao as soon as Duterte and the officials have threshed out the scope of his role as crisis manager of the Davao bombing incident in a separate meeting today.

Saying she arranged for Duterte’s meeting with the Muslim leaders through Sultan Kudarat Governor Pax Mangudadatu, the President made it clear that the Davao mayor is the crisis manager for solving the dastardly crime that killed 23 people and wounded more than a hundred at the waiting shed of the Davao International Airport.

That means the hard-nosed Duterte will be responsible for identifying and arresting the mastermind, the accomplices, and the co-conspirators in both Regions 11 and 12 and not only in Davao, according to the President.

“Because the mastermind and the conspirators can run anywhere,” the President explained in an informal press conference at the State Dining Room of Malacañang. “So in that area, therefore, Rudy Duterte is crisis manager.”

The President said that the meeting between Duterte and the Muslim leaders today came as a result of the meeting that Duterte, as crisis manager for Regions 11 and 12, conducted with the two regional Peace and Order Councils on Sunday, the day after she left Davao.

“So that is the area. It is the crisis that emanated from the bombing of the shed outside of the Davao airport. But the coverage of his (Duterte) authority is Regions 11 and 12,” she said.

The President noted that for Mindanao as a whole, there is a joint Task Force headed by the Armed Forces of the Philippines under the chairmanship of Southern Command chief Lt. Gen. Narciso Abaya.

In the press conference, the President warned against attempts to turn recent developments in Mindanao into a religious war, saying this must be resisted and instead use every opportunity to enhance inter-faith understanding.

She expressed gratitude for the support of the Muslim-elected leaders and the support of the Ulama in joining the international coalition against terrorism.

It is expected that these will be the same concerns that the President will bring up in her meeting with Duterte and the Muslim leaders.

GMA lauds this year’s outstanding policemen, cites their gallantry in war vs crime

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded this year’s outstanding members of the Philippine National Police (PNP) for gallantly waging war against criminality and maintaining the peace and order in the community.

In her message at the awarding ceremonies for this year’s search for the Country’s Outstanding Policemen in Service (COPS), the President cited the crucial role of the men and women in the police force in maintaining the peace and order in the country.

“In upholding the law, our police officers do more than just solve crimes, apprehend criminals and fight terrorists. More importantly, they show themselves equal to the task of forging partnerships with the community in an effort to mobilize the different sectors of society in our fight against lawlessness and crime,” the President said.

The President also commended the Rotary Club of New Manila East and the Metrobank Foundation for sponsoring the search for outstanding policemen in active service.

In a simple rites held at the Malacañang’s Heroes Hall this afternoon the President presented the trophies to the ten awardees, four of them commissioned officers and six non-commissioned officers.

Aside from the trophies, each of the awardees received P100,000 cash, courtesy of the Metrobank Foundation.

The commissioned officers who were adjudged and outstanding policemen were Police Superintendent Rhodel O. Sermonia, former chief of police of Cavite City and currently chief of the Intelligence and Investigative Division of the Cavite Provincial Office; Police Superintendent Rey Lyndon T. Lawas, former chief of police of Dumaguete Police Station and currently chief of Firearms, Explosive and Security Agencies and Guards Supervisory Section-Regional Operations and Plans Division of Police Regional Office 7 in Cebu City; Police Superintendent Noli G. Taliño, chief of police of the Dagupan City Police Station; and Police Superintendent Genesis D.F. Molto, chief of police of the Daraga Municipal Police Station in Daraga, Albay

The non-commissioned awardees were SPO1 Edgardo G. Sto. Domingo, chief of the Special Operations Group of the Naga City Police Station in Naga City, Camarines Sur; SPO4 Rommel G. Macatlang of the PNP Traffic Management Group based in Camp Crame, Quezon City; SPO4 Gerry L. Sangalang, deputy chief of police of the Nagcarlan Municipal Police Station in Nagcarlan, Laguna; SPO1 Benigno R. Andamon of the Sto. Tomas Police Station in Davao Del Norte; SPO4 Reynaldo Z. Medina, Jr., precinct commander of the Balintawak PNP Assistance Center, Police Station 1 of the Central Police District in Quezon City; and SPO1 Bernard C. Antolin of the Mapandan Police Station in Mapandan, Pangasinan.

In his statement, PNP Chief, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr. said that the awardees – the real cops – “have done us proud to the police organization.”

“The awardees tell us that it is never enough to wear the police uniform. We all must make a difference,” Ebdane said.

The COPS award started as the search for the Best Community Oriented Policemen by the Rotary Club of New Manila East (RCNME).

The main objective of the search is to recognize commissioned and non-commissioned officers with outstanding achievements not only for implementing the law, but more importantly, in mobilizing the community in maintaining the peace and order

The search also highlights the “One PNP” program of the PNP, especially the neighborhood participation thrust, which encourages involvement of local communities to ensure crime prevention, solution and intervention.

Among those present during the awarding rites were Interior and local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr.; Dr. George S.K. Ty, president of the Metrobank; Danilo V. Fausto, president of the Rotary Club of New Manila East; Placido L. Mapa Jr., president of the Metrobank Foundation, Inc.; and former Interior and Local Government Secretary Rafael Alunan III, chairman board of judges and president of the Maynilad Water Services, Inc.

GMA orders setting up of ‘sanctuaries of peace’

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today authorized the installation of certain affected areas in Mindanao as “sanctuaries of peace” to protect displaced civilians from harassment by criminals and terrorists.

The President revealed her plan during a meeting with the officials of the Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines at the Music Conference Room in Malacañang.

The President said “sanctuaries of peace” would be a slightly amended version of the zones of peace.

She said at least 42 areas would be initially placed as such.

She said Tabang Mindanaw, assisted by several government and non-governmental organizations (NGOs), would spearhead the reintegration of displaced families in the said areas.

The government earlier declared former conflict areas Pikit and the Buliok Complex in North Cotabato as “zones of peace”

The establishment of a “zone of peace,” according to Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, is a step that the government has taken to facilitate and encourage the evacuees to return to their former homes and live normal lives.

Gen. Dionisio Santiago, chief of staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP), has said that when an area is declared a zone of peace, the military would move out from the population centers and will be just in the periphery.

Santiago said the police and the military would make sure that criminal elements would not enter the zone to ensure the security of the returning evacuees.

In case there will be criminal activities inside the populated areas, the police and the military will have to go there and make sure that the perpetrators of these criminal acts would be apprehended and prosecuted.

According to the Department of Social Welfare and Development, at least 15,604 families have been displaced in Central Mindanao because of conflict.

As of March 2003, exactly 3,642 families have returned to their areas while government has provided at least P10.3 worth of assistance to these families.

Gov't to wait for U.N. final resolution on Iraq issue

The Macapagal-Arroyo administration will wait for the definite and final resolution of the United Nations Security Council (UNSC) on the disarmament of weapons of mass destruction in Iraq before making an official stand on the matter.

But the government will continue to abide with the UNSC's earlier Resolution 1441 which urged Iraq to destroy the chemical and biological warheads it reportedly has in its arsenal.

Foreign Secretary Blas Ople today said the Iraqi leadership should immediately and verifiably comply with the mandate of the UNSC so that war could be averted in the Middle East.

Ople said the government would also convene the National Security Council (NSC) within the week to confer on the matter and on further strengthening national preparations in the event that war breaks out in the Persian Gulf.

He said the NSC meeting would include top officials and congressional leaders.

"We will have to wait for the United Nations Security Council to frame an official stand of the Philippine government (on the matter)," Ople stressed.

The government's position on the Iraqi crisis has been consistent from the beginning.

Nevertheless, Ople said the government has made preparations for the impending conflict in that region.

He noted that Ambassador Roy Cimatu, who heads the Middle East Preparedness Team, has finalized the possible and immediate evacuation and relocation programs for Filipinos in the Gulf.

He added that government has enlisted the help of the International Organization of Migration, United Nations High Commissioner on Refugees (UNHCR) to help the Philippines in any event.

Ople also noted that the Philippine Embassy in Baghdad, headed by Ambassador Grace Escalante, is open until now.

He assured that the Philippines would not send combat troops abroad. But the country could dispatch doctors, nurses, other medical workers and peacekeeping forces outside of Iraq if the conflict ensues.

Ambassador Cimatu, meanwhile, would like to be the last Filipino to be in Kuwait in case conflict escalates in that country, Ople added.

CBCP expresses appreciation to GMA for stand on responsible parenthood

The Catholic Bishops Conference of the Philippines today expressed appreciation for President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's emphasis on responsible parenthood as a means of population control.

CBCP President Bishop Orlando Quevedo told the President during their meeting at the Music Conference Room that the bishops are extremely grateful for her stressing responsible parenthood.

"We want to express our collective appreciation on your emphasis on responsible parenthood," Quevedo said.

Quevedo was accompanied at the meeting by Bishops Joel Baylon, Pedro Dean, Honesto Ongtongco and Francisco San Diego and Monsignor Hernando Coronel.

Also in attendance were Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes and Brig. Gen. Hermogenes Esperon, chief of operations of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

The President said the government would soon intensify its information campaign on responsible parenthood.

Quevedo told the President that the bishops are contemplating on collaborating with the government on the said campaign.

The President herself expressed appreciation for the bishop's plan, saying she hopes the partnership could be in time for Mother's Day on May 11.

On the occasion of International Women's Day last Saturday, the President called on mothers to promote responsible parenthood, saying it was not a matter of having unlimited children, but being better prepared for the coming of each child.

The President explained that responsible parenthood entailed the right spacing between children to allow the mother to recover her health and for her to take care of her newborn.

She said responsible parenthood called for a regular assessment of the couple's capacity or readiness to have a child.

Citing the economic, psychological, physical, social and other valid reasons for postponing pregnancy, the President said family planning enjoins couples to decide when it is best to have a child.

She stressed that family planning and responsible parenthood were deeply-rooted values acceptable to the Catholic Church, to which most Filipinos belong.

The government has also pursued the natural family planning method being practiced by the Church. "Kaya hindi kailangang maghiwalay ang simbahan at (ang gobyerno) sa family planning," she said.

She added that natural family planning referred to the method and planning for child spacing by observing the fertile and infertile phases of the mother's monthly cycle, with abstinence if pregnancy is to be avoided.

She emphasized that the natural family planning involved very little or no cost.

"You only need to buy a thermometer and recording chart," she said, adding that natural family planning has been internationally known, scientific, practical and 99 percent effective.

The Chief Executive said that this method is being taught by the Department of Health, in cooperation with non-government organizations, in seven regions in the country, and is expected to reach all the regions on May 11, 2003.

GMA finds alert policemen in surprise visit to Caloocan substation

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo expressed satisfaction over the readiness of the police force to address criminality following Monday night's unscheduled visit to the police substation 1 along Malolos Ave. corner G. de Jesus St. in Barangay Bagong Barrio, Caloocan City.

The President said she wanted to personally inspect members of the police force if the men in uniform were doing their job, that time of the night.

The President arrived at the police station at about 10 p.m. from her Forbes Park, Makati residence, where she had dinner with 2002 bar topnotcher Atty. Arlene Maneja of the University of Santo Tomas.

At the station, the President surprised Inspector Arturo Paras, substation officer-in-charge.

Paras said the substation had only four police personnel in the night shift and 17 police officers during the day.

Substation head Chief Inspector Daniel Mayoni arrived later to brief the President. Mayoni arrived from the Polytechnic College where he is taking up his masteral studies.

In an interview, the President said she came to inspect the substation to see the conditions of the police stations, which covered the second highest crime rate in Metro Manila.

"If you remember the first one I visited, it has the highest crime rate. This one has the second highest crime rate. So the impact, to me, the bottom line is: has the crime rate gone down? What have they done since I told them what they should do? That's what I'm checking," she said.

Caloocan City police chief Senior Superintendent Berjardi Mantele arrived shortly after the President arrived, and handed to her a briefing paper on the crime statistics and police efforts in the city.

The President expressed surprise with the readiness of Mantele. She asked him if he knew she was coming and Mantele said no.

But Mantele said that after the President visited the police station in Tondo, he made preparations for a surprise visit.

The President inquired on the police efforts against drugs pushers, loose firearms and possible terrorist infiltration in the area.

In his briefing, Mantele bared police efforts to use out-of-school youth as car washers, utility crew and cleaners in the area.

So far, 20 youths have been given jobs by the city and more will soon follow, he added.

Bagong Barrio barangay captain Letty Maturan also gave the President an informal briefing on the peace and order situation in the area.

Maturan said that in cooperation with the police, local officials have instituted a 10 p.m. curfew for those aged 17 years old and below to curb youth and drug-related crimes.

She assured the President that officials and the police would keep track of strangers entering their areas.

Later in the night, Senior Superintendent Marcelino Franco, district director of the Northern Police District, also arrived.

The President said that earlier in the day, she went to a barangay in Makati and was able to talk with the barangay captain.

“I asked her: Has the station chief started to work out a formal arrangement with you and your barangay tanods? And she said yes. At least, that means they’re complying with my instructions,” she said.

The President also indicated that she might not undertake surprise visits to police stations anymore.

“I do my job as I see the need. I don’t know. Maybe at the most, one more,” she said.

Last February 26, the President made a surprise visit to police station 2 in Moriones, Tondo, the station covering the area of highest crime rate in the metropolis.

Statement of Presidential Spokesperson Ignacio R. Bunye

Law and Order

The military and police shall continue to enforce our laws, secure the civilian population, keep the highways of commerce open, and check movements of armed groups posing a direct threat to peace and order. The AFP shall maintain a posture of active defense.

Peace Initiatives

But our end objective will be peace. Without peace, there can be no development. The President wants a two-tiered peace approach. At the national level, negotiations shall be pursued with the facilitation and assistance of third party nations in order to achieve a comprehensive and durable settlement of the conflict in line with Constitution. Malaysia, even Libya and Bahrain, would like to pitch in.

The President is also encouraging local government executives to conduct their own peace initiatives at the LGU level. Local peace talks are a way of bringing the scattered MILF militias that have lost faith in their leaders, back to the community. Several initiatives are already underway. The government shall welcome back those who renounce armed struggle, disarm and are willing rejoin the mainstream.

As we speak, religious leaders are meeting in Mindanao today at the urging of the President. It is important to stress, through the religious forum, that the AFP-police operations have nothing to do with religion. It has everything to do with law and order.

This is no time for political grandstanding. We ask our political leaders to pull with the government in the same direction – peace, development and justice.

Budget

We thank Congress for passing the budget after a careful and review. Essential services will be given utmost priority as we strive to build up the strength of our economy to meet crisis in several fronts.

IRAQ Situation

The President continues to hope for the best but gives assurances that we have prepared for the worst. Preparations to keep our OFWs out of harms way started as early as last year with the sending of our Middle East preparedness team. We continue to pray for a peaceful solution, even as we must steel ourselves for the possibility of war and its consequences.

BSP declares micro-financing as flagship program in poverty alleviation

In compliance with the directive of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas has declared micro-finance as its flagship program for poverty alleviation and has undertaken specific measures in promoting the program within the banking sector.

In a report, the BSP said that it has also achieved significant gains in training and capacity building for the micro-finance program within the BSP.

The BSP said their efforts have shown remarkable results. To date, there are two micro-finance oriented rural banks, namely Vision and Banco ng Masa, and two micro-finance oriented thrift banks, Opportunity Bank and Microenterprise Bank, both created under Circular 273, with 100 percent micro-finance portfolios.

In addition, the BSP said, there are now 27 cooperative rural banks and 85 rural banks throughout the country that have micro-finance operations.

These banks are currently reaching over 300,000 micro-finance clients, the BSP said, adding that more formal financial institutions are moving to engage in micro-finance while informal, and unregulated institutions are moving toward formalization and venturing into activities that they did not previously undertake such as deposit taking and savings mobilization.

On training, the BSP conducted another micro-finance seminar in La Union last March 10, 2003.

The La Union seminar was part of the BSP micro-finance regional advocacy program, which was launched last January in Cebu City.

The regional advocacy program is a series of information seminars that will be held in the strategic regions of the country to promote the development of sustainable micro-finance.

According to the BSP, the end goal of this program is to catalyze the development of sustainable micro-finance institutions in the country to be able to reach a larger number of entrepreneurial poor.

Earlier, National Anti-Poverty Commission (NAPC) Lead Convenor Teresita Deles reported to the President that some 600,000 poor women have availed themselves of the small loan program in 2002.

This represented an increase of 160 percent from the 372,349 women-borrowers registered in 2001, Deles said.

Deles said that the growth of micro-financing program reflected the people's acceptance of the President's commitment to implement activities that would spur national social growth and economic development.

Technology transfer program for SMEs presented to GMA by DOST, NEDA

A technology transfer program that would respond to the needs of small and medium enterprises was presented today by the Department of Science and Technology (DOST) to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the National Economic and Development Authority.

Dubbed Small Enterprise Technology Upgrading Program or SETUP, the program is aimed at strengthening the SMEs, one of the first items in the President's eight-point agenda.

DOST Secretary Estrella Alabastro said the program integrates all the efforts of the department's agencies and responds to certain articulated needs of small enterprises.

"This is really a response to the President's call that we should refocus our efforts on SMEs," Alabastro said during a press briefing that followed the NEDA board executive meeting in Malacañang.

Alabastro enumerated five areas considered critical in the performance of the SME sector. These are appropriate technologies, technical manpower training, need for information, product standards and testing facilities and appropriate packaging.

She said the DOST is implementing the program through its regional offices.

The allotted DOST budget for the program for 2003 is more than P100 million. They spent P100 million for this program last year.

"What we are doing now is we are linking up with other government financial institutions and seeing what additional funds can be accessed," she added.

Saying they will help SMEs access these funds from the GFIs, Alabastro said they are now doing a monthly road show to particular regions and look at the projects being implemented through their SETUP projects.

ADB report on RP performance more of a historical account, says Neri

Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri today said that the report of the Asian Development Bank (ADB) that the Philippines was the worst performer among the ASEAN nations on ADB-funded projects is more of a historical account rather than an indictment of the present administration.

In a press statement he issued in a briefing in Malacañang this afternoon, Neri said that most of the unsuccessful projects cited by the ADB were completed before the end of the 1980s.

This involved some 36 completed projects, which were mostly approved before 1986, Neri said.

In a report, the ADB said that it had lent the Philippines a total of $5.9 billion for 86 projects during the 1986-2001 review period and out of this number, only 36 were completed.

ADB country director Thomas Crouch said that the Philippine performance "comes out rather less" than its neighbors in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

Neri, who is also the director general of the National Economic and Development Authority (NEDA), said that the problem projects were mostly in agriculture and in the natural resources sector.

He said that the ADB report had acknowledged that there have been signs of improvement in the 1990s.

According to Neri, the assessment of the ADB showed that as of December 2001, none of the 45 ongoing projects funded by the ADB would likely be unsatisfactory.

Neri said that the government has actually sought these types of feedback and evaluation from the ADB so that it can get lessons from its past performance.

“So, I’m happy that this project evaluation has come out, because it will serve as information for us on how we can improve future projects and how to avoid mistakes that had been done way back in the past,” Neri said.

Even if our performance has improved, the government is still looking for ways on how to improve this further, Neri said.

Re Allegations of Noel Sanchez

These allegations are the product of a fertile but confused mind. By his own admission, there was nothing irregular with the release of the funds to representatives since the money would be used for the electrification of the barangays in their district. So how could this constitute bribery? The checks were issued in the name of electric cooperatives and not in the name of individual members of Congress.

Further, these allegations are a rehash of charges which have already been investigated and dismissed by the Ombudsman in a resolution dated July 26, 2002.

For quick reference, let me quote the pertinent findings of the Ombudsman on the matter:

“The allegation that the fastbreak release of P470 million was part of the lobby money doled out to some Congressman is devoid of truth. There is no evidence unearthed to substantiate the allegation. The allegation is purely speculative.

****

“It clearly appears from the foregoing that the release of P470 million fund for the O' Ilaw Program have (sic) been aboveboard. The release of P470 million to NEA, four days after Congress approved the Electric Industry Power Reform Act, belied the claimed that it was used to bribe the Legislator (sic).”

For the record, Mr. Sanchez is now facing charges before the Ombudsman for alleged irregularities in the bidding for the purchase of electric posts used by NEA.

Mr. Sanchez is obviously using this gimmick to solicit public sympathy.

GMA calls on all the people to do their share in these times of crisis

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on all the people to do their share – and not merely rely on the government – in these times of crisis not only in the Philippines but throughout the world.

“Dito sa mga mahirap na panahon – ito ay mahirap na panahon hindi lamang dito sa ating bansa kundi sa buong mundo – ang kailangan siguro ay bawat isa sa atin, hanapin natin kung ano ang puede nating magawa para sa ating bansa (In these times of crisis – these are, indeed, times of crisis not only in our country but throughout the world –

what is expected of each of us is to find out what we can do for the country),” said the President during a morning interview on television.

Paraphrasing the words of United States President John F. Kennedy during his inaugural address on January 20, 1961, the President said: “Huwag nating isipin lamang parati – ano ang dapat gawin ng bansa para sa atin (Let us not always ask what the country for do for us).”

Rather, the President said, “Let’s ask ourselves: ano ang dapat magawa para sa bansa para sa panahon na ito (What must we do for our country in these difficult times).”

During the same TV interview, the President reiterated her offer of peace to rebels who will renounce violence and terrorism.

The President said she was not merely opening to door to peace. “Inaalok ang kapayapaan sa kanino man o sino man na tatanggi sa karahasan (We are offering peace and will negotiate peace with anyone who renounces violence and terrorism),” the President added.

The President pointed out that she has urged local government executives, including provincial governors and city and town mayors, to talk peace with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) in their localities.

During an informal meeting with the members of the Malacañang Press Corps last Monday, the President said the government has already presented a draft peace agreement to both the Communist Party of the Philippines-New People’s Army (CPP-NPA) and the MILF.

“So, to anybody who wants to renounce terrorism and violence, there is the peace agreement for them to consider,” the President said.

The President, however, also warned those who will continue to engage in violence and terror activities that the government will apply the full force of the law against them.

“The important thing is that the military and the police are ready to enforce the law as they have been enforcing the law,” the President said.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio Bunye also stressed in a statement issued earlier that the government’s end objective is peace, adding that without peace, there can be no development.

Bunye said that at the national level, peace negotiations would be pursued with the facilitation and assistance of third-party nations in order to achieve a comprehensive and durable settlement of the conflict and in line with the Constitution.

“Local peace talks are a way of bringing the scattered MILF militias that have lost faith in their leaders back to the community,” Bunye said.

GMA says Reyes one of ‘most obedient Cabinet members’

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she continues to have full trust and confidence in Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes amidst calls for his resignation.

“In fact, Secretary Reyes is one of my most obedient Cabinet members,” the President said in an interview with Magandang Umaga Bayan, a morning television talk show.

The President said that almost without question, Reyes followed all her instructions.

The President's reaction was made in the wake of allegations that on several occasions, Reyes has disobeyed her orders, including the military assault on the Buliok Complex in Pikit, North Cotabato that was supposedly undertaken without the go-signal from the President.

According to the President, there are times when Reyes does not agree with her decision but after discussions between the two of them, in the end it was her decision that Reyes would follow.

"He has not indicated or given any hint that we did not agree on a certain issue," the President said.

GMA bares her human side in TV interview

It's not all war and terrorist threats for the lady that keeps the nation going.

Like any other school kid who had crushes, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo bared her human side to the public this morning, recalling her days as a student at Georgetown University where she had former US President Bill Clinton as classmate to those lambada sessions with First Gentleman Jose Miguel "Mike" Arroyo that served as her social life prior to her ascent to the Presidency.

The President appeared relaxed and unperturbed by the recent developments in the South when she gamely answered all questions thrown at her by Magandang Umaga Bayan hosts Edu Manzano and Erwin Tulfo who broadcast their early-morning show live from the Malacañang gardens.

Resplendent in her all-red dress, Mrs. Arroyo also touched on her "apo," first grandson by Pampanga Vice Governor Juan Miguel "Mikey" Arroyo.

As a 16-year-old daughter to then President Diosdado Macapagal, the President said she learned to count her blessings, adding that she had not dreamed of becoming another person other than her present position because she believes in fate.

She also explained why she allowed Mikey to run for vice governor of Pampanga while she did not sign the appointment papers of her daughter Luli who was a topnotcher of the Foreign Service Officers exams.

"Yung kay Mikey, hindi ko hawak ang pagiging bise gobernador niya, samantalang ang kay Luli, nasa kamay ko ang appointment niya. Ayokong may masabi sa akin ang mga tao" (On Mikey's case, I was not responsible for his being governor but in Luli's case, her appointment has to passed through me. I don't want people to say anything), the President said.

But while the President presented her other side, she also gave justice to her tag as a firm lady when she warned those who will continue to use violent means in achieving their goals that they will meet the full force of the law.

"The negotiating table is open to those who will renounce violence," the President said.

Take clear moves to work for peace in Mindanao, GMA urges MILF

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) to take clear and specific moves to step out of the boundaries of terrorism and truly work for peace in Mindanao.

"So it must stop all terrorist acts," the President said in a press briefing this afternoon at the State Dining Room of Malacañang.

The President said the MILF leaders must issue "unequivocal statement proscribing terrorism as a means to attain its objectives.

The MILF must also cooperate in bringing terrorist justice, the President said, pointing out that after all, the MILF is committed under several accords to bring criminals and terrorists to justice and to support development initiatives in poor Muslim communities.

The President, however, expressed sadness that the MILF does not have much to show for these commitments in front of its followers and the whole Islamic community.

As far as the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) is concerned, the President said, it is in a posture of “active defense.” “That is my instructions,” she said.

The President, who is the commander in chief of the AFP, said that while a line of communication for peace negotiation is being opened or being made available to the MILF to spare more civilians from dislocation and suffering, the military and police shall secure the civilian population, keep highways of commerce open and check movements of armed groups posing a direct threat to peace and order.

She said peace negotiations are still an option with the facilitation and assistance of third parties aimed at achieving a comprehensive and durable settlement of the conflict in Mindanao in line with the Constitution.

Local peace talks are a way of bringing the scattered MILF militia, who have lost faith in their leaders, back to the community, the President said.

According to the President, several initiatives are already underway.

The Chief Executive said she likewise welcomes back those who renounce armed struggle, those who are willing to disarm and want to join the mainstream of peace and development and justice.

She also thanked the political leaders who have expressed support for her policy, “because after all this is no time for political grandstanding.”

The President said she had a meeting in Malacañang this morning with the Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. and the chairmen of defense committees of both houses, the chairmen of the foreign relations committees of both houses and two congressmen from Mindanao.

GMA cites Malaysia’s role in GRP-MILF peace talks

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that the Philippines would continue to avail itself of the “role of Malaysia as a third party facilitator” in peace talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

This had been what Malaysia has “really been doing with great success all this time,” the President told a press conference in Malacañang this afternoon.

“We would want them to continue to help us in that way,” she said.

The President said she had instructed Special Envoy Roberto Romulo to apprise acting Malaysian Prime Minister Abdullah Badawi on the situation in southern Philippines and government efforts to push for peaceful initiatives to solve the Mindanao conflict.

Romulo was expected to meet with Badawi in Kuala Lumpur this week.

“Romulo knows Badawi very well. They were foreign ministers together at the same time,” the President said.

Malaysia had been hosting peace negotiations between the government and the MILF.

The talks have led to the signing of a ceasefire agreement and several protocols, one of them committing the MILF to helping government fight against criminals, particularly kidnap-for-ransom groups.

The President also stressed that she does not want to deal with the MILF “through the media.”

“The administration is making available that option of peace with the facilitation and assistance of a third party,” she added, referring to Malaysia.

Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammad, in bilateral talks with President Macapagal-Arroyo during the 13th Non-Aligned Movement Summit in Kuala Lumpur late last month, offered to facilitate and play an active role in the talks with the MILF.

Balikatan can be held in places where they are welcomed — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that personally, she would not mind holding the Balikatan exercises in North Cotabato, saying the war exercise can be held in any other place “where it is wanted, where it is invited.”

The President revealed that all offers for the holding of the exercises in various areas are being considered but that it will be just an operational decision on the part of the Department of Defense on whether to transfer the Balikatan 03-1 from Jolo, Sulu to another venue.

“I gave Secretary (Angelo) Reyes the instruction that if they are not wanted in Sulu, the exercises can be put in any other place where they are wanted, where they are invited,” she said. “And actually, there are many provinces that have already invited us to put the exercises there,” the President added.

North Cotabato cropped up as an alternate venue for the joint Philippines-US military exercises when its Governor, Emmanuel Pinol, appealed to the President and Reyes to consider the province for the exercises, saying the provincial board had already passed a resolution affirming his request.

Pinol was quoted to have said that the development projects undertaken in Basilan during last year’s Balikatan could be replicated in his province.

For his part, Reyes said he had asked Defense and AFP officials to study Pinol’s proposal, saying it is encouraging that governors like Pinol are volunteering to host the Balikatan 03-1.

Thwarting attempts to link the holding of the exercises in places where there are armed enemy groups, the President said: “You know we have exercises going on in Zamboanga and there are no enemies in Zamboanga. We have been conducting exercises in Nueva Ecija, in Cavite and there are no armed groups there. So we don’t have to tie up putting the exercises where there are armed enemy groups.”

She also cleared the notion that the military is on an all-out offensive against the enemies in the South, saying the instructions to them are clear – to run after lawless elements and enforce the law.

“So the position of active defense is something that is understandable to them. It’s different from all-out war and its different from just parrying off those who try to attack their positions,” the President said.

Gov’t looking for ways on how to reduce the PPA of First Gas in MERALCO bill

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that she has directed Energy Secretary Vince Perez to look for ways on how the Manila Electric Co. (MERALCO) can reduce its purchased power adjustment (PPA) and lower the cost of electricity to the general public.

In a press briefing in Malacañang this afternoon, the President said one of the components of the PPA being collected by MERALCO are the deferred charges now being billed to the power firm by First Gas Corporation, which is also owned by the Lopez group of companies.

The President said that last year, she had ordered the National Power Corporation (NAPOCOR) to reduce its PPA by P0.40 per kilowatt hour by lengthening the payment period of NAPOCOR's financial obligations.

She said that Perez is now having a dialogue with First Gas to look for a way on how to lengthen the putting of its deferred charges on the bill.

"If that is successful, then we will be able to have another source of reducing the PPA to mitigate the other sources of increase," the President said.

The President said that what the government is proposing is not an intervention in the market forces nor a price control mechanism.

"It is working through the market because in the interest of the market, it is helping technically to look for a way for First Gas to do what NAPOCOR did last year because NAPOCOR sells power to MERALCO and so does First Gas," she said.

The President assured the people that the government is "trying to do everything it can" to alleviate the plight of the consumers.

GMA lauds trinity works, wise holdings for $5-M cargo, aviation investments in Batangas

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited executives of Trinity Works of Texas and Wise Holdings, Inc. for believing in the Philippines as a business haven and for seeking to invest some $5 million in two big-ticket projects in Batangas province.

The President congratulated Trinity Works president Isaac Manning, Wise Holdings Inc. chairman Rene Francisco and other company officials.

She also wished them "good luck" during a courtesy call at Malacañang's Music Room.

Trinity Works and Wise Holdings are ready to construct and operate the Phase 3 cargo project of the Batangas Port.

The same companies are also proposing to convert the Fernando Air Base in Lipa City as a general aviation and alternate airport of Ninoy Aquino International Airport.

The President also ordered Batangas Governor Hermilando Mandanas and Undersecretary Noel Quintanar of the Department of Trade and Industry to complete all necessary documentary requirements for Trinity Works before April 4.

She wanted business signing for the memorandum of agreement for the Trinity Works projects to be made in New York or Washington during her visit to the United States next month.

Governor Mandanas assured the President that the requirements to start the project would be made before the deadline.

Mandanas added that the two firms have completed studies on improving the transportation system in Batangas ports. He said the studies started in 2001.

RP to wait for UN Security Council vote before making stand on U.S.-led attack on Iraq — GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the Philippines would wait for the vote in the United Nations Security Council before making an official stand on a United States-led attack on Iraq.

“We should give a chance for the UN process to work and I’m sure it will,” the President said during a press briefing at the State Dining Room of Malacañang. “We should not declare our position on a hypothetical situation lest we be a laughing stock.”

The President was reacting to questions on when she would convene the National Security Council given the worsening situation in the Persian Gulf.

The President said that in her earlier statements, including the one she made at 13th Non-Aligned Movement (NAM) Summit in Kuala Lumpur last month, she had called on Iraq to comply with the UN directive for him to fully disarm to avert war in the Middle East.

In that summit, the President urged Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to “urgently negotiate a win-win settlement that will spare the heroic Iraqi people the agonies of a devastating war.”

She also called on Saddam to “take the initiative and invite the UN Secretary General, the UN inspectors, representatives of doubting countries and of the international media to see for themselves if Iraq really possessed weapons of mass destruction.”

The President said that only broad statements of principles were made in her meeting with congressmen and senators this morning, and that she would rather wait for the UN decision before convening the National Security Council.

She added that anytime the UN Security Council makes a vote, automatically, the National Security Council will be convened to make our own official stand on the matter.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and President Bush spoke by phone (last night) and mutually agreed to postpone the state visit planned for April. Given the press of events concerning Iraq, the state visit will be re-scheduled for later in the spring.

The postponement was agreed to for very practical considerations. Both leaders will have added responsibilities should hostilities occur, and they need to bring to bear the full weight of their attention on these matters. President Macapagal-Arroyo will need to stay focused on the safety of all overseas Philippine workers as well as domestic peace and order.

Postponing will allow both sides to deal with issues of the day and be able to focus more clearly on the bi-lateral relationships between both nations during a well-structured state visit.

Bush expresses deep appreciation to GMA for strong, consistent leadership on Iraq issue

United States President George W. Bush spoke with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night as part of the US leader's telephone diplomacy in connection with the Iraq situation and expressed deep appreciation for the Filipino Chief Executive's "strong, consistent moral leadership in demanding immediate and complete disarmament by the Baghdad government."

White House Press Secretary Ari Fleischer announced in Washington, D. C. Wednesday (Thursday in Manila) that the two leaders discussed the security situation in the Philippines and President Bush expressed strong support for President Macapagal-Arroyo's efforts to defeat terror and bring prosperity to the Philippines and in Mindanao.

"The two leaders agreed to continue to consult closely on how the United States can support the Philippines further in the war against terror," Fleischer told White House reporters during his regular briefing.

Fleischer also said President Bush was looking forward to the state visit of President Macapagal-Arroyo to the US late this spring.

"The President looks forward to celebrating our excellent bilateral relationships with the Republic of the Philippines on that occasion," the White House spokesman said.

President Macapagal-Arroyo was among the world leaders President Bush called during what Fleischer called "a busy day of telephone diplomacy" on the Iraq situation.

That same day, the US President also called Russian President Vladimir Putin, Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf and Sheik Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan, leader of the United Arab Emirates.

GMA spells out do's and don'ts for field commanders in military operations

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today authorized all field commanders of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) to make tactical decisions within their areas of responsibility but at the same time reminded them of the strategic implications of their actions.

In a joint AFP-PNP command conference this morning at the Heroes Hall of Malacañang, the President, who is the Commander in Chief of the AFP, stressed that a tactical operation acquires strategic implications when it involves public perceptions beyond the immediate area of military operations.

Field commanders, according to the President, must learn to take into consideration the adverse consequences of their decisions to the general state of law and order, socio-economic activity and political stability within or beyond their immediate areas of operation.

In a memorandum to Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, the President enumerated several points that field commanders should consider whenever they make tactical decisions and conduct operations.

These are:

1. The least possible impact of such operations on the larger community of non-combatants, especially on their livelihood and normal conduct of everyday life;
2. Minimum evacuation from homes and/or areas of food production;
3. Close coordination with pertinent agencies of government within his or her area of responsibility when socio-economic dislocations are expected or become imminent as a result of such operations;
4. Full public safety assessments, in coordination with the Philippine National Police, for areas prone to conflict spillover or collateral acts of terrorism;
5. Strategic sensitivity to peace processes and/or negotiations with affected armed groups; and
6. Overall adherence to national policies and public interest.

GMA to harness military, police, local gov'ts, community in fight against armed criminals

Taking into consideration the fact that armed criminal groups are now operating like armies, the government is planning to implement a holistic approach in law enforcement which would harness the joint efforts of the military, the police, the local governments and the communities.

In a joint command conference of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police at the Heroes Hall of Malacañang today, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, as Commander in Chief, advocated a new revolution in military thinking which seeks to neutralize criminal elements who have become bolder and more aggressive because they have the weapons and methods that characterize armies.

“If you remember from all my speeches in the frequent changes of command in the AFP and even in the less frequent occasion in the PNP, I have been invoking the new revolution in military thinking that this traditional division of labor is more blurred now because many of the criminal groups operate like armies,” the President said.

Reacting to peace advocates questioning the use of the military in running after lawless elements, the Commander in Chief said the Philippines is not alone in this aspect because all over the world, countries fighting the challenge of terrorism have also used their respective militaries.

She cited the case of Colombia which has long used its military in fighting the drug lords who have their own respective armies.

“And now we have all these networks that are existing all over the world especially in Southeast Asia,” she said.

The holistic approach to armed threats is embedded in the Internal Security Plan under the paradigm of clear, hold, consolidate, and develop. Clearing, she said is the job of the military, holding is the job of the police and the CAFGU, while consolidation and development are joint tasks of the local and national governments.

The President stressed that there must be a tight interweave between the Internal Security Plan and the Criminal Justice System under which all law enforcement agencies, the prosecution, the courts, the correctionals and the community operate.

“We need synergy and seamless interaction, like the gears in a machine,” Mrs. Arroyo said. “Intelligence, operations and media approaches must be effectively fused so that the public will see a single, integrated, smooth operation, not a multiplicity of diverse actions.”

During the command conference, the President reiterated the standing policy for the Mindanao peace and order problem which is to give full rein to the imperatives of peace, development and justice.

This means, she said, that peace negotiations will be pursued with the facilitation and assistance of third-party nations; development will be pursued in line with overall national economic plans; and justice will be pursued against those engaged in terrorism and organized crime separate from the pursuit of peace and development process.

“The law will spare no one, but due process will be observed at all times without resorting to vigilantism against any community or religious group,” she said.

Short Gulf war would have less adverse effect on RP, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said last night that if war breaks out in the Middle East, she hopes it would be short so that its adverse effect on the Philippines could be minimized.

In an interview with Channel 7’s Jessica Sojo Wednesday evening, the President said the direct impact on the Philippines of a war in Iraq would be on the price of oil and the price of basic commodities.

“Kaya kung sakaling magkaroon ng giyera, mas mabilis matapos, mas mabuti (So, if there is war, the sooner it will be over, the better),” the President said.

The President said that the government has sounded out thousands of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in the Middle East if they would like to come home because of the impending war in the Gulf.

She said only about 10 percent has indicated that they would like to come home but not because they are afraid but because their families back home fear for their safety in case of war.

The President said that being the leader of the country, who has been keenly observing the developments abroad, she “hopes for the best but prepares for the worst.”

“Kaya habang nagdarasal tayo para sa kapayapaan ay naghahanda rin tayo (That’s why while we are praying for peace, we must also be prepared for any eventuality),” the President said.

When asked what position will she take if the United States unilaterally attacks Iraq, the President said this is a hypothetical question.

“Hintayin natin na iyong proseso ng United Nations ay lumakad (Let’s just wait for the UN process to move),” the President said.

GMA notes PNP efforts to combat street crimes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today took note of the efforts of the Philippine National Police to institutionalize links with the barangay tanod in the administration's campaign against street crimes, pressing the PNP officers and men to work harder for law and order and the long-term strategy of the administration for justice, peace and development.

During a joint command conference of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the PNP in Malacañang, the President expressed satisfaction for the positive action being taken by the police on her recommendations on the campaign against street crimes.

"The fact that you are catching would-be saboteurs, or would be-bombers shows how well you are carrying out these preparations," the President said.

During their last command conference on February 21, the President ordered the PNP officers and personnel to link up with the barangay chairmen and tanods and mobilize them in the fight against street crimes.

The President said that in the different barangays she visited, she was informed that the barangay tanods, or neighborhood watchmen/law enforcers, have started their training under the supervision of the chiefs of the police stations.

"You can see that the institutionalized links really help to reduce the crime rates," the President said.

Stating that times have been difficult for the last three years and times may become even more difficult in the next three months, the President urged the PNP officers and men to continue to continue their good work.

PNP Deputy Director General Reynaldo Velasco, giving a status report on the campaign against street crimes, said that in the three weeks after the President's conference with the PNP field and station commanders, street crimes have been reduced to 152 cases, compared to the 264 cases during the three weeks immediately preceding the February 21 meeting.

Velasco said that 23,00 barangay tanods in 1,600 barangays have also been mobilized, in coordination with the mayors and barangay captains, for the campaign against street crimes.

The police chiefs and stations have already conducted 346 seminars and installed police supervisors in the frontlines, "in order that the tanods will be supervised properly and remove the impression that there might be some violations that would be committed by the tanods," Velasco said.

"We have just completed the trainor seminars for all our chiefs of police and our precinct commanders, in order that we can enhance the training of all barangay tanods," Velasco informed the President.

Not running in 2004 affords her to make even unpopular decisions, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today reiterated that she has not budged from her earlier decision not to run in next year's elections as she said that she can now make even unpopular decisions for as long as they are right and good for the people.

In a late night interview with Channel 7's Jessica Sojo Wednesday, the President said that because of her announcement last Dec. 30, 2002 that she is not running in 2004, she was able to accomplish more.

The President said that she does not have to think now of the support or the reaction of the various groups or sectors on her decisions.

“Basta ano ang tama iyan ang pinakaimportanting basehan ng aking desisyon (What I think is right is the number one consideration in making my decisions),” the President said.

In the same interview, the President also touched on the state of her health, saying that her bill of health “is almost 100 percent.”

The President said that what makes her health less than 100 percent is that her cholesterol count is a little high.

She added however, that this is being remedied by doing some aerobics along with her aides and some female staff in Malacañang.

She also said that her grandchild, daughter of Pampanga Vice Governor Mikey Arroyo, usually visits her in the evening.

The President said that she talks to her granddaughter in Spanish, “so that she will learn Spanish.”

GMA hails Kuala Lumpur role in peace process in Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed appreciation for Malaysia’s contribution to the government’s peace process with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

The President relayed her appreciation during a courtesy call of Malaysia’s Minister of Transport Dato Seri Dr. Ling Liong Sik at the Music Room in Malacañang.

The President noted that she sent Senior Adviser on International Competitiveness Roberto Romulo to Kuala Lumpur specifically to confer with acting Prime Minister Abdullah Badawi on how Malaysia could continue helping the Philippines in its peace process with the MILF.

“We still are relying on Malaysia to be the third party facilitator for the peace process with the MILF,” the President said.

Romulo, the President noted, was the Philippine foreign secretary when Badawi was likewise Malaysia’s foreign minister.

The President noted that Romulo would convey to Badawi that the Philippines continues to pursue the peace process with the MILF.

“We consider Malaysia a very dear and close friend,” the President said.

Malaysia had hosted negotiations between the Philippines and the MILF, which led to a ceasefire agreement in 2001.

Meanwhile, the President noted the development programs of the government in bringing the Clark Special Economic Zone and the Subic Bay Freeport as one unit with the construction of a major road linking the two, bringing travel time to one-half hour.

The President likewise discussed the advantage of having the Diosdado Macapagal International Airport in Clark as an alternate airport for overseas Filipinos who will be proceeding further to Northern Luzon.

Malaysian Ambassador to Manila Mohammad Taufik accompanied the Malaysian Minister during the call. Transportation and Communications Secretary Leandro Mendoza was also present.

Palace says Europe trip postponement still not official

Malacañang today said that the visit of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to Europe has not been officially postponed yet as the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) is awaiting word from the three host governments on their reaction to a possible postponement of her European trip next week.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said that the President asked the DFA to sound out the governments of Spain, Italy, Germany and the Vatican on a possible postponement of her trip.

“However, at this time we don’t have any confirmation yet. We don’t have any word yet from the governments involved,” Bunye said in a regular press briefing this afternoon.

Earlier, Bunye confirmed that the visit of the President to the United States this coming April was postponed right after her telephone conversation with US President George W. Bush Wednesday night.

The two leaders, Bunye said, mutually agreed to the postponement of the President’s visit to the United States due to “practical considerations” with the impending conflict in Iraq.

He also said that there is a need for the President to focus her attention on the government’s preparation for the welfare of the overseas Filipino workers in the Middle East and to attend to the immediate domestic concerns in the country.

“So it will be better if the visit will be rescheduled for a time when both leaders could concentrate and they could talk more and address the issues of the day,” Bunye explained.

Gov’t to employ all legal means to save Filipino sentenced to death in Malaysia

Malacañang today assured the family of Andy Baguindah that the government is employing all legal means to help and save him from the death penalty imposed by the Malaysian government.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye confirmed reports that Baguindah was granted a reprieve for 30 days and his scheduled execution this coming Friday (March 14) has been suspended.

Bunye said the Malaysian government is now conducting a thorough review of Baguindah’s case after acting Prime Minister Abdullah Badawi ordered the reevaluation of the charges brought up against him.

“The reprieve was for 30 days and I believe the (Malaysian) government is really reviewing the case of this Filipino prisoner,” Bunye said in a press briefing this afternoon.

Bunye said Badawi granted the reprieve after Presidential Adviser on Foreign Affairs Roberto Romulo, who was in Malaysia, relayed the government’s request to suspend the execution and review the case of Baguindah.

He also said that the acting Prime Minister assured the Philippine government that Baguindah would be given due process and Manila will be informed on the development of the review of his case.

Baguindah, 25, a carpenter from Siocon, Zamboanga del Norte, was convicted of drug trafficking and illegal possession of firearms.

Anti-Smuggling Task Force intercepts P5M in frozen chicken, garlic, garments

The government scored anew in its campaign against smuggling as elements of the Anti-Smuggling Task Force intercepted four refrigerated vans containing some P5 million worth of frozen chicken and garlic as well as garments.

Brig. Gen. Hermogenes Esperon, Deputy Chief of Staff of Operations, said the confiscated goods lacked the necessary documents and will be condemned by burying as specified in their memorandum of agreement with the Bureau of Customs and the Department of Agriculture.

"This is a continuation of what we are doing," said Esperon during a press briefing yesterday. "Even if I have moved to GHQ, I still head the Task Force Blue Collar directed by the President."

Esperon said he has the permission of Armed Forces of the Philippines Chief of Staff Gen. Dionisio Santiago to deploy forces to join the anti-smuggling elements from the Customs, the police and other agencies that are involved in the Anti-Smuggling Task Force.

He added that the possibility of donating the goods has been explored, but cautioned on the chances of their being shifted or ending up in the hands of other recipients.

"We don't want to see a repeat of previous instances where smuggled goods ended up in the 'ukay-ukay' or commercial stalls," Esperon said.

The President ordered Esperon last December to intensify the monitoring and subsequent confiscation of illegally imported products.

The President also gave Esperon and the task force full authority to inspect all incoming refrigerated vans in all ports of entry in the country.

The task force operations were aimed at arresting the smuggling of imported meat and vegetable products which has been hurting local farmers and growers.

"The improvement of the economy is the President's number one priority, and this is our way of helping the President realize that priority goal," Esperon said.

GMA monitoring developments in Gulf

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is monitoring developments in the Persian Gulf in a bid to consolidate all efforts to ensure the safety and welfare of Filipino expatriates in the area.

Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye today said the President wants all concerned government operatives to be ready in carrying out well laid out preparations for Filipinos in the Middle East in case war breaks out in Iraq.

Besides her concern on Filipinos expatriates, the President has been reminding government agencies to come up with viable programs that would help mitigate the negative effects of a US-Iraq conflict on the socio-economic growth of the country, Bunye said.

In a radio interview, he said the President has been in close contact with Philippine embassy officials in Iraq and the Middle East.

He added that the Chief Executive has “real time information” on developments in the Gulf and regular reports are being relayed to her by the Department of Foreign Affairs.

She also gets information from other sources, like foreign governments, Bunye said.

He added that while everyone is praying for a peaceful solution to the US-Iraq crisis so that war will be averted, the President intends to call a meeting of the National Security Council (NSC) as soon as the United Nations Security Council issues its final resolution on the Iraq case.

The NSC will discuss further government moves to keep the country and the people safe and secured from the perceived temporary setbacks the US-Iraq war may bring.

GMA restates 4 components of gov't policy on Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today restated the four major components of the government's Mindanao policy in the midst of renewed threats to the island's peace and stability.

In an interview with Radio Veritas this morning, the President said on top of this policy is to ensure both peace and development in the region because, according to her, the two should go hand in hand if Mindanao is to progress.

Secondly, the President said, any peace and stability in Mindanao should be based on the principle of territorial integrity and on the Philippine Constitution.

The President said that the third component is to realize that the Philippines has various cultural and ethnic groups that should be respected and given due recognition.

She said that even before the September 11, 2001 terror attacks in the United States, the Philippines already had a fourth component to its Mindanao policy, and that is the fight against local terrorists, notably the Abu Sayyaf.

The President also explained that the “active defense” posture that she has ordered the military to observe in Mindanao needs the cooperation of the community and not just police or military vigilance.

“Kailangan iyong community mismo ay alerto at kailangang may preemptive diplomacy (The community itself should be alert and there is a need for preemptive diplomacy),” the President said.

GMA warns economic saboteurs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today warned economic saboteurs that they will risk the wrath of the government if they don't stop their currency speculations.

Three foreign banks are reportedly being investigated by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) for allegedly engaging in illegal currency speculations involving $640 million that may have led to the sharp fall of the peso against the dollar.

In a radio interview, the President underscored the need to return as soon as possible to what is called “financial normalcy.”

The President also stressed that the holistic approach to peace should be widely communicated so that the nervousness being experienced can be reduced.

While everything is being done until a semblance of normalcy is returned, the interests and well being of the citizenry is uppermost in our minds and hearts, the President said.

In these difficult times, with the impending war in the Middle East, the President emphasized the need for cooperation and support of government from everyone, “so that immediately, the world and the Philippines can return to stability and normalcy, which is our wish for our country.”

Gov't committed to bring back normalcy to Pikit and environs

The sooner normalcy returns to Liguasan Marsh and the surrounding areas, the better it would be for the people affected by the recent skirmishes between the military and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

This, in a way, summed up President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's determined efforts to rehabilitate Liguasan and the people who evacuated the nearby Buliok Complex at the height of renewed fighting between government soldiers and the MILF.

In an early morning radio interview with Radio Veritas today, the President bared government plans to put up programs, in coordination with the non-government organizations (NGOs), that would restore normalcy to the affected areas and attain sustainable peace and development.

“Nais nang ating pamahalaan na makabalik sila doon sa tinitirhan nila dati, at yung lugar na iyon na kasama na rin nila sa pagpapalano ay maglalagay tayo nang mga program na nakabatay sa kanilang mga sariling pamayanan (The government wants the people there to go back to their respective homes and in these places, we'll put up programs based on their respective communities),” she said.

The Chief Executive congratulated the men and women in uniform involved in the fight against terrorism, saying their vigilance has contributed a lot to the ongoing peace operations.

“Dahil sa kanilang vigilance ay nahuli nila yung ilang merong balak magtanim ng terorismo dito sa Metro Manila, (Because of their vigilance, we were able to catch those who have tried to sow terrorism in Metro Manila)” the President said. “At laban sa mga krimen sa lansangan ay naging matagumpay rin sila (And against street crimes, they were also successful),” she added.

The President took the occasion to explain that the government's active defense posture with regard to armed threats is in answer to the public's request for peace.

Along with a vigilant police, an alert citizenry and a pre-emptive diplomacy, the President said she sees no reason why the peace efforts would fail.

She said that the military's active defense posture would continue until the MILF is forced to go back to the negotiating table.

In the same interview, the President cited the support expressed by the Association of Generals and Flag Officers (AGFO), urging the people, cause oriented groups, civic leaders and members of Congress including the Commission on Human Rights to rally behind the government and the AFP in the fight against terrorism.

“Ako ay nagpapasalamat sa kanila, kasi yan hindi lang collateral damage, talagang tinarget diyan ang sibilyan. At yan ang pinakakilos ng terorismo (I thank them for their support because really what happened was not just collateral damage. They really targetted the civilians and that’s the way of terrorism),” the President said.

GMA accepts resignation of Liban as TESDA Head

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today accepted the resignation Dante Liban as Director General of the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA).

In a press briefing this afternoon with the members of the Malacañang Press Corps, the President said she will be selecting soon Liban’s replacement from a short list of nominees submitted to her.

“I have a short list, so I will announce it (replacement) soon,” the President said.

The President confirmed that Liban has submitted his resignation letter through Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo.

Liban, a former congressman from Quezon City, has been at odds with the TESDA board in connection with the issuance of artist record books (ARBs).

On the reported graft cases filed against Liban, the President said it would be up to the adjudicating power or branch of government that is hearing the cases.

Gov’t to hit hard on dollar speculators and hoarders

Malacañang fully supports Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) in its hard-line campaign to run after dollar speculators and hoarders as President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo branded them as economic saboteurs.

In an impromptu press briefing this afternoon at the State Dining Room in Malacañang, the President noted that what some banks and their officers are doing is tantamount to economic sabotage.

She said the full force of the law should be meted out against them.

“In this type of crisis and public anxiety, we can’t afford to allow unscrupulous institutions or persons to run roughshod over the public interest,” the President said.

The President noted that when BSP cracked down on dollar speculation, the exchange rate improved.

She noted that in times like these, every citizen must ask himself what he could do to improve the situation, not what he could take advantage of.

“Everybody should be thinking what can one do so that things could go back to normalcy instead of what one could profit from the crisis,” the President said.

In a related development, former Central Bank Governor and now Philamlife Insurance Company president and CEO Jose L. Cuisia, Jr. has expressed optimism on the peso’s eventual recovery.

“I don’t think that the peso breach of P55 to a dollar level is a scary thing,” Mr. Cuisia said. “I believe that once the impending war with Iraq is over, the peso will recover quickly. Our economic fundamentals are sound and we have over $16 billion in gross international reserves.”

Cuisia added that measures must be taken to curb speculation on the local currency.

“I believe what we are seeing now is an undue depreciation of the peso. The problem is not just the impending war with Iraq. If you look at the other Asian currencies, they have not been as affected as much as the peso. In our case, there has been an unusually high demand for dollars, particularly from corporations who are purchasing dollars now to cover their requirements for the whole year.”

Cuisia said that overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) are also hesitant to remit their dollars, hoping that they would get more pesos once the currency depreciates. “This has exacerbated the situation,” he said.

RP expects U.S. technical assistance in implementing AMLA, says GMA

Now that the amendments to the Anti-Money Laundering Act (AMLA) have been accepted by the Financial Action Task Force, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she expects the United States to provide technical assistance to the Philippines on how to fully implement the law.

In a press conference at the State Dining Room in Malacañang, the President said she is glad to hear the news that the Philippines would not receive sanctions in its international financial transactions.

“The law is already good as it is,” the President said of the amended AMLA.

The Chief Executive noted that the US has been the most concerned about money-laundering issues. As such, the President said, she expects the US to provide technical assistance to the Philippines.

“Dapat magbigay sila ngayon ng technical assistance sa pag-implement ng batas na ito (They should provide technical assistance to us in the implementation of the law),” the President said.

The President earlier said the enactment of Republic Act No. 9194, or amendments to AMLA, is about reform and the strengthening of democracy “and getting hard-earned money seamlessly into the hands of Filipino families at home.”

“The issue here is one of progress, modernization, the protection of our overseas Filipino workers and their families. In summary, the anti-money laundering legislation is central to reform,” the President has said.

DOLE, DILG agree to cooperate in promoting industrial peace

The Departments of Labor and Employment (DOLE) and Interior and Local Government (DILG) have signed a memorandum of agreement (MOA) defining the terms of cooperation between the two departments in maintaining industrial peace and harmony and in promoting workers' protection and welfare in all work places.

Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia A. Sto. Tomas and Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose D. Lina signed the MOA at the DOLE offices in Intramuros.

"This agreement is part of our continuing program to institutionalize pro-active approaches in resolving labor disputes," Sto. Tomas said after the signing.

"I am pleased to have the DILG, under the leadership of Secretary Lina, as an active partner of the DOLE in its efforts to maintain and foster industrial peace and harmony and promote workers' welfare and protection," she added.

The DOLE is the primary agency of the national government tasked to maintain industrial peace and promote workers' welfare.

However, labor disputes occur within the geographical jurisdiction of local government units (LGUs) which, in the exercise of their own powers, are in the best position to assist DOLE in the maintenance of industrial peace and harmony, Sto. Tomas said.

Lina said the DOLE-DILG cooperation agreement is in response to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's call for the need to address the problem of overly confrontational labor-management relations systems which work as an obstacle to a more productive and harmonious work relations.

Under the agreement, the DILG will actively encourage LGUs to maintain a corps of qualified personnel who will render conciliation and mediation services not yet filed with the DOLE.

The DILG also agrees to assist the DOLE in maintaining industrial peace by directing its attached agencies and offices such as the Philippine National Police (PNP) and urging the LGUs to cooperate in the enforcement of DOLE's orders and decisions.

On its part, the DOLE will provide technical and training assistance to personnel of the different LGUs and conduct advocacy and information and education activities, such as seminars and the dissemination of flyers and pamphlets to workers within the LGUs' specific areas of jurisdiction.

Sto. Tomas stressed that the agreement is one way of building on the accomplishments of the DOLE in the area of industrial peace and harmony, which in 2002 was generally stable and peaceful.

There were only 36 strikes last year, the lowest strike incidence in the country in the last 21 years, Sto. Tomas said.

GMA's anti-smuggling moves get raves from hog farmers

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has drawn accolades for her untiring campaign against the smuggling of pork, vegetables and other agricultural products through the Anti-Smuggling Task Force.

In a letter to the President, the National Federation of Hog Farmers, Inc. (NFHF) cited the government's "unrelenting campaign against smuggling and continued work of the task force in apprehending the smuggled items."

The NFHF said the campaign has resulted in the "price recovery in farm gate prices of hogs."

"Ever since the task force undertook its job, we have noted a marked improvement in the farm gate prices of hogs compared to the last quarter of last year," the group said.

"We are confident that prices will still improve as smuggled pork and meat is minimized in the domestic market," they added.

NFHF Chairman Gabriel Uy also informed the President that the group has launched the "Boteng Bobby Program," a radio program aired over 92.7 FM in San Fernando, Pampanga, to promote local pork and meat trading in Central Luzon.

Uy said the NFHF has been working closely with Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo on the clustering of corn and livestock. An initial project is in the pipeline in San Rafael, Bulacan.

Member-raisers of NFHF have also set aside a dedicated supply line to meat processors to reduce the latter's dependency on importation.

"We look forward in maintaining our vigilance in insuring that smuggling can be completely wiped out," Uy told the President.

The NFHF also thanked task force chief Brig. Gen. Hermogenes Esperon, Customs Commissioner Antonio Bernardo, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho and Lorenzo and their staff.

Deployment of workers to Saudi Arabia continues as DOLE reviews overseas job policies

Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas today said "there is no compelling reason, at the moment, to halt the deployment of domestic helpers to Saudi Arabia."

Sto. Tomas said the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE) has continued to review the agency's overseas employment policies and the review covered other countries besides Hong Kong.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo ordered the review after she placed a temporary ban in the deployment of domestic helpers to Hong Kong.

Sto. Tomas said the review included the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia.

She said the position of the Philippine government is clear on the unified contract, “a proposed agreement between the recruiters in the Philippines and recruiters in Saudi Arabia.”

“The Philippine government is not a party to it and it should not be expected to negotiate with the recruiters in Saudi Arabia relative to the business arrangements between them and Filipino recruiters,” she added.

Sto. Tomas stressed that the Philippines has a standard employment contract processed by the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration (POEA) and which is the basis of the terms and conditions of work of every Filipino worker who goes to Saudi Arabia or anywhere in the world.

“This is being enforced worldwide and is the basis for resolving disputes about wages, working conditions, including money claims being filed at the POEA of the National Labor Relations Commission (NLRC),” she said.

“I have communicated to the Embassy of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia that a unified contract signed by recruiters cannot prevail over the Philippine standard employment contract,” she added.

This means that there can be no diminution of existing benefits, no imposition of additional fees and no impairment of the rights of workers as contained in the standard employment contract.

“Relative to this matter, I have ordered the POEA and the NLRC, two attached agencies of the DOLE, to strictly enforce the POEA standard employment contract in their adjudication of claims by workers.

Sto. Tomas added that she had created a committee headed by National Labor Relations Commission (NLRC) chairman Roy Señeres, who had volunteered to solve the problems that may be created by a conflict between the Philippine standard employment contract and the recruitment agreement between Saudi and Philippine recruiters.

“Our employment contract will always have primacy insofar as money claims and recruitment violations are concerned and the government stands four-square behind the integrity of its standard employment contract. We have clearly told the Saudi embassy and the recruiters this,” she said.

President’s radio address to the nation

Magandang araw sa lahat ng ating mga kababayan.

Alam kong maraming alalahanin ang nasa inyong mga isipan, tulad ng napipintong digmaan sa Iraq, ang di-matiyak na pagtaas ng presyo ng langis, mga pangamba kaugnay ng terorismo at ng lokal na ekonomiya.

Pero, nalampasan natin ang mas matinding krisis noon at malalampasan din natin ito. Maging mahinahon tayo. Huwag tayong padadala sa takot o panic. Lilipas din ang krisis na ito at magbabalik ang lahat sa normal matapos maayos ang mga kaguluhang pandaigdigang at ang sitwasyon sa Mindanao ay maging matatag. May mas matindi pang krisis tayong naranasan at lagi tayong nakakabangong muli.

Lubos nating sinusuportahan ang Bangko Sentral sa kampanya nitong habulin ang dollar speculators at hoarders. Ang ginagawa ng ilang bangko at kanilang mga opisyal ay para na ring economic sabotage; kaya ang buong higpit ng batas ay dapat ilapat laban sa kanila. Sa panahong ito ng krisis at malawakang pag-aalala ng publiko, hindi natin papayagan ang mga walang-konsensiyang institusyon o tao na mangibabaw sa interes ng publiko.

Ngayong araw, pupulungin ko ang mga local leaders ng Central Luzon, Metro Manila at Southern Tagalog. Aatasan ko silang maging crisis managers sa kanilang mga komunidad. Sila ang mangangasiwa sa pagmamatyag sa lahat ng klase ng problemang sosyal at ekonomikal na kaugnay sa kasalukuyang krisis, tulad ng presyo ng mga pangunahing bilihin at para tiyakin na ang komunidad ay listo laban sa lahat ng uri ng terorismo. Dapat nating laging tulungan at suportahan ang ating mga pinunong lokal.

Ang mga local leaders din ay dapat maging information champions para sa katatagan ng ekonomiya at kagalingan ng publiko. Sila ay may tungkuling ipaalam sa mga mamamayan ang mahahalagang pangyayari sa ating paligid, harapin ang mga maling balita at espekulasyon at ipalagay ang loob ng komunidad sa pamamagitan ng pagsasabi sa mga mamamayan ng katotohanan.

Ang mga local leaders ay dapat ding maging anti-street crime czars. Dapat nilang protektahan ang taumbayan laban sa mga kriminal na bumibiktima sa mga mahihina at laban doon sa mga may-kagagawan ng scams o panloloko at iba pang masasamang gawain.

Dapat nating gawing halimbawa ang Davao City, General Santos City at Zamboanga City. Ang mga lungsod na ito ay may mga malalakas na lider, mga plano at programa para sa lahat ng uri ng kagipitan at mga listo at handa ng tumulong na mamamayan.

Bagama't tayo ay magiging maingat, hindi natin dapat kalimutan ang kahalagahan ng kapayapaan.

Ang mga mamamayan ngayon ay malakas na nagpapahiwatig ng kapayapaan at ito ay ating sinasang-ayunan. Ang ating aktibong pagtatanggol sa Mindanao ay tugon sa kanilang kagustuhan ng kapayapaan. Aktibong pagtatanggol, pagiging listo ng mga pulis, mataas na antas ng alerto ng komunidad at mahusay na diplomasiya. Ito ang mga elemento ng ating peace operations, at may napakalakas na pagkakaisang pulitikal, mula sa hanay ng nasyonal at lokal, na sumusuporta sa mga hakbanging ito.

Ang kapayapaan ay isang polisiya para sa ating panloob at panlabas na seguridad.

Sa situwasyon sa Iraq, kapayapaan pa rin ang pinakamabuting opsiyon at ang lider nito ay dapat tuparin ang kanyang mga obligasyon sa sangkatauhan para magkaroon ng kapayapaang pangmatagalan. Habang isinasa-ayos ng mga bansa ng ating mundo ang krisis na ito, ang ating mga kababayan naman ay dapat manatiling kalmado. Kailangan tayong magtulungan para sa katatagann at kagalingan ng ating bansa. Ang ating mga manggagawa sa Middle East ay ligtas sa anumang kapahamakan. Handa ang inyong gobyerno na harapin ang epekto nng krisis na ito sa ating pambansang seguridad at sa ating ekonomiya.

Kapayapaan at seguridad. Panatag na isipan at pagtitiwala. Ang mga ito ang ating higit na kailangan sa panahong ito ng krisis. Ang mga ito ang tutulong sa atin upang malampasan ang ating mga pangamba at mamuhay nang mapayapa.

Maraming salamat po at patnubayan nawa tayo ng Diyos.

GMA calls for calm, unity in meeting head-on domestic, global concerns

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the people to stay calm and stay united amid domestic and global crisis situations, as she expressed confidence that the nation would pull through the challenges of the times.

In her weekly regular radio message, the President said it was normal for people to think about current issues — the impending war in Iraq, uncertainties in oil prices, fears spawned by terrorism and apprehensions on the economy, among others.

“Pero nalampasan natin ang mas matinding krisis noon at malalampasan di natin ito. Maging mahinahon tayo. Huwag tayong padadala sa takot o panic (But we have weathered a worse crisis before and we can do so too this time. Let us stay calm and not be hostages of fear and panic,” she said.

“Lilipas din ang krisis na ito at magbabalik ang lahat sa normal matapos maayos ang mga kaguluhang pandaigdigang at ang sitwasyon sa Mindanao ay maging matatag (The global crisis will also end and so will the instability in Mindanao. When this happened, everything will return to normalcy),” she added.

The President took time to condemn dollar speculators and hoarders, calling them economic saboteurs.

She said she fully supported the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas’ campaign to go after those who take advantage of the crisis to cause the peso to slide against the American dollar.

“Hindi natin papayagan ang mga walang-konsensiyang institusyon o tao na mangibabaw sa interes ng publiko (We will not allow the interests of unscrupulous institutions or persons to go above public interest),” she said.

She added that she would meet today with local leaders in Central Luzon, Metro Manila and Southern Tagalog, to appoint the latter as crisis managers who would oversee social and economic concerns that might crop up in their respective communities in these times of crisis.

Local leaders, she stressed, should be the country’s “information champions” and “anti-street crime czars” to stabilize the economy and strengthen the society.

The President cited the persistence of local officials in the cities of Davao, General Santos and Zamboanga, saying that they have stood up always prepared to help their constituents in times of crisis.

The President likewise reminded the nation to adhere to peace.

“Ang mga mamamayan ngayon ay malakas na nagpapahiwatig ng kapayapaan at ito ay ating sinasang-ayunan (The government is one with the Filipino people in the call for peace),” she said.

She noted that the active defense position of government in Mindanao corresponded to the call for peace.

She said the elements of the country’s peace operations included active defense, alertness of the police force, high level of community alertness, and effective diplomacy.

“Ang kapayapaan ay isang polisiya para sa ating panloob at panlabas na seguridad (Peace is a policy for our internal and external security),” she added.

The President also said that there were peaceful solutions to the Iraq situation.

Iraqi leaders should ably perform their obligations to mankind so that lasting peace in the world could be achieved, she said.

As this developed, she reiterated her assurance that Filipino expatriates in the Middle East would be safe from harm, if and when war breaks out in the Gulf.

“Handa ang inyong gobyerno na harapin ang epekto ng krisis na ito sa ating pambansang seguridad at sa ating ekonomiya (The government is ready to meet head-on the negative effects of the Gulf crisis on our national security and economy),” she stressed.

Peace and security, stable minds and trust. These the president said were imperative for the people to have in times of crisis. These, she added, would help the country and the people overcome their fears and the crisis.

Stepped up fight vs. corruption paying off, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said that her administration's stepped up campaign against graft and corruption is paying off as evidenced by the latest finding of a Hong Kong-based risk consultancy firm.

In a meeting this morning with the local officials of Metro Manila, and Regions 3 and 4, the President said that the Political and Economic Risk Consultancy, Ltd. (PERC) has classified the Philippines as among those countries in Asia where "corruption is becoming less serious" as against countries that are "most corrupt."

According to the President, the latest report of PERC has classified the Philippines, along with Indonesia, Singapore, South Korea, and Thailand as countries where corruption cases are no longer serious.

PERC, which was established in Hong Kong in 1957, coordinates a team of researchers and analysts in the ASEAN countries, Greater China and South Korea

Some of the world's leading corporations and financial institutions regularly use PERC's services to assess key trends and critical issues shaping the region, to identify growth opportunities, and to develop effective strategies for capitalizing on these opportunities.

The President paid tribute to the local executives of Regions 3 and 4 for their role in eradicating red tape in particular and in the fight against corruption in general.

She said that during her first year as president, a lot of businessmen told her that red tape and corruption have been contained in the national government agencies but not in the local level.

Now that PERC has said that corruption is now less serious and that investors are flocking not only to Metro Manila but also to Regions 3 and 4, then it means that there is an improvement in the fight against corruption in these three regions.

The provinces of Bataan, Bulacan, Nueva Ecija, Pampanga, Tarlac, and Zambales comprise Region 3 while Region 4 includes the industrialized CALABARZON provinces of Cavite, Laguna, Batangas, Rizal and Quezon.

"Malaki ang inaasahan ng taong bayan mula sa atin. At hindi natin sila puwedeng mabigo (The people have great expectations from us. And we are not going to fail them)," the President said.

The President then called on the local executives to do more in the drive to rid the government of corruption and irregularities.

Don't sleep with the enemy, GMA warns local execs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today warned local government officials who have cultivated cordial ties with the enemies of the state that their units would not be prioritized in the appropriation of government funds.

In her meeting with local government executives from Regions 3 and 4 and the National Capital Region at the Heroes' Hall in Malacanang, the President said she knows "more or less" these LGU officials who are "sleeping with the enemy."

"Alam ko na rin kung sino yung sleeping with the enemy kaya huwag kayong aasa ng dagdag na tulong. In fact, kung nagigipit ang national budget at kailangang i-phase-in ang releases, huli kayo sarelease (I know who are sleeping with the enemy. That's why you should not expect assistance from the national government. In fact, if the national budget is restrained, they would be the last to obtain funds)," the President said.

"Those sleeping with the enemy, you have to draw the line, during this time of crisis, you are with the government on peace and order or you are not," she added.

The President said the LGUs can use their intelligence funds but they have to account for these if they would ask for more from the national government.

The President noted that the community is the most important part of the criminal justice system.

She further noted the importance of the community's cooperation in the fight against terrorism so that citizens and foreigners would be safe from harm.

GMA orders full honors in burial of slain Makati policeman

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she has ordered the full honors in the burial of slain policeman PO1 Aristotle Tacata, who died in a shootout with robbers at a convenience store in Makati City after killing two of five armed men.

The President, who visited the remains of Tacata last night, said she also ordered the promotion of the policeman to Police Officer 2.

"That would be the template for those killed in the line of duty," the President said.

Tacata, 26, was at the LPC Minimart on Kalayaan Ave. in Makati City Wednesday when three robbers entered the store, drawing their handguns and announcing a robbery.

Police said that as the suspects were scooping cash from the register, they noticed handcuffs on the belt of one of the customers. Tacata, who was assigned at the Police Community Precinct 8 area as an intelligence detective, was in civilian clothes.

A shootout ensued, leaving the cop and another suspect dead.

The President, who paid her respects on the remains of Tacata last night, said she is gratified that the police in the National Capital Region "are back on the beat."

She said she always notice policemen in the beat during her surprise visits to parts of Metro Manila.

GMA urges local execs to be anti-crime czars, crisis managers in their localities

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged local government officials to be the crisis managers, anti-crime czars and information champions in their communities.

The President made the call during a meeting with local officials of the National Capital Region and Regions 3 and 4 at the Heroes' Hall in Malacañang.

The President said that as crisis managers, the local executives would be responsible for the public safety of their communities.

"Kaya tuwing may krisis, kayo ang may kakayahan na manguna (everytime there is a crisis, you are the ones who should lead) through the crisis and out of the crisis," the President said.

The President said local officials should get the cooperation of everyone concerned in ensuring public safety as well as in sharing intelligence with the police and other authorities.

"Siguro kung tumataas ang presyo ng bilihan, galit ang taong bayan, pero kung hindi sila ligtas sa kalsada at sa tahanan ay napakalaking problema talaga yun para sa ating national security maging sa ating survival (if the prices of goods rise, the people would not be pleased but if they are not safe from the streets and in their homes, it would be a bigger problem for our national security, even survival),” she said.

The President said she expects the officials to follow the examples set by local officials after the Davao City Airport bombing and in other incidents in Mindanao as models of crisis management control, which have become a seamless teamwork of police, military and the LGUs.

The President said as anti-crime czars, the local officials should lead the fight against crime, including street crimes as well as anomalies like the pyramiding scams.

The President noted that pyramiding scams, although these cases do not land on the headlines, affect a lot of hapless victims.

As “information champions,” the President said she expects the officials to be the “spokespersons of prudence and sobriety.”

“Kapag kayo ay makarinig ng tsismis o spekulasyon, iyong taong bayan dapat ang pag-iisip nila ay pwede nilang tanungin sa inyo kung ano ba ang katotohanan (The people must be able to get the truth from you),” she said.

GMA cites role of tanods in peacekeeping

A total of 23,000 tanods from 1,600 barangays have been mobilized as force multipliers by the police, contributing greatly to the reduction of street crimes in the metropolis.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo disclosed this today during a meeting with local executives of Metro Manila and Regions 3 and 4.

“Sa terorismo talagang importante ang kooperasyon, pagkamulat at pagkahanda ng buong pamayanan at ng local government (In terrorism, what is important is cooperation, alertness and vigilance of the entire community and local government),” she said.

The President cited a report made by Gen. Reynaldo Velasco, PNP Deputy Director, indicating that street crimes in the metropolis have gone down from 264 cases to 152 in the six-week period after Feb. 21, when she ordered a crackdown on lawlessness in Metro Manila.

The report also stated that a total of 346 seminars for barangay tanods have been conducted by the National Capital Region (NCR) since that date, indicating the readiness of the police in Metro Manila to carry out her orders.

“Kaya binabati ko ang mga pulis sa Metro Manila at iyon din ang inaasahan ko sa mga pulis sa Regions 3 and 4 kung saan ang threat ay mas maliit (That’s why I am congratulating the Metro Manila police for their enthusiasm and that’s what I also expect from those in Regions 3 and 4),” she said.

The President also batted for the institutionalization of the tanods as force multipliers in order to curb the incidence of crimes in the urban areas, adding that the percentage in reduction because of this arrangement far exceeded expectations.

“This is really important if we want our country and our communities to be safe for both the citizens and the tourists,” she said.

Magsaysay offers Zambales, Bataan, Pampanga as site for Balikatan

Zambales Gov. Vicente Magsaysay today asked President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to hold the Balikatan exercises in the provinces of Zambales, Bataan and Pampanga.

Magsaysay made the suggestion during the Chief Executive's meeting with local government officials of the National Capital Region, and Regions 3 and 4 at the Heroes' Hall in Malacañang.

Magsaysay represented the Central Luzon Regional Peace and Order Council during the meeting.

"Yun pong Balikatan, napapansin natin, nababasa natin, nagkakaroon ng problem. Ayaw ng mga ibang probinsya sa kanilang lugar, ibalik na po ninyo sa Bataan, Zambales at Pampanga yan (We hear and read in newspapers that some provinces don't want Balikatan exercises. Why don't you bring the exercises to Bataan, Zambales and Pampanga)," Magsaysay said.

The President pointed out that Sulu was the only province that did not want to host the Balikatan. "Sulu lang ang ayaw, lahat ng iba gusto (Sulu does not want it but everyone wants it)," she said.

Magsaysay said the three Central Luzon provinces welcome the Balikatan exercises. "Sa Bataan, Zambales at Pampanga, diyan po ay walang problema. Welcome na welcome po sa lugar natin yan."

He noted that the provinces have become familiar with the presence of United States troops in the past four decades, referring to the previous presence of U.S. facilities in the region. "Sapagkat apatnapung taon na kasama natin yang mga Amerikano (We were alongside American soldiers for four decades)," Magsaysay said.

"Ang problema po kasi kung nakakakita sila ng Amerikano sa ibang lugar, akala nila, giyera na (the problem with the others is when they see Americans, they think there's already a war)," he added.

The President, on the other hand, thanked the Zambales governor for the offer.

Aside from the three, other provinces have signified willingness to host Balikatan exercises. Among these are North Cotabato, Quezon, Oriental and Occidental Mindoro.

Nikkei Weekly cites Subic Bay's competitive edge as a safer investment site in Asia

Leading Japanese newspaper Nikkei Weekly has cited the Subic Bay industrial zone as the Philippines' alternative to China where foreign investors could set up industrial operations for overseas production.

A report from Senior Deputy Executive Secretary Joaquin Lagonera said Nikkei's article noted that the Subic Bay zone offered investors a safer operational site in Asia.

The report said that over 500 multinational companies have relocated to Subic Bay and that more were on the way.

It added that approved foreign investments in the area grew by 770 percent year-on-year in the January to June, 2002 period.

Nikkei stressed that Subic Bay's competitive edge is prescribed by the area's abundance of college graduates, the proficiency of its skilled labor in the English language, the quality of labor in quantity, its convenient access, infrastructure depth and low crime rate.

The article said another industrial park might take off in Subic Bay since the Techno Park is nearly full to meet the demands of foreign companies.

The Japanese magazine also disclosed the concern about foreign investment flow into China whose economic future was termed difficult to read.

Foreign companies have increasingly expressed the concern in Taiwan, and they fear the day when something happens to the Chinese economy.

Nikkei cited the fluctuation of the yuan that could blunt Japan's export edge and the political risks present in China.

Gov't inter-agency group acts to stop video piracy

The anti-piracy inter-agency group has come out with three measures to ensure the success of the government's campaign against video piracy and the thrust to protect intellectual property rights (IPR).

In a report, Undersecretary Benjamin de Guzman of the Office of the Executive Secretary (OES) said the group sought to:

- Designate state prosecutors who are seasoned in intellectual property laws to specifically handle IPR cases;

- Institutionalize a system of coordination among the OES, the Videogram Regulatory Board (VRB) and the Department of Justice (DOJ);
- Conduct a series of lecture-seminars to equip law enforcers in the preparation of complaints, affidavits and other legal forms for the filing of cases against criminal syndicates and violators of IPR laws.

De Guzman said the measures were agreed on in a recent meeting attended by VRB Vice Chairperson Lualhati Buenafe and DOJ Undersecretary Jose Calida.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo had designated De Guzman to oversee and monitor the filing, prosecution and status of video piracy cases and other violations of IPR laws.

De Guzman said the group saw it imperative to speed up and strengthen the President's drive to arrest and eradicate video piracy rings operating in the country.

He said the group would not succumb to political and economic pressures and other obstacles in the performance of its tasks.

Kuwait pardons, sets free 9 OFWs as promised during GMA visit

Nine Filipino overseas workers imprisoned in Kuwait for various offenses have been granted pardon by authorities as part of their government's promise to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo during her visit there last month.

In a report to Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) Administrator Virgilio Angelo, Kuwait-based Welfare Officer Mario Antonio said the nine prisoners have been set free and are awaiting repatriation pending completion of the processing of their exit papers.

The OWWA has withheld the identity of the workers but their families have been advised to look up their names at the labor agency.

The nine OFWs form part of the 20 Filipino prisoners the Emir of Kuwait had pledged to pardon when the President visited Kuwait last February to look into the conditions of some 60,000 OFWs there in the wake of the brewing Iraqi conflict.

No word, however, has been given on when the remaining 11 Filipino prisoners would be absolved by Kuwaiti authorities.

OFWs in Taiwan elated over GMA message

Overseas Filipino workers in Taiwan expressed delight over the personal message sent by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo recently commending them for making significant contributions to their families and the nation as a whole.

In a letter to the President, Manila Economic and Cultural Office (MECO) Managing Director and Resident Representative Edgardo V. Espinosa said leaders of the Filipino communities in Taiwan were particularly pleased with the personal message sent through the Philippine Labor Center in Taipei.

He also informed the President that her message was published in the China Post and the Taiwan News, the two leading newspapers in the island, to reach the greater majority of the OFWs spread all over Taiwan.

"We extend our warmest greetings to you, together with our prayers for more strength, more wisdom and more power as you continue to lead our beloved country in these difficult times," Espinosa told the President.

In her message to the more than seven-million migrant Filipino workers who work as professionals, home managers, caregivers, sea farers, nurses and entertainers, the President said their remittances amounting to P350 billion every year have helped prop up the Philippine economy.

The amount, she said, is five times what the government can spend on capital expenditure and is half of the country's national budget.

"It is true that we are going through difficult times. But we are not alone in this. Even the biggest economies in the world are experiencing a slowdown," the President said in her three-page letter.

"It is clear to me that the reason why we are in such great demand overseas is because we are excellent workers who are educated, well-trained and possess the work ethic necessary to the development of your host countries," she also said.

Pilar town leaders thank GMA for restoring peace

The people in the town of Pilar, Sorsogon have thanked President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo and the police for the speedy neutralization of Jolito Leosala alias Kumander Awa, Pilar's most-wanted criminal, and for reinstating peace and economic growth in the area.

In a letter to the President, local leaders of Pilar said that Leosala's capture and subsequent death "came as good news to all of us."

"It would mean a big improvement in the peace and order situation in our municipality. With this, we are strongly confident that business will improve and get back to normal again," they said.

The Pilar leaders told the President that Leosala had taken the town hostage and in the grips of fear as he sowed terror with his "despicable acts."

"Trade and investment opportunities in our community were adversely affected and greatly suffered. This had caused a major drawback in the community's efforts to achieve economic growth and development," they added.

The officials extended to the President their "sincerest and heartfelt gratitude for the laudable action you have taken on our plea for Leosala's capture."

"We will never forget this praiseworthy achievement you have done for us. We believe this will not only benefit us, but the other business communities in the nearby towns and provinces as well," they told the President.

The officials included Lydia de las Alas, Elena Sy-Reyes, Therese Rose Sia, Antonio Tee, Jose Sy, David Victoria and Efren Lozares.

Baliuag flyover most economically viable to ease traffic, says DPWH study

The construction of the Baliuag flyover in Central Luzon is the most economically viable project to implement to ease the traffic congestion in the area, according to a study conducted by the Department of Public Works and Highways.

In a report to Metro Manila Development Authority chair and Public Works Secretary Bayani Fernando, DPWH Region 3 Director Alfredo G. Tolentino said constructing the Baliuag flyover is the most cost-effective project to implement as it addresses the immediate need to decongest traffic in the areas.

Tolentino said several alternative schemes have already been introduced to solve congestion along the Cagayan Valley road in Baliuag, including the widening of the Daang Maharlika.

However, evaluation of the planned widening revealed that it would not be able to reduce the 12 conflicting flows in the intersection, according to Tolentino.

“Implementing widening works along Daang Maharlika as alternative solution to the traffic problem will also require acquisition of road right-of-way that is very expensive and unacceptable to lot owners,” Tolentino said.

The DPWH has also considered the construction of the Plaridel Bypass road as a sub-project of the proposed upgrading of the Inter-Urban Highway System along the Pan-Philippine Highway that will be realized not earlier than year 2010 as the source of fund of the project has yet to be finalized.

Tolentino said that any delays in the approval of its foreign funding would further extend the utilization of the bypass beyond 2010 wherein the traffic situation in the Baliuag area may no longer be within tolerable level.

Earlier, former DPWH Secretary Simeon A. Datumanong terminated the contract for the construction of the Baliuag flyover due to spurious advertisements for invitations to bid.

Invitations to bid for the construction of the P 71,367 million Baliuag flyover and approaches along Cagayan Valley road over Candaba Baliwag and Cagayan valley intersection were again published in national newspapers last January and February 2003.

Balikatan Exercises results in more U.S. aid for socio-economic development projects

The previous joint RP-US Balikatan military exercises brought with it counterpart fund assistance from the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) intended for socio-economic development projects, besides the exercises’ “civic component” for the same purpose.

In an interview with Sen. Noli de Castro in his program Magandang Gabi Bayan, the President said that for instance, the military aid the Philippines obtained following her 2001 trip to the US totaled $100 million.

And the USAID also provided the same amount to fund priority programs and projects for socio-economic growth, she said.

The President said that on top of the USAID funds, the US military aid likewise provided for a “civic component” that had been translated into development projects as well.

The President noted that the Balikatan exercises in Basilan introduced a lot of development projects in the province.

During the exercises, two hospitals were built, the provincial airport was rehabilitated and the province’s circumferential road was completed, she added.

“Hindi lamang training ang naiwan sa ating mga sundalo (kundi) dalawang hospital, tapos na yung airport, yung circumferential road na matagal nang panaginip ng mga taga-Basilan (Not only did the exercises train our soldiers but it also brought about the building of two hospitals, the rehabilitation of the provincial airport and the completion of the circumferential road, a long-time dream of Basileños),” she said.

The President noted that all in all, socio-economic development projects comprised a big extent of the US government assistance to the Philippines.

“Mas malaki talaga ang non-military assistance ng Amerika sa Pilipinas kaysa sa military assistance (indeed, the non-military aid of the U.S. is bigger than its military assistance),” she said.

The President noted that the ongoing joint military exercises between Filipino and American troops in Zamboanga City alone brought $25 million worth of ground training modules.

“Hindi pa kasama yun dun sa Basilan, hindi pa kasama yung ordinary na ginagawa sa Luzon (that does not include the exercises in Basilan and the joint exercises ordinarily done in Luzon),” the President said.

The President further noted that Sen. Daniel Inouye of Hawaii was able to insert a supplementary budget bill that would provide $30 million worth of aid to the Philippines, but which was unfortunately vetoed by President George W. Bush.

But President Macapagal-Arroyo said that when Bush learned that the bill included an aid package to the Philippines, he promised to have it restored.

“Hindi ko pa binibilang ang lahat. Halimbawa yung sinasabing civic portion. Ito ay partial lang itong enumeration kong ito. Makikita mo na sulit na sulit (I haven’t counted all of it. This is only partial. You can see that it’s very much worth everything),” she added.

In the same interview, the President ruled out the possibility of having the Balikatan exercises in Sulu.

She also noted that officials of several provinces have signified their willingness to host the Balikatan.

Among these provinces are Cotabato, Quezon, Oriental and Occidental Mindoro, Zambales, Bataan and Pampanga.

GMA reassures welfare, safety of OFWs in Middle East

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Saturday night reiterated her concern over the safety and welfare of Filipino expatriates in the Middle East as she shrugged off claims that the Philippines, as against other countries with workers in the Gulf, would be most affected by a war in Iraq.

She also reassured families of overseas Filipino workers (OFW) that the government is doing everything to ease the effects of a probable US-Iraq war on the OFWs, the Filipino people and the nation.

The President, in a television interview with Senator Noli de Castro, said the Philippines ranked sixth only among the nations exporting labor to the Middle East, hinting that other nations would likely be hurt the most when the US-Iraq war breaks out.

Expressing her deep concern on the situation of OFWs, the President said most of the 1.5 million OFWs in the Gulf are safely situated in areas far from Iraq.

She cited Saudi Arabia, where some one million Filipino expatriates are sited, and Jordan where there is a lesser number.

She said that at least 850,000 OFWs in Saudi Arabia are located in areas far from any probable US-Iraq flashpoint. “Mga 850,000 ay napakalayo sa harm’s way.”

The remaining 150,000, though within Saudi Arabia soil near the Iraqi border, are safe and secured too.

The President recalled that during the 1991 Gulf War, Iraq’s Scud missiles tried to penetrate but failed to hit Dhahran, a Saudi Arabia province near Iraq where Filipinos worked in commercial centers.

“Kampanteng-kampante nga sila (They are very calm) ... at normal pa rin ang ginagawa nila (and they have been attending to their work and lives normally),” she said, referring to the OFWs.

Even if the US, in the event that Turkey refuses to lend them bases, uses Jordan as launching pad to attack Iraq, Filipinos in Jordan would still be far from harm, the Chief Executive told Senator De Castro.

‘Do not worry.’ The President said this was the message OFWs in Kuwait, which is nearest Iraq, would want to relay to their relatives in the Philippines.

On top of all these, she added that the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT) under Ambassador Roy Cimatu is ready to cope with any eventuality.

The team has made preparations for “the worst-case scenario, the best-case scenario, the probable scenario” and has set up relocation centers for Filipino workers along the borders of Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, she said.

“Meron tayong nireserbang resort at mayroon pang tent sa labas ng resort. Meron nang tubig, meron nang mga kasilyas. Handang-handa na ‘yun (We have reserved a resort for relocates. There are tents, water, comfort rooms there. Everything is ready),” she noted.

The President disclosed that when other countries saw the Philippine MEPT’s preparations, they followed suit and “ginaya nila tayo (they replicated us).”

GMA to lead sea-road caravan thru Luzon, Visayas, Mindanao

To demonstrate the “nautical highway” available to travelers, including foreign and local tourists, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is embarking next month on a caravan that would bring her to Mindanao, Visayas and Luzon using ferry and road rides.

The President, who made the announcement during the TV program Magandang Gabi Bayan hosted by Sen. Noli de Castro, said she is taking on such a journey precisely to promote travelling in the countryside using the ferry system.

She said she would fly to Davao City and proceed to Dapitan, Zamboanga del Sur to kick off the sea and road caravan.

She said many have signified willingness to join her. She said Mindanao would host a lot of visitors during that time.

The President noted that despite the negative travel advisories issued by foreign governments, particularly on trips to Mindanao since last year, tourism was still able to post a 16 percent growth.

“Sa kabila ng travel advisories na natanggap ng ating bansa nung nakaraang tao, 16 percent pa rin ang growth rate ng ating tourism,” the President said.

The President further noted that her administration has purposely directed most of its overseas development assistance towards Mindanao.

She noted that right after the bombing incident in Davao City, she immediately flew to the province to check the situation.

“Kaya Davao, huwag kayong mawawalan ng ispirito. Talagang ang Davao ay isa sa mga top 8 favorite destination ng mga turista (That’s why, Davao, don’t lose your spirit, because you are one of the top eight destinations of tourists),” she said.

She noted that former Cebu Mayor Tommy Osmeña brought 50 potential investors to Davao City “precisely to show that Davaoenos are resilient people who could get back on their feet and maintain the peace in their city.”

The President early this year presented her administration’s master plan for a “nautical highway” as part of efforts to improve the country’s infrastructure and reduce transportation costs.

The proposed nautical highway will connect all major islands of the archipelago through a network of roll-on and roll-off (RORO) ferryboats.

She said the “ambitious but definitely vital program” would link 48 roll-on/roll-off ports across the country funded by the Official Development Assistance (ODA) with support from the private sector and the Development Bank of the Philippines.

It will include the modernization of ports and the construction of road roll-on/roll-off ferry terminal system from Mindanao to the Visayas and Luzon. “Traveling and transporting goods from or to these ports will soon be made easier, safer and cheaper,” she added.

Gov't is mulling temporary suspension of oil deregulation law, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the government is mulling over the temporary suspension of the Oil Deregulation Law if the increase in the price of oil could seriously affect the prices of basic commodities.

In back-to-back radio interviews this morning, the President said that if it is found that oil companies are taking advantage of the crisis in the Middle East by jacking up the prices of their products, then the government might impose price control on oil.

When asked if she would be amenable to the temporary suspension of the law that deregulates the oil industry, the President said, "Kung kailangan, kung masyadong nakakaapekto sa presyo ng bilihan (If necessary, if it [oil price hike would greatly affect the prices of essential commodities])."

The President also said that in the case of Petron, one of the three major players in the oil industry, the government would not sell its 40 percent stake in the company but would ask the Petron management to be a price leader.

She explained that being a price leader, Petron should be the last to increase its prices. "At kung maiiwasan, dapat iwasan pa nga (And if they can avoid it, they should)," the President added.

As a price leader, Petron should also be the first to reduce its prices if the price of crude oil abroad goes down, the President said.

The President also asked the Filipino people to be patient as she explained that the price of crude oil usually goes up if there is a crisis in the Middle East because of what she described as "the spirit of suspense, the spirit of speculation."

But the President stressed that if the war is short-lived and there is a sure victor, the price of crude oil will also immediately go down as what happened during the first Gulf War.

The Philippines imports most of its crude oil requirements from the Middle East.

The President said the government is doing all it can to mitigate the effects of the oil price increase, especially on the prices of basic goods and transport fares.

She said that in the transport industry, the government has initiated several measures, including the setting up in strategic areas of fuel terminals with discounted rates for diesel fuel.

The President also called on the people not to engage in panic buying, hoarding or speculating, so as not to aggravate the situation.

Over the weekend, the President said, she has designated local executives to be the “crisis managers” in their respective localities to monitor the prices of essential commodities and to report hoarders and panic buyers.

Gov’t finding ways to ease burden on power consumers, says GMA

The government is finding ways, no matter how complicated, to ease the burden on the consumers of the impending hike in Power Purchase Adjustment (PPA).

This was revealed by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today as she assured the citizenry that her administration would leave no stone unturned to alleviate the plight of the consuming public with regard to power usage and rates.

In back-to-back radio interviews, the President said the government would try to renegotiate with Malampaya to lower its charges and absorb some losses so that the National Power Corporation which buys gas from Malampaya would be able to transfer the benefits to the public through lower unit cost.

According to her, NAPOCOR, in return, will try to purchase more from Malampaya even if it means closing down several of its power plants.

The President, however, asked the public to be patient, saying finding ways and implementing them cannot be achieved overnight.

“Lahat nang ito ay sinisikap nating gawin, ginagamit natin ang lahat ng ating kaalaman at karanasan para sa ganoon ay makahanap tayo ng kahit kaunting ginhawa (We are trying to do all of these using every available resources and experience so that we could find ways to offer relief for all of us),” she said. “Pero hindi yan ibig sabihin ‘sinasabi natin ngayon, mai-implement yan bukas’ (But it doesn’t mean we could implement all these by tomorrow).”

She added that the Supreme Court ruling on the PPA, if finally realized, could also help offset whatever increases there might be in the PPA rates.

During the same interview, the President explained that there has not been any increase in basic consumption rates since 1994. It has in fact gone down by 30 centavos when the power law took into effect.

She said that during her term, she was able to bring down the price of electricity twice in the past two years by bringing down the price of debt servicing through the restructuring of NAPOCOR’s loans.

Media blitz not a sign that she has changed her mind on 2004, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today reassured the nation that she is definitely not running in next year’s elections as she brushed off speculations that she is going to change her mind because of the so-called media blitz that she had undertaken lately.

In a radio interview this morning, the President said she has decided to be available to the media during the last few days because of the many uncertainties that the country is facing, among them the crisis in the Middle East and the renewed fighting in Mindanao.

The President said that if she would not talk to the people themselves through the media about what the government is doing, there would be a lot of speculations.

“At pag maraming ispekulasyon, humihina yong confidence at mas lalong nagpapanic ang taong bayan (And if there are a lot of speculations, there would be a loss of confidence and the people would panic,” the President said.

That is the reason why, the President said, that she decided to be available to the media, adding that just one or two weeks ago, she has banned even ambush interviews in Malacañang.

She said that if the situation normalizes, she would lessen her exposure to the media so that she can concentrate on attending to her official functions and meeting with government officials.

“Pero sa ngayon, ang pinakakailangang ipulong din ay ang taong bayan mismo. At magagawa ito sa pamamagitan ng media (But now the most urgent thing to do is also to meet with our countrymen and this can only be done through the media,” the President said.

Lately, the President has guested in several radio and television talk shows where she fielded questions not only from the program hosts but also from callers from all over the country.

GMA confident MILF will return to peace negotiating table

Chances are the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) will return to the negotiating table and talk peace and development in Mindanao.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today disclosed that MILF leaders have even facilitated contacts and started talking with the government’s back channel officials.

In back-to-back radio interviews, the President noted that the MILF has even called for meetings, “kaya inaasahan ko na mayroon pang pagkakataon (which is why I expect the best out of the talks).”

Besides this, the Philippine government has the support of Malaysia, which had hosted previous Government-MILF peace talks that led to the signing of several protocols.

Malaysia had promised to continue being the third-party facilitator so that the government and MILF peace panels could reach a final pact that would assure peace and socio-economic development in Mindanao.

“Ako ay nasisisyahan at handa na silang makipag-usap. Inaasahan nila at may mas kumpiyansa sila na hindi sila agrabiyado kung may third-party facilitator (I am glad that the MILF is ready to talk peace. They expect as they are confident that they will not be underdogs if there is a third-party facilitator),” the President earlier noted.

But she urged the MILF to shun terrorism and to surrender to authorities the criminals and terrorists they have been harboring in their lairs.

She stressed that while the government’s hands of peace are open to those who would renounce violence and terrorism, its hands of steel would continue to pursue those who wish the nation and its people ill.

She had earlier authorized local government executives to set up their own ground-level peace initiatives with the MILF.

The President likewise clarified that the conflict in Mindanao is not an all-out war, saying that the government is on an “active defense” mode in the region.

“Kung ang MILF ay hindi gagawa ng violence, hindi (aatake ang military); hindi sila magte-terrorista ay hindi rin sila hahabulin ng sundalo (If the MILF will not sow violence, the military will not attack; if the MILF does not terrorize, soldiers will not go after them),” she stressed.

The President also shrugged off claims that the fighting in Mindanao provided justification to transfer the conduct of the Balikatan military exercises in Central Mindanao.

She said it was the local government of (North) Cotabato, under Governor Emmanuel Pinol, that volunteered and asked that the Balikatan be conducted in their area.

Even when the Balikatan was conducted in Basilan, Cotabato officials had been very vocal about having the exercise in the province, she added.

She noted that the provinces of Quezon, Occidental and Oriental Mindoro, Zambales, Bataan and Pampanga have also sought the conduct of the Balikatan in their areas.

The Chief Executive categorically said the Balikatan would no longer be conducted in Sulu, because Sulu officials and the people did not want it.

The decision on where to conduct the Balikatan would be decided on by the operational units of the Philippines and the US, she said.

She stressed that the Balikatan is a regular undertaking of Philippine and American soldiers, part of the military and civic help the United States had vowed to give the Philippines.

On another note, the President called on politicians to stop saying things that would not help resolve the Mindanao issue.

“This is not the time for political grandstanding,” she said.

The government would always be for peace, but everyone would have to maintain alertness to protect the people against terrorism and criminality, she stressed.

“Ang gobyerno ay hindi titigil sa paghahanap ng kapayapaan. Ngunit hindi rin niya papayagan ang kahit na kaninong grupo na mang-istorbo sa kapayapaan at katiwasayan sa Mindanao (The government will leave no stone unturned in its search for peace. But it will not allow any group to mire the peace and growth obtaining in Mindanao),” she said.

The President earlier said the government has prepared a comprehensive plan for Mindanao.

The plan is focused on the island’s peace and development which shall go together and on the premises that peace will be obtained under the framework of sovereignty, territorial integrity and the Constitution; that there is a realization that the nation is a multi-ethnic society; and that there is no place for terrorism in the Philippines.

GMA says ‘nautical highway’ will lead to more investments, open new routes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the “nautical highway” connecting Mindanao, Visayas and Luzon will not only lower the transportation cost of goods but will also spur private initiatives to open up new routes connecting the three main islands of the country.

In a radio interview, the President said the sea-road caravan she will be lead next month will showcase how fun and enjoyable traveling in the countryside can be using the ferry and road rides.

The President explained that the sea-road caravan will use Dapitan City, Zamboanga del Norte as the jumping point for a travel that would take the participants all the way to Manila.

The President said all the participants will ride in cars and will be transported by ferry boats from Dapitan City all the way to Dumaguete City.

“From Dumaguete City to Bacolod will travel by land. From Bacolod to Iloilo we will take a ferry boat. From Iloilo to Caticlan in Aklan, we will be on the road again. Then from Caticlan to Roxas in Oriental Mindoro it will be by boat again,” the President said.

The President said that from Roxas to Calapan, Oriental Mindoro, it will be by land. Then from Calapan to Batangas City, it will be by ferry boat again. “And, finally, from Batangas City to Manila, it will be by land all the way,” the President said.

The President said that this “nautical highway” will be very helpful to merchants from Mindanao and the Visayas since once they load their cargo or goods from their point of origin to Luzon, they do not have to unload their produce or wares anymore.

“Masyadong mahal ang pasahe dahil sa loading and unloading sa mga barko sa mga pantalan. Ito, wala ng loading and unloading. Isang truck na lang ang magbibiyaha all the way from Mindanao up to Luzon (Transportation cost is high because of loading and unloading in wharfs. By using the ferry, there will be no more loading and unloading. One truck can travel all the way from Mindanao to Luzon without loading and unloading in every wharf),” the President said.

The President said she hopes that with the sea-road caravan, private investors will move into investments in wharfs and roll-on/roll-off (RO-RO) operations. She said these private investors can avail themselves of the P20-billion standby credit for such investments offered by the Development Bank of the Philippines (DBP).

GMA satisfied with B.I.R. Customs performance so far

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today convened in Malacañang the Third Revenue Performance Command Conference and was satisfied with the results, confident that the government would be able to meet its revenue targets for this year.

The President listened to the performance reports of both Bureau of Internal Revenue and Bureau of Customs at the State Dining Room in Malacañang precisely to make sure the agencies do not have any slippage in collections.

Particularly, the President was pleased with the performance of BOC as its revenue performance exceeded all targets by about P3.4 billion or 19 percent. All major ports (Manila, Batangas, Cebu and Ninoy Aquino International Airport) exceeded their targets.

The BIR, on the other hand, lost some ground in its January targets but was able to recover in February as it was able to meet its mark.

Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho said the government expects the slight shortfall in the BIR collection to be temporary. “On a combined basis, the overperformance of Bureau of Customs has more than compensated for the underperformance of the BIR in the month of January,” Camacho said.

Camacho said that given all the measures that were presented to the President, “we’re very confident that we’ll be able to meet the revenue targets for this year both at the BIR and the BOC.”

The BIR and the BOC are both undertaking a series of reforms in order to improve their collection performance.

The BIR reform agenda covers four major elements, namely, addressing of tax structure issues, streamlining of operations, addressing the people’s issues and improving enforcement.

Regarding tax structure issues, the government has several proposed bills pending in Congress, including the proposal for gross income taxation and the rationalization of excise tax. The other tax structure issues the government has been able to do by administrative measures include the continuing review of all tax rulings that have granted tax exemptions.

“We are doing this for all BIR rulings and to date, we have been successful in a number of measures. You may know that we have already revoked the tax exemptions of domestic airlines on their jet fuel consumption because the original basis of the grant of exemptions is no longer in place. This is the lack of availability of domestically refined jet fuel,” Camacho said.

The finance chief also noted the prevention of waiver (or exemptions) of value-added tax (VAT) on professionals. He said the BIR has been very successful in implementing this law, by working with those covered and making it as easy and convenient as possible for them to file their VAT returns.

“You may know that the BIR has launched the BIR-on-wheels program, which has gone to not only hospitals but also studios. Some of you may have been able to register using the BIR-on-wheels concept,” he added.

The government also continues to work on streamlining or making the BIR effective in its operations with the launching of the VAT relief system, computerization projects such as e-payments, e-filing, and now e-confirmation.

The third item is on people’s issues such as the proposed National Revenue Administration or Authority legislation.

“We are hoping that this will see passage in Congress. Internally, we are also implementing Executive Order 114, which will transform the BIR, in the meantime, to a more taxpayer-focused organization,” Camacho said.

Camacho also noted that there is an ongoing review of performance of BIR officials and he expects certain movements, transfer and promotions of BIR personnel based on actual performance.

“This will now become the guiding principle of people decision within the BIR,” Camacho said.

On enforcement, Camacho said the BIR has now a fifth deputy commissioner in charge of legal issues whose only job is enforcement of BIR rules and regulations.

With the Bureau of Customs, Camacho noted that the agency has been successful in fighting smuggling not only of rice but vegetables and meat products as well.

“We continue to have a 100 percent examination policy on all refrigerated vans and this has allowed us to reduce, if not totally eliminate, the influx or inflow of smuggled food and other agricultural products,” Camacho said.

“Overall, we’re happy to say that our administrative measures are making a lot of improvements both at the BIR and the Bureau of Customs and we continue to push for some of the legislative measures that we now have in front of Congress,” Camacho said.

GMA stands firm in decision not to run in 2004

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo said today she remains firm in her decision not to run in the 2004 election.

In back-to-back interviews with two radio stations this morning, the President said she has more peace of mind now and can make decisions and actions based on what is right and best for the greater majority.

“Noong araw, ginagawa ko rin iyon. Kahit hindi popular, gagawin ko. Pero siyempre malungkot ako, kasi nababawasan ako ng suporta. Pero ngayon, yong peace of mind naroroon. Dahil ang nalalabing criteria ay yong

ano ba ang tama (I did the same thing before. No matter how unpopular my decision or action would be, I would take it. But now, I have peace of mind. Because the only criterion left is doing what is right),” she said.

The President added that with her decision not to run for election in 2004, she need not fear politicians and political parties shunning or abandoning her or not giving her their support.

The same goes for other groups who she hopes would understand her and continue to support her administration’s programs for the remainder of her term, the President said.

The President then reiterated her agenda for the next 13 months or so: to strengthen the economy, create more jobs and encourage business activity that is unhampered by corruption and red tape in government; heal the deep wounds within society; and work for clean and honest elections in 2004.

GMA reveals moves to rid bureaucracy of graft of corruption

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said government efforts to fight corruption in the last two years have started paying off, as she revealed moves to rid some agencies of graft and corruption.

In a radio interview, the President cited the latest finding of the Hong Kong-based Political & Economic and Risk Consultancy (PERC) that showed that corruption in the Philippines had become “less serious.”

“May ibang bansang nag-overtake na sa atin sa ranking ng corruption (Other nations have overtaken us in the corruption rankings),” she said.

She added that mechanisms are being put in place to further strengthen the campaign to rid the bureaucracy of corrupt people and corrupt practices.

She said the government would put up at least two units — one that would have wide-ranging tasks and the other, a smaller one — to carry out anti-corrupt practices programs.

“Sisimulan natin doon sa mga ahensiya na gusto nating maging showcase ng fight against graft and corruption (We will start with agencies we want to be showcases of our anti-corruption campaign),” she stressed, referring to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, among others.

Earlier, the PERC classified the Philippines as among the countries in Asia — along with Indonesia, Singapore, South Korea, and Thailand —where “corruption is becoming less serious” as against countries that are “most corrupt.”

PERC coordinates a team of researchers and analysts in the ASEAN countries, Greater China and South Korea. Some of the world’s leading corporations and financial institutions regularly use PERC’s services to assess key trends and critical issues shaping the region, to identify growth opportunities, and to develop effective strategies for capitalizing on these opportunities.

GMA discloses near opening of high-impact transport projects

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said a number of government high-impact transport projects are expected to be completed soon, thus facilitating the speedy and cheaper movement of people and goods.

In a radio interview, the President said she was excited over the near launching of the nation’s “nautical highway” that is on its final stages and would subsequently introduce the creation of many sea routes between Luzon and Mindanao.

She said the government's roll-on roll-off (RO-RO) program in the nautical highway is expected to lessen cargo costs, spawning lesser costs of agricultural and industrial goods being traded throughout the country.

A RO-RO caravan covering key ports in Mindanao and the Visayas would showcase the efficacy and efficiency of the nautical highway, she added.

The President also disclosed the near completion and opening of the Light Rail Transit (LRT) No. 2.

The rail system would run from Claro M. Recto in Manila to Santolan in Pasig City connecting through Aurora Blvd. and Marcos Highway.

"Yun ay isang malaking makakabigay ng ginhawa sa ating mga commuters (The rail system will greatly ease the burdens of our commuters)," she said.

"Kung maraming makakasakay duon, mababawasan yung kailangang magkotse. At mababawasan ang ating traffic (If many people take the LRT, the number of those who drive cars will decrease and it will help ease traffic)," she added.

The President likewise said that she has directed transport officials to prioritize the interconnection of existing and proposed mass rail transit and LRT lines to provide for one rail system in Metro Manila.

She disclosed plans to create a Mega Manila to include the areas of Clark and Subic to the north and the CALABARZON (Cavite-Laguna-Batangas-Rizal-Quezon) area and Batangas Port to the south.

This entails the construction of separate rail systems to Clark and Subic and to the CALABARZON area. "Gusto nating simulan (We want to start)" the projects, she said.

The Chief Executive added that another big-ticket transport project in the works is the opening of the Ninoy Aquino International Airport Terminal 3.

She said there are positive developments on the legal issues surrounding the airport terminal.

Once the issues have been resolved, the airport terminal would be opened, she added.

"In the meantime, yung mga physical requirements ay ginagawa dahil hindi pa lahat ng physical requirements pata magbukas ay nariyan na (We are attending to the completion of the physical requirements)," she said.

Cimatu reassures safety of OFWs in Middle East

Ambassador Roy Cimatu, head of the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT), today assured the nation that preparations to ensure the welfare and safety of the 1.4 million Filipinos in the Persian Gulf are in place, as tell tale signs of a US-led attack on Iraq becomes clear.

At the same time, Cimatu said the government would still maintain diplomatic relations with all Middle East countries, including Iraq, hosting the overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

In a press briefing in Malacañang, Cimatu said the Philippine ambassadors and charge d'affaires in 14 countries in the Middle East have reported daily and assured the President and the MEPT that "all their plans are in place."

"I join you and other Filipinos for prayers and a miracle for a last-minute diplomatic solution that should avert war. Nevertheless, if war happens in the next several days or so, the Philippine government assures the Filipino people that all our preparations in the Middle East for our 1.4 million Filipinos are in place," Cimatu said.

Cimatu said he is leaving for Kuwait Tuesday (March 18) to personally oversee the preparations and implementation of the plans “to put out of harm’s way all the 1.4 million Filipinos in the Middle East.”

Cimatu would be flying to Riyadh and motor to the Kuwaiti border (at Nuwaiseeb) where the relocation site for Filipinos in Kuwait is located. From there, Cimatu said he would proceed further to Kuwait City.

“We just hope that nobody gets hurt and no unnecessary dislocation of their (OFWs) employment will take place and at the same time, we will still maintain all the diplomatic relations with all of those countries hosting these 1.4 million Filipinos,” he said.

Cimatu admitted that such mission would not be easy as there are risks and uncertainties. “But I would like to assure you, as the chairman of the Committee, I will do my best and make a report to the Filipino people that we have done our best in putting out of harms, way all these 1.4 million Filipinos in the Middle East,” he said.

Cimatu noted that the Philippine embassy officials in Baghdad have already moved out and that only four Filipino embassy caretakers have remained.

He noted that there are still at least seven Filipinas married to Iraqi nationals who opted to stay in the Iraqi capital.

Cimatu noted that Kuwait earlier pardoned nine OFWs as part of the 20 Filipino prisoners the Emir of Kuwait had pledged to pardon when President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo visited Kuwait last February.

The relocation site at Nuwaiseeb is complete with all amenities and facilities, including provisions for tents, where OFWs can be relocated in the event of a war in the Gulf.

GMA allays fears of outbreak of killer pneumonia in RP

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today allayed fears over the possible outbreak of the killer pneumonia, known as severe acute respiratory syndrome or SARS, in the country, saying the Department of Health is on the alert and is taking all the necessary preventive measures.

In a radio interview this morning, the President said it is good to note that the situation in the Philippines is not as serious compared to other Southeast Asian countries.

"Ganun pa man ang Department of Health ay nakita n'yo alerto na para sa ano mang suspetyosong kaso and it will not relax its guard (The Department of Health, though, as you can see, is on the alert for any suspicious case and it will not relax its guard)," the President said.

The President stressed that action plans have been put into place, including an information campaign about the disease itself, particularly its symptoms, and precautionary measures against it.

"Ang publiko ay dapat hindi na mi-mislead o natatakot sa tsismis. Kaalaman ang ating pinakamabuting sandata (The public should not be misled by rumors. Information is our best weapon against it)," the President said.

Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit declared Monday that the only known Filipino contact is not a SARS case and was already discharged from hospital confinement.

Dayrit said the DOH had located last March 15 a contact of a known SARS case, a 43 year-old Filipino businessman who came home from Hanoi in March 11.

Up to the time he was discharged yesterday, the Filipino has not manifested any signs of SARS, such as fever of more than 38 degrees Celsius, sore throat, cough, shortness of breath, according to Dayrit. He added that the incubation period is from 4-6 days.

Dayrit advised the public to remain calm in the face of the potential spread of the mysterious pneumonia-type disease. He said DOH is working closely with international agencies like the World Health Organization and the US Centers for Disease Control.

The DOH is also working with the country's labor attaches abroad to prevent the spread of the infection and to identify, isolate and treat possible cases, Dayrit said.

He said that persons who do not have a history of travel to China and Hong Kong in February and March or who were not exposed (meaning lived with, cared for, or worked closely with) to known SARS cases need not worry.

“If you had contact with a known case or visited hospitals in the above places but did not develop respiratory signs and symptoms like fever, body weakness, cough, sore throat, shortness of breath within two weeks, you do not have to worry,” Dayrit said.

GMA calls for moratorium in politics in the midst of uncertainties here and abroad

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today renewed her call for a moratorium in politics and for the people to be united in the midst of uncertainties both here and abroad.

In her remarks at the signing of the memorandum of agreement (MOA) setting up the P500 million Mindanao Peace and Development Fund (MPDF) in Malacañang this morning, the President said the government will undertake all options practicable “to alleviate the transient difficulties and anxieties of our people.”

Saying that Filipinos here and abroad are safe, the President, nevertheless, asked everyone to be calm and vigilant.

“Let every citizen be each other’s keeper. And let’s have unity in crisis. Let there be a moratorium on partisan politics as we all focus our hearts and energies to the tasks at hand,” the President said.

This is something that the Mindanao congressmen have done in setting up the MPDF, the President said. “And I hope all our political leaders will do this for the country in this time of world crisis,” she added.

The President also thanked the Mindanao congressmen, particularly their leader, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., for initiating the setting up of the MPDF and for “sharing the responsibility of restoring peace and confidence, and reawakening our conflict-affected communities to a new era of hope.”

“Mindanao cries out for peace and development, and security from terrorism. Today, we are taking a big step forward in answer to that cry,” the President said.

The President said that on top of the P500 million set aside for the development and security of Mindanao, what is more important is the determination to see the end of the Filipinos fighting Filipinos.

She said that the MPDF would be jointly funded by the House of Representatives and the Executive Department. One half of the fund, or P250 million, will come from the congressional allocation for fiscal year 2003 of the 50 congressmen from Mindanao or P5 million from each one of them.

The other half, or P250 million, will come from the Executive Department.

Under the MOA, each of the 50 congressional districts in Mindanao will receive P10 million from the MPDF to be used solely for peace and order, security and development of their districts.

The MOA on the fund was signed by Speaker de Venecia and Congressman J. Mayo Almario, chairman of the House committee for Mindanao affairs, on behalf of the House of Representatives.

Those who signed on behalf of the Executive Department were Secretary Emilia Boncodin of the Department of Budget and Management, Secretary Angelo Reyes of the Department of National Defense, Secretary Jose Lina of the Department of Interior and Local Government, Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., chief of the Philippine National Police (PNP), and Gen. Dionisio Santiago, chief of staff of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP).

In signing the MOA, officials said that recent developments in Mindanao necessitate a comprehensive government policy to address the peace and order problem in the area.

In the MOA, the congressmen from Mindanao also expressed “their unconditional support” to the administration in its fight against terrorism and lawlessness in Mindanao.

In her remarks, the President called on the leadership of the PNP and the AFP to recommend to the representatives of each congressional district in Mindanao their plan of action and the kind of assistance that they need to combat lawlessness and terrorism in Mindanao.

Gov’t ready to keep stability and safety of OFWs, GMA reassures nation

As a US-led attack on Iraq looms, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today reassured the nation that the government is prepared to keep the stability of the nation as well as protect its overseas Filipino workers (OFWs).

At the same time, the President called on all Filipinos to set aside partisanship and focus all energy in overcoming the present crisis.

“We’re prepared. We’ve been preparing for a long time,” the President said in a statement. “We’ve firmed up the security law enforcement and socio-economic contingency measures to protect the public interest. Most of these are already on stream.”

The President said the nation has enough oil, rice and essential public needs.

She said that she has mobilized the whole government machinery, including the local governments, the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP).

The President also called on the private sector, civil society and indeed, all citizens to cooperate and coordinate with the AFP and PNP in safeguarding communities.

“We must be pro-active against collateral terrorist attacks,” she said.

The President also announced that she would meet the National Security Council this afternoon “to firm up political consensus to meet a possible outbreak of hostilities” in the Middle East.

While the government does not see a serious threat to OFWs, the President said she has nevertheless ordered the Department of Foreign Affairs to take necessary measures, along with the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT) “to ensure the safety of our nationals, and at the same time, preserve diplomatic normalcy as much as possible.”

“I’m assuring all Filipino families and their loved ones that your government will take care of our overseas Filipinos,” the President said.

The President called on the OFWs in Middle East to keep in touch with the Philippine embassies, which will help them and provide them with the information they need.

“Let’s be calm but vigilant and alert. Every Filipino must be responsible for his or her fellow human being. Setting aside partisanship, let’s focus our hands and energies to the task at hand. Together and united, we shall overcome this crisis,” the President said.

Statement of the President on the Iraqi crisis

Up to this time, peace remains the best option.

We keep our hopes high that the precarious situation can be resolved by a consensus of the international community; and I pray that Saddam Hussein will take all steps to avert war and pave the way for a peaceful resolution of the conflict.

While the nations of the world are sorting out the present crisis, we must join hands in working for the stability and well-being of our nation.

We are prepared. We have been preparing for a long time. I met with the Cabinet this morning. We firmed up the security, law enforcement and socioeconomic contingency measures to protect the public interest. Most of these are already on stream. We have more than enough oil, rice and essential public needs.

We have mobilized the whole machinery, including the local governments, the AFP and the PNP. I call on the private sector, civil society, and indeed all our citizens to cooperate and coordinate with them in safeguarding our communities. We must be proactive against collateral terrorist attacks.

I will meet the National Security Council this afternoon to firm up our political consensus to meet a possible outbreak of hostilities.

While we do not see a serious threat to our overseas workers, I have directed the Department of Foreign Affairs to take the necessary measures together with the Middle East Preparedness Team to ensure the safety of our nationals and at the same time, preserve diplomatic normalcy as much as possible. I am assuring all Filipino families and their loved ones that your government will take care of them.

To our countrymen in the Middle East, keep in touch with our embassies, they are there to help you and provide you the information you need.

Let us be calm but vigilant and alert. Every Filipino must be responsible for his fellow human being.

Setting aside partisanship, let us focus our hearts and energies to the tasks at hand. Together and united, we shall overcome this crisis.

GMA outlines peace policy components for Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today outlined the components of her administration's peace policy for Mindanao, namely, active defense, police vigilance, a high level of community alertness and pre-emptive diplomacy.

In remarks during the signing of the Memorandum of Agreement for Mindanao Peace and Development Fund (MPDF) this morning, the President thanked Congress for its very strong national and local political consensus to support measures incorporated in the peace policy for Southern Philippines.

The President said active defense would hopefully open a window of safety that would encourage the people to go home to their places of origin where they could have free reign on their livelihood and daily chores.

"The AFP is in a posture of active defense while a line for peace negotiations remains open," the President said.

The President said the military and police would continue to secure the civilian population to keep the highways of trade open and to check movements of armed groups posing a direct threat to law and order.

In terms of pre-emptive diplomacy, the President said peace negotiations should be pursued with the facilitation and assistance of a third party facilitator in order to achieve a comprehensive and durable settlement of the conflict in line with the Constitution.

“I thank the OIC (Organization of Islamic Conference) for their offer to participate in a ceasefire mechanism backed up by local peace initiatives which I have encouraged on the part of local government executives to bring the scatter dissident militias back to the fold of the community,” the President said.

She said there should be a confluence of peace driven by the entire government in partnership with the people. “Peace for the farmers and the workers so that they can produce their sustenance and earn their keep, peace for the teachers and pupils in the hinterlands, peace for the fisherfolk and seafarers who ply their trade across our waters,” the President said.

The President stressed, however, that it must be peace that “respects our nation’s sovereignty and territory and a peace that respects the right of civilians to feeling secure.”

GMA urges multi-ethnic unity to gain national peace

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called for a “deep sense of ethnic neighborhood” and for unity in diversity, saying this is a virtue that can instill peaceful co-existence among Filipinos and peace in the nation.

In a speech during the signing of the memorandum of agreement for Mindanao Peace and Development Fund (MDPF) in Malacañang, the President stressed that every Filipino must realize that he belongs to a society that is a multi-ethnic society.

“(This multi-ethnic society) should be founded on social justice for all and the institutionalized accommodation of cultural traditions,” she said.

She noted the “rich and varied heritage” of Filipinos.

But she stressed that “we must come to terms with Mindanaons as a people of the Philippines.”

“Otherwise, we will never attain our full promise as a nation. We will never attain the strong Republic that we desire to be,” the President said.

In an earlier interview, the President said the attainment of peace and development in Mindanao remained her government’s priority.

But peace with any armed group should fall under the framework of national sovereignty, territorial integrity and the Constitution of the country, she said.

Further, peace would prevail when communities say “no to terrorism” and continue to be alert to thwart, if not crush, terrorists and those who commit criminality and violence.

She stressed that the government maintained a policy of peace in Mindanao. “But we also have to enforce the law,” she added.

GMA orders NBI to pursue without letup its probe on pyramiding schemes

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered the National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) to relentlessly pursue its investigation of the pyramid scam cases and assist their victims.

NBI Director Reynaldo Wycoco, in a briefing right after a Cabinet meeting in Malacañang, said that the President issued the order to the NBI to ease the pain of hapless victims, including soldiers and policemen, who had invested their meager savings, including retirement benefits, in the pyramiding schemes.

“Awang-awa siya doon sa mga nabiktima lalo dun sa mga members of the military in the schemes and police na nag-loan pa sa Armed Forces of the Philippines Savings and Loan Association Inc. (AFPSLAI),” she said.

“We take inspiration from the instruction of the President to pursue these cases relentlessly because the victims are mostly poor people who were duped to part with their hard-earned money,” Wycoco said.

Wycoco said the NBI is currently investigating 12 to 13 companies that are suspected of “get-rich-quick, too-good-to-be-true” schemes. He declined to name these companies as the NBI is still undertaking surveillance on them.

He said aside from Multitel, there are still eight companies facing cases of estafa, violations of Securities and Exchange Regulations Code and bouncing checks law.

Among these companies are Mateo Management Group (MMG), Ma. Teresa Santos Trading, Tibayan Group Investment Co. Inc., Asia-Pacific Alliance Management, Kimberly Management/Eurocom Business Center, Philsuisse Financial Services and Consultancy and ICS Export, Inc.

Wycoco said filing of cases against these companies might not be enough. “The whole machinery of government must work together: law enforcement, prosecution, the courts, the financial arm, so that appropriate remedies can be applied,” he said.

Wycoco also called on the media to inform the people about the activities of these groups so that they will not fall prey to their schemes.

NSC supports continued efforts at diplomatic solution to the U.S.-Iraq standoff

The National Security Council (NSC) today adopted three recommendations of the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) in connection with the inevitable US-led attack on Iraq within the next few hours.

In a three-hour meeting that started at 3 p.m. in Malacañang, the NSC agreed to:

- Express support for continued efforts at one last chance for diplomatic resolution to the Iraqi crisis;
- Give political and moral support to these efforts; and
- Contribute to the humanitarian response in a post-conflict scenario. This includes the provision of medical, civic and peacekeeping forces.

The NSC also called for the further review by the DFA of the question on the use of Philippine air space and seaports by the US forces, to see whether this is consistent with the Constitution and the country’s national interest.

During the meeting, the NSC noted the preparations made by the executive branch to meet any eventuality of a conflict in the Middle East.

The NSC cited the offices of primary responsibility and the agencies under the Iraq crisis management committee.

The council also noted efforts of the Philippine National Police (PNP) to prevent weapons of mass destructions from finding its way to the hands of local terrorists, and the bid of authorities to secure vital installations.

The NSC likewise cited the mobilization of local government units, down to the barangay level, for anti-crime and anti-terrorist action, and the setting up of local crisis management teams under the local executives.

Meanwhile, the Department of Energy reported that the Dubai oil price fell by about a dollar from $29.80 to a little above $28.

This was almost the same situation that happened in the last Gulf war where prices rose during the times of tension and then decreased when the resolution of the conflict became clear.

The NSC noted that the country has a 62-day in-country inventory of oil and petroleum products, the highest level in ten years.

On the report of the Department of Agriculture, the NSC noted the 95-day inventory of rice, and the stable food supply in terms of palay, meat eggs, fish, cooking oil and sugar.

The Department of Trade and Industry reported that the prices have remained very stable, and that the inventory level of primary goods has remained comfortable amid calls for the prompt prosecution of hoarders, price manipulators and profiteers.

The Department of Finance reported about the foreign exchange volatility and the order to the DOJ to begin investigating foreign exchange speculators.

During the meeting, the NSC also noted the official statement by the President on the Iraqi crisis issued this morning and adopted it as among the consensus items agreed by the NSC.

Among those who attended the NSC meeting were former President Corazon Aquino, Vice President Teofisto Guingona, Jr., Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr., Senators Ramon Magsaysay, Manuel Villar, Loren Legarda, Tito Sotto and Robert Barbers, Congressmen Nephthali Gonzales, Apolinario Lozada, Prospero Pichay, Gerry Salappudin, Agapito Aquino and Raul Gonzales.

Cabinet members who attended the NSC meeting included Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople, Trade and Industry Secretary Manuel Roxas II, Energy Secretary Vince Perez, Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong, Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Socioeconomic Planning Secretary Romulo Neri, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez, Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita, and Ambassador Roy Cimatu, head of the Middle East Preparedness Team.

Statement of National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez on the NSC meeting

The National Security Council has determined that it is in the national interest of the Philippines to provide political and moral support to efforts to rid Iraq of weapons of mass destruction.

The NSC adopted the call of former President Corazon Aquino for all national leaders to unite on this issue.

The NSC expressed satisfaction over the preparations of the government to ensure the safety and welfare of Filipinos here and overseas.

The NSC was reassured by the Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that the nation is prepared, and has been prepared for a long time, to meet the security, law enforcement and socioeconomic challenges attendant to the crisis. The Council noted with satisfaction the contingency plans of the Iraq Crisis Management Team and the Middle East Preparedness Team.

GMA urges people, police to be extra vigilant against terrorists

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the nation to be extra vigilant against terrorists, particularly at this time of global crisis over the disarming of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

She also called on the entire police force all over the country to be "very, very visible in possible terrorist target areas."

In a radio interview this morning, the President said the police and the people themselves should exercise internal vigilance against terrorism.

At the same time, the President said, she will continue to pray "until zero hour" that war in the Gulf will be averted and peace will prevail.

Just hours after United States President George W. Bush issued a 48-hour ultimatum to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to go into exile or face war, the President appealed to the people to stay calm but be vigilant and alert.

She also called on the people to close ranks and remain united in the face of the global crisis. Paraphrasing US President John F. Kennedy during his inaugural address on January 20, 1961, the President said: "Ask not what your country can do for you—ask what you can do for your country."

In today's radio interview, the President said terrorism remains the biggest threat all over the world, recalling the terrorist bombing in Bali, Indonesia, which claimed scores of innocent people in that largely Muslim country.

Bali, she added, was the worst terrorist attack after the Sept. 11, 2001 attack in the United States where thousands of people died.

The President stressed, however, that the No. 1 concern of the government are the close to 1.5 million overseas Filipino workers in the Middle East.

She said the efforts of her administration are focused on the safety and welfare of these OFWs.

NSC okays use of emergency powers by GMA if price of oil would affect prices of basic items

The National Security Council (NSC) has allowed President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to resort to emergency powers if the price of petroleum products would continue to rise and affect the prices of basic commodities.

“Doon sa bagay na yon walang debate, sang-ayon sila (On that particular issue, there was no debate, they all agreed,” the President replied when asked if the issue of emergency powers was discussed in yesterday’s NSC meeting in Malacañang.

The President said that on other issues, there was no overwhelming consensus among the participants that included former President Corazon Aquino, Senate President Franklin Drilon, Speaker Jose de Venecia, Jr. and other leaders of Congress and members of the Cabinet.

Earlier, in a separate interview, the President said that the government would temporarily lift the implementation of the Oil Deregulation Law if the price of oil would adversely affect the prices of basic commodities.

But in this morning’s interview, the President allayed fears of a major economic dislocation that would be brought about by the impending war in the Middle East.

Although she admitted that there would be some adjustments, the President said the war would not result in a permanent damage to the country’s economy “because our economic fundamentals are strong.”

She said that yesterday, after US President George W. Bush issued the 48-hour ultimatum against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, stock markets all over the world perked up and the price of crude oil in the world market actually declined.

But despite these encouraging signs, the President assured the nation that all contingency plans for the Filipino people, here and abroad, have already been in place.

In fact, the President said, the country has now the highest inventory of oil and rice and the price of essential commodities have so far been stable.

“Kaya nanawagan ako sa taong bayan na huwag maniniwala sa mga tsismis tungkol sa pagkukulang(That is why, I call on our people not to believe on rumors of a shortage),” the President said.

Gov’t to charge dollar hoarders, speculators with economic sabotage, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today warned dollar speculators and hoarders that they will be charged with economic sabotage if they would continue with their activities that have resulted in the temporary depreciation of the peso.

In a radio interview, the President said she has already ordered Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong to work on the preliminary investigation against individuals and companies suspected of resorting to speculations and hoarding of US dollars.

The President said that economic sabotage is a criminal offense and individuals found to engage in this kind of criminal activity would be prosecuted.

“Kaya nagbibigay ako sa kanila ng babala, kung ayaw nilang ituloy itong charges sa kanila, ibenta nila yong mga binili nilang dolyar na sobra sa kanilang pangangailangan (That is why I am warning them, if they don’t want us to pursue the charges against them, then they should sell the dollars that they have overbought),” the President stressed.

The President said that for companies or institutions that have engaged in dollar hoarding, their treasurers or other officials would be charged with economic sabotage.

According to the President, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) has a list of individuals or firms that have been engaged in overbuying of US dollars.

But the BSP, the President said, can only impose administrative sanctions against those suspected of hoarding dollars but it is the Department of Justice that can charge them in courts.

So, whatever initial findings of the BSP can be used by the DOJ in pursuing the charges of economic sabotage against dollar speculators and hoarders, the President said.

PNP gives tips on how to counter terrorism, what to do in case of bomb threats

The Philippine National Police (PNP), in response to instructions from Malacañang, released to the public today leaflets calling on the people to be vigilant against terrorism.

The leaflets, produced by the Directorate for Police Community Relations of the PNP headquarters in Camp Crame, gives advice on what the citizens can do in case of bombing attacks and bomb threats.

The PNP handout gives the citizenry tips on bomb detection and gives advice on what objects to watch out for. It also lists down security measures to be implemented and observed in public places and business establishments.

The PNP urges the people to stay calm and take proper precautions at home and at work. It urges them to report bomb threats and bombing incidents by calling 117 on the telephone.

“Organize monitoring groups in your neighborhood and in your workplace,” the PNP says, pointing out that as responsible citizens “we need to build a united front against criminality and terrorism.”

Neutralize rumors or unverified reports through text messages by deleting them, not sending them forward to other people, the PNP advises owners of cellular phones.

Get back to normal routine as soon as possible, the PNP further advises, adding that “we should not allow ourselves to be cowed into fear but instead lead our lives normally.”

The PNP also gives tips on what to watch out for: strange, unusual, unattended baggage, bags, boxes or parcels; a ticking sound inside bags or packages; presence of electric wires and batteries where they should not be.

Business establishments are advised to strictly implement the inspection procedures. When suspected bombs are noted, security personnel or employees should immediately contact the proper authorities.

Statement of Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye

The President has decided to postpone her state visit to Spain and official visits to Germany and the Holy See.

The host governments has been informed of the President’s decision and consultations with the host governments will be held to make arrangements for the President to visit the three countries at a later date.

Developments in the world compel the President to make this decision. These developments require the President to remain in the Philippines for the time being.

The President deeply appreciates the invitations of Spain, Germany and the Holy See to visit and looks forward to pushing through with these visits at a later date.

GMA lauds OWWA-PNB-Globe linkage to put up Tele-Ugnayan for Mideast-based OFWs, families

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today took another step to assure the welfare and safety of Filipino expatriates in the Middle East as she inspected communication facilities set up to provide free phone calls between overseas Filipino workers (OFW) in the Gulf and their families.

The President cited the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA), Philippine National Bank (PNB) and Globe Telecommunications for joining hands to carry out the program dubbed "PNB Tele-Ugnayan: Rapid Connect sa Middle East."

After a briefing on the situation of OFWs in the Middle East from OWWA officials, the President made a call to Kuwait and was linked with Ambassador Bayani Mangibin.

She expressed satisfaction over preparations the embassy personnel in Kuwait and all over the Middle East have been doing to see to the well-being of Filipinos in the area, in the event a US-Iraq conflict broke out.

She told Mangibin the welfare of OFWs in Kuwait "ang ating pangunahing atensiyon ngayon (is the government's priority focus of attention in these times)."

In an earlier Middle East map review at the OWWA office, the President pointed out Kuwait's proximity to Iraq.

She also appreciated Mangibin's short but positive briefing on the situation of OFWs in Kuwait. "Good... good, so normal pa rin ang buhay diyari (so life there continues normally)," she said over the Tele-Ugnayan line.

She added that Middle East Preparedness Team chief ambassador Roy Cimatu would be "leaving today to go (to Kuwait). He'll be the last man out if ever."

Overheard during the Tele-Ugnayan was Mangibin's response that thanked the President for her full support to the embassy staff and the OFWs in Kuwait.

"Lahat kami, itong mga OFWs dito at mga staff ng Philippine Embassy ay lalong nagkakaroon ng lakas ng loob sa ganitong klaseng pagsuporta ninyo sa amin, Madam," Mangibin said.

During the same visit, the President also talked to a Filipino OFW in Kuwait and took time to confer with relatives of OFWs worldwide, particularly those based in the Gulf, who were transacting business at the OWWA main office in Pasay City.

OWWA chief Virgilio Angelo said the Tele-Ugnayan would facilitate the easy, fast and free phone links between OFWs in the Gulf and their loved ones in the Philippines.

This would provide "a relevant and timely service to our OFWs and their families at this most crucial time," Angelo said.

With PNB and OWWA in the project is Globe which offered cellular phones and computers with Internet capability for video-conferencing.

Angelo said Tele-Ugnayan has made available two communication networks, both local and overseas.

Cellular phone booths have been put in place at the OWWA main office along F.B. Harrison in Pasay City and in 11 of its regional offices nationwide.

Phone links could be made in Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Dubai in the United Arab Emirates and other countries that have large concentrations of Filipinos likely to be affected by the imminent war in Iraq.

The calls, OWWA officials said, may be facilitated through PNB staff here and in the concerned Middle East countries.

Statement of Presidential Spokesperson Ignacio R. Bunye

Crisis Preparedness

The economy will undergo minor adjustments, but there will be no lingering or permanent damage. Our economic fundamentals are sound. The stock market worldwide is perking up. Oil prices are dropping steadily.

Nevertheless, our contingency plans to protect the interest of the people have been in place for sometime now. We have the highest oil and rice inventories in a decade. Prices of prime commodities are stable. There is no need for grave concern. Do not believe rumors of shortages.

SARS

Action plans are under way. These include an information campaign about the disease itself, its symptoms, and things that should be done to avoid it. The public must not be misled or frightened by rumors. Knowledge is our best weapon.

Peace Talks

We welcome the call of the Organization of Islamic Conference (OIC) to push through with the peace negotiations. We are prepared for peace at all times but we are just as prepared to enforce law and order and protect our communities from lawbreakers. We shall open the field for peacemakers, but we shall not yield an inch of ground to terrorists.

DILG bares program of action to ensure public security

Taking a cue from President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's call for a total community approach and paradigm shift in fighting lawlessness, the Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) presented in a Cabinet meeting yesterday a program designed to build a safe Philippines and develop a culture of peace.

Founded on the belief that peace and order, security and safety are public goods that must be developed, promoted and protected by government and the citizenry, the program proposes guides to action to ensure public security.

It exhorts governors, city and municipal mayors and punong barangays to assume the role of anti-crime czars, crisis managers and information czars as discussed during the President's Command Conference last March 15 with the police, the military and LGU officials.

As anti-crime czars, governors, mayors and punong barangays will take the lead in the fight against street crimes, terrorism, and other forms of lawless violence. They will also have to revitalize the Peace and Order Councils, and activate, train and mobilize Barangay Tanods.

The governors, city and municipal mayors, through their respective Peace and Order Councils, shall update and revise their respective Integrated Community Public Safety Plans and ensure that all punong barangays maintain and regularly update the list of barangay residents.

The punong barangays shall organize neighborhood watch groups to assist the police and the military in intelligence gathering, and in monitoring and reporting of suspicious persons, suspicious movements and suspicious materials in all public places and vital installations.

As crisis managers, the same officials shall ensure the safety of food, medicines, and other necessities and establish evacuation centers for victims of terrorism.

They will also have to:

- Direct local health officers to identify, isolate, quarantine and treat victims or carriers of infectious diseases brought about by exposure to any chemical, radiological or biological agent;
- Impose stricter security measures in public places and vital installations;
- Cause the apprehension and aid in the prosecution and conviction of the perpetrators;
- Establish checkpoints in strategic areas when necessary;
- Impose curfew hours and other restrictions on mobility whenever warranted and on a case to case basis; and
- Reach out to all sectors of the community to foster unity and cooperation and force a united front against terrorism and other forms of lawless violence through peace covenants.

As information czars, local government officials will act as spokesperson to inform the constituents of the local and national security situation and immediately dispel rumors and clarify misleading information.

They will also have to assure the public that the government is doing its best to address the crisis, urge them to be vigilant and safety conscious.

As a final duty, the same officials will have to organize barangay assemblies, mobilize NGOs and other sectors of the locality as mechanisms to disseminate information on local and national security situation.

During the same Cabinet meeting, DILG Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. revealed that a total of 800 barangay tanods from 40,000 barangays are slated to be trained this year.

He also said that the Trainer's Training for NCR, Luzon and Mindanao Clusters has already been completed with the Visayas Cluster scheduled for March 21.

Gov't assures nation of adequate food supply in case of war in Middle East

The Department of Agriculture (DA) has assured the Filipino people that the country has adequate food supply even if the war in Iraq would last for months.

During last Tuesday's meeting of the National Security Council (NSC) in Malacañang, Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo unveiled his department's Food Security Plan in the event of a war in Iraq that assures not only food adequacy but also access of the people to food supply.

The DA said the government will maintain at least a 90-day supply of rice for the next six months.

In its projection for the first semester of this year, the DA said that rice inventory as of January 1, 2003 was 2.52 million metric tons (MMT), which is equivalent to 94 days supply.

The DA estimates domestic production for the first semester to be at 3.77 MMT, which is equivalent to 143 days supply.

In addition to rice importations to be made by the National Food Authority (NFA) and food organizations, the total rice supply for the first semester would be about 7.152 MMT, which is good for 271 days supply.

With the expected domestic consumption of 4.778 MMT for the first semester, there would still be a net inventory of 2.38 MMT, which is equivalent to 90 days supply, the DA said.

The DA said that the expected shortfall in corn due to production losses in Mindanao as a result of the recent fighting, would be remedied by the importation of some 459,000 metric tons from abroad, on top of the 600,000 MT of feed wheat importation from India.

The DA food security plan also assured a four to five months supply for meat, eggs, and fish, while fish production would be entering its peak for the next four months.

On cooking oil, the DA has assured a two-months supply, which could be replenished on a monthly basis.

There will be no shortage of sugar, the DA said, adding that the country has the highest production in 30 years, with 2 million metric tons produced as against domestic consumption of only 1.95 MMT.

In its report to the NSC, the DA and the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) have pledged to work, on best effort basis, in stabilizing the price of essential commodities, especially food products.

GMA orders AFP, PNP, local officials to be prepared for collateral terrorist attacks

BAGUIO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last night directed the Armed Forces of the Philippines, the Philippine National Police and local officials to be prepared for collateral terrorist attacks that may be triggered by the military confrontation in Iraq.

During a command conference here with the AFP, PNP and local government officials of Region 1 (Ilocos) and the Cordillera Administrative Region, the President stressed that the entire government must be prepared with whatever contingency may occur in the country after US President George Bush gave Saddam Hussein a 48-deadline to leave Iraq or face military action.

“The most important thing to prepare for is the welfare of our OFWs in the Middle East, and the second thing that we have to take care of would-be collateral terrorist attacks,” the President said.

“During this time, we need crisis managers, information champions for economic stability and public welfare and we need anti-crime czars,” she said.

The President told the local executives to be especially conscious of these functions and to exercise them especially during these times.

As crisis managers, the President said the local executives are in charge of monitoring all kinds of social and economic problems in this time of crisis.

“For instance, you are in charge of monitoring the prices of prime commodities; you are in charge of accosting hoarders and profiteers,” she said.

“And we expect you to set up, together with the police and sometimes the military, depending on the area, the contingency plans for disaster, all possible terrorist events, including the lines of coordination with the national government agencies,” the President added.

The second function that the local executives must exercise during these difficult times is to be information champions for economic stability and welfare.

“You are expected to disseminate information – helpful and important information on probably unfolding events and developments,” she said.

The President said the local executives are also expected to preempt rumors and disinformation because there will be so much of these even as there is so much of these going on even now.

“And these rumors and disinformation engender a climate of uncertainty and fear,” she said, encouraging the local executives to be the bastion of stability and confidence. “You will be the one to give the truth to our people,” she said.

The President asked the local officials to be not only advocates of government programs but also the spokespersons for prudence and sobriety to keep people sober and prudent at this time.

As anti-crime czars, the President urged the local executives, under the Local Government Code, to spearhead the fight against criminality, including street crimes.

“As deputies of the National Police Commission, the local executives exercise supervision and control over the police,” she said, stressing that they should be vanguards against petty criminals preying on ordinary people.

“And here the police are instructed to work with you, to report to you, take instructions from you in drafting community cooperation for law enforcement,” the President said.

In an ambush interview later, the President told members of the Malacañang Press Corps that she was very, very gratified about the level of preparedness of Region 1 and the Cordilleras.

With the President were Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Presidential Management Staff Chief Silvestre Afable, Jr. and the governors of Region 1 headed by La Union Governor Victor Ortega, who is Region 1 Peace and Order Council Chairman, and the governors of the Cordilleras and the mayors and other local officials of both regions.

Also present were the top military and police officers of the country and the two regions.

RP has joined ‘coalition of the willing’ but won’t send combat troops to war zone, says GMA

BAGUIO CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the nation that the government would not be deploying combat troops to the Middle East even as she said that the Philippines has sided with the United States in its efforts to rid Iraq of weapons of mass destruction.

In her speech this morning at the commencement exercises of the Philippine Military Academy (PMA), the President said that as part of the US-led “coalition of the willing,” the Philippines is giving political and moral support for actions that would eventually disarm Iraq of her weapons of terror.

“We are part of a long standing security alliance. We are part of the global coalition against terrorism. These relationships are vital to our national interest,” the President said.

The President said that our alliance with the US in the global fight against terrorism “bear a significance to this war and to our combined efforts to fight terrorism in the Philippines as well as in the region.”

She said that the Philippines is committed to extend peacekeeping and humanitarian assistance in Iraq after the conflict is over. “This assistance is a subject of ongoing consultations,” the President added.

The President said that the war in Iraq, which had started a few hours ago, was a reality that the world had expected. But she added that the Philippines expects the war to be “surgical, short and swift.”

According to the President, the moral and political cause that the Philippines has supported in ridding Iraq of the weapons of mass destruction does not pose a mortal threat to Filipino nations in the Middle East.

“They are in the good hands of our embassies, their employers and the host governments,” the President said.

But the President also cautioned that since this is a time of extreme distress among all citizens of the world, including Filipinos, the government is working with the private sector to open the widest lines of communication between our nationals in the Middle East and their families in the Philippines.

Government call centers, the President said, are open in many places and these calls will be free of charge.

We shall spare no effort to keep our nationals out of harm's way. Contingency measures are already in place to safeguard the life and limb of our nationals in the Middle East," the President said.

GMA sees no need for emergency powers 'at the moment'

BAGUIO CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today clarified that she does not see the need for emergency powers "at this moment" although these powers are in reserve.

In her speech this morning at the commencement exercises of the Philippine Military Academy (PMA), the President said that these emergency powers would be used only in the midst of extreme economic and security contingency for the sake and welfare of the Filipino people.

She said that the emergency powers, if ever she would use them, would be made in consultation with Congress.

"We must calibrate such measures to emerging critical situations," the President said.

In its meeting in Malacañang last Tuesday, the National Security Council (NSC) approved the use by the President of emergency powers if the price of oil would unduly jack up the prices of prime commodities.

In a radio interview this morning, the President said that the emergency power that she envisioned, if there is a need of it, is not synonymous to martial law or the lifting of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus.

GMA orders all local governments to convene crisis management councils

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo directed today all local governments to convene all crisis management councils and asked local officials to personally and closely supervise the implementation of all contingency plans.

In a speech before the graduating class of the Philippine Military Academy in Baguio City, the President said the country, as in other parts of the world, must be ready for terrorist attacks, cautioning that the Philippines' political situation will only multiply terrorist aggression.

"Ang mga teroristang yan hindi nagtanong kung ano ang politika ng Indonesia noong ginawa nila yung karahasan sa Bali," she said. "So like the rest of the world, we must be ready for terrorist attacks in our own country."

As she addressed the graduates, United States President George W. Bush announced in Washington the launching of the "opening stages of what will be a broad and concerted campaign...to disarm Iraq, to free its people and to defend the world from grave danger."

"I ask for complete and total vigilance," President Macapagal-Arroyo said. "Extremists are likely to attack in desperation, anywhere and in any manner. Let us bond together, Muslims and Christians alike, in the task of vigilance and in preserving the ramparts of peace."

While the military and police forces, she said, are already in a high state of alert, the President still urged the citizens to combine vigilance with calm and help the authorities check terrorist incursions.

Any potential socio-economic dislocations, according to her, shall be dealt with in the highest interest of the public, saying the government will not allow transient instabilities to prejudice the poor and underprivileged.

“A price watch of all prime commodities is being implemented,” she said. “We warn hoarders and profiteers.”

The government, according to the President, will spare no effort to keep Filipino overseas workers out of harms way, saying that contingency measures are already in place to safeguard their life and limb.

Most of them, she added, will stay in place in order to be enveloped by the effective defenses against any attack. The defenses have been put in place by the host nations in cooperation with the coalition forces of which the Philippines is a member.

“The moral and political cause to rid Iraq of weapons of mass destruction does not pose a mortal threat to our nationals in the Middle East,” she said. “They are in the good hands of our embassies, their employers and the host governments.”

Recognizing the present situation as a time of extreme distress among all citizens of the world including Filipinos, the President said her administration is working with the private sector to open the widest lines of communication between the OFWs in the Middle East and their families in the Philippines.

As a gesture of support, the government has offered their families here free calls to their loved ones.

“It is times like this that we must think about our togetherness as a nation, our sense of belonging to one Republic, and know that we have a government that cares for its people,” the President said.

“This is a historic opportunity to come together in times of crisis, as we have done so many times in the past,” she added.

GMA hails China for help in promoting advance technology in agri, aquaculture

MUÑOZ, Nueva Ecija – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today lauded the government of the Republic of China for helping the country in promoting the advance technology in agriculture and aquaculture.

The President arrived here on board a helicopter from Baguio City where she attended the graduation of the Philippine Military Academy (PMA) to further sow goodwill and strengthen ties with the Chinese government.

Upon her arrival, the President motored to the Nueva Ecija Fruits and Vegetables Seed Center and led the ribbon-cutting ceremony there.

She also visited the Bureau of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources – National Freshwater Fisheries Technology Center (BFAR-NFFTC) and led the launching of “Get Excel Tilapia” program.

The program will promote the superior breed of tilapia developed under the Philippine National Tilapia Breeding Program.

The program hopes to raise the country’s annual fish production and increase the gross revenues of fish farmers, especially in Nueva Ecija.

The President also motored to the nearby Philippine-Sino Center for Agricultural Technology (PhilSCAT) and led the unveiling of the building’s marker and inaugurating the newly-built P500-million state-of-the-art center.

China's Ambassador Wang Chungui, Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo, Representative Eleuterio Violago, Nueva Ecija Governor Tomas Joson III, and Munoz Mayor Nestor Alvarez, PhilSCAT Director, witnessed the unveiling.

The President also received from Ambassador Chingui agricultural equipments such as generator, water pumps, diesel engines, center windrower, driving disk plough, hand tractor, rotary tiller, paddy-field driving rakes, rice thresher, power sprayer, complete equipment of product line for raising rice seedling for sowing, semi-feed self-propelled combine harvester, and tractors.

The center construction was a result of an agreement on cooperation in agriculture and other related areas the Philippines and the PROC signed in Beijing in September 1999.

The PhilSCAT is the first grant project of the PROC to the Philippines and the technical cooperation program will extend up to 2008. The center, standing on 9.78 hectares within the compound of the Central Luzon State University, hopes to showcase modern agricultural technologies, particularly the Chinese advanced and practical hybrid rice production and related agricultural engineering and mechanization technologies.

This will help Filipino farmers increase rice production and labor productivity to attain sustainable food security.

The center boasts of state-of-the-art facilities such as an integrated mechanical technology-testing laboratory, mechanical service and post harvest workshop designed to enhance Philippine agricultural research development and extension.

Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo on the military strike initiated by the United States and its coalition partners against Iraq, March 20, 2003

The signals of war ring out on the other side of the world.

We are part of the coalition of the willing in terms of political and moral support for actions to rid Iraq of weapons of mass destruction. We are part of a long standing security alliance as well as the global coalition against terrorism. This relationship is vital to our national security. It bears a significance to this war and to our combined efforts to fight terrorism in the Philippines and in the region.

We shall not deploy Philippine combat troops. But the Philippines is committed to extend peacekeeping and humanitarian assistance after the Iraq conflict. This is the subject of ongoing consultations.

The war is reality we expected. And we expect it to be surgical, short, and swift. But for now we have to face our immediate imperatives.

The moral and political cause to rid Iraq of weapons of mass destruction does not pose a mortal threat to our nationals in the Middle East, who are in the good hands of our embassies, their employers and the host governments. Nonetheless, it is a time of extreme distress among all citizens of the world, and among all Filipinos. The government is working with the private sector to open the widest lines of communication between our nationals in the Middle East and their families in the Philippines. Government call centers are open in many places. Let me take this opportunity to offer our nationals and their families: we will place your calls to your loved ones at no cost.

We shall spare no effort to keep our nationals out of harm's way. Contingency measures are already in place to safeguard the life and limb of our nationals in the Middle East. Most will stay in place in order to be enveloped by the effective defense against any attack put in place by the host nations in cooperation with the coalition forces.

The world must be ready for terrorist attacks in any country. There is no use to argue that our political position will only multiply terror attacks in our own country. Terrorism knows no boundaries. It has hit many countries regardless of their political positioning. We have already seen the worst—Basilan, General Santos, Zamboanga, Metro Manila, Davao.

Like the rest of the world, we must be ready for terrorist attacks in our own country. Our military and police forces are already in a high state of alert. Our communities must combine vigilance with calm and help the authorities check terrorist incursions.

Any potential socioeconomic dislocations, while remote, shall be dealt with in the higher interest of the public. We will not allow transient instabilities to prejudice the poor and underprivileged. A price watch on prime commodities is being implemented. We warn hoarders or profiteers.

The investigation of six banks is just one of the measures being taken by the government versus opportunist market speculators and dollar hoarders. Coming at a time of crisis, these violations are tantamount to economic sabotage.

The slumping of the peso is not a time for the public to fall prey to those who are taking advantage of the crisis. It is a time for us to close ranks, have prudence, and cooperate to address all challenges.

It is at times like this that we must think about our togetherness as a nation, our sense of belonging to one Republic, and know that we have a government that cares for its citizens.

GMA asks PMA grads to help her turn Mindanao into region of peace, security, development

Instead of sending combat troops to the Middle East and taking part in the war to disarm Iraq, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo would rather see the men in uniform engaged in a mission to make Mindanao a region of peace, security and development.

This in a way summed up the President's directive to the graduates of the Philippine Military Academy's Mandarangan Class 2003 in one of the most applauded parts of her speech in the commencement exercises this morning in Baguio City.

"Unless we, as a people come to terms with Mindanao, we will never attain our full promise as a nation, a great democracy, a strong republic," she said. "Thus we must arrive at a national consensus on the principles to guide our search for peace."

The President told the graduates that there will be difficult days ahead of them, particularly in Mindanao where some of them will soon be frontliners to win the peace.

She said that the extremist fringe has distorted the agenda, making it difficult for the average Filipino to gain the balanced understanding of Mindanao.

"The conflict in Mindanao is not a religious or ethnic war between Muslims and Christians. The ongoing campaign in Mindanao is against lawless elements who engage in criminal activities and who flaunt their violation of the laws of our society," she told the graduates.

The different armed groups in Mindanao, she said are not homogenous. "Each of these armed groups is distinct from the other stakeholders," she added.

By the other stakeholders, the President was referring to the far greater number of non-combatants, whether Christian, Muslim or Lumad "who are often forgotten but whose only vested interest is peace."

She also mentioned the Organization of Islamic Conference "whose interest is peace within the framework of our national sovereignty and territorial integrity."

The President, as Commander in Chief of the Armed Forces, called on the graduates to help her realize her dream of making Mindanao a region of peace, security and development, saying it is their assignment to make her vision come true.

She then enumerated the elements of her dream end state for Mindanao as follows:

- The presence of peace, and the absence of ideologically motivated conflict and the renunciation of the use of force to pursue political ends;
- Development based on political stability, economic strength and good governance;
- The complete acceptance of national sovereignty and territorial integrity based on the constitution and the rule of law, together with the maintenance of external peace with all their neighbors;
- A multi-ethnic society with social justice for all and institutionalized accommodations of ethnic traditions; and
- The total defeat of terrorism.

She awarded the Presidential Saber to Cadet Tara Velazco, a native of Camiling, Tarlac who topped the 120-strong graduating cadets. She also awarded the PGMA achievement award for leadership to Cadet Filemon Tan, Jr. Brigade Commander of the CCAFP.

GMA wants special courts to handle pyramid cases

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered Justice Secretary Simeon Datumanong to ask the Supreme Court to set up a special court that would specially take on pyramid scam cases.

The President, who issued the order during a meeting with pyramid scam victims at the Heroes' Hall in Malacañang, also ordered National Bureau of Investigation Director Reynaldo Wycoco to likewise follow up allegations that the principal personalities involved who have been arrested are enjoying VIP (very important person) treatment.

Aside from Wycoco, Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. has been investigating allegations that Maria Teresa Santos, the sole proprietor of MTS Trading allegedly involved in pyramiding, is enjoying special treatment.

In the open forum, several victims claimed that the police holding her at the Criminal Investigation and Detection Group (CIDG) at the Philippine National Police (PNP) headquarters at Camp Crame, who were also her supposed victims, have allegedly been paid their principal investment and interest.

The President assured the victims that if cases have already been lodged against such personalities, such individuals would not be able to leave the country.

“Yung pong mga nakasuhan na, hindi na po sila pwedeng makaalis ng bansa,” she said.

The President also advised the victims that all cases involving pyramid scams will be followed up by the Department of Justice led by no less than State Prosecutor Jovencito Zuno.

The President further noted that if victims want to get the money they invested from these personalities through legal means, they should refrain from signing affidavit of desistance.

On those personalities who have reportedly fled to other countries, the President said Wycoco would confer with his counterpart in the United States to trace the funds.

The President also ordered the DOJ to set up a “clearinghouse” that would take on the complaints and follow-up of the victims. The clearinghouse would be composed of the existing government task force on pyramid scam, she said.

“Ang importante ay yung paglilitis ay talagang makumpleto at saka kung makakahanap tayo ng paraan na maibalik ang isang bahagi ng inyong pinuhunan, titingnan natin kung ano ang magagawa natin (the important thing is that the cases could be completed and that we find ways to bring back, in whole or in part, your investments),” she said.

Also present at the meeting were State Prosecutor Jovencito Zuno, Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo, Justice Secretary Datumanong and NBI Director Wycoco.

The President has ordered all concerned government agencies to relentlessly pursue the investigation of the pyramid scam cases and assist the victims.

The President issued the order to the NBI to ease the pain of hapless victims, including soldiers and policemen, who had invested their meager savings, including retirement benefits, in the pyramiding schemes.

“Awang-awa siya doon sa mga na-biktima, lalo dun sa mga members of the military in the schemes and police na nag-loan pa sa Armed Forces of the Philippines Savings and Loan Association Inc. (AFPSLAI),” Wycoco earlier said.

The NBI is currently investigating 12 to 13 companies suspected of being involved in “get-rich-quick, too-good-to-be-true” schemes. Wycoco declined to name these companies as the NBI is still undertaking surveillance on them.

Aside from Multitel, there are still eight companies facing cases of estafa, violations of Securities and Exchange Regulations Code and the bouncing checks law.

Among these companies are Mateo Management Group (MMG), Ma. Teresa Santos Trading, Tibayan Group Investment Co. Inc., Asia-Pacific Alliance Management, Kimberly Management/Eurocom Business Center, Philsuisse Financial Services and Consultancy and ICS Export, Inc.

Wycoco said the filing of cases against these companies might not be enough. “The whole machinery of government must work together: law enforcement, prosecution, the courts, the financial arm, so that appropriate remedies can be applied,” he said.

Wycoco also called on the media to inform the people about the activities of these groups so that they will not fall prey to their schemes.

GMA expresses confidence Iraq war will not bring permanent damage to economy

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed confidence that even if the current war in Iraq may result in some temporary and minor adjustments in the Philippine economy, it will not bring lingering or permanent damage.

Speaking at the opening ceremonies of the 24th Biennial Convention of the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, Inc. (FFCCCII) in Binondo, Manila, the President said that her assessment of the situation does not indicate the need at this moment for exercising extraordinary powers.

"This will be considered only as a last resort," the President said, explaining that the economic fundamentals of the country are sound.

She said that tourism and exports are up. Shipments in and out of the country are doing business, crude prices of oil are going down.

With sound economic fundamentals, the President said "we should look beyond the Iraq war and not be distracted from our national ambition to become a prosperous and strong Republic within the decade."

The President thanked the Federation for supporting the difficult reforms she has had to make in her administration, reforms, she said, that the economy needs for long-term prosperity.

The President further thanked the FFCCCII for supporting difficult financial reforms such as the Anti-Money Laundering Law.

"But I am thankful and hopeful that because we have been dialoguing, the final law that has come out will help us fight criminality and at the same time protect your rights to privacy," she said.

The President likewise thanked the FFCCCII members for their contribution to the Philippine educational reforms and their participation in the P1-billion component of the government program for school buildings. "I hope that in the next 15 months, together we will finally bridge the gap in classrooms in our entire public education," she said.

The President also expressed her gratitude for the FFCCCII's contribution to the government's agricultural reform, citing the hybrid rice which has resulted in the doubling of the income of the farmers who have participated in the program.

During the program, the President swore in FFCCCII president John K.C. Ng as Presidential Envoy for Chinese Affairs with the rank as ambassador.

His first assignment is to be her personal envoy and representative next week at the Philippine Exhibit in Shanghai.

“I look forward to John’s service in my administration, and I hope that through his leadership in that job, he will maximize the trade and tourism opportunities that the new China makes available for the Philippines,” the President said.

GMA explains RP’s role in the U.S.-led ‘Coalition of the Willing’

A terrorist with no access to weapons of mass destruction is a terrorist that is much easier to neutralize.

With this, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo justified her administration’s political and moral support to the US-led strike against Iraq, saying a successful disarmament would lessen the chances of these weapons getting into the hands of terrorists.

In a brief radio interview with CNN this morning, the President outlined the government’s stand against terrorism and why the Philippines joined the “Coalition of the Willing.”

“It is an international interest for us to support this coalition and be part of it because we believe that even in the present realities we can prevent weapons of mass destruction to get into the hands of terrorists who seek to sow mayhem in our Southern Philippines,” the President said.

As of today, more than 35 countries have already committed themselves to the coalition and the number is still growing. Among these are Australia, South Korea, Bulgaria, Hungary, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Poland Portugal, Romania, Spain, Turkey and the United Kingdom.

Contributions from these nations would include direct military participation, logistical, intelligence and political support, specialized chemical and biological response teams, over-flight rights and humanitarian and other aid.

Asked if there is a possibility that the Philippines would send combat troops, the President said: “The combat troops will not be involved in the present conflict. We’re ready to support in terms of humanitarian assistance and peacekeeping during the post conflict. We could also consider the use of our air space and refueling facilities.”

She added that each member of the coalition is giving its contribution in accordance with its own capabilities and constitution.

“So we have already defined that our role will be in the post conflict, in the reconstruction, in the humanitarian assistance, in the peacekeeping and during the conflict in the possible use of air space and refueling facilities,” she said.

Only today (Thursday, Washington time), in a press briefing by White House spokesman Ari Fleisher, it was announced that Turkey, through its Parliament, has granted overflight rights to the US and coalition forces in a strong show of support.

In the same briefing, Fleisher said that many members of the coalition recently escaped from tyranny and oppression and “they understand what is at stake in bringing freedom and liberation to the Iraqi people, as the mission of disarmament continues.”

All told, the population of the “Coalition of the Willing” is approximately 1.18 billion around the world and includes nations from every continent on the globe. The coalition countries, representing every major race, religion and ethnic group have a combined gross domestic product (GDP) of approximately $21.7 trillion.

RP has no hatred against Iraqi people, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed that the Philippines has no hatred against the Iraqi people but only against the Iraqi leadership for refusing to abandon its weapons of mass destruction.

Speaking at the 24th Biennial Convention of the Federation of Filipino-Chinese Chambers of Commerce and Industry, Inc. (FFCCCII) at the Exhibit Hall of the Federation Center in Muelle de Binondo, Manila, the President said that participation of the Philippines in the “Coalition of the Willing” does not mean war between Iraqis and Filipinos.

“It is a battle between tyranny and freedom,” the President said, adding that the country is in solidarity with the Iraqi people in their struggle for freedom and in the coalition forces in the fight to redeem that freedom for the Iraqi people.

On Thursday at the Philippine Military Academy in Baguio City, the President announced that the Philippines was joining the “Coalition of the Willing” in terms of political and moral support for actions to rid Iraq of weapons of mass destruction.

The President said that she joins all Muslims around the world in praying for the Iraqi people. “We pray that the Almighty will keep them safe and sound through this crisis. We stand beside them in a waiting of brighter day of freedom and prosperity,” she said.

The President pointed out that the Philippine’s participation of the “Coalition of Willing” is also a battle between security and terrorism.

She said local terrorists have been attacking our communities by kidnapping and bombing even before September 11 and even before she assumed the presidency.

These terrorists who had been kidnapping and bombing commercial establishments are linked with terrorist cells overseas, the President said.

“We don’t want them to have an access to weapons of mass destruction from their foreign benefactors,” the President said.

The President then called on the top Filipino-Chinese businessmen to close ranks, to be prudent and to cooperate with the government in addressing the challenges that the country is facing.

“This is the time for us to face our togetherness as a nation and our sense of belonging to the Republic,” the President said.

“This is the time when I want you to especially know that you have a government that cares or a citizen that cares for you,” the President said.

The government’s battle against terrorism is a battle between criminality and the justice system, and the community, the President said, is the most important pillar of the country’s criminal justice system.

The cooperation and vigilance of the entire community as well as the local government units are required to keep the country safe and secure, the President said.

The President expressed her gratitude to the civil society, which include federations like the FFCCCII, for their solidarity behind the efforts of the government to meet this current crisis.

The President specially thanked Dr. Lucio Tan and the Philippine National Bank for their support and for being the patron of the call centers of the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA), so Filipinos can get in touch with their relatives in the Middle East.

Gov't opens free call centers to Middle East

Want to call your loved ones in the Middle East or send them e-mail messages for free?

The Office of the Press Secretary and the Presidential Action Center, in partnership with other government agencies and telecommunication companies, today opened the Oplan Kalinga Call Center at the Ninoy Aquino Stadium (formerly Rizal Memorial Coliseum) near the Harrison Plaza Complex in Manila.

The Call Center is open to all Filipinos who wish to call their relatives in the Middle East to check their safety following the outbreak of war in Iraq. The Call Center is operational on 24-hour basis.

Press Secretary Hernani Braganza said the Oplan Kalinga Call Center would also provide free internet communication to allow relatives of Overseas Filipinos Workers in the Middle East to send e-mail messages to their loved ones.

“This Call Center is part of efforts exerted by government to allay the fears of the public on the danger posed by the Iraq war on OFWs still working in the Middle East,” Braganza explained.

“President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has instructed us to exert all efforts to ensure that all our OFWs are accounted for and their families here taken care of,” Braganza added.

Aside from free call and e-mail messages, the Oplan Kalinga Center would also house information and assistance desk manned by government agencies involved in uplifting the life of Filipino OFWs.

These agencies include the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA), Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA), Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) and the Middle East Preparedness Team.

Providing private sector support to the Call Center are the Philippine Long Distance Co., Globe, Smart, Sun Cellular, Destiny Cable and the AMA Group of Companies.

Non-governmental organizations formed by OFWs and their relatives have also agreed to take part in the project by providing counseling and livelihood advice.

Braganza noted that the Oplan Kalinga Call Center was the latest communication center put up by the Philippine government to allow free interface between OFWs in the Middle East and their relatives here.

Also in place is the Tele-Ugnayan Center, located at the 10th Floor of the OWWA Building along Harrison Street near the corner of Buendia Avenue in Pasay City. The Tele-Ugnayan Center maintains links with the OWWA Regional Offices.

Braganza likewise bared plans to put up a separate call center in the vicinity of Malacañang.

Manila to decide on U.S. request to expel Iraqi diplomats based on merits, says Ople

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople today said that the Department of Foreign Affairs has not yet received a formal request from the United States to expel Iraqi diplomats from the country.

In an interview, Ople said that if there is a formal request as cited by a news report, then the Philippine government would examine the request on its merits. "Then, we will take the appropriate action," he added.

Ople was reacting to wire reports that said Washington has approached some 60 countries, including the Philippines, to expel Iraqi diplomats who, the US says, have been engaged in espionage.

The foreign secretary recalled that only last month, the Philippines has expelled Husham Hussain, the second secretary of the Iraqi embassy, after it gave credence to intelligence reports that the diplomat was probably in touch with some Abu Sayyaf elements in Mindanao.

"So, I resolved without a doubt in favor of our national security. I expelled the diplomat without the request of the United States," Ople said.

Ople said that the sovereignty of nations includes the prerogative to declare any diplomat persona non grata. "And you need not explain the ground for it," he added.

In the same interview, Ople also paid tribute to Philippine Ambassador to Iraq Grace Escalante.

"I want to present her to the President as a gallant lady ambassador of our country who has performed exceedingly well in her sensitive post in Baghdad," Ople said.

According to Ople, Ambassador Escalante is in Manila to attend the graduation of her son. He said that he approved the envoy's application for temporary leave so that she could spend all her time with her family in Manila whom she has not seen for a long time.

Ople said that the DFA has assigned somebody to keep charge of the Philippine embassy in Baghdad to serve the interest of Filipinos who may still be in the Iraqi capital although most of the Filipinos have already been relocated to Amman, Jordan and out of harm's way.

GMA opens PACE call center in Malacañang

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today unveiled the call center at the Presidential Action Center (PACE) near Malacañang, confident that this would address the need of families of overseas Filipino workers to keep in touch with their loved ones abroad.

After checking the facilities this afternoon, the President talked with Luz Diaz, the wife of a seaman jailed in Abu Dhabi allegedly for the non-payment of debts incurred by his employer, Gulf Agency.

Diaz told the President that her husband, along with 22 other Filipino seamen, have been in jail for two years now but the Philippine Embassy in Abu Dhabi has not, according to her, helped them.

Diaz said she was told that the Philippine Ambassador was always away from the chancery because of lingering illness. The Ambassador to Abu Dhabi is Amable Aguiluz III.

Upon hearing this, the President immediately called on Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople and told him to replace right away the Philippine envoy.

"The first thing that we would do is to replace our man there because we cannot have an ambassador who's always on sick leave," she told Mrs. Diaz.

Presidential Adviser on Media and Ecclesiastical Affairs Conrado Limcaoco, officer-in-charge of the call center, meanwhile, said the facilities would be open for 24 hours.

He said the call center might cut its office hours to 12 hours when the hostilities in the Middle East die down.

He said the call center was installed as ordered by the President precisely to calm the fears of relatives of OFWs on the growing tensions in Middle East.

Limcaoco praised the four sponsors for the call center for their good corporate conscience despite the competition in the market. They are Smart, Globe, PLDT and Sun Cellular.

With the call centers, families of OFWs could call their loved ones in the Middle East for three minutes each free of charge.

Aside from the PACE, there are also call centers available at the Ninoy Aquino Memorial Stadium and in malls around the metropolis.

GMA to hold daily telecon with Mideast crisis team

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today announced that she would convene a 6:00 p.m. teleconference daily with Philippine officials in the Middle East to get a better picture of the situation of overseas Filipino workers (OFW) in the area.

In a teleconference with Middle East Preparedness Team Ambassador Roy Cimatu in Kuwait, the President was assured that the tension in Kuwait is dying down following the start of a US-led attack on the southern frontiers of Iraq.

The teleconference was aired live in a television news program tonight.

Cimatu said the OFWs in Kuwait, which is several kilometers from Basra, Iraq, continued to be in their respective areas of work.

The same situation holds true in other areas of the Persian Gulf like Jordan and Saudi Arabia, he said.

The threat of Iraqi missiles being poured on Kuwait would be minimized as soon as the US-led forces get Basra, Cimatu stressed. But he informed the OFWs in Kuwait to be vigilant and ready.

The President ordered Cimatu to confer with and coordinate with Filipino expatriates in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia where 950,000 OFWs are located.

However, he said there was that low probability that Saudi Arabia would be affected by the war.

Ambassador to Saudi Arabia Bahnarin Guinomla and Ambassador to Kuwait Bayani Mangibin were coordinating with OFWs in their respective countries of assignment, Cimatu told the President.

The President also informed relatives of OFWs in the Persian Gulf about the establishment of call centers in different places of Metro Manila, particularly at the Ninoy Aquino Stadium and near Malacañang.

Also serving as call centers are the 51 offices of the Philippine Information Agency and the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration nationwide, the President said.

She added that the call centers, which offer at least three minutes of free calls to several areas in the Middle East, are open during normal office hours in the Gulf.

BIR pushes easier ways for professionals to pay VAT

The Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR) has introduced another "creative" measure to make it easier and more convenient for professionals to pay the value added tax (VAT).

BIR Commissioner Guillermo Parayno has enjoined professionals – initially the actors and talents — to avail themselves of the withholding system that their networks could facilitate for them.

Parayno said the networks that BIR officials have conferred with agreed to the withholding scheme.

This included ABS-CBN, which has some 800 talents, that cited the partnership as a model that other professional groups and institutions could replicate.

Considering their very tight schedule as actors and actresses and rather than visit the bank monthly and maintain all kinds of record keeping, they expressed willingness to have the VAT withheld at the source, he said.

Professionals made their first VAT payment on March 20. The government expected a high of P8.6 billion in revenues from the VAT on professionals.

Parayno reported this development to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Finance Secretary Jose Isidro Camacho and officials that attended the 3rd Revenue Command Conference in Malacañang early this week.

The BIR chief likewise noted that the BIR was very satisfied with the registration of professionals. About 10,000 individuals from the country's seven regions have registered in February.

"By this time, that should (have increased) to some 15,000. So if we prorate that or extrapolate that to the entire country, we should be reaching the target," he said.

"We are doing our very best to make their first transition as less painful as possible," Parayno added.

Parayno said the new scheme is expected to swing to the BIR side the life insurance underwriters, who have been very vocal against the VAT imposition.

Meanwhile, Camacho noted the BIR's efforts to make it easy for professionals to pay their VAT.

"Part of the reason why the resistance on the part of professionals have died down is the fact that the BIR has gone out of its way to explain and make it very easy, not only in the registry, but even in the payment (for professionals)," Camacho said.

The tax agency earlier launched the BIR-on-wheels program, wherein the BIR went to hospitals and studios to register professionals for their VAT payments.

The 10-percent VAT was required under a 1997 law. But its application to professionals, particularly those in the show business, was deferred for five years by a subsequent law that expired on Dec. 31, 2002.

Professionals included in the tax scheme are athletes and entertainers.

President's radio address to the nation

Magandang araw sa lahat ng ating mga kababayan.

Sa gitna ng nangyayaring matinding krisis ngayon sa Middle East, lalo nating dapat pag-ibayuhin ang ating pagkakaisa at pagtutulungan para sa katatagan at kagalingan ng ating bayan.

Tayo rin ay nakikiisa sa mga mamamayan ng Iraq sa kanilang pagpupunyaging makalaya habang pumapanig tayo sa coalition forces na nakikipaglaban para mabawi ang nasabing kalayaan. Ito ay hindi isang hidwaan sa pagitan ng Iraqis at mga Pilipino. Ito ay isang labanan sa pagitan ng kalupitan at kasarinlan.

Nakikibahagi tayo sa panalangin ng mga Muslim para sa kaligtasan ng mga mamamayan ng Iraq. Patnubayan sana sila ng Maykapal na maging ligtas sa kapahamakan. Kasama nila tayo sa paghihintay ng isang magandang kinabukasan na may kalayaan at kasaganaan.

Habang ipinagdarasal natin na matapos na kaagad ang giyera doon, patuloy nating ipapatupad ang ating mga kaukulang hakbang at aksyon para mapagaan ang epekto ng krisis na ito sa Gitnang Silangan sa ating pambansang pamumuhay.

Ang ating pagkilos ay nakatuon sa dalawang bagay: ang kaligtasan ng ating mga kababayan sa Gitnang Silangan at ang pagiging listo natin dito laban sa terorismo.

Kitang-kita naman natin nitong mga nagdaang araw na ang ating pagiging kasapi ng coalition of the willing ay hindi mapanganib para sa OFWs sa Middle East. Sila ay nasa pangangalaga ng ating mga embahada, kanilang employers at host governments. Kaya, huwag sanang masyadong mag-aalala ang kanilang mga pamilya dito, at tayo ay kasama nilang magdarasal para sa kapayapaan.

Para mabawasan ang inyong alalahanin, naghahandog tayo ng libreng tawag o bukas na linya ng komunikasyon para sa ating OFWs sa Middle East at sa kanilang mga pamilya sa Pilipinas. Para sa kanilang mga kamag-anak dito, may mga cellular phone booths sa OWWA headquarters sa F.B. Harrison, Pasay City, duon din sa Ninoy Aquino Stadium at diyan sa Malakanyang, sa Public Action Center, at labing-isa regional offices ng OWWA na matatagpuan sa mga pangunahing lungsod ng bansa.

Ang overseas communication facilities naman ay naka-set up sa Kuwait, Saudi Arabia at Dubai.

Bukas na po ang ating Oplan Kalinga website www.oplankalinga.gov.ph para sa mga news, advisories at mga mahahalagang impormasyon na nais ninyong malaman sa kahandaan ng pamahalaan na mapagsilbihan ang ating mga OFWs at kanilang mga mahal sa buhay. Meron tayong Kamustahan Lines na nasa Ninoy Aquino Stadium sa Harrison, Manila na bukas 24 oras para sa libreng tawag sa inyong mga mahal sa buhay na nasa Middle East. Katuwang natin ang PLDT, AMA Computer College, SMART, GLOBE, SUN CELLULAR at iba pang cellular companies sa serbisyong ito sa inyo.

Samantala, inatasan ko na ang ating Department of Foreign Affairs, katulong ang Middle East Preparedness Team, na gawin ang lahat upang alagaan ang kalagayan ng mga Pilipino sa paligid ng Persian Gulf. Karamihan sa kanila ay mananatili kung sila ay nasaan, protektado ng mga depensa sa anumang pag-atake na inihanda ng kanilang tinutuluyang bansa sa pakikipagtulungan sa mga puwersang Amerikano.

Doon naman sa mga kailangang umalis sa mga mapanganib na lugar, naayos na ang mga plano para dito, kabilang na ang mga kailangang travel documents at inarkilang sasakyan. May relocation centers silang mapupuntahan na may sapat na pagkain, tubig, at iba pang kagamitan. Ang ating mga embahada ay laging bukas para sa kanila para sila ay matulungan at mabigyan ng impormasyong kailangang-kailangan.

Tinitiyak ko sa kanilang mga mahal sa buhay dito na hindang-hindi natin sila pababayaan. At iparating din sana ninyo sa mga nasa ibayong dagat na ang kapakanan ng kanilang mga naiwan dito ay patuloy nating pangangalagaan.

Ang ating contingency plans para protektahan ang interes ng publiko ay matagal na nating pinaghandaan. Sa pagsiklab ng digmaan, ang ating ekonomiya ay makakaranas ng bahagyang pagbabago, pero hindi ito magtatagal dahil matibay ang ating mga tuntuning pangkabuhayan o economic fundamentals. Bumababa na rin ang presyo ng langis.

Ang ating in-country crude oil supply o langis na nasa bansa na, ay tatagal ng animnapu't-dalawang (62) araw. Ito ang pinakamataas na natalang imbentaryo sa loob ng sampung taon. May padating pa na 16 million barrels na maghahatid sa ating imbentaryo hanggang sa kalagitnaan ng Hunyo.

Para maiwasan ang pagtaas ng pamasaha, nagbukas tayo ng gasolinahan sa tatlong terminal ng pampasaherong sasakyan para magbenta ng murang krudo. Dalawa dito — ang nasa Mandaluyong at Quezon Avenue — ay isa sa pakikipagtulungan ng Eastern Petroleum para sa mga kasapi ng Pasang Masda. Ang pangatlo, na nasa Cubao, ay katulong ang Flying V para naman sa mga miyembro ng Piston. Mayroon na ring bubuksang ganito ang Petron sa Quiapo.

Tungkol naman sa supply ng pagkain, hindi tayo magugutom kahit na ang giyera ay tumagal pa nang dalawang buwan dahil ang stock natin ng bigas ay tatagal ng siyamnapu't-limang (95) araw. Ito rin ang pinakamataas na imbentaryo ng bigas sa loob ng tatlong dekada.

Ang ating supply ng asukal ay sapat para sa isandaan at dalawampung (120) araw, o apat na buwan. Ang supply ng cooking oil naman ay tatagal ng animnapung (60) araw, o dalawang buwan.

Ang ibig sabihin ng lahat nang ito ay hindi tayo dapat ma-alarma. May sapat tayong pagkaing naka-imbak at kailanman ay hindi tayo kailangang pumila o mag-rasyon.

Gayunpaman, may monitoring teams tayo na mag-iikot sa lahat ng palengke para matyagan ang presyo ng mga bilihan. At para magtagumpay ito, kailangan ding magbantay ang mga mamamayan at i-report ang sinumang tindera na magtataas ng presyo nang hindi dapat.

Binabalaan ko ang mga nais magsamantala, tulad ng pagtatago ng supply o paniningil ng sobra. We will protect our consumers from unscrupulous traders who engage in hoarding, profiteering and opportunist speculations. Nagpapasalamat naman tayo sa nakararaming negosyante na tapat na tumutulong para maging matatag ang ating supply at presyo ng pagkain at ibang pangunahing bilihan.

Para alagaan ang ating pambansang seguridad, pinakilos na natin ang buong pamahalaan, kabilang na ang local governments, AFP at PNP. Tinatawagan ko ang ating pribadong sektor, ang civil society at mga mamamayan na makipag-ugnayan at makipagtulungan sa kanila upang pangalagaan ang ating mga komunidad.

Inaatasan ko ang lahat ng pamahalaang lokal na pulungin kaagad ang kanilang crisis management councils, at pangasiwaan nang personal at malapitan ang pagpapatupad ng ating contingency plans. Susubaybayan lahat ito ni DILG Secretary Joey Lina na palagiang mag-uulat sa akin.

Hinihiling ko ang ating buo at tapat na pagmamatyag. Dapat tayong maging listo laban sa tinatawag na collateral terrorist attacks o pag-atake ng mga desperadong extremists na may simpatiya sa nangyayari sa labas ng bansa.

Kung may maririnig kayong anumang bulung-bulungan o banta nang kaguluhan, itawag ninyo ito kaagad sa Patrol 117 o Text PNP 2920.

May hotlines din tayo sa iba't-ibang ahensiya ng pamahalaan tungkol sa mga pangyayaring kaugnay ng kasalukuyang krisis, tulad ng DFA at Middle East Preparedness Team Action Center, Department of Energy's Consumer Welfare Office, at OWWA.

Magkaisa tayo, Muslim man o Kristiyano, sa tungkulin ng pagbabantay at pagpapairal ng katahimikan. Ang kaligtasan at kagalingan ng ating bansa ay nasa ating kamay. Bawa't Pilipino ay dapat maging responsable sa kaniyang kapuwa. Ito ay isang makasaysayang pagkakataon para tayo ay magbuklod sa panahon ng krisis, na makailang beses na nating ginawa noon.

Isantabi na natin ang anumang di matuwid na pagkiling o pagpanig sa iba. Pagsanibin natin ang ating mga puso at lakas para harapin ang mga kailangang gawin. Sa ating pagsasama-sama, kaya nating pagtagumpayan ang krisis na ito.

Maraming salamat at patnubayan nawa tayo ng Diyos.

GMA renews call for unity amid domestic, global crisis

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today rallied every Filipino to be responsible for his fellowmen, as she enjoined the people to do their patriotic duty of guarding and maintaining national peace.

“Ang kaligtasan at kagalingan ng ating bansa ay nasa ating kamay (the welfare and safety of the country lie on our hands),” the President said in a radio message aired nationwide.

She said the prevailing domestic and global crises have become another historic opportunity for Filipinos to once more unite and overcome.

“Pagsanibin natin ang ating mga puso at lakas para hanapin ang kailangang gawin (Let us join our hearts and strength to look for the right moves to get through the crises),” she added.

The President stressed that the Filipino nation is one with the Iraqi people in the latter's struggle for freedom.

On the government's decision to support the coalition forces, she said: “Ito ay hindi isang hidwaan sa pagitan ng Iraqis at mga Pilipino. Ito ay isang labanan sa pagitan ng kalupitan at kasarinlan (This is not a fight between Iraqis and Filipinos. This is a war between tyranny and freedom).”

She said that the Filipino nation has joined their Muslim brothers throughout the world in praying for the safety of the people of Iraq.

And while everyone prays for a swift end to the Iraqi crisis, the government will continue to carry out necessary measures to mitigate the effects of the Gulf war on the people's socio-economic well-being, she said.

“Ang ating pagkilos ay nakatuon sa dalawang bagay: ang kaligtasan ng ating mga kababayan sa Gitnang Silangan at ang pagiging listo natin dito laban sa terorismo (Our moves are focused on the safety of Filipinos in the Middle East and the alertness of Filipinos here against terrorism),” she added.

The President said overseas Filipino workers (OFW) in the Gulf are far from harm's way, stressing that "sila ay nasa pangangalaga ng ating mga embahada, kanilang employers at host governments (they are under the care of our embassies, their employers and host governments)."

To ease the apprehension of relatives of Middle East-based Filipino expatriates, she said the government has opened call centers that could link OFWs in Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Dubai, the United Arab Emirates and their relatives in key cities in the Philippines.

The Kamustahan Lines, which offer free long-distance cellular and telephone calls to as long as three minutes, are open for 24 hours at the Ninoy Aquino Stadium in Manila.

Other call centers are at the Public Action Center in Malacañang and the head office and 11 regional offices of the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration.

The centers are made available with the support of the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company, AMA Computer College, Smart, Globe, Sun Cellular and other telecommunication companies.

Also open is the Oplan Kalinga website www.oplankalinga.gov.ph which issues regular news, advisories and important information on government programs for OFWs and their loved ones.

The President also said she had ordered the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) and the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT) under Ambassador Roy Cimatu to do everything possible to see to the safety and welfare of OFWs in the Gulf.

They are safe from any attack from hostile forces, thanks to their host governments in cooperating with the American troops, she said.

Those who are leaving areas of perceived danger would be helped by the DFA and the MEPT, she noted, adding that travel documents and transportation would be facilitated for them.

Relocation areas for OFWs are in place with enough food, water and other needs. Embassies are always open to serve them.

In the home front, the President said she had placed the government's full resources on national security, particularly those of local governments, the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police.

She called on the private sector, civil society and the people to cooperate with authorities in protecting the communities.

"Dapat tayong maging listo laban sa tinatawag na collateral terrorist attacks o pag-atake ng mga desperadong extremists na may simpatiya sa nangyayari sa labas ng bansa (We must maintain a high level of alertness to deal with collateral terrorist attacks and sympathy attacks from extremists)," she said.

She urged the people to report threats to security to Patrol 117 or text it to Text PNP 2920.

GMA urges army to be sensitive to socio-economic, strategic implications of tactical decisions

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today reminded army commanders to be doubly aware and extra sensitive to the strategic implications of tactical decisions that they make in the field.

The President made the reminder as she upheld the authority of field commanders to render tactical decisions within their area of responsibility.

She recently issued a command directive that defined strategic implications of tactical operations.

In a speech during the 106th anniversary of the Philippine Army at Fort Bonifacio, Makati City, the President said that while her directive is stressed in the army's doctrine development program, "the policy-making prerogative of civilian authority shall not be impaired."

The directive, she added, should apply to brigade commanders and above. "It is their decision, it is their authority, it is their responsibility."

She has authorized the Secretary of National Defense to determine the applicable levels of command responsibility attendant to her directive.

The President explained that a "tactical operation acquires strategic implications which our commanders must take into account even on the ground, when it involves public perception beyond the immediate area of operation, or when it involves adverse consequences such as general state of law and order, socio economic activity and political stability within or beyond the immediate area of operation."

A field commander shall conduct operations in a manner that shall entail the following:

- The least possible impact of such operations in the community of non-combatants especially on their livelihood and normal conduct of every day lives,
- The minimum evacuation from homes or areas of food production,
- The close coordination with pertinent agencies of government within his or her area of concern when socio-economic dislocations are expected or become imminent as a result of such operations,
- The full safety assessments in coordination with the Philippine National Police for areas prone to conflict tailover or collateral acts of terrorism,
- The strategic sensibility to the peace processes and negotiations within affected armed groups, and
- The over-all adherence to national policies and public interests.

The President said that all pertinent campaign plans should be updated to incorporate a psychological operations component as well as comprehensive civil-military coordination component.

She cited the army for producing 15 functional manuals for doctrine development. They are due for promulgation.

GMA cites global coalition againsts terrorism in helping RP stem Abu Sayyaf threat

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the roots of the Philippine involvement in the "coalition of the willing" dated back to the period immediately following the September 11, 2001 attacks when she made a strategic decision to join the global war against terrorism.

The President, speaking during the 106th anniversary celebration of the Philippine Army at Fort Bonifacio, Makati City, said that "even before I became President of the Philippines, we had long been in the frontline against terrorism in our own land."

She said one country alone could not eliminate terrorists like the Abu Sayyaf as they link to other terrorist organizations that give them financial support and material.

"The global coalition that was formed to check terrorism helped us in our battle with the Abu Sayyaf," she said.

Global, political and economic security has become closely intertwined, she said adding that "separate national interests are woven into the overall fabric of counter terrorism."

“And so today, we support the ‘coalition of the willing’ because of the sweeping imperatives we faced a year and a half ago,” she stressed.

“We do not want weapons of mass destruction to fall into the hands of terrorists operating in the Philippines,” she said.

The President disclosed that the US-led forces are clearing threats in Southern Iraq and as the battle for Baghdad begins, “the relative safety of our nationals from weapons of mass destruction, is more or less assured.”

She condoled with families of coalition soldiers who died in the line of duty, “just as we condoled with the families of soldiers who perished in the line of duty fighting terrorism in the Philippines.”

The President said that joining the “coalition of the willing” did not preclude the government’s full support for the United Nations in meeting the humanitarian crisis.

“We pray that the Iraqi people, as well as other innocent victims of war, will be spared from grave suffering and harm just as our nationals have so far been spared,” she said.

She added that the government is prepared to send medical personnel and relief workers to help in post-conflict Iraq.

“While we deal with the ramifications of the Iraq war in the country’s national interests, we must continue to telescope our sights on the fight against insurgency, terrorism, and poverty within our country,” the President said.

She congratulated Philippine Army Chief Gen. Gregorio Camiling for the Army’s Plan 00 which enhances an understanding of the dynamics of political stability, economic development, social cohesion, ethical behavior, environmental sustainability and cooperation among nations.

“I hope this helps our officers to carry out the command directive that she issued recently defining strategic implications of tactical operations,” the President said.

GMA reassures enough oil, food supplies to see RP through effects of Iraqi crisis

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured the public that any negative effect of the ongoing Middle East conflict on the country would be short-lived because of the country’s sound economic fundamentals.

In a radio interview, the President said contingency plans to protect the interest of the public have long been prepared by the country’s economic managers.

She said in-country crude oil supply would last up to 62 days, the highest inventory ever registered in the past 10 years.

An additional 62 barrels, she added, would be forthcoming to make the inventory last up to June.

To avoid any increase in transport fares, the government has opened gasoline stations in three terminals to sell cheap crude.

Two of these – one in Mandaluyong and another in Quezon Avenue – were put up through the efforts of Eastern Petroleum for members of the Pasang Masda.

The third one, in Cubao, was set up by Flying V for the members of Piston. Petron would also put up one in Quiapo, she said.

The President also assured that Filipinos would not go hungry even if the war in Iraq lasted for two months since the rice inventory would last up to 95 days, also the highest stock in the last three decades.

As to the supply of sugar, the President said the country has enough to last 120 days or four months. Cooking oil inventory, she said, is good for 60 days or two months.

“Ang ibig sabihin ng lahat nang ito ay hindi tayo dapat maalarma,” she said. “May sapat tayong pagkaing nakaimbak at kailanman ay hindi tayo kailangang pumila o mag-rasyon (What all these means is that we should not panic. We have enough food supply. We don’t have to resort to food lines or rationing).”

She said the government has set up monitoring teams to keep watch over the prices of prime commodities. For this to succeed, the President asked the people to report unscrupulous traders who would take advantage of the situation.

“Binabalaan ko ang mga nais magsamantala, tulad ng pagtatago ng supply o paniningil ng sobra. We will protect our consumers from unscrupulous traders who engage in hoarding, profiteering and opportunist speculations,” the President said.

She thanked traders who helped stabilize prices of food supply and other prime commodities.

GMA awards medal to rescuer of Gracia Burnham in army anniversary rites

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today awarded the Distinguished Conduct Star Medal to Capt. Oliver Almonares, who she cited for the rescue of Abu Sayyaf hostages Gracia Burnham and Erwin Resoroni in Culasian, Sirawai, Zamboanga del Norte on June 7 last year.

The President noted Almonares’ courage and gallantry in the face of terrorists as he led his unit, the 15th Scout Ranger Company, in engaging 30 Abu Sayyaf members led by Hadji Aldam Tilao aka Abu Sabaya that led to the rescue of Burnham and Resoroni.

During the 106th anniversary celebration of the Philippine Army at Fort Bonifacio, Makati, the President also conferred various awards to other army soldiers and non-government groups that distinguished themselves in their respective fields in support of the Army’s mission.

The awardees included:

- Gen. Dante Bonifacio, who was awarded the Distinguished Service Star for meritorious and invaluable service rendered as commanding general of the Army’s 202nd Infantry Brigade;
- Rizaldo Laurena, the Gold Cross Medal for gallantry in action as platoon leader of the 37th Infantry Battalion’s Charlie Company that fought off 100 Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) elements at Barangay Kitapok, Datu Piang, Maguindanao on June 11, 2002;
- Juan Belo, the Gold Cross Medal for gallantry in action as a crew member of an armored vehicle of the 42nd Light Armor Battalion during an ambush conducted by 20 dissident terrorists;
- Armando Cunanan, the Outstanding Achievement Medal for extraordinary and distinguished achievement in the conceptualization, development and publication of the Philippine Army Officer Career Management manual;

- Romeo Lim, for meritorious and invaluable achievements in the pursuit of socio-economic and other non-combat activities of the AFP while serving as commanding officer of the 5th Scout Ranger Battalion;

The 58th Infantry Battalion received the Commanding General, Philippine Army Streamer Award for being adjudged as the Best Infantry Battalion for 2002

The 8th Infantry Division got the Command Plaque of Merit for placing second in the Search for the Most Outstanding Literacy Category during the National Literacy Conference and Awards 2002.

Other recipients of the Command Plaques were: Paulino Bala, Best Philippine Army Enlisted Personnel for 2002; Mrs. Ederlina Alejan, Best Civilian Supervisor for 2002; and Philippine Business for Social Progress as the Best Non-Government Organization for 2002.

GMA launches discounted filling stations to ease impact of oil prices on transport sector

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today hailed concerned transport groups in Metro Manila as she launched several government-private sector programs intended to mitigate the impact of oil prices on the transport sector.

The President said the launching of at least two Quezon City diesel filling stations offering rebates was one way the government could show its gratitude to the transport sector that has sacrificed a lot by not raising fares.

This would ease the burden on jeepney drivers in this time of crisis, she said.

At the Flying V gasoline station at 15th Ave. and P. Tuazon Street in Cubao, Quezon City, the President launched the “Tulong sa Pagsulong,” a scheme wherein diesel fuel patrons could avail of rebates of as much as five liters for every 10-liter purchase.

Under the scheme, Flying V patrons who buy at least 10 liters of diesel will be given a coupon worth 5 liters of diesel. The patron may accumulate his coupons and have them exchanged to cash of at least P100.

At the Eastern Petroleum station in Quezon Ave. beside the Pantranco terminal, the President initiated the loading of cheaper diesel worth P16.25 per liter to members of the Pasang Masda transport group.

“Ito ay bilang pagpapasalamat sa ating jeepney drivers at ating mga transport groups dahil kahit na tumaas yung presyo ng krudo at gasolina nung panahon na hinihintay ang giyera sa Iraq, hindi pa rin nila tinaas yung kanilang presyo ng pasahe,” she said.

Flying V Chairman and President Ramon Villavicencio said the “Tulong sa Pagsulong” scheme was the oil firm’s response to the President’s call to help jeepney drivers who are most affected by the continuous increase in fuel prices.

With the President at the Flying V station were Energy Secretary Vincent Perez, Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board chairman Dante Lantin, Quezon City Mayor Feliciano Belmonte and other Quezon City officials.

Flying V, in a statement, said that “despite the crisis facing the world today, and even as the increase in pump price is not sufficient to cover the general increase in procurement costs of fuel, it has launched the public service program in response to the call of the President to make sacrifices and sympathize with the plight of the jeepney drivers who serve the general riding public.”

Villavicencio said that during these hard times, business sense should be relegated to the background in lieu of the moral responsibility to respond to a cause of those in need.

Among the transport groups set to benefit from the “Tulong sa Pagsulong” scheme are the Federation of Jeepney Operators and Drivers Association of the Philippines (FEJODAP), Pinag-isang Samahan ng mga Tsuper at Operators Nationwide, Samahang Operators at Drivers ng Project 4, P. Tuazon Farmers Cubao Inc. and the Group Unite Drivers, Operators into One Inc.

Among the transport group leaders present were Zeny Maranan, Boy Vargas, Efren de Luna, Crispin Rosales, Antonio Cardenas, Patrick Vergara, Nely Terania and Federico Alvarez.

At the Quezon Ave. gasoline station, the President witnessed the loading of gasoline by Secretary Perez, Pasang Masda president Roberto Martin, Roosevelt-San Francisco del Monte Drivers' Association president Greg Pajarillo and Eastern Petroleum Corp. president Fernando Martinez.

Eastern President Fernando Martinez said the President issued her appeal to the various transport groups and oil companies to ease the burden on the public transport industry as early as February 21.

In addition, a new gasoline station of USA 88 located in Felix Ave. near Cainta Junction is now operational.

The station is owned by Filprice Energy Corp. and offers discounts to jeepney drivers who are members, among others, of FEJODAP.

Secretary Perez said the efforts are relative to the President's directive to put up diesel pumps in jeepney terminals to ease the impact of increasing oil prices on the public transport sector.

Gov't call centers help ease anxiety of OFWs, families in RP

If only she knew how things would be, Lina Basal, a 36-year-old mother of five, would have advised her husband, Ronaldo not to push through with his Middle East employment, given how tension had built up months into the ongoing conflict between the United States and Iraq.

But family finances dictated the turn of events and now Ronaldo finds himself caught in the middle of a war while trying to earn something for Lina and their five children whom he left in Manila four months ago to work as a printing press operator in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

Left with no choice, Lina and Ronaldo had to bear the pain of separation and had to content themselves with communicating through phone calls and text messages.

Over the weekend, when war in the Gulf intensified, Lina, with her two sons aged five and two in tow, found themselves among several relatives of overseas Filipino workers availing themselves of the free phone calls at the Oplan Kalinga Call Center near Harrison Plaza in Malate, Manila.

The 24-hour call center was set up by the Office of the Press Secretary and the Presidential Action Center in partnership with other government agencies and telecommunication companies following the outbreak of war in Iraq.

It also provides free internet communication to allow relatives of OFWs in the Middle East to send free e-mail messages to their loved ones.

Press Secretary Hernani Braganza said the call center is part of efforts exerted by government to allay fears of the public on the danger posed by the Iraq war on OFWs working in the Middle East.

“President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo has instructed us to exert all efforts to ensure that all our OFWs are accounted for and their families here taken cared of,” he said.

Mrs. Basal, who called from the booth of new telecommunications company Sun Cellular, lauded the project as a big help to those who are worrying about the safety of their loved ones in the Middle East.

“At least mararamdaman mo ang concern ng ating gobyerno para sa mga OFW. Malaking tulong ito sa amin,” she said.

Hadji Helwa Sumael, a 34-year-old Muslim mother of two, concurred with Mrs. Balsa, saying “kahit anong oras, Muslim man o Kristiyano, puwedeng tumawag dito.”

Mrs. Sumael, a native of Zamboanga now residing in Manila called her two cousins working as domestic helpers in Kuwait City from the PLDT booth while her two daughters—Myka, 7, and Jenika, 3—played around the spacious call center which also houses information and assistance desk manned by government agencies.

These agencies include the Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA), Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA), Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) and the Middle East Preparedness Team.

Providing private sector support are the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co., Globe, Smart, Sun Cellular, Destiny Cable and the AMA Group of Companies.

Perhaps, the most consoling sight to organizers of the project is the sight of children like 9-year-old Sarah Estrella beaming with joy as they talked to their parents in the Middle East.

Sarah was with her father Orlando when she talked to her mother Aurora, an OFW working in Kuwait City.

“Mabuti na lang nakausap namin siya,” beamed Sarah. “Kung hindi, hindi kami mapapakali ng tatay ko. Bakit naman kasi may giyera, giyera pa, eh.”

With that, Sarah got her father’s hand and together the two walked away from the call center, happy with the thought that their mother was safe, after all.

Statement of Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye (on Petron’s reduction of 40 centavos on their diesel products)

The President is pleased that Petron has heeded her call to be more sensitive to the needs of our people, especially during these critical times.

Big business have a huge corporate social responsibility.

The President anticipates that the other major oil players would follow suit soon.

GMA cites authorities for mass transport, mall security

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the police, military and local government executives for doing a good job in securing public utilities in Metro Manila, particularly the mass transit system, and shopping malls.

The President today personally witnessed the positive outcome of strict security measures carried out by police and security guards in the Mass Rail Transit and SM Megamall in Mandaluyong City.

To prove that Metro Manila remained safe from terrorists, the President, First Gentleman Atty. Jose Miguel Arroyo and daughter Evangeline Lourdes, went to the MRT Taft Station in Pasay City this afternoon and boarded the MRT train like an ordinary citizen.

The President traveled from Pasay City to Shaw Boulevard Station and motored to nearby SM Megamall, in Mandaluyong City.

During her short train travel, the President interviewed some passengers inside the train and asked them how they feel about the tightened security conducted by the security guards in the MRT.

She said that based on her conversation with people inside the train and earlier in shopping malls, most said they felt safe and secure.

“They’re really very feeling secure, that’s why I congratulate our crisis managers. Hindi ba ang dami kinatatakutan? May panic buying, wala naman. Magkakaroon ng bombahan oras na magsimula ang giyera, wala naman,” the President told media.

The President enjoined the public to stay calm, maintain their ordinary daily routine and the police, military and local government executives would handle the security of the people.

“Kaya ituloy natin ang ating buhay sa pangaraw-araw. Importante lamang siyempre mas alerto tayo, alertness ang napakaimportante,” she said.

“Our police, military and local government executives are still in heightened alert. I ordered them to be our crisis manager to care the welfare of our citizens,” she added.

National Police Chief Director General Hermogenes Ebdane, Jr., and National Capital Regional Police Office Director Chief Superintendent Reynaldo Velasco accompanied the President during her MRT trip and mall tour.

GMA urges other oil firms to cut diesel price

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged other oil companies to follow Petron which cut back the pump price of diesel by 40 centavos per liter effective last midnight.

In an interview at Juan Luna St. in Tondo, Manila where she launched a P0.50 diesel discount per liter scheme to jeepney drivers, the President thanked Petron for bringing its diesel prices down.

"Am I urging the other oil companies to follow suit? Most certainly," the President said.

The President, who donned a Petron gasoline attendant uniform, thanked the company for taking the lead by decreasing the price of diesel.

"I'd rather that Petron play the role of price leader. You see, when Petron brought down its diesel by forty centavos, then the other oil companies also brought down their diesel price by forty centavos," the President said.

The President further said that she hopes these oil companies "would also allocate some specific ways by which they can give discounts to our drivers."

According to Petron, it has decided to cut back the price of diesel, widely used by buses and jeepney, in view of the drastic fall in the cost of Dubai oil from $31 per barrel before the outbreak of war in Iraq to less than $22 after hostilities started last week.

During the launching of the 50 centavos discount per liter on diesel products at the Tondo gasoline station, the President thanked Saudi Aramco, the foreign partner of Petron, for the gesture.

"I would like to thank Saudi Aramco because they are the partners of the Philippine government," she said.

The President said that no less than the president of Saudi Aramco assured her during a visit last year that the Philippines would be given priority in oil supply not only because of Saudi Aramco's investment in Petron but because of its 15,000 Filipino workers.

Statement of Presidential Spokesperson Ignacio R. Bunye

Iraq Situation

The end is not in doubt. We pray for a swift resolution and minimum casualties, especially among civilians.

The most important threat facing our country now are possible retaliatory terrorist attacks. The President has instructed the authorities to implement the highest level of preparedness. She wants all potential targets hardened, and alertness among our people tightened.

All public hotlines for public safety and welfare are urged to operate on a 24-hour basis to give reliable information that is important to the public. The President asks for the full support of the media.

The public is urged not to believe and/or spread rumors that tend to sow panic or fear. Keep calm, but alert.

Expulsion of Iraqis

The President has authorized the expulsion of one Iraqi diplomat for engaging in acts inimical to our national security. An Iraqi civilian (not a diplomat) is likewise being ordered expelled. The DFA and the Bureau of Immigration are expected to implement this shortly.

Gas Coupons

This was done as a contingency measure that is no longer necessary. Supply is high and stable, prices are going down, the war is expected to be relatively short and swift. There is no cause for alarm over this issue.

MILF

If the MILF is determined to help attain peace and progress in Mindanao, it should give up its senseless attacks and come to the negotiating table.

DFA, DOLE agree to limit travel ban to new OFW deployments to Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Israel

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) and the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE), upon consultations with organizations of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) and Philippine embassies in Middle East countries, have agreed to limit the scope of OFW deployment ban to new deployments to Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Israel.

In a statement, the DFA said that all travels to Iraq, however, remain suspended.

The term “new deployment,” the DFA said, refers to workers whose travel and work documents have not been completed before March 20, the start of the United States-led attack of the “coalition of the willing” against Iraq.

On the first day of the attack, the DOLE suspended the departure of OFWs to the Middle East, including those returning to their old jobs.

The DFA said that those exempted from the ban—and are, therefore, allowed to leave for the Middle East—are OFWs who are staying in Manila on vacation leave hence would need to go back to their employers and those who fall under any of the following categories:

- Those whose families are still at the work site;
- Those whose work sites are situated far enough from the battle areas; and
- Those whose work visas are about to expire.

Philippine Ambassador to Saudi Arabia Bahnarim Guinomla assured Foreign Affairs Secretary Bias F. Ople that the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia is secure and quiet despite the outbreak of war in Iraq.

Guinomla recommended that Filipinos with complete travel and work documents and those currently on leave here in Manila be allowed to return to Saudi Arabia to enable them to fulfill their pending job contracts.

Ople agreed on condition that all these returning workers immediately report and register with the Philippine Embassy in their respective host countries in the Middle East.

Guinomla also belied earlier reports of chaos and panic among Filipinos in Saudi Arabia including reports of cancelled outbound flights and over-crowding at the kingdom's international airports.

"Saudi Arabia remains calm and peaceful and our workers are familiar with the embassy's contingency plan. Please tell their relatives in Manila that these reports (of chaos) are simply not true," Guinomla said in his report to Ople.

FEJODAP assures GMA it won't support petition for fare increase

The Federation of Jeepney Operators and Drivers Association of the Philippines (FEJODAP) today vowed not to support the current petition for a fare increase following the government's launching of several programs that offer discount on diesel prices to transport groups.

At the Petron gasoline station at Juan Luna St. in Tondo today, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo offered a P0.50 discount per liter of diesel scheme to all FEJODAP members.

The P0.50 discount to FEJODAP members is on top of Petron's 40 centavos per liter cutback in diesel prices effective last midnight. All in all, the diesel price in the Juan Luna St. Petron is P15.70.

FEJODAP president Zeny Maranan thanked the President for the gesture.

"Kami po ay nagpapasalamat sa inyo ng labis labis sapagkat dito po ninyo ipinakita ang kapakanan ng mga tsuper sa pagmamahal na pinagkakaloob ninyo bagamat meron pong nakabinbin na increase sa fare sa LTFRB (We are very thankful to you because you have shown your regard for drivers though there is an ongoing petition for a fare increase at the Land Transportation Franchising and Regulatory Board)," Maranan said.

Maranan said that in return as a favor to the President, FEJODAP would not support and would even oppose the fare increase petition.

"Makaasa po kayo na talaga pong yung kahilingan niyo po sa amin na huwag kaming mag-file ng increase sa fare ay aming pong gagawin upang matulungan, hindi lang po kayo mahal pong Pangulo, kundi ang sambayanang Pilipino," Maranan said.

Petron chairman Nicasio Alcantara, who was also present at the launching, said the company decided to offer discount in the particular gasoline station to ease the burden of increasing oil prices to jeepney drivers.

In brief remarks, the President thanked the jeepney drivers and operators for their sacrifices to keep the fare affordable to passengers.

The President said the government is undertaking discount schemes to diesel patrons, particularly jeepney drivers, to mitigate any increase in basic goods' prices on the people during this time of crisis.

Last Saturday, the President launched several government-private sector programs intended to mitigate the impact of oil prices on the transport sector.

At the Flying V gasoline station at 15th Ave. and P. Tuazon Street in Cubao, Quezon City, the President launched the “Tulong sa Pagsulong,” a scheme wherein diesel fuel patrons could avail themselves of rebates of as much as five liters for every 10-liter purchase.

Under the scheme, Flying V patrons who buy at least 10 liters of diesel will be given a coupon worth 5 liters of diesel. The patron may accumulate his coupons and have them exchanged to cash of at least P100.

At the Eastern Petroleum station in Quezon Ave. beside the Pantranco terminal, the President initiated the loading of cheaper diesel worth P16.25 per liter to members of the Pasang Masda transport group.

“Ito ay bilang pagpapasalamat sa ating jeepney drivers at ating mga transport groups dahil kahit na tumaas yung presyo ng krudo at gasolina nung panahon na hinihintay ang giyera sa Iraq, hindi pa rin nila tinaas yung kanilang presyo ng pasahe (This is our way of showing our thanks to the jeepney drivers and transport groups for not increasing fares even if price of crude and gasoline went up before the Iraq war),” she said.

Flying V chairman and president Ramon Villavicencio said the “Tulong sa Pagsulong” scheme was the oil firm’s response to the President’s call to help jeepney drivers who are most affected by the increase in fuel prices.

Flying V, in a statement, said that “despite the crisis facing the world today, and even as the increase in pump price is not sufficient to cover the general increase in procurement costs of fuel, it has launched the public service program in response to the call of the President to make sacrifices and sympathize with the plight of the jeepney drivers who serve the general riding public.”

Villavicencio said that during these hard times, business sense should be relegated to the background in lieu of the moral responsibility to respond to a cause of those in need.

Among the transport groups set to benefit from the “Tulong sa Pagsulong” scheme are the Federation of Jeepney Operators and Drivers Association of the Philippines (FEJODAP), Pinag-isang Samahan ng mga Tsuper at Operators Nationwide, Samahang Operators at Drivers ng Project 4, P. Tuazon Farmers Cubao Inc. and the Group Unite Drivers, Operators into One Inc.

GMA okays expulsion of Iraqi diplomats, non-diplomatic personnel

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she has approved the expulsion of an Iraqi diplomat and an Iraqi non-diplomatic personnel.

In an interview in Tondo, Manila, the President said the government is expelling those “found with some evidence of espionage” though she added that the government need not explain any reason for such gesture.

“We’re doing it individual by individual,” she said.

The President noted that Jordan, a neighbor of Iraq, already expelled five Iraqi diplomats.

“So, we are in fact bending backwards in a show of friendship to the people of Iraq that we are only expelling those with some evidence of espionage even if we don’t even have to explain any reason for expelling diplomats,” she said.

Last month, the Philippines expelled Husham Hussain, the second secretary of the Iraqi embassy, after giving credence to intelligence reports that he was probably in touch with some Abu Sayyaf elements in Mindanao.

Foreign Secretary Blas Ople said the sovereignty of nations includes the prerogative to declare any diplomat persona non grata. “And you need not explain the ground for it,” he added.

South Korean firms to invest in RP's natural gas industry, says DOE

The Department of Energy today said that South Korean firms have expressed keen interest to take part in the development of the country's downstream natural gas industry.

In a report, Energy Secretary Vicente S. Perez, who headed a Philippine delegation that visited South Korea last week, said that officials of the South Korean companies have shown interest in investing in the necessary infrastructure that would develop the downstream natural gas sector.

"Our natural gas industry is one of the industries that are attracting interest from different countries. Our meetings with the several Korean firms indicated a very strong interest among them to carry out these vital projects," Perez said.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has ordered the DOE to lead in forming a consortium with interested parties that would undertake the development of the downstream natural gas sector by putting in place the backbone transmission and distribution pipelines and related infrastructure facilities such as liquefied natural gas (LNG) terminals and refilling stations.

Perez said that among the South Korean firms interested in investing in the country's natural gas industry were Korea Electric Power Corp. (KEPCO) and Korea Gas Corp. (KOGAS).

KEPCO is the largest Korean firm investor in the Philippines through the operations of the $700 million Ilijan natural-gas power plant in Batangas.

KOGAS, on the other hand, owns the largest LNG terminal in the world with a storage capacity of 2.24 million cubic meters as of end 2001.

"Natural gas is considered as the fuel of the 21st century and ranks as the most environmentally-friendly fuel. The availability of a viable gas transport infrastructure, however, is critical to increase its utilization given that based on our projections show that the demand for natural gas will pick up in the next coming years," Perez stressed.

According to Perez, from 203.2 million standard cubic feet (MSCF) of gas produced from the San Antonio field in Isabela in 1997, the country's production has increased by 2,336.5 percent to reach 4,951.3 MSCF in 2001.

At present, the Malampaya natural gas from the waters off Palawan is being used to fuel three power plants within a combined capacity of 2,700 megawatts (MW), Perez said.

PBA players help OFW relatives make free call to Middle East countries

Ginebra San Miguel guard Aries Dimaunahan had a chance to call his brother in Kuwait, teammate Elmer Lago was more than just pleased in assisting a lady from Valenzuela City place a call to her sister in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia and a persistent Bong Ravena of Talk n Text would not let technical difficulties get in his way so that he could place a call to Bahrain in behalf of an elderly lady from Pandacan.

These were just a few of the scenes that transpired when players from the Philippine Basketball Association (PBA) came Sunday night to assist callers in the Office of the President's Oplan Kalinga: Kumustahan calling center at the Ninoy Aquino Stadium (NAS).

Also at the calling center who manned the telephone lines were Red Bull's Mick Penisi, Jimwell Torion, Junthy Valenzuela and Nelson Asaytono and Ginebra's Sunday Salvacion.

There are currently more than 200 telephone lines installed at the NAS to accommodate free calls from the families, relatives and friends of overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) working in the Middle East, Israel and Turkey.

“It is indeed heartwarming that our famous PBA players found time to assist our countrymen in placing their calls to their relatives and friends in the Middle East,” said Press Secretary Hernani Braganza.

The Office of the Press Secretary (OPS) is spearheading Oplan Kalinga on orders of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo to exhaust all efforts to help alleviate the plight of OFWs during this time of conflict in the Middle East.

And in pursuit of such a mandate, the OPS has entered into agreement with the PBA to bring the Oplan Kalinga: Kumustahan calling center to PBA game venues starting Wednesday at the Makati Coliseum.

A composite team from the telecommunications companies rendering free service at the NAS, OPS, Presidential Action Center (PACE) and Overseas Workers Welfare Administration (OWWA) has been formed that would provide free telephone calls to the Middle East, Israel, and Turkey at the PBA games venues.

“This is our small way of bringing the services of the government to the people. What better way to do this than bring the Kumustahan calling center to the PBA?” Braganza said.

The PBA will be providing a booth for the OPS Kumustahan team at the Makati Coliseum on Wednesday and at the Araneta Coliseum on Friday and Sunday so that PBA fans who have relatives and friends in the Middle East, Israel, and Turkey could have the chance to place free calls while enjoying the PBA games.

GMA expresses sadness over death of Filipina domestic helper of SARS in Hong Kong

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed sadness over reports of the death of a Filipina domestic helper in Hong Kong because of the dreaded severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS).

In an interview, the President said she has ordered Consul General Victoria Bataclan of the Philippine Consulate in Hong Kong to ensure that the Filipino workers in the former British colony are safe.

The President also said she ordered Bataclan to keep the government posted of developments and to inform Manila what the consulate needs to ensure the safety and well-being of our workers.

She said she is consoled by the fact that the Ministry of Health in Hong Kong is doing its best to contain the dreaded viral disease.

“We continue to rely on them to keep our workers safe,” the President said.

Earlier, the President has directed our own Department of Health to make the necessary preventive measures so that SARS would not spread to the Philippines.

The World Health Organization (WHO) has identified Hong Kong, Singapore, China and Vietnam as among the countries in Asia that have reported cases of SARS.

GMA names Guiang new TESDA head

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said she has appointed Alcestis Guiang as the new director general of the Technical Education and Skills Development Authority (TESDA).

The President said Guiang was her first choice even before she appointed Lucita Lazo, the first TESDA director general in her administration, who was recommend by the search committee.

Lazo is now Undersecretary for Repatriation of the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE).

“Actually, she was my first choice because she’s a career official,” the President said.

Guiang is the Deputy Director General for Technical and Vocational Education and Training (TVET) of the TESDA since 1995. She was the Director of the Bureau of Technical and Vocational Education when it was merged with the NMYC to form TESDA.

A Career Executive Service Officer (CESO) since 1979, Guiang’s formal education includes nutrition, therapy, food chemistry, psychology, educational administration and supervision.

She is an international consultant in the field of technical education and training, management, secondary education and psychology, accredited with the Asian Development Bank.

Guiang replaces Dante Liban, who earlier submitted his resignation.

Liban, a former Quezon City congressman, has been at odds with the TESDA board in connection with the issuance of artist record books (ARBs).

Gov’t team set to leave for K.L. to explore resumption of talks with MILF

A government team is set to leave for Malaysia on Wednesday to hold exploratory talks with representatives of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), Presidential Adviser for Mindanao and government peace panel chairman Jesus Dureza said today.

Dureza, in an interview after a lull in the meeting of the Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security (COCIS) in Malacañang, noted that the talks are crucial to the possible resumption of peace negotiations with the MILF.

Dureza said there would be no specific agenda during the exploratory talks but noted that it might be possible that the government side would present the draft peace agreement that has been approved by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo.

The COCIS meeting was also attended by local government officials of Mindanao. The President briefly attended the meeting.

“It is a first step (to the resumption of the formal peace talks). That’s why it’s crucial,” Dureza said.

Dureza said the meeting with the MILF is the result of back-channeling efforts by Presidential Adviser for Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales and Senior Adviser on International Competitiveness Roberto Romulo.

Romulo, a former foreign affairs secretary, has recently visited Kuala Lumpur on a special assignment by the President.

GMA calls on Iraq to observe Geneva convention in treatment of POWs

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on the Iraqi government to observe rules and conventions on prisoners of war (POWs) as stipulated in the Geneva Convention.

The President made the call in reacting to reports that one of the POWs now being held by the Iraqi military is a Filipino-American, a certain Joseph Hudson.

She said that Hudson, who is with the American military forces in Iraq, is a son of Mrs. Aniceta Hudson, a Filipino-American, from New Mexico, USA.

The President said that under the Geneva Convention, POWs must be treated well and fairly.

“The POWs should be given food, medicine, if needed, and never to be tortured,” the President said.

Although the Philippines is a member of the US-led “coalition of the willing” in the fight against the government of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, the President has stressed that the country will not be sending combat troops to Iraq.

The President, however, said that the Philippines would be willing to send humanitarian assistance to Iraq the moment the war is over.

Filipino workers in Middle East continue to perform work despite war in Iraq, says DFA

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople said that overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in the Middle East continue to perform their work despite the risk coming from the outbreak of war in Iraq.

Ople said that in a report to the Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA), Philippine Ambassador to Saudi Arabia Bahnarim Guinomla said that a group of six Filipino truck drivers assigned to bring fresh water from Makkah in Saudi Arabia to Kuwait for use by coalition forces stationed near the Saudi-Kuwait border continue to bravely perform their job.

The six Filipinos, who work for Al-Humayen Transport Company, said they are very much aware of the risks attached to their work. "They are committed, however, to fulfilling their job," Guinomla said.

The OFWs told embassy officials that although they are concerned about reports of missile strikes into Kuwait, they feel it is their obligation to continue with their work.

According to Ople, the US-led coalition forces depend on the Filipino truckers for their water, a valuable commodity in the arid desert.

The Filipino truckers also deliver water and other essential commodities to outlets in Saudi Arabia, thus ensuring a steady supply of bottled water to all nationals, including foreign workers, Ople said.

"Our overseas Filipino workers in war-affected countries in the Middle East have become a source of inspiration to others because of their valor and dedication to their jobs," Ople said.

Ople has instructed all Philippine embassies in the Middle East to maintain close contact with members of the Filipino community and their employers.

He also instructed Ambassador Guinomla to request the transport companies to look after the safety of the six Filipino delivery truck drivers.

Earlier, also in a report to the DFA, Guinomla said that the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia is secure and quiet despite the ongoing war in neighboring Iraq.

Guinomla recommended that OFWs with complete travel documents and those currently on leave in Manila be allowed to return to Saudi Arabia to enable them to fulfill their pending work contracts.

There are about 1.5 million OFWs scattered in the Middle East, the bulk of them in Saudi Arabia.

Statement of Presidential Spokesperson Ignacio R. Bunye

Iraqi Diplomats

This serves as fair warning that we shall not compromise our national security for any reason. The President calls upon all foreign nationals in the Philippines, whether diplomats or not, to desist from any activities inimical to our national interest. A tight watch is being conducted by the authorities, and the government will not hesitate to arrest and summarily deport aliens, if called for.

This is not an action directed against the people of Iraq. These are actions taken against individuals who have pose a threat to our national security, nothing more.

Peace Talks with MILF

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo's commitment to peace remains unchanged but she will not allow innocent people to fall prey to terrorists. We call for principled negotiations for peace under the Constitution and our nation's sovereignty, a peace that guarantees the rights of civilians to be secure in their communities.

Exploratory talks shall soon open in Kuala Lumpur. Our team has been formed and is ready to leave. Government shall explore mechanisms to stop the fighting, allow evacuees to go home and jumpstart development.

We have conducted consultations with the leaders of Mindanao. They support the policy of active defense as well as principled peace initiatives.

SARS

The Department of Health is coordinating with the WHO and other countries with SARS cases. We are committed to provide all forms of assistance to OFWs who may have contracted the virus. The DOH has contingency measures in place.

GMA names members of RP peace panels in talks with MILF

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today named at least three persons who would join the Philippine peace and advisory panels in expected renewed talks with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

The President said that as requested by stakeholders, "we're adding a member from the Department of National Defense, that's Undersecretary (Antonio) Santos Jr."

She said that she had not yet notified Senator Ramon Magsaysay Jr. but has included the latter as a member of the advisory panel. Another member is Basilan Rep. Gerry Salapuddin.

She added that she has not yet given any thought of naming a member of the Cabinet to the peace panel.

But she had asked local government officials in Mindanao to choose one from among them to sit with the peace panel.

The President stressed that the government has continued with its confidence-building measures preparatory to the renewed negotiations with the MILF.

"The main concrete way to build confidence is to find ways to bring back the Pikit (Cotabato) evacuees to their barangays. That would be, to me, the most important step in confidence building," she said.

She disclosed that at the most recent Cabinet Oversight Committee on Internal Security meeting, "we talked about how to move the peace talks forward."

Earlier, the President said that while the government has opened up its arms of acceptance to those who wish peace, it would not hesitate to use the arms of force against those who disturb national peace and security.

GMA orders security measures tightened even outside airports

Fearing a repetition of the Davao bombing incident, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today ordered general manager Edgar Manda to beef up security at the areas around the Ninoy Aquino International Airport and the Domestic Terminal to ensure the safety of passengers.

In a surprise inspection, the President noticed that security measures outside the NAIA are not as tight as inside, noting how vehicles going inside the parking lots and even at the driveways are not inspected.

Irked, she immediately ordered Manda to employ more security and inspection personnel outside the terminals and deploy more sniff dogs around the areas where there are many people waiting for the arrival of their loved ones.

“Well, inside the airport, it’s really world class. In fact, it has been judged one of the safest airports in the world. So I wanted to make the outside, the area outside, just as safe as the area inside the airport,” the President said.

The Chief Executive admitted that she has learned her lesson from the bombing at the Davao airport which killed many civilians only a few weeks ago.

“It was not inside the airport that experienced terrorist attack,” she said. “It was outside because inside, it was very well secured.”

During her inspection tour, the President allowed herself to be frisked by the lady guard, saying she wants everybody to be security conscious.

After going down the parking lot to inspect the flow of vehicles, the President walked towards the arrival and departure areas and greeted the passengers.

Aside from Manda, she was accompanied in her inspection tour by National Capital Region Police Office Director Chief Superintendent Reynaldo Velasco and Aviation Security Command Chief Jess Versoza.

At the Domestic Terminal, the President was also dismayed by the absence of inspection among people and cars entering the premises. She then proceeded to the Philtranco Bus terminal in Pasay City to oversee the security measures being done there.

Surprise Inspections

The President urges people not to be complacent. This is the reason why she personally goes about inspecting security preparedness measures put in place by police and local authorities. Efforts are not being spared by government in preparing for the worst but citizens must likewise do their share.

KL Talks

The exploratory team of the government has been instructed to explore means to put the formal talks back on track under a firm agenda and schedule. There will no negotiation of substantive issues yet. These discussions will take place in the prospective formal talks. We would like to express our gratitude to the Malaysian government for its long-standing support for the Mindanao peace process. Malaysia has been our ally for peace, and in the war against terrorism.

RP-US military officials to discuss Balikatan 03-1

Officials of the Department of National Defense (DND) of the Philippines and the Department of Defense of the United States, represented by the US Pacific Command, will start discussing Thursday (March 27) future counter-terrorism coordination and cooperation efforts.

Philippine and United States senior military officials will meet in Manila to formulate the framework that will govern the conduct of a possible Balikatan 03-1.

The DND says the meetings will consider five policy issues in the planning or execution of future RP-US military events.

The issues include:

- Ensuring that any new military event meets the policy criteria set forth in the Philippine Constitution,
- Ensuring that the security interests of both the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the US military are promoted,
- Ensuring that the sensitivities to the social needs of the community in which the exercise may take place are considered,
- Ensuring that the exercise meets the criteria for what is best for the national interests of the Philippines and the US, and
- Ensuring that the exercise is not time bound and that basing will not become an issue.

The Balikatan will be conducted to enhance the capability of the AFP to ensure its sustainable success and to become self-reliant.

It is also expected to bring about the improvement in the quality of life of the communities where the activities may take place, to be done through humanitarian and civic action programs.

The interagency group, the DND says, will seek to include the participation of the local community leaders and their people.

Upon the completion of the meetings, a US assessment team under Major General Joe Weber, commander of the 3rd Marine Division, will work with the Southern Command in Zamboanga City to determine the most effective means to enhance the AFP's counter-terrorism capability.

The assessment, which excludes combat operations of any kind, will consist of field visits and consultations between military officials, and civic, educational and local leaders.

Last year, Balikatan 02-1 resulted in numerous AFP successes and the completion of many socio-economic projects that benefited residents of Basilan.

The DND says "any future combined AFP and US military events will seek to build on last year's similar successes."

BSP continues to take measures to strengthen peso

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) has continued to take the necessary steps to address the weakening of the peso, in addition to the sanctions it had imposed on foreign exchange dealers found to have engaged in speculation and hoarding of US dollars.

Recently, the Monetary Board, the policy-making body of the BSP, lifted the tiering system for BSP policy rates and increased the liquidity reserve requirement for universal and commercial banks to mop up excess liquidity that was also putting the inflation target at risk.

Although the bulk of foreign exchange transactions so far appear to be in order, the BSP said it continues to evaluate foreign exchange transactions for possible violations.

To date, the BSP has imposed administrative sanctions (monetary and non-monetary) on eight banks, two of them required to dispose of their excess dollar holdings. A few others were given time to explain certain transactions.

The BSP decided not to publish the names of the banks that have been sanctioned, for the moment. As a practice, the disclosure of the names of erring banks is resorted to depending on the nature of the circumstance.

It will be recalled that the BSP has been closely monitoring foreign exchange transactions of all commercial and universal banks on a daily basis since February this year when it noted "an unusual demand for foreign exchange caused possibly by concerns over continuing tension in the Middle East."

BSP examiners have been reviewing day-to-day foreign exchange sales of all commercial and universal banks to ensure that they are complying with BSP regulations.

In addition, banks were directed to make all documents supporting the sale of foreign exchange available for verification by BSP examiners. The BSP implements daily monitoring of forex transactions whenever demand for forex goes beyond normal levels.

The BSP also continues to dialogue with the Bankers Association of the Philippines to further identify measures that would reduce market volatility and to find ways to enforce strict compliance with foreign exchange rules.

The peso has reacted positively to these measures. After breaching P55 to $1, the peso has been gaining against the US dollar. From P54.97 last Wednesday, it improved to P54.48 Thursday, settled down at P54.45 last Friday and closed at P54.50 Monday.

On Tuesday, the peso closed at P54.30.

GMA notes strong RP-Malaysia pro-peace, anti-terrorism alliance

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the “continuing alliance for peace and against terrorism” between the Philippines and Malaysia.

The President said the stronger relations between the two countries has also eased the situation in Mindanao, as she expressed confidence that Malaysia’s support as third-party facilitator in the peace talks between the Philippine government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) would succeed.

“That just goes to show how Malaysia is so sincere in helping because there are so many important key officials that are involved in the third-party facilitation,” she said.

“Just today, I had a visit from some key officials of Malaysia,” she said.

The President also named three people who would be leaving for Kuala Lumpur for exploratory talks with the MILF

She said the exploratory three-person team is composed of Presidential Assistant for Mindanao Jesus Dureza, either Defense Undersecretary Antonio Santos Jr. or Senior Presidential Adviser Paul Dominguez, and Social Welfare and Services Secretary Corazon Juliano-Soliman.

Dominguez and Santos have to choose between the two of them who would go as member of the team because they represent the same constituency, she said.

She clarified that Presidential Adviser Norberto Gonzales would also go to Kuala Lumpur, but “not officially.”

“He is going there, but he is going to do his own assignment, so he is not part of the exploratory panel to talk with the MILF,” she said.

Statement of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo on the Iraq war

The impending battle for Baghdad has raised the possibility of chemical attacks and acts of terrorism.

This will be the climax of the war which could rouse embedded terrorist cells all over the world.

This is the reason why I have called upon a full alert among military and police authorities and the closing of ranks with the local governments and the communities.

All Filipinos in the Middle East must also be on a high state of alert and maintain close touch with their embassies and the Middle East Preparedness Team.

An enemy in the throes of defeat is prone to sow terror.

We have spared no effort in preparing for the worst even if it has not come to pass.

Let's not be complacent and let our guard down. Let's be focused and calm and ride out the storm.

GMA makes another inspection visit, this time to Cubao MRT station, shopping mall

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today personally witnessed the actual explosion of a bomb during a drill performed by the Philippine National Police (PNP) and the security force of the Metro Rail Transit Corporation (MRT) station in Cubao, Quezon City, to ensure that MRTs and shopping malls are secured.

"We have to have drills to practice. So this is what I am doing. I am having them practiced to make sure that the targets are hard rather than soft," the President said, stressing that she has learned a lot from the Davao City bombing experience.

The President likened the Cubao and the SM Megamall drills to the fire and earthquake drills that she witnessed when she was young. "By the same reason, because terrorism is a threat all over the world now, we should also be prepared for that," she said.

On the Davao City incident, the President said that although the airport itself was well secured, the area outside was not. "So may nakapasok, may nakapag-iwan ng bomba (someone was able to enter and left a bomb)."

"So it is very important to have the inspection going on in a crowded place," the President said.

The President cited Philtranco bus station in Pasay City, which she visited yesterday, as having 100 percent inspection.

"In the past they did not have that 100 percent inspection but I am glad to see that now that there is a terrorist threat in the world, they have 100 percent inspection of people coming in. So, that makes the Philtranco much safer," the President said.

The President stressed the importance for everybody to be always on the alert, to be on the look out for abandoned or left packages.

The simulation drill in Cubao's MRT station started when a MRT passenger supposedly saw a suspicious abandoned package. "Everything was already like a clockwork," the President said.

"We want the ordinary riders of the MRT to be on the look out for left behind or unattended packages and they must tell the nearest security guard. Because as we have seen in the drill earlier, the nearest security guard knows what to do once he's alerted," the President said.

National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO) Chief Deputy Director General Reynaldo Velasco said that after the demonstration, they will be having a "critique" to know what areas of the drill need improvement, such as in coordination and in implementation.

After witnessing the drill at the MRT station in Cubao, the President motored to the SM Megamall in Ortigas to witness another demonstration of bomb detonation.

GMA tells OFWs to keep in touch with RP embassies, MEPT, in case of chemical fallout in Iraq

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on all overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in the Middle East to keep close contacts with Philippine foreign missions and the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT) in the wake of reports that the Iraqi military might unleash its chemical weapons against the advancing forces of the US-led coalition.

In a teleconference with MEPT head Ambassador Roy Cimatu, who is based in Kuwait, the President said the impending battle in Baghdad has created the possibility for a chemical attack and more acts of terrorism.

“This could be the climax of the war, which could rouse and beget terrorist cells all over the world,” the President said.

The President said that an enemy “in the throes of defeat is prone to sow terror,” referring to the regime of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

“That is why we have spared no effort in preparing for the worst. Let’s not be complacent and let’s be focused and calm and ride out the storm,” the President said.

In the local front, the President also called on all Filipinos to be on full alert and to coordinate with military and police authorities, as well as with their local government units, in thwarting any terrorist attacks.

During the past few days, the President has made surprise visits to places that could be susceptible to terrorist attacks.

This morning, the President witnessed a security-related drill at the MRT Station in Cubao, Quezon City and visited the SM Megamall in Ortigas, Mandaluyong City, to check on the mall’s security precautions.

On Tuesday, the President also made a surprise inspection of the security measures undertaken at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA).

DFA prepares plans for post-Saddam scenario in Iraq

The Department of Foreign Affairs (DFA) has started to look beyond the Iraqi crisis as it laid down plans for a possible post-Saddam Iraq scenario.

In a teleconference today with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT) head Ambassador Roy Cimatu said “we are looking into the possible participation of the Philippines in the reconstruction of Iraq.”

Cimatu said Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople has instructed officials of the department to give due consideration on the matter.

Ople has also instructed DFA Undersecretary Delia Albert to work out with the Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) a mechanism to prepare Filipino contractors and manpower providers to participate in the reconstruction work and rehabilitation work of post-Saddam Iraq.

The instructions likewise called on Albert to work with major US contractors who will likely be preferred by the new Iraqi regime and have employed Filipino expatriates before.

Cimatu told the President that the “reputation of the Filipino worker is such that we feel that all of the contractors who will be involved in the reconstruction will naturally come to the Filipino worker.”

“They have shown their work, they have proven their skills,” he added, in reference to the overseas Filipino workers.

Meanwhile, the DFA has also proposed the dispatch of a humanitarian mission of doctors and nurses as well as a modest peacekeeping force as a mode of participation in a post-Saddam scenario.

Statement of Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye

Representatives of the Philippine and US governments held meetings today in Manila to discuss policy issues on future counter terrorism coordination and cooperation efforts.

Last year, cooperative efforts, exemplified by Balikatan 02-1, resulted in many successes for the AFP as well as many humanitarian assistance and civic action projects that helped to improve the local communities' security and living conditions in Basilan. Any future combined AFP and US military events would seek to build on last year's similar successes.

The Philippines is represented in the meetings by officials of the Department of National Defense while the United States is represented by officials of the US Pacific Command and the US embassy.

Top of the agenda are policy issues for the possible holding of Balikatan 03-1.

As part of the planning process, the goals of the meetings are to consider the following important issues prior to any planning or execution of future RP and US military events:

Ensuring any new military event meets the policy criteria set forth in the Philippine Constitution.

Ensuring that security interests of both the Philippines and the US are promoted.

Ensuring that the sensitivities to the social needs of the community in which military event may take place are considered.

Ensuring that the military event is appropriately timed.

Ensuring that the Philippine and the US military cooperation will not involve basing or a permanent US presence.

These military activities will be conducted to enhance the capability of the AFP to combat terrorism. The long-term goal is for the AFP to be self-reliant.

More importantly, these activities are expected to bring about the improvement in the security and living conditions of the communities in which the activities may take place through humanitarian and civic action programs.

Upon completion of the group's meetings, a US joint military assessment team, led by Maj. Gen. Joe Weber, commanding general, 3rd Marine Division, will work in concert with the AFP Southern Command in Zamboanga to determine the most effective means to enhance the AFP's counter-terrorism capability.

The assessment, expected to last two weeks, will consist of consultations between the AFP and the US military in Southern Command, field visits, and discussions with civic, educational, and local leaders.

The assessment team's mission does not include combat operations.

Gas coupon only for worst scenario — Palace

There will be no need for gas coupons.

This was stressed today by Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye as he tried to squelch speculations that gas rationing would be resorted to by the government due to the reported printing of 5 million coupons.

In a radio interview, Bunye emphasized that the country has an ample supply of oil which is good for 72 days, the country's highest ever inventory in 10 years.

Despite this, he said, the government has not scrapped a standby plan to distribute rationing coupons to motorists in a worst case scenario of an oil shortage should the ongoing war in the Gulf deteriorate.

Bunye was reacting to reports that the National Printing Office has delivered 5 million rationing coupons to the Department of Energy.

"Ang lahat nang ito ay paghahanda lamang in the event na ma-disrupt ang supply ng krudo from the Middle East. Alam mo pag nagpaplano ka para sa isang contingency, you plan for the worse (All of these are contingency plans just in case worse comes to worst)," Bunye explained.

He said the country's 72-day inventory is more than enough to tide the country over and there will be no need for the gas coupons.

"Ito namang mga coupons na ito ay parang general purpose. Puwede nating gamitin sa future. Hindi naman masasayang yan (These are general purpose coupons that can be used in the future. They will not go to waste)," Bunye added.

GMA calls for more coordination in intelligence work in anti-terrorism campaign

CEBU CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called for coordinated efforts in intelligence gathering among the various government and military units in order to thwart terrorism.

In an anti-terrorist command conference held at the Waterfront Hotel here, the President cited the need to anticipate events "very efficiently and effectively" for the country to succeed in the war against terrorism.

She called the attention of various intelligence units for more intelligence and "intelligent vision" and the sharing of information between the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP).

“I have seen situations where the intelligence service of a specific area command does not have the same information as the PNP regional office. In some cases, the latter do not have valuable information known by the Area Command Intelligence Unit,” the President said.

She cited as an example an arrested Abu Sayyaf commander in Sulu who was mistaken to be carrying a P5-million price on his head by the police. It was the Southern Command (Southcom), she said, which called the attention of Malacañang that the captured Abu Sayyaf leader was a P1-million guy.

“That could have been avoided if there had been more caution within the area command of the AFP and the PNP Regional Command,” she said.

The President advised those in attendance that whoever is the senior person among the intelligence networks of the PNP, AFP, the National Intelligence Coordinating Agency (NICA) and National Bureau of Investigation (NBI) should form a team which he himself will head.

All information must then be fed into the data bank of the NICA and be reported to Malacañang, the President added in her directive.

During the same command conference, the Chief Executive enjoined everybody to strengthen internal focus against terrorism.

GMA cites role of local execs in anti-terrorism drive in Cebu City command conference

CEBU CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today directed Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. to reissue and update the circular he sent to local executives describing the role and participation of local government units (LGUs) in the government’s anti-terrorism campaign.

Speaking at an anti-terrorism command conference at the Waterfront Hotel here, the President said “we must strengthen our internal focus against terrorism.”

The President enjoined all local government executives, from the governor down to the barangay level, to help in the prevention, intervention and containment of all terrorist acts.

Lina, during a teleconference with the President in Malacañang Wednesday, reported that the barangays where transmission lines and electric powers are located, have already been identified and segregated for “target hardening.”

“The barangay officials have already been alerted and they have formed their own neighborhood watch groups to coordinate with the Philippine National Police in case some suspicious characters are roaming around the area,” Lina said.

All over the country, specially in urban centers, Lina said that the local executives of each municipality have already prepared and updated their public safety plans.

“In that public safety plan an updated anti-terrorism and anti-kidnap component are now incorporated,” Lina said.

In the anti-terrorism component, the protection and guarding of vital installations are given better security measures, Lina said.

Lina said, it would be difficult for those who have any bad intentions to penetrate these vital installations and create chaos.

Lina likewise reported to the President that the PNP commanders in the fields were given very specific instructions to see to it that there is no lowering of guards and laxity on the part of those who are supposed to take charge and protect these important facilities.

The President has continued her surprise visits to public places, like MRT stations and shopping malls to make sure that these are 100 percent secure.

She witnessed the actual explosion of a bomb during what she called “practiced drill” to make sure that the targets are well-secured.

The President had also visited the Ninoy Aquino International Airport and the SM Megamall in Ortigas, Mandaluyong City and the Philtranco bus station in Pasay City to make sure that these crowded areas are safe.

She said that she has learned a lot from the Davao City experience where a bomb exploded in a passenger waiting area just outside the international airport.

GMA calls for more interfaith dialogues in the fight against terrorism

CEBU CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today stressed the need for broader understanding of the religious and ethnic diversity of the country in the coordinated fight against terrorism.

“We must pursue broader interfaith dialogues to promote Christian and Muslim solidarity in the country,” the President told the participants of an anti-terrorism command conference held at the Waterfront Hotel here.

The President said the terrorists would like to foment a religious war in the Philippines and cautioned law enforcement agencies not to fall for it.

She said that the conflict in Mindanao should instead be transformed into an opportunity to forge a religious understanding, ecumenism and solidarity among the Muslim and Christian population in Mindanao.

In Executive Order No. 37, the President has directed the Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process to undertake measures that would broaden Muslim and Christian brotherhood so as to achieve a long-lasting peace and stability in Mindanao.

In the command conference, the President said the peace process with the mainstream Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) is aimed at isolating the terrorists from the moderates among the Muslim Filipinos.

The President also encouraged local government executives to initiate their own peace talks with dissident groups in their localities.

She also called on the Department of Justice to anticipate all legal issues and concerns that are expected to arise in the stepped-up campaign against terrorism.

“The DOJ should set up a special team to serve a special requirement for the war on terrorism including the speedy prosecution, deportation and extradition of suspects,” the President said.

NAIA security beefed up, GMA told

CEBU CITY—On orders of President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, security at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) has been beefed up, according to NAIA general manager Edgardo Manda.

In a teleconference during the Philippine National Police Region 6, 7 and 8 command conference at Waterfront Hotel in Lahug, Manda informed the President that among the additional security measures already being implemented is the deployment of a crowd control officer and the banning of knapsacks, backpacks and other types of luggage in the greeters' area.

Manda said that he has also deployed armed mobile guards in the parking area, including the special operations unit and strictly implemented the 20-second stop for loading and unloading at the departure level of the airport.

Meanwhile, the President today surprised officials and employees of the Mactan Cebu International Airport (MCIA) when she conducted an unscheduled inspection on the premises of the airport to personally check on the security measures being implemented here to preempt possible terrorist attacks.

The President arrived at the Mactan Air Base on board a Lear jet around 10:00 in the morning, more than one hour early from her original arrival time of 11:15 a.m. She immediately motored to nearby Mactan airport.

Some employees of the airport were surprised when the President alighted from a white car and entered the main entrance.

General Manager Angelo Verdano of Mactan Cebu International Airport apologized to the President for coming late and the lack of (appropriate welcome) preparations for her.

During her inspection, the President went inside the airport and observed the security measures put in place by airport police at the arrival area in the parking lot.

The President also went to the welcomers' area just across the street from the arrival area and greeted the people waiting for their loved ones. She also inspected the flow of vehicles coming in and out at the departure area of the airport.

After her surprise visit and inspection at the MCIA, the President motored to the Waterfront Hotel in Lahug to lead the PNP command conference for Regions 6, 7 and 8.

Philippines still free from S.A.R.S., says Dayrit

CEBU CITY — Unlike several countries, the Philippines is still free from the dreaded killer disease more popularly known as Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome or SARS.

This was the good news relayed by Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo this afternoon during the teleconference that followed the Command Conference for the Philippine National Police officers in Regions 6, 7 and 8 and the Armed Forces of the Philippines at the Waterfront Hotel in Lahug City.

In his report, Dayrit said that while countries and territories like China, Hong Kong, Vietnam, Singapore and the United States have recorded various cases of the dreaded disease, there has been no single documented case in the Philippines as reported by the World Health Organization.

In that WHO report, Dayrit said that of the 1,323 SARS cases reported in 14 countries, China recorded 792 cases, Hong Kong 316, Vietnam 58, Singapore 74 and the United States 40.

The Health Secretary told the President that in compliance with her instructions, the DOH had already put in place all measures and strategy to prevent the spread of the infection.

Dayrit assured the President that in the event the disease finds its way into the country, the DOH will quickly identify and contain the source of the infection.

“So this strategy has worked very well,” he said. “We have a coordination with the Department of Foreign Affairs and the Department of Labor and Employment as well as with our consulates abroad, particularly the consulate in Hong Kong.”

He also informed the President that all nine overseas Filipino workers in Singapore who had been infected by the disease have survived and in good condition.

He also said that of the three Filipina domestic helpers reported afflicted with SARS in Hong Kong, one is dead and the other two are in critical condition.

The DOH Secretary advised Filipinos to postpone any travel plans to countries with prevalent cases of SARS.

“If the travel is non-essential and unnecessary, for example shopping in Hong Kong, we could advise them to postpone their travel,” he said. “For Filipinos who cannot help but go to China or Hong Kong because of business, we advise them to take precautionary measures.”

GMA asks media to deprive terrorists of benefit of glorified coverage, publicity

CEBU CITY – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today called on media to do their part in the fight against terrorism by depriving the terrorists of the benefit of glorified coverage and publicity.

She also asked media to help the government in maintaining calm, sobriety, prudence and solidarity in society and to support the implementation of policies and programs in the fight against terrorists.

During a command conference of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police regional offices in the Visayas, the President likewise ordered the Office of the Press Secretary and the Philippine Information Agency to maintain close and constructive contact with the media “in the pursuit of our common objective.”

She then asked the OPS and PIA, which are both headed by Press Secretary Hernani Braganza, to arrange periodic briefings “to bring the media into the loop of collective action and information.”

The President noted that armed groups ranged against the government as well as their allies in the streets are engaged in the more strident and militant campaign to challenge the government and to sow rumors and disinformation.

The President said “it is important for our people to be aware of the truth, to resist any and all attempts to sow panic or irrational fear.”

“It is important for us – police and civilians, national officials and local government officials, executive and legislative, government and citizenry...to close ranks in meeting the crisis,” she said.

“Each and every Filipino has the responsibility to be aware and enlightened, to be vigilant and to act with discipline and with the genuine concern for the common good,” the President added.

Thousands of jobs opportunities in Mideast expected to arise after armed conflict

CEBU CITY—An estimated 50,000 to 100,000 job opportunities in the Middle East are awaiting skilled and non-skilled Filipino workers once the war ends in Iraq.

This was the report made by special envoy retired General Roy Cimatu, head of the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT), to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo this afternoon during the teleconference at the Philippine National Police – Armed Forces of the Philippines command conference at the Waterfront Hotel in Lahug City.

“The Kuwaiti government has nice words for the OFWs because they were the ones who stood by the Kuwaiti government in their crisis. And I should expect a lot of workers will be needed in Kuwait and Iraq,” Cimatu said during the telephone conversation with the President.

Cimatu informed the President that one or two months after the war, the reconstruction will start and probably a massive demand for workers.

“In fact, there are a lot of money already allotted for rehabilitation and reconstruction for Iraq and this will be in the form of structures that have been destroyed or additional infrastructure that may be used for further development,” Cimatu said.

Cimatu added that some oil refineries destroyed during the armed conflict would be improved and these are potential sources of job opportunities for the overseas Filipino workers.

He also inform the President that the Kuwaiti government will be needing semi-skilled workers after workers from other countries left their jobs before the war.

“I think they will not be coming back anymore, so there’s a vacuum for semi-skilled Filipino workers who wants to work here,” Cimatu said.

GMA orders AFP, PNP to gear modernization program to war against terrorism

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has called for the revision of the shopping list of the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP) and the Philippine National Police (PNP) in their modernization program to conform to the new reality of terrorism.

In an anti-terrorism command conference held in Cebu City Thursday, the President said the AFP and the PNP must take into consideration the threats of terrorism in their procurement of equipment and supplies.

“Your requisitions should take into account the new threat of the 21st century, which is the terrorist threat,” the President told participants that included top officials of the AFP and the PNP, and local executives of Regions 6, 7 and 8.

The President said she was not talking about additional budget “but how to reallocate your existing budgets away from the less important procurement.”

The maintenance and other operating expenses (MOOE) of the AFP and the PNP should also be reexamined so that they will be used in the anti-terrorism campaign that the government has waged.

The President said that lawless elements and terrorist groups ranged against the government and their allies, including those abroad, are engaged in a more strident and militant campaign to sow rumors and disinformation.

“We, in government, must be thoroughly equipped to meet this threat. Our armed forces and the police must be in place to protect the communities,” the President stressed.

DFA conveys to Iraq gov't concern for safety of Fil-Am P.O.W. in Baghdad

Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas F. Ople has conveyed to Iraqi Foreign Minister Naji Sabri Philippine concerns over the treatment of Joseph Hudson, a Filipino-American member of the US armed forces.

In a report, Ople said he had sent a letter to Minister Sabri, conveying the government's and his own personal concern over Hudson's safety and well-being.

“I also told Minister Sabri that we have called on all parties concerned to observe humanitarian law in the treatment of prisoners,” Ople added.

In a statement issued last March 24, Secretary Ople called on the parties to the conflict to observe the rights of both combatants and non-combatants.

He said that prisoners of war (POWs) should be treated humanely in accordance with the Geneva Conventions, particularly Article 13 of the 1949 Geneva Convention Relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War and Part III, Section II of its 1979 Additional Protocol I.

Ople's letter was prompted by his belief that while Hudson may no longer be a Filipino citizen, the ties of Fil-Americans to the Philippines and the Filipino people continue to be strong.

"In my letter to Minister Sabri, I also expressed our hope that the international humanitarian agencies, particularly the International Committee of the Red Cross and Red Crescent, will be allowed by the parties to attend to the needs of all prisoners of war," Ople said.

Ople said he had met and held bilateral meetings with Minister Sabri in the context of multilateral meetings like the United Nations General Assembly last year and at the Non-Aligned Movement Summit in Kuala Lumpur last February.

"Our exchanges have been frank and our common desire for the welfare of our people sincere. It is my hope that he will give our concerns on this matter his attention," Ople said.

More Filipinos accept jobs in Gulf despite Iraq war

The growing number of Filipinos going to the Middle East for sure job placements only shows that despite the ongoing war in Iraq, the windows of opportunities for employment in the region has increased.

National Security Adviser Roilo Golez stressed this as he noted government efforts to regularly inform and assure the nation that all is well in the Gulf and that there was nothing to fear as the host-nations of Filipino expatriates are far from the conflict areas.

"Ang mga Pilipino ay hindi nangangamba na magpunta sa Middle East (Filipinos have no apprehensions in going to the Middle East)," he said in a radio interview.

"Yan siguro ang resulta ng patuloy na pag-announce natin ng mga takbo ng mga pangyayari sa Kuwait (This could be the result of our continuous efforts to announce developments in the Gulf, particularly in Kuwait)," he added.

There was a time when the people feared for the safety of overseas Filipino workers (OFW) in Kuwait, but until today, there had been no reports of a single refugee and there had been no need to relocate any single OFW, he noted.

Golez said that since March 17, a daily average of 263 OFWs flew to the Middle East, most of them responding to jobs in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia.

But on March 25, the numbers increased to 403 and the next day, 487.

"Kalmadong-kalmado po yung mga tao at mga kababayan nating mga Pilipino (The people and OFWs are very calm) in the Middle East," he said.

GMA accepts U.S. donation of $5.3-M equipment, $1M in medical supplies to Jolo hospital

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today accepted from the United States government, represented by US Ambassador Francis Ricciardone, a donation of hospital equipment worth $5.3 million for the use of the community hospital in Jolo.

The President and Ricciardone witnessed the formal handover of the donation from Joint US Military Assistance Group (JUSMAG) Chief Col. Mathias Velasco to Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao Governor Parouk Hussein.

Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes and Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina Jr. also witnessed the donation handover in simple rites at Villamor Air Base.

The President said the event was a great day for Sulu “to remember those times of friendship and cooperation” between the Philippine and US governments.

She recalled that it was in the town of Look, Sulu where American Jeffrey Shilling was rescued from the hands of the terrorist Abu Sayyaf.

She said that the donation from the U.S. Department of Defense JUSMAG-run Humanitarian Assistance Program (HAP) was given without condition. “This is not a quid pro quo,” she added.

But she still stressed that it was up to the will of the people of Sulu to agree to the Balikatan and to what extent they would like to have it conducted in the area.

The donation was made possible through the HAP, which provides excess equipment to local government and non-government agencies.

The donated equipment consists of a medical clinic, including beds, linen, operating room equipment, emergency room equipment, dental chairs, field dental units, lighting, mammogram equipment, a medical laundry facility, and office equipment.

The Jolo Hospital also received consumable medical supplies worth approximately $1 million from Knightsbridge and Remedy, two non-government organizations in the US.

The medical supplies include bandages, tapes, needles, intravenous tubing, and surgical supplies.

The humanitarian assistance donation is the most recent contribution from the US government to the Philippine government in support of its ongoing development efforts in the Southern Philippines.

The HAP program is administered by Col. Velasco while the Knightsbridge and Remedy supplies are administered by Mrs. Karika Bridges.

GMA continues inspection trips, checks rice supply this time

It’s not only airports, malls and transport terminals that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo is inspecting these days.

After making sure that security measures at these places are at their highest levels against possible terrorist attacks, the President wants to make sure that food supply would not be hampered when the situation in the Middle East deteriorates.

This morning, the President visited the rice warehouse of the National Food Authority (NFA) at the Food Terminal Inc. Complex in Taguig to make sure that measures for an efficient operation are being implemented.

She said she would like to ensure that only good quality rice is distributed through the NFA authorized outlets which include the Tindahan ni Gloria Labandera sa Barangay and the accredited retailers.

The President was briefed by NFA Administrator Arthur Yap on the rice stock appearance, quality maintenance and the preservation of stock quality in warehouses.

While there, Agriculture Secretary Luis Lorenzo reported to the President that the country has a rice inventory of 83 days, the lowest volume so far.

He, however pointed out that the inventory can still go up in the next few days due to the expected rice harvest. He also said the country is expecting imports of bumper stock in line with the President's instructions.

"We want to assure the public that we have enough rice and that we have been ready since three months ago when the President gave the order to be prepared and make sure that we have sufficient rice at stable prices in major urban centers and throughout the country," Lorenzo said.

Remain calm and be united in the face of challenges ahead, GMA tells people

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has called on the Filipino people to remain calm but united in the face of challenges ahead, including the possible adverse effects of a prolonged war in the Middle East.

In an anti-terrorism command conference held in Cebu City last Thursday, the President said that even in the face of an extended war scenario, the government's contingency plans "can be stretched out effectively."

"It is important for our people to be aware of the truth, to resist any and all attempts to sow panic and irrational fear," the President said.

The President said that the Armed Forces of the Philippines (AFP), the Philippine National Police (PNP), national and local officials, and the community should cooperate with each other to meet the crisis, especially in the war against terrorism.

"Each and every Filipino has the responsibility to be aware and be enlightened, to be vigilant and to act with discipline and with the genuine concern for the common good," the President said.

The command conference was attended by top officials of the AFP and the PNP, as well as local executives of Regions 6, 7 and 8.

Ambassador Roy Cimatu, head of the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT) who is now based in Kuwait, reported to the President in a teleconference during the command meeting that the contingency plan for OFWs in the Middle East is now being followed.

Cimatu also reported that an estimated 50,000 to 100,000 job opportunities in the Middle East await skilled and non-skilled Filipino workers once the war in Iraq is over.

He said that Kuwaiti authorities have nice words for OFWs for having stood by them during the ongoing war in neighboring Iraq as well as in the first Gulf War in 1991.

DTI reports major foreign investments in Western Visayas, Southern Mindanao

The Department of Trade and Industry (DTI) has reported that Western Visayas and Southern Mindanao recently acquired major investment boost with a British group putting up a P4.56 billion renewable energy generation facility in Victorias, Negros Occidental and a Japanese investor putting up a P280 million granite wall panel plant in Digos City, Davao del Sur in Southern Mindanao.

DTI Secretary Manuel Roxas II said other big investment projects in the regions approved this year are Genpack Corporation's P1.04 billion tin can manufacturing project in General Santos City also in Southern Mindanao, and a P1.3 billion plastic packing factory of Modern Packaging Films Inc. of the Chemphil Group in Bataan.

These are among the P10.3 billion worth projects that were granted incentives by the government through the Board of Investments and the Philippine Economic Zones Authority during the first two months of this year, Roxas said.

"We have a good start. Our earlier figures show that exports for the first two months were good and businessmen are investing once more," Roxas said

He noted 106.5 percent increase in investments for the January-February period this year compared to the P5.0 billion listed last year.

"The interest shown by investors is very encouraging, this is indeed a testament to the progress we have made in attracting foreign and local investors despite geopolitics and the tense situation in Mindanao," Roxas said.

"More importantly, these investments will further boost our employment generation capability as close to 13,000 additional job opportunities will be made available to our people," Roxas added.

Foreign investments accounted for P5.66 billion represent 131 percent increase over the foreign investments infused during the same period last year, Roxas said.

The Victorias cogeneration project of British investors covers a 34 percent share of total foreign investments, a major jump from last year's British investments share of less than 3 percent of foreign investments.

Japanese firms, with a total of P1.75 billion investment during the first two months, had a 31 percent share while the Americans had 25 percent, Roxas said.

Meanwhile, substantial investments worth P1.74 billion or 17 percent of total investments were directed to Southern Tagalog and a total of P1.35 billion or 13 percent to Southern Mindanao.

Roxas said that the cogeneration plant of Victorias Bioenergy Inc. in Negros Occidental, which will be fueled with bagasse from Victorias Milling Corp. and other mills in the area, pushed investments in the electricity, gas and water supply sector by 537 percent.

Victorias Bioenergy Inc., which was granted pioneer status by the BOI, was formed to produce renewable energy and to supply electricity to VMC and surrounding communities. The plant, set to start full commercial operation in October, 2005 is expected to generate jobs for some 700 workers.

Roxas said that the Digos-based Yoshimi Nakayama Corp, which will be producing granite wall panels as construction materials, was granted non-pioneer status and will start commercial operations by the end of the year. It plans to employ 178 people.

President's radio address to the nation

Isang masigla ang mapayapang umaga ang ipinapa-abot ko sa lahat ng ating mga lokal na opisyal sa barangay, mga punong-barangay, mga kagawad, mga sangguniang kabataan, gayundin sa lahat ng ating mga kababayan. Binabati ko kayong lahat mula Luzon, Visayas, hanggang Mindanao sa araw ng ating pagsama-sama, ang magkasabay na pagdiriwang ng Barangay Assembly Day sa buong bansa.

Lubhang napapanahon ang okasyong ito sapagkat nasa gitna tayo ng isang krisis at pag-aalala ng publiko. Ito ay ang giyera sa Iraq at ang pangamba kaugnay ng terorismo at ng ekonomiya.

Ang digmaan sa Iraq at ang gulo sa Mindanao ay iisa ang kaaway – terorismo. Kailangang alisan ang Iraq ng mga armas na malawakang pamumuksa dahil ang mga ito ay maaring ipuslit dito sa atin at gamitin ng mga terorista sa pag-atake sa mga kawawang sibilyan. Dito natin makikita ang kaugnay ng giyera sa Iraq at ang aktibong depensa ng mga komunidad laban sa mga naghahasik ng lagim sa Mindanao.

Habang mahigpit nating nilalabanan ang dahas ng mga rebelde, masigasig din ang mga hakbang ng pamahalaan upang muling maisulong ang usapang pangkapayapaan. Inatasan ko ang Exploratory Team ng gobyerno na humanap ng paraan para maibalik ang pormal na pag-uusap. Lutasin ang sitwasyon ng mga nagsilikas sa Pikit at wakasan ang dahas ng mga terorista. At nagpapasalamat tayo sa pamahalaan ng Malaysia, sa kanilang walang sawang pagsuporta sa mahabang prosesong pangkapayapaan sa Mindanao.

Sa kabila nito, binabalaan ko ang mga armadong grupo na huwag samantalain ang sitwasyon para hamunin ang pamahalaan. Hinihiling ko rin sa mga grupong nagdaraos ng kilos protesta na huwag magpakalat ng mga maling balita at impormasyon at huwag ipulutika ang giyera, maging dahilan ng ating lalong pagkawatak-watak.

Higit kailanman, ngayon tayo lalong dapat magkaisa at magtulungan tungo sa iisang direksiyon. Malaki ang posibilidad na ang mga kasabwat ni Saddam Hussein ay gumamit ng nakakalibot na sandatang kemikal o pagsabog ng mga pag-atake ng terorismo sa ibat-ibang dako ng mundo. Ito ang dahilan kung bakit inatasan ko ang ating militar at pulis na maging lubos na alerto at makipag-ugnay sa mga lokal na pamahalaan at mga komunidad.

Ginagawa ng gobyerno ang lahat para harapin ang krisis pero hindi tayo dapat maging kampante at luwagan ang ating pagbabantay. Maging listo tayong palagi at kalmado para malampasan ang unos na ito.

Hinihiling ko ang ating buo at tapat na pagmamatyag. Gaya ng ibang bansa dapat tayong maging listo laban sa terrorists attack o pag-atake ng mga desperadong extremists sapagkat ang terorismo ay malakas ang loob. Hindi sapat ang pagkilos ng pamahalaang nasyonal lamang. Ang pakikipagtulungan at pagmamatyag ng buong komunidad at lahat ng pamahalaang lokal ay kailangan upang ang Pilipinas ay maging ligtas para sa mga mamamayan.

Ang bagong banta ng siglo bente-uno – ang terorismo – ay kailangan ng puspusang kilos ng buong pamahalaan hanggang sa hanay ng barangay para bantayan ang mga nakakahinalang tao, pagkilos at kagamitan. Kaya naman inatasan ko na ang lahat ng pamahalaang lokal na pulungin kaagad ang inyong crisis management councils at mangasiwa ng personal at malapitan sa pagtupad ng ating contingency plans kaugnay ng krisis. Ito ay ayon sa mga tungkulin ng mga local leaders.

Magtatagumpay lamang kayo sa mga gawaing ito kung magtutulungan ang lahat ng mga barangay na nasasakupan ng mga local leaders. Ang ating mga local leaders ang dapat maging crisis managers sa inyong mga komunidad. Kayo ang mangangasiwa sa pagmatyag sa lahat ng klase ng problemang sosyal at ekonomikal na kaugnay sa krisis tulad ng presyo ng mga pangunahing bilihin at para tiyakin na ang komunidad ay ligtas laban sa lahat ng uri ng terorismo.

Bukod sa pagmatyag laban sa terorismo kailangan ding magbantay ang mga mamamayan laban sa mga nais magsamantala sa krisis tulad ng pagtago ng supply ng pagkain o paniningil ng sobra. Bagamat may monitoring teams tayo na nag-iikot sa mga palengke para matyagan ang presyo ng mga bilihin, mahalaga ring i-report ninyo ang sinumang tindera o negosyante na nagtataas ng presyong hindi dapat.

Ang mga local leaders din ay information champions para sa katatagan ng ekonomiya at kagalingan ng publiko. Kayo ay may tungkuling ipaalam sa mga mamamayan ang mga mahahalagang pangyayari sa inyong paligid.

Harapin ang mga maling balita at ispekulasyon at ipakalma ang komunidad sa pamamagitan ng pagsasabi sa taong bayan ng totoo.

Ang mga leaders din ang ating anti-street crime czars. Dapat niyang protektahan ang mga mamamayan laban sa mga kriminal na bumibiktima sa mga mahihina, at sa mga manloloko na nagsasamantala sa kanilang kapwa.

Ang suporta ng komunidad ang unang susi para maging epektibo ang pagsugpo ng kriminalidad. Kaya hinihiling ko rin sa ating mga mamamayan na paigtingin ang inyong pakikipagtulungan sa ating pulis para lalong mabilis at mabisa ang kanilang pagsupil sa krimen.

Mga minamahal kong kababayan, ang ligtas at galing ng ating bansa ay nasa ating kamay kaya magkaisa tayo sa tungkulin ng pagbantay at pagpapa-iral ng katahimikan. Bawat Pilipino ay dapat responsable sa kanyang kapwa. Ito ay isang makasaysayang pagkakataon para tayo ay magbuklod sa panahon ng krisis na ilang beses na nating ginawa noon. Ang ganitong pagbuklod ay dapat magsimula sa ating mga barangay kung saan ang lahat ay magkakakilala at nagkakaisa sa damdamin at hangarin.

Magsama-sama tayo at magtulungan para maibsan ang mga pag-aalalang dulot ng giyera sa Iraq. Magsama-sama tayo at magtulungan upang walang naka-ambang panganib sa ating dinadaan at makatulog tayo ng mahimbing kasama ng ating mga mahal sa buhay. Sa ating mga barangay nakasalalay ang kapayapaan at seguridad ng ating bansa.

Kaya naman sa pagkakataong ito, hinihiling ko ang inyong tulong at hangad ko ang inyong tagumpay. Ang inyong tagumpay ay tagumpay ng ating bansa at ng buong sambayanan. Ang inyong patuloy na pakikiisa at suporta ang maghahatid sa atin tungo sa matatag at matibay na Republika.

Magandang umagang muli at mabuhay kayong lahat.

GMA cites military's relentless pressure on ASG for Indonesian hostage's escape

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo Friday night formally turned over to Indonesian embassy officials Mr. Julkipli, one of their nationals who escaped from the terrorist Abu Sayyaf Group (ASG), as she vowed to continue efforts to rescue the remaining hostages of the ASG and to further step up cooperation initiatives against international terrorism.

The President turned over Mr. Julkipli to Indonesian Charge d' Affaires Alexander Laturiuw and Minister Counselor Chairul Soelaeman Natudisastra during ceremonies at the State Dining Room in Malacañang.

Mr. Julkipli is a seaman held hostage by the ASG for almost a year.

Wearing a shirt and jeans, Mr. Julkipli was all smiles when he shook the hands of the President, who in turn, asked him how he was.

"I am glad that Mr. Julkipli, an Indonesian national, was able to get away from his Abu Sayyaf captors as a result of the pressure of military operations brought to bear upon the terrorist group," the President said.

Defense Secretary Angelo Reyes, Armed Forces Chief of Staff Dionisio Santiago, and Southern Command chief Lt. Gen. Narcisco Abaya accompanied the President at the turnover ceremonies.

The President commended the military under Santiago and Abaya for the unrelenting offensive against the Abu Sayyaf.

In a message, she said the military officials have assured her that there would be no let-up in operations until all the remaining hostages are rescued and the Abu Sayyaf is decisively beaten.

“I assure the families of the remaining hostages that all efforts shall be taken to rescue them safely,” she said.

The President noted that the Indonesian government was informed of the progress on the operations against the bandit group.

She said the Philippines shares with Indonesia a strong abhorrence of terrorism, noting that their partnership extends across the seas through a multilateral agreement along with Cambodia, Vietnam and Malaysia.

We continue to work closely in checking the movement of terrorists, firearms and materials.

The President further noted that the fight against terrorism bared an affinity to what’s going on across the world.

“There is a coalition to disarm Iraq of weapons of mass destruction and stop the harboring of transnational terrorists cells that could use these weapons elsewhere. The threat of terrorist using such weapons confronts all mankind and the Philippine is no exception. We must always be on guard in checking tans-national and domestic terrorists,” she said.

The threat of terrorists using such weapons confronts all mankind, including the Philippines, the President stressed.

“We must always be on guard in checking transnational and domestic terrorists,” she said.

The President turned over Julkifli to the Indonesian government with the hope that the two countries’ partnership against terrorism “will always be strong and enduring.”

GMA urges Filipinos to stay alert, united against terrorist attacks

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today asked the people to stay alert against possible collateral terrorist attacks on innocent civilians, particularly in Mindanao.

“Gaya ng ibang bansa, dapat tayong maging listo laban sa terrorist attack o pag-atake ng mga desperadong extremists sapagkat ang terorismo ay malakas ang loob (Like other nations, we should remain alert against terrorists and desperate extremists),” the President said in a radio message.

She said it was imperative for the national government and the people to help each other contain any threat to national security.

The President said the war in Iraq and the conflict in Mindanao are imperative means to combat a common enemy, terrorism.

“Kailangang alisan ang Iraq ng mga armas ng malawakang pamumuksa dahil ang mga ito ay maaring ipuslit dito sa atin at gamitin ng mga terorista sa pag-atake sa mga kawawang sibilyan (Iraq should be disarmed of weapons of mass destruction that could be brought into the country and used by terrorists to attack communities),” she said.

“Malaki ang posibilidad na ang mga kasabwat ni Saddam Hussein ay gumamit ng nakakalipol na sandatang kemikal o pagsabog ng mga pag-atake ng terorismo sa ibat-ibang dako ng mundo (There is the possibility that people conniving with Saddam Hussein will use chemical weapons or bombs in terror attacks in different parts of the world),” she said.

Because of this, she has ordered the military and the police nationwide to stay on full alert and coordinate with local government officials and communities.

But while the government is fighting rebels in the southern front, it has taken steps to pursue peace negotiations with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

The President said she has directed a government exploratory team to seek ways to get the MILF back to the peace table in Kuala Lumpur, through the third party facilitation of Malaysia, while resolving the situation of people dislocated by the conflict in Pikit, Cotabato.

However, she warned armed groups against taking advantage of prevailing conditions to challenge government.

She rallied the nation to unite and move together in a singular direction, while enjoining groups staging protests to stop misinforming the public and use the war for political or vested interests.

“Ginagawa ng gobyerno ang lahat para harapin ang krisis pero hindi tayo dapat maging kampante at luwagan ang ating pagbabantay. Maging listo tayong palagi at kalmado para malampasan ang unos na ito (The government is doing everything to weather the crisis but we should not lose our guard),” she said.

GMA enjoins communities to do share in overcoming crisis

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo called on every Filipino to do his share in tiding the country over the crisis brought about by the war in Iraq.

In a radio address commemorating Barangay Assembly Day, the President asked Filipinos to be vigilant and take the opportunity to unite in this time of crisis.

“Bawat Pilipino ay dapat responsible sa kanyang kapwa (Let us all be our brother’s keepers),” she said. “Ito ay isang makasaysayang pagkakataon para tayo ay magbuklod sa panahon ng krisis na ilang beses na nating ginawa noon (This is an opportune time for us to show our unity in time of crisis, a feat that we have done so many times before).”

This kind of unity, according to the President, should start at the barangay level where everybody knows each other and where people are united in their pursuits and ambitions.

She encouraged the people to bond together and help each other in easing the tension brought about by the war in Iraq.

“Magsama-sama tayo at magtulungan upang walang nakaambang panganib sa ating dinadaan at makatulog tayo ng mahimbing kasama ng ating mga mahal sa buhay (Let us join hands and help each other to clear our paths of all dangers so that we could sleep soundly with our loved ones),” she said.

Saying that the peace and security of the country lie on the barangays, the President took the occasion to ask everybody’s help and support to achieve success towards that end.

“Ang inyong tagumpay ay tagumpay ng ating bansa at ng buong sambayanan. Ang inyong patuloy na pakiisa at suporta ang maghahatid sa atin tungo sa matatag at matibay na Republika (Your success is the country’s success. Your continued support is what will bring us towards a stable and strong Republic),” she said.

GMA sees MILF signing peace pact to develop Mindanao

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today raised hopes that Hashim Salamat, leader of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), would sign a peace pact with the government to start a common agenda of the government and the rebel group – that of developing Mindanao.

The President made the expectation as she disclosed a “mini Marshall Plan” where the United States government would likely pour in some $150 million, part of it for use in the rehabilitation and development of areas afflicted by the Mindanao conflict.

In a radio interview, the President said: “Inaasahan natin na si Salamat ay pipirma ng peace agreement para iyong $100 million ay magamit para sa kaunlaran ng kanyang mga lugar at kanyang mga kasama na babalik na sa ating lipunan.”

Amid reports that US President George W. Bush has promised to give funds to those who joined the Coalition of the Willing, President Macapagal-Arroyo said the government submitted a proposal outlining the country’s needs for combating terrorism.

“Inaasahan natin na tutulong sila duon (We are expecting the US to help on that matter),” she said.

However, she stressed that some of the countries listed in the coalition maintained US military bases. “Tayo wala (We have none of those bases),” she added.

But despite this, the country has been getting substantial development aid from the US, she stressed.

She recalled that before she became President, the country received some $1.9 million in military assistance.

Last Friday (March 28) alone, the US government donated equipment and medical supplies worth some $6.3 million, or roughly P400 million, to the Jolo regional hospital, she noted.

GMA pushes SME expansion in barangays

President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo today encouraged all Filipinos to expand small and medium enterprises (SMEs) in their barangays in line with her nationwide livelihood program.

In a question and answer forum following a speech commemorating Barangay Assembly Day, the President enjoined entrepreneurs to borrow money from the nearest rural or savings banks and even the Land Bank to expand their businesses, saying the government has allocated a total of P10 billion for the purpose.

“Tulungan ninyong maghanap ng mga successful na SMEs at ilapit po ninyo sa mga rural bank, savings bank at Land Bank sa inyong mga lugar upang matulungan silang mag-expand (Please help in finding successful SMEs in your area and encourage them to borrow money from rural banks, savings bank and Land Bank for them to be able to expand),” she said.

The President, four months ago, signed a law authorizing small micro enterprises in the barangays all over the country, as part of her livelihood program for the barangays.

She had also initiated the Kalahi Seeds Project in some chosen barangays, part of a World Bank-financed program that would give jobs to people in the barangays.

“Gusto kong idagdag na ang pangunahing programa natin ay magbigay ng trabaho sa taong bayan kaya sa barangay ay gusto nating mapairal iyong inyong mga small and medium enterprises na nagtatagumpay (I want to add that our primary objective is to give jobs to the people that’s why we want to encourage successful small and medium enterprises to expand),” the President said.

In the same forum, Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. of the Department of Interior and Local Government explained that the thrust is to allow information about government projects and programs to trickle down to the barangays.

“Maraming programa ang pamahalaan para matulungan ang mamamayan ngunit hindi alam ng karamihan tulad ng microenterprises, iyong program sa health, itong health card, at iyong program sa anti-terrorism (The government has many programs that the people don’t know like the micro enterprises, health program, health card, and anti-terrorism programs),” Lina said.

The DILG Secretary also mentioned the scholarship grants of the Department of Science and Technology and the Philippine Coconut Authority as well as the employment and livelihood programs being initiated by the government.

“Dapat malaman ito ng mga barangay residents so that they can participate and be empowered. Kapag hindi kasi nila alam itong mga programa, they will not reap the benefits of the program that the President is pushing (The residents of the barangay should be well informed so that they can participate and be empowered. If they don’t know about these, they will not reap the benefits of the program that the President is pushing),” he added.

Gov’t not yet issuing SARS-related travel ban

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today said the government is not keen on issuing travel bans to countries reported to have cases of the dreaded Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome (SARS).

In a radio interview, the President said that as of the moment, other countries have not issued SARS-related travel bans.

“Kung hindi naman importante iyong biyahe ay iwasan na lamang. Pero kung importante ang biyahe ay puwede pa ring ituloy (Avoiding non-essential travel would help. But if the travel is important, it could be pushed through),” she said.

The countries with SARS-related cases have been adopting strict quarantine precautions, she noted, adding that “malamang ang ating nagbibiyaha ay hindi sila mai-expose (the chances of Filipino travelers being exposed to SARS are nil).”

The President said the Philippines had also implemented precautionary rules to prevent SARS from afflicting the people.

Meanwhile, Health Secretary Manuel Dayrit today reported to the President that the Philippines continued to be SARS-free as of the moment.

In the President’s regular teleconference, Dayrit said the government has continued monitoring developments on the SARS, while implementing its seven-day quarantine policy.

He told the President that the Department of Health placed under medical check-up and observation at the San Lazaro Hospital today a 41-year old female overseas Filipino worker (OFW) from Hong Kong after having found her to have symptoms.

But he said the move was precautionary. The OFW has no history of having been in contact with any SARS-patient.

Gov’t to conduct briefings, drills against terror attacks

The government would be conducting an extensive and intensified briefing and drills against possible collateral terrorist attacks starting on Monday, National Security Adviser J. Roilo Golez said today.

Golez made the announcement during President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo’s teleconference with Middle East Preparedness Team chief Ambassador Roy Cimatú at Malacañang.

Golez said the intensified briefing and drills would be conducted in practically all the departments of the government especially all members of the Iraqi crisis management team.

These are, among others, the Department of Foreign Affairs, Department of Labor and Employment, Department of Transportation and Communication.

Golez also noted that the Philippine National Police would be giving a lecture on how to handle bomb threats and terrorist attacks.

The National Security adviser said the PNP would likewise conduct briefings and drills for the private sector.

He said Police Director Vic de Leon, a graduate of the Crisis Management Course in the United Kingdom, would supervise both the government-wide and the private sector drills.

Golez said although a long war is an unlikely scenario, the country's oil and food supply remains highly adequate.

He said Energy Secretary Vincent Perez assured him that the country's oil supply is up for 76 days, much higher than the 65 days supply at the start of the conflict in the Gulf.

On food, Golez said rice supply will last for 95 days and this would be supplemented by 400,000 tons of rice coming in from abroad next month.

Cimatu says no Filipino hurt or killed in Kuwait blast

Ambassador Roy Cimatu today confirmed that no Filipino was either hurt or killed during a large explosion that rocked a shopping mall in downtown Kuwait City at about 2 a.m. (7 a.m. in Manila).

Cimatu, during the regular teleconference with President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, said Filipinos continued to be calm but alert in Kuwait City.

He told the President that the nearest OFW resident is about a kilometer away from the blast site.

He and embassy officials saw no need for any relocation as of the moment.

Cimatu, head of the Middle East Preparedness Team (MEPT), said an ocular showed mall debris littering the area.

In an earlier radio interview, the President said the MEPT had long prepared for any eventuality in the Persian Gulf due to the conflict in Iraq.

She said the MEPT was ready for any scenario – the stay scenario, relocation scenario, evacuation scenario and others.

They have also coordinated with host governments and employers to ensure the safety and welfare of overseas Filipino workers in the area and throughout the Middle East.

The "End of the Tour to the Strong Republic Nautical Highway" will be at the Dapitan City where the President will make an assessment of the caravan tour.

GMA resolve against terrorism cited by int'l news agency

A respected international news agency has called on American investors to look into the investment opportunities in the Philippines, citing President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo as a tough leader in the likes of Margaret Thatcher and her effective economic policies resulting in continued growth and stable currency.

Gregory Fossedal of the Business and Economics Desk of the United Press International (UPI) who wrote a special article entitled "The Bottom Line: Manila's Maggie," said America's early success against the ruling regime in Iraq has helped lift stock markets throughout the region, from Israel to Kuwait.

But according to him, another country that should benefit from further progress against the global terror network has so far been overlooked by investors.

"That country is the Philippines, where one of the toughest leaders this side of Margaret Thatcher, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo, is working hard to crush an insurgency of separatist Muslim and communist rebels," Fossedal said.

He noted that the local market has not moved much yet as the Philippine index is up 3 percent from its level at the end of February through the successful start of the Iraq campaign in the last 10 days.

This, he said, compares to a rise of nearly 10 percent in Israel over the same period.

By contrast to the aftermath of the last major leg of the war on terror, the rout of the Taliban in Afghanistan, the Philippine stock market was one of the top performers in the world, Fossedal said.

He said that viewing the political and economic landscape of the Philippines today, there's a good chance that the United States' assured win in Iraq will have a positive impact on the country.

"Economic policy in the Philippines is characterized by a stable currency, which is essentially linked to the US dollar, a stabilizing factor, but allowed to slide by 1 percent or so per month to provide flexibility," the article said.

Fossedal further noted that President Macapagal-Arroyo has cut tax rates twice, to a top rate of tax on personal income of 26 percent, down from 33 percent when she took office. The tax rate is also relatively flat, with corporations paying a rate of 22 percent, only slightly below the rates on human labor.

He added that despite economic growth rates of 4 to 6 percent, the Philippine government has suffered revenue shortfalls, with tax receipts and other government income declining 15 percent from their highs in 2000.

The President, the article noted, has responded by slashing spending by 10 percent, sticking with her tax cuts and insisting that strong growth is needed to close the deficit in future years

The article noted that despite the residue of crony capitalism, ongoing insurgency, corruption and local terrorism, Macapagal-Arroyo "has fought back with Thatcher-esque resolve."

She "has firmly aligned herself, unlike say the new government in Korea, with the US war on terror."

"The bottom line is, her resolve and resourcefulness are probably under-discounted. That makes Philippine equities a good buy," it said.

The article noted that Philippine Long Distance Co. posted a 9.3 percent profit growth in results posted in late March, mostly on the strength of 40-percent plus growth in mobile telephone services.

As well, the First Philippine Fund, which can be bought and sold on the New York Stock Exchange, provides a well-managed basket of Philippines stocks.

GRP, MILF reiterate commitment to achieve just, lasting peace in Mindanao

The path to peace has become clearer as both government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front have reiterated their commitment to achieve a comprehensive, just and lasting political settlement of the conflict in Mindanao.

Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita and Government Peace Panel chairman and Presidential Adviser Jesus Dureza presented today at Sulu Hotel a joint statement of the two parties following the success of the two-day exploratory talks in Kuala Lumpur that ended Thursday.

Both parties, according to Ermita and Dureza, have resolved to undertake the appropriate steps to pave the way for the resumption of the formal peace negotiations

He said both parties likewise reaffirmed their commitment to implement effectively on the ground all past and existing GRP-MILF agreements and exercise mutual restraint to minimize, if not put an end, to the violence in Mindanao.

According to Ermita and Dureza, both parties also agreed to normalize the situation in Mindanao and facilitate the early return of evacuees to their places of origin. The two parties also agreed to allow the evacuees' rehabilitation to proceed after a new arrangement on the ground is set to be forged.

The government representatives noted the activation of the Bangsamoro Development Agency, the "body that would funnel development funds for the improvement of the lives of the displaced persons."

Both parties likewise agreed to direct their respective technical committees to work on their implementing guidelines of the joint communique signed on May 6, 2002 to ensure that the peace process is not adversely affected by the presence of criminals in Mindanao.

On the issue of ceasefire, the two parties agreed to improve the existing mechanism for monitoring of the cessation of hostilities, including the composition of an observer or monitoring group.

The ceasefire observer team has been provided for in the implementing guidelines on the security aspect of the Tripoli agreement on peace of 2001.

The two parties also reaffirmed the provision on the grant of safety and security guarantees to MILF leaders and members who are directly and principally involved in the GRP-MILF peace talks.

Both parties also expressed their gratitude for the gracious hospitality of the Malaysian government in hosting and facilitating the exploratory talks and for continuing its support to the peace process.

Aside from Dureza, those who attended the exploratory talks representing the government were Presidential Adviser on Special Concerns Norberto Gonzales, Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon Juliano Soliman and Undersecretary Antonio Santos. Representing the MILF were Atty. Lanang S. Ali, Atty. Michael O. Mastura, Atty. Musib M. Buat and Mohajarin T. Ali.

The holding of exploratory talks was a result of the back-channeling initiatives from both parties.

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo earlier sent Senior Adviser on International Competitiveness Roberto Romulo as a special envoy to Malaysia to reaffirm the Philippine's eagerness for the foreign government to be a third-party facilitator for peace talks with MILF.

GMA discloses 16-point anti-terrorism program

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo has listed down a 16-point counter-terrorism program that would assure that the global threat "does not become a reality in our country."

In the command conference in Cebu City last March 27, the President stressed that everyone "must act together" to carry out the checklist in the face of a renewed alert against terrorism worldwide.

The 16-point counter-terrorism program:

- Organization of a whole counter-terrorism enterprise and the delineation of clear areas of responsibility and accountability. The President said the Cabinet Oversight Committee under Executive Secretary Alberto Romulo would oversee and supervise the anti-terrorism campaign, and could call upon all government agencies to support its functions and responsibilities;
- Efficient and effective anticipation of events through intelligence and intelligence fusion, meaning the consolidation and sharing of all overt and covert domestic and international sources of information relevant to the country's response in the war against terrorism;
- Strengthening of the country's internal focus on terrorism through the active participation of local government units down to the barangay level in the prevention, interdiction and containment of terrorist acts;
- Cleaning the government of terrorist and criminal coddlers
- Holding accountable all private groups abetting or aiding terrorism;
- Synchronization of internal efforts with the global outlook to be spearheaded by the Department of Foreign Affairs;
- Combining a policy of tactical counterforce with the sect of strategic legal measures. This enjoined the Department of Justice to set up a special team to serve the special requirements of the war on terrorism including the speedy prosecution, deportation and extradition of suspects;
- Strengthening of the peace process to isolate terrorist groups from the moderates;
- Pursuit of broader inter-faith dialogues to promote Christian and Muslim solidarity;
- Recognition of the political, social and economic underpinnings of terrorism. Under this, the President urged the initiation of special community development projects in areas where extreme poverty make its residents vulnerable to the courtship of terrorist groups;
- Exercise of the strictest vigilance among all law enforcement agencies and local government units, particularly against the movements of suspected persons, firearms, explosives, raw materials of explosives, toxic materials and biological materials;
- Close coordination of preparations and actions in the event of catastrophic terrorist attacks, even if they should be remote;
- Comprehensive security plan for critical infrastructure including power plants, power transmission and distribution facilities, oil and gas depots, key public works infrastructures, vital communications facilities, public and private buildings and facilities in the nerve center of commerce and industry;
- Protection of the security, welfare and interests of overseas Filipino workers;
- Continued modernization of the Armed Forces of the Philippines and the Philippine National Police, taking into consideration the threats of terrorism; and
- Media support in the implementation of policies and programs, in enlightening the public of the rationale behind their actions, and in promoting consensus and even constructive criticism.

- Ro-Ro facilities to spur trade, tourism in Visayas, Mindanao, says GMA
- GMA unveils Roxas port marker, kicks off Ro-Ro caravan to Visayas, Mindanao

OFWs in Kuwait, other Gulf states in high spirits, says DOLE

Overseas Filipino workers (OFWs) in Kuwait and other Gulf countries, particularly those 384 stranded workers at the Bahay Pinoy relocation site in Nuwaiseeb, have remained calm and in high spirits despite the tension brought by the war in Iraq, according to the Department of Labor and Employment (DOLE).

In a report to Malacañang, DOLE Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas said the Presidential Middle East Preparedness Committee (PMEPC), headed by Ambassador Roy Cimatu, and the Philippine embassy and labor officials in Kuwait are in constant touch with the DOLE in Manila.

“So, we are updated on the situation of some 60,000 OFWs in Kuwait,” Sto. Tomas said. “Our OFWs there go about their normal work routine. They are calm and in high spirits,” she said.

Sto. Tomas said that the OFWs who have been moved to the Bahay Pinoy relocation center in the South, near the Kuwait-Saudi border, continue their livelihood program activities that they have been doing at the Filipino Workers Resource Center (FWRC) in Kuwait City before the outbreak of the war.

“Our labor officials and welfare officers just moved to Nuwaiseeb the equipment the workers were using in their livelihood activities from which they had a chance to earn a little money,” Sto. Tomas said.

Sto. Tomas also cited a report of the PMEPC which said the Kuwait Petroleum Company (KPC) had assured the public of uninterrupted petrol and diesel supply in Kuwait.

In Lebanon, Sto. Tomas reported that Philippine embassy and labor officials in Beirut have divided themselves in four teams and visited four churches in Beirut, and one in Damascus, Syria to check on the conditions of the more than 20,000 OFWs in the two countries.

The embassy team also distributed the “Safety and Emergency Handbook” to OFWs in Lebanon and Syria.

In Bahrain, Sto. Tomas said Philippine embassy and labor officials have advised OFWs in the tiny kingdom in the Arabian Gulf to maintain the highest state of preparedness and to refrain from going out to populated centers to avoid being targets of possible terrorist attacks.

RP offering only humanitarian and peace-keeping help in post-war Iraq, GMA says

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today appealed to the Filipino people to support her stand in siding with the “coalition of the willing” in the US-Iraq war as she stressed that the Philippines is offering only humanitarian and peace-keeping assistance to Iraq in a post-war scenario.

In a radio interview this morning, the President said that the Philippines’ offer of humanitarian and peace-keeping assistance is aimed at helping restore the freedom, dignity and collective security of the Iraqi people.

“Kaya dapat ang taongbayan natin din ay hindi nahahati sa isyung ito. Dahil ito ay nakatukoy sa ating pinakaminamahal na asal bilang isang katauhan (That’s why I hope our people would not be split on this issue. Because this is one of our dearest contribution to humanity),” the President said.

The President explained that the democratic ideals that the United States would like the Iraqis to enjoy are the same ideals that the Filipinos have fought for in EDSA against oppression and dictatorship.

“Kaya itong coalition of the willing, dapat ito ma-transform into coalition for humanitarianism (So, this coalition of the willing should be transformed into a coalition for humanitarianism),” the President said.

The President also assured the Filipino people that even if the war in Iraq would last for two months or even longer, the government contingency plan for Filipinos, both here and abroad, could take care of that.

She said that contrary to earlier predictions, the war in Iraq would take a longer period, adding that the first Gulf War in 1991 lasted for about a month.

GMA says gov’t ready for confidence building measures to push talks with MILF

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed government readiness to carry out confidence building measures that would accelerate the conduct of formal peace negotiations with the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF).

But the President said all steps to promote peace in Mindanao should guarantee the safety and security of civilian communities against terrorist attacks, ensure that those displaced by the conflict would be returned to their homes where they could permanently live peacefully and productively, and assure the neutralization of criminal and terrorist activities in the area.

In a radio interview, she said the government and MILF peace negotiators have met in Kuala Lumpur and, in a joint statement, resolved to undertake appropriate steps to resume formal peace talks while reaffirming to implement effectively on the ground all past and existing agreements.

She said Presidential Adviser on the Peace Process Eduardo Ermita, in a press conference, outlined the details of the joint statement last Sunday (March 30).

“Tanggap na tanggap natin ang kahit na ano mang kilos tungo sa isang pangmatagalang kapayapaan(We accept any move that would ensure lasting peace in Mindanao),” she said.

The President also cited the participation of Malaysia as a third-party facilitator to the government-MILF peace talks.

She said the government also looked forward to working closely with the Organization of Islamic Conference.

In the event that a peace pact is concluded with the MILF, the government would seek all means to rehabilitate and develop areas in Mindanao destroyed by the conflict.

She said the campaign for peace should be equaled by an anti-poverty campaign.

“Isang dahilan kung bakit sila ay nasa giyera ay dahil nga mahirap na mahirap sila. At isang dahilan kung bakit mahirap sila ay napakatagal na nasa giyera (A reason why they are at war is that they are poor. And a reason why they are poor is because they are affected by a long war),” she added.

It is imperative to cut this “vicious cycle on both sides” so that the peace talks could move forward and so that socio-economic development could be done in Mindanao, the President said.

Ro-Ro facilities to spur trade, tourism in Visayas, Mindanao, says GMA

President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today cited the importance of the roll-on, roll-off (Ro-Ro) facilities in speeding up the development of Mindanao not only in trade and commerce but also in tourism.

In a radio interview, the President explained that with the Ro-Ro facilities, trucks carrying goods or produce from Mindanao to Luzon and vice versa need not unload in every port and would go direct to their destinations, thus greatly reducing transport costs.

When asked if the Ro-Ro facilities are now in place, the President said that that is what she will demonstrate starting today.

The President today kicked off the four-day motor caravan participated in by members of the Cabinet, heads of government agencies, and members of the media, that would traverse what she described as the “Strong Republic Nautical Highway.”

The kick-off ceremonies were held this morning at the Freedom Park in Malacañang.

In the radio interview, the President said that with the Ro-Ro facilities, motorists from Luzon could take their vacations to the Visayas and Mindanao using their cars all throughout their journey.

This will definitely promote domestic tourism and not just enhance the flow of produce, like grains and other agricultural products, from Mindanao to the different parts of Luzon, including Metro Manila.

The President said the commercial operation of the Ro-Ro facilities would be on April 12, the start of the summer vacation in schools.

In a briefing on Sunday, officials said that the caravan would proceed from Manila to Batangas City and on to Calapan City Ro-Ro port terminal in Oriental Mindoro and end at the Dapitan City port, Zamboanga del Norte.

From Batangas City, the caravan will travel to Oriental Mindoro , to Aklan, then on to Capiz and Iloilo, Negros Occidental in Region 6; Negros Oriental in Region 7, and Zamboanga del Norte in Region 9.

The Manila to Dapitan caravan will cover a total of 703 kilometers of road travel and 137 nautical miles of sea travel.

Ro-Ro terminals are located in Batangas City, Calapan; Roxas, Oriental Mindoro; Caticlan, Malay, Aklan; Iloilo City; Bacolod City; Dumaguete City and Dapitan City.

In Oriental Mindoro, the President inaugurated the Roxas Port Terminal. She was also presented with rebel returnees and had lunch with the local government officials and participating agencies of the Ro-Ro caravan.

At Caticlan, the President was scheduled to open the Jetty Port and Terminal Building.

The President will also have a meeting with Boracay Resort Owners, Tour and Hotel Operators and will be discussing security measures in the area.

On April 1, the President will have breakfast with local officials and fishermen at the Baybay Beach in Roxas City, Capiz, and after arriving at Iloilo City, will have lunch with rice farmers, members of the irrigators association, traders and the agribusiness sector.

At Bacolod City, the President will meet with the Rotary Club and Negros Press Club at the L'Fisher Hotel.

The "End of the Tour to the Strong Republic Nautical Highway" will be at the Dapitan City where the President will make an assessment of the caravan tour.

GMA unveils Roxas port marker, kicks off Ro-Ro caravan to Visayas, Mindanao

ROXAS, Oriental Mindoro – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today unveiled the Roxas port marker here to kick off a four-day agro-tourism caravan that would open the Strong Republic's Nautical Highway and showcase the efficiency and effectiveness of the government's Roll-on Roll-off (Ro-Ro) program.

The President unveiled the Roxas port marker to the cheering of hundreds of flag-waving schoolchildren, farmers and laborers who also welcomed the Presidential caravan along the 124-kilometer road from Calapan, Oriental Mindoro to this southern agricultural town.

The rousing welcome showed the people's solid support for the nautical highway, which officials expect would open windows of agricultural and tourism opportunities in the southwestern seaboard.

"This is the route where the big rice producers are," said the President as she unveiled the marker prior to boarding the Ro-Ro vessel, Super Shuttle Ferry 2, that would take her and the caravan for a four-hour sea trip to Caticlan, Aklan.

Participants, including mediemen, in the convoy of some 80 vehicles trying out the new agro-tourism highway linking Luzon to the Visayas and Mindanao islands were themselves surprised at the outpouring of support for the Ro-Ro project.

Following the unveiling of the marker, the President witnessed the signing of a loan agreement between the Development Bank of the Philippines and Phil-Nippon Shipping.

The loan will be used to purchase a Ro-Ro vessel for the Roxas-Caticlan route.

A Ro-Ro ship allows cars and other vehicles to roll on aboard at the port of departure and disembark or roll off the same way at the ship's port of destination.

The President, together with Transportation and Communication Secretary Leandro Mendoza, earlier unveiled another marker and inaugurated the Philtranco terminal in EDSA, Pasay City.

Philtranco carries passengers and cargo from Manila to as far as key cities in Mindanao.

In the same ceremony, she sent off four Philtranco buses that took Ro-Ro caravan officials and participants to the Batangas City port where they boarded a Ro-Ro boat for Calapan City in Oriental Mindoro.

In Calapan where the President arrived aboard a Bell 412 helicopter, she unveiled another port marker and met with local officials, expectedly discussing with them the government's overall socio-economic development program as a result of the Ro-Ro project and the continuous campaign against terrorism and poverty.

From Calapan, she left for Roxas, Oriental Mindoro where she also met with local officials and the leaders of some 500 members of the insurgent New People's Army who have rejoined government.

While on the way to Caticlan aboard the Super shuttle Ferry 2, the President conducted a Cabinet meeting.

The four-day caravan will take the President and her party to Boracay Island, Roxas City in Capiz, Iloilo City, Bacolod City, Kabankalan City in Negros Occidental, Bais City in Negros Oriental, Dumaguete City and Dapitan City in Zamboanga del Norte.

GMA orders DFA to help establish ASEAN humanitarian consensus to aid Iraqis

ILOILO CITY—President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today expressed her “deep concerns” about the humanitarian crisis affecting Iraqi civilians in the ongoing war in Iraq.

In her speech during a meeting with rice farmers, irrigators’ associations and traders in Panay held this afternoon at the Sarabia Manor Hotel here, the President said that the Philippines is prepared to send peace-keepers and humanitarian workers in areas in Iraq where they can safely help.

The President earlier said that the US-led “coalition of the willing,” which the Philippines has supported, should now be transformed into the “coalition for humanitarianism.”

She said that she has directed Foreign Affairs Secretary Blas Ople to work with “like-minded” neighbors in the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to establish an ASEAN consensus on how to conduct the humanitarian assistance in Iraq.

The President said that ASEAN can join hands with other countries in extending assistance to the Iraqi people at this hour of their need consonant to the emerging thrust of the United Nations.

According to the President, the Philippines’ offer of humanitarian and peace-keeping assistance is aimed at helping restore the freedom, dignity and collective security of the Iraqi people.

She said that the democratic ideals that the United States would like the Iraqi people to enjoy are the same ideals that the Filipinos have fought for in EDSA against oppression and dictatorship.

No official travel ban to countries with S.A.R.S., says Palace

Malacañang today said that although there is no official ban on the travel of Filipinos to countries in the region where cases of the killer pneumonia have been reported, it would be advisable for those without urgent reasons to go there to postpone their trips.

In an interview, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said that in the case of Hong Kong, the ban for the deployment of Filipino workers there stays but not for labor reasons but for health reasons.

Bunye confirmed that Labor and Employment Secretary Patricia Sto. Tomas has recommended to President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo that the ban should not be lifted because the former British colony is still reeling from the threat of the severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) that has already claimed several victims.

The first reason for the ban of the deployment of OFWs to Hong Kong, Bunye said, was the wage cut ordered by the Hong Kong authorities on Filipino domestics.

But Bunye said this problem is now almost settled because there are now pending cases to be filed against Hong Kong authorities by the affected OFWs themselves and the Philippine government.

Bunye said that the government is advising Filipinos to be extra cautious in traveling not only to Hong Kong but also to some affected countries like Singapore, China, Vietnam, and Canada.

He also said that although there has not been any reported confirmed SARS case in the Philippines, it is advisable for the people to be on the alert and to follow the preventive measures recommended by the Department of Health.

For those coming from the affected countries, it would be advisable of them to go on voluntary quarantine for at least one week, Bunye said.

April 9, a working day, but still to be observed as Fall of Bataan – Palace

Malacañang today said that the Fall of Bataan will still be observed through appropriate ceremonies on April 9 although it will be a working day after President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo declared April 7, a Monday, as non-working holiday.

In an interview, Presidential Spokesman Ignacio R. Bunye said the President's directive to declare April 7 as a non-working holiday in lieu of April 9, which is a working day, is aimed at giving the Filipinos a longer weekend.

Bunye, who is with the presidential caravan traversing the Strong Republic Nautical Highway (SRNH), said that the idea is to give Filipinos more time to enjoy their weekends to boost domestic tourism.

“Pero gugunitain pa rin yong April 9 at magkakaroon ng appropriate ceremonies na gaganapin sa araw na iyan (But we will still commemorate April 9 and there will be appropriate ceremonies on that day),” Bunye said.

This will be the 61st commemoration of the fall of Bataan during World War II.

In the same interview, Bunye said that during the ongoing presidential caravan, the government is just trying to demonstrate that a national highway can be opened through the western seaboard, from Luzon all the way to the Visayas and Mindanao.

Bunye said that there is now an existing eastern seaboard highway—the Pan-Philippine Highway—from Manila to the Bicol Region and on to Samar-Leyte and to Mindanao.

GMA assures power for Panay Island

ILOILO CITY — President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today assured that power would continue to flow in the Panay Island despite predictions of shortage starting this year.

During a meeting with rice farmers, irrigators associations, and the trade and agri-business sector at Sarabia Manor Hotel this afternoon, the President said private power generations companies have agreed to supply the needed power in various locations of the island.

“I’m glad to inform you that there are power generation companies from private sector that undertake the addition of power supply on Panay Island itself in various locations,” she said.

The President noted that there would be about 30 to 40 megawatts of power that would be ready by the end of the year or in the first few months of 2004 from, among others, Mirant and Power One.

The President ordered last year the creation of a Panay Power Task Force to coordinate a solution to the imminent power shortage consistent with privatization and deregulation of the law.

Meanwhile, the President reported the signing this morning of a memorandum of understanding between the Antique Gov. Sally Perez and the Korean Electric Power Corp. (KEPCO) for the construction and setting up of 100 megawatt circulating, fluidized bed combustion power plant using the Semirara island in Antique.

The President thus urged rural electrification cooperatives for the islands covering the provinces of Aklan, Antique, Capiz and Iloilo to work fast and ensure the speedy implementation of power agreements with the private sector.

“The government can only promote the solutions. But you, the electric distributors, must take responsibility for the timely implementation of the projects,” she said.

She also called on the local officials and communities to lend assistance to these projects such as the necessary permits and approvals “so that they are not delayed.”

“And I hope that the Senate will soon pass the Transco franchise bill so that they can privatize Transco,” she added.

GMA hopes to bring down cost of produce, boost tourism with Nautical Highway

ROXAS CITY, Capiz – Armed with a P20-billion package from the Development Bank of the Philippines, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo hopes to achieve two things in launching the Strong Republic Nautical Highway—bring down the cost of agricultural products and boost domestic tourism.

In a luncheon press conference at the Baybay Beach here, the President urged private investors to avail themselves of the DBP loanable fund that will set into motion the role on-roll off (Ro-Ro) system of terminals and ferry boats linking Luzon to Western Visayas and Mindanao.

“With the system of Ro-Ro terminals and ferry boats, these will be a new revolution in trade and commerce the way that the ferryboats within Visayas and Mindanao also revolutionized travel,” she said.

The President, on the second day of the Presidential caravan inaugurating the new agri-tourism highway, signed in Roxas, Oriental Mindoro last Monday a loan agreement between the DBP and Philippine Nippon Shipping for the purchase of a Ro-Ro vessel for the Roxas-Caticlan route.

Late Monday, she also unveiled a port marker at Caticlan with Aklan Governor Florencio Miraflores, Malay Mayor Cicilo Cawaling and Aklan lone district Rep. Billy Colizo.

She hopes to open other Ro-Ro routes linking the western and eastern seaports of the country with the aid of the loan package.

This, the President said, should open even bigger market for the agricultural product of Visayas and Mindanao in a faster, cheaper way.

“Before, it was cheaper to import corn from Thailand than from Mindanao,” she explained. “But with the Ro-Ro system, it will now be competitive to ship out of Vis-Min than Thailand.”

She said that although the main use of the nautical highway is to reduce cost, she also hopes to boost domestic tourism in the 17 provinces that the route will cut through.

She cited such world-class tourist destinations like Boracay, Dakak and Bais where people can even go whale watching.

In another effort to give the domestic tourism a shot in the arm, the President likewise announced she was moving Araw ng Kagitingan from April 9 to April 7 in line with her holiday economics.

She, however, emphasized that the celebration will still be held on April 9.

“We are not adding a new holiday. We are only transferring. Ceremonies will still be held on April 9 but the holiday will be on April 7, Monday,” she said.

GMA reminds local officials to be extra vigilant

ON BOARD THE MILLENNIUM UNO (from Iloilo to Bacolod) – President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo today urged the local officials of Iloilo and the two Negros provinces to be extra vigilant against security threats, reminding them of their important functions in times of crisis.

During a command conference aboard the Millennium Uno Roll On-Roll Off (Ro-Ro) ferry from Iloilo to Bacolod City, the President led a briefing for local officials from Iloilo, Negros Occidental and Negros Oriental on the safety and security measures they need to carry out in the wake of the special security threats facing the world today.

The President said “it is very important to meet with the officials of Iloilo and Negros Occidental because these are the two largest provinces in the country.”

The President said that if these two provinces are safe “you can say that the whole country is safe.”

The President reminded the local officials of their three important functions in times like this: one, as crisis managers; two, as information champion; and three, as anti-crime czars.

The President reiterated what she said in a command conference in Cebu last week that the police are now under the supervision and control of the local executives.

“The PNP local units are under your supervision and control, and the AFP (Armed Forces of the Philippines) are there to support you in your triple function,” President said.

Interior and Local Government Secretary Jose Lina, Jr. also gave a briefing on the security arrangements the PNP has been carrying out.

“Hindi puwedeng maganda lang sa papel (Things shouldn’t just look good on paper),” Lina said, adding that they should work in times of crisis.
